THE PREFACE.

WE refer to the Beginning of the Introduction for an Account of the Uſefulneſs of a Book of this ſort to Noblemen, Gentlemen, Commanders by Sea and Land, Divines, Lawyers, Phyſicians, and Merchants, and indeed to Perſons of all Ranks.

THE Title does ſo fully expreſs the Nature of the Work, and the Vouchers on which 'tis founded, that there's no need of enlarging on that head; only we think fit to acquaint the Reader that he will find the Authors every where fairly quoted, by which 'twill appear that they are ſuch as the Learned eſteem the beſt of their kind, whether antient or modern. We have chiefly made uſe of the latter, becauſe modern Geography was our principal View, that they are much more exact than their Predeceſſors, and have corrected many of their Errors.

THOSE who are converſant in this Study, know very well how defective the Antients were, both in their Theory and Deſcriptions; and that even ſince Learning began to revive, betwixt two and three Centuries ago, the firſt Authors on this Subject gave into abundance of fabulous Deſcriptions, which ſerved for nothing but to amuſe and miſlead the unwary Reader, by romantick Accounts of Countries, People and Cities, that never had a Being.

THERE was no way to reform this but by a careful Peruſal of the beſt modern Geographers, Voyages, and Travels, which is here faithfully performed. We have likewiſe had the Advantage of our Predeceſſors, by conſulting Sir John Chardin's Travels, the Atlas Hiſtorique, Le Brun's and Tournefort's Voyages and Travels, &c. which were not compleatly publiſhed, till this Work was begun.

IT has been a general Complaint that Performances of this kind have been either too voluminous, or too ſhort to anſwer their end. We have endeavoured to keep a Medium: and the Proprietors, in order to make the Work ſatisfactory, have added above forty Sheets more than at firſt propoſed, to their very great Expence.

WE have, for avoiding the Confuſion which is too common among former Geographers, fixed our firſt Meridian at London; whereas in others the Longitudes are frequently ſet down from various Meridians on the different Maps, ſo that the true Diſtances of Places Eaſt and Weſt are hard to be found in them, eſpecially where the firſt Meridian is not named in the Map, as too frequently happens.

WE have alſo taken care to make our Deſcriptions agree with our Maps, which not being duly obſerved by former Authors, perplexes and diſappoints the Reader; whereas we have always begun our Deſcriptions at the Top, or the North Part, of the Map, and go on from Weſt to Eaſt, according to our natural way of Reading, ſo that the Peruſer finds every thing deſcribed in its proper Situation; which inſtructs as well as pleaſes him: Only he is deſired to obſerve, that we begin our Deſcriptions of Great Britain and Ireland on the South Parts, becauſe beſt known and of moſt Importance, but ſtill deſcribe according to the Courſe of the Map from Weſt to Eaſt.

AS to our Maps, they are laid down according to the neweſt Obſervations communicated to our own Royal Society, the French Academy of Sciences, and thoſe made by the lateſt Travellers; many groſs Errors in former Maps are corrected in theſe; and a great number of Places remarkable for Action, omitted by others, are inſerted here.

'TIS not poſſible for any human Compoſition to be perfect, and much leſs a Work of this Nature, in which new Diſcoveries are made every Day. Nor is it practicable to pleaſe every Taſte; for ſome will complain of the Deſcriptions being too long, and others that they are too ſhort: Others will find fault that many Places of ſmall Note are deſcribed, and ſome will blame the Omiſſion of any ſuch, without conſidering the Want of Room or Time, or the Deficiency of proper Informations on thoſe Heads, which is a general Complaint in every Country. All that can be anſwered to ſuch Objections, is, That as much Care has been taken as poſſible.

MANY of the Nobility and Gentry of Scotland having generouſly encouraged this Work by Subſcriptions, we conſulted ſeveral of their Parliament-Men, and others, upon the Maps of it in Bleau's Atlas, the beſt that were ever publiſhed of that Nation; by which we have improved the Map and Deſcription of Scotland beyond any thing yet extant.

IF any object that the Deſcription of the Scots Iſles is larger in proportion than the reſt, the Reaſon is, that we had better Accounts of them, that their Natural Hiſtory is curious; and that being the principal Seat of the Fiſhery, towards which the People of Great Britain have of late diſcovered ſo much Inclination, we took particular Care to mention the ſeveral Sorts of Fiſh, the Places where they abound moſt, and the Harbours, &c. where that Trade is beſt to be carried on in thoſe Iſlands.

A

New GENERAL ATLAS.

INTRODUCTION.

The Definition of Geography.

THE Word literally taken ſignifies only a Deſcription of the Earth; but Cuſtom, the Miſtreſs of Language, has now given it a much larger Extent, ſo that it takes in the whole Terraqueous Globe, as it conſiſts of Land and Water, and by conſequence includes Hydrography, with all the Diviſions and Qualities of the Sea as well as of the Earth, and an Account of the Air which ſurrounds them.

The Moderns finding this Study, even as ſo extended, not to be inſtructive and pleaſant enough to all ſorts of People, have thought fit to take in ſo much of Hiſtory Natural, Political and Religious, as might more fully anſwer thoſe Ends, and make the Study acceptable and uſeful to Mankind in general.

As this Science is of ſo large a Compaſs, there was a Neceſſity of borrowing Help from ſeveral others, as from Aſtronomy, ſuch Points, Lines and Circles, as determine the Situation of Places, with reſpect to the Poſition of the Heavens, the Seaſons, Length of Days and Nights, Climates, &c. From Geometry it borrows the way of taking the Dimenſions and Diſtance of Places; from Arithmetick, the Uſe of Requiſite Numbers; from Opticks, the Art of Repreſenting this Earth, and its Diviſions on a Globe or Plane; and from Hiſtory, the Extent of Countries, with their Product, People, Government, Language, Religion, Cuſtoms, &c. From hence ſome Authors run out into many Subdiviſions of Geography, as Aſtronomical, Geometrical, Natural, &c. which we don't at all think neceſſary, becauſe they are eaſy to be conceiv'd by what we have ſaid already.

We ſhall not therefore trouble the Reader with any farther Account of this Science, than what is needful for underſtanding thoſe Things above mention'd, with the general Maps of the World, and the particular Maps of its Quarters, and other Subdiviſions, which neceſſarily include what is call'd Chorography, or the Deſcription of larger and leſſer Regions; and Topography, which is that of particular Diſtricts and Towns, &c.

A brief Account of the principal Geographers, and of the Uſefulneſs of Geography.

THIS Science muſt neceſſarily have been as ancient as the Planting and Diviſion of the World, as we may perceive by the Sacred Hiſtory: But after that, we have very little Account of it; for as it was a Science, only a few Perſons ſeem anciently to have apply'd themſelves to it, and the Performances of the oldeſt of them, as well as their Names, are now loſt.

It muſt be own'd, that the Endeavours of ſuch of the ancient Geographers now remaining, as Strabo, Ptolomy, Pomponius Mela, and the Nubian Geographer, &c. were very conſiderable in thoſe Times, tho' much ſhort of the Moderns, both as to Method and Perfection.

As Learning decay'd, that Study was in a manner bury'd till the laſt Century, when it was again reviv'd. Ortelius was one of the firſt who began to give it a new Life; after him, Mercator reduc'd it into a more connected Syſtem. Cluverius oblig'd the Publick, by bringing it into a better Method, as well as by his incomparable Books of Germania, Italia and Sicilia Antiqua. After him, Brietius publiſh'd his Learned Volumes De Prima Orbis Notitia, &c. which have many curious Things, eſpecially as to ancient Geography, betwixt which and the Modern he draws Parallels. Bochart did highly oblige the Learned World by his Geographia Sacra; but as to modern Geography, Sanſon the Father, Geographer to Lewis XIV of France, improv'd it mightily by his excellent Tables, and exact Diſtinctions betwixt all the Dominions of the known World. They have ſince been corrected and enlarg'd by Luyts, which has made this Study much more pleaſant and eaſy than formerly. Sanſon the Son has alſo rais'd very good Superſtructures on his Father's Foundation; and the Learned Cellarius is famous for his Notitia Orbis Antiqui, &c. which is one of the moſt critical Works extant on that Subject.

For a general Introduction to this Noble Science, and illuſtrating it Philoſophically, none has exceeded Varenius, eſpecially as revis'd and corrected by Sir Iſaac Newton; and the Learned World owes much to Dr. Edmund Halley, for his curious Performances upon ſome of the niceſt Parts of this Subject. There are many others who deſerve Commendation; but theſe being of chief Note, the Publick will excuſe us from naming the reſt, conſidering that our Deſign is to be as brief as poſſible.

Since Learning came to be reviv'd, and Commerce enlarg'd, the Uſefulneſs of this Science is ſo univerſally acknowledg'd, that it is reckon'd a ſort of Diſgrace, for Perſons of any tolerable Figure, not to be in ſome meaſure acquainted with it.

Sovereigns, with their Miniſters and inferior Magiſtrates, find it neceſſary for Civil Government; and particularly for underſtanding the Intereſts, Extent, Situation, Wealth and Strength of their own Dominions, and thoſe of their Neighbours.

On this Occaſion I cannot but take Notice of ſome pleaſant Paſſages, relating to the Blunders of publick Miniſters and others, through Ignorance of Geography. The firſt is, that an eminent Turkiſh Courtier, when he heard that the laſt Siege of Vienna was rais'd by John Sobieski, King of Poland, fell into a great Rage againſt the French King, Lewis XIV, for ſuffering that Prince, as he ſuppos'd, to march through his Dominions againſt the Turks. M. du Pleſſis, in the Preface to his New Geography, printed at Amſterdam in 1700, takes Notice of a very pleaſant Miſtake of an Engliſh Ambaſſador for want of this Science. That Miniſter, ſays he, being at the Court of Rome, when M. Bethancourt, a French Man, diſcover'd the Canaries, then call'd the Fortunate Iſlands; and Pope Clement VI having made a Grant of them under that Name, in 1343, to the Count de Clermont, a Prince of the Blood Royal of France and Spain, the Engliſh Ambaſſador thinking there were no other fortunate Iſlands but thoſe of Great Britain, left Rome in diſguſt, and went to acquaint his King, that the Pope had given away his Dominions. Nor does this Author ſpare his own Countrymen for ſuch Blunders; but tells us, that ſome of them, when they heard of a War about the Pont Euxin, wonder'd that it was not broke down by one of the Parties, becauſe Pont in their Language ſignifies a Bridge. He ſays that others, when they heard of the Morea, took it to be the Country of the Moors; and when they heard of Genoa and Lucca, they believ'd 'em to be rich Italian Ladies: And he mentions even ſome late Authors, who write of Ships ſailing from the Caſpian to the Euxine Sea, becauſe they did not know that thoſe Seas have no Communication with one another, and that there's a great Ridge of Mountains betwixt them.

To return to the Subject, Generals, and other Commanders of Armies, find this Study abſolutely needful for directing their Marches, Encampments, Fortifications, &c.

Divines find it no leſs neceſſary, for underſtanding the ſeveral Religions of the World, and the Way how they are manag'd by thoſe whoſe Province it is to take care of them.

'Tis no leſs uſeful to the Gentlemen of the long Robe, for knowing the Laws and Cuſtoms of all Nations.

It is equally neceſſary to Phyſicians, for knowing the ſeveral Conſtitutions and Diſeaſes of People; and what Proviſion the bountiful Hand of Providence has made for the Preſervation and Cure of Mankind.

Hiſtorians, Poets and Philoſophers cannot be ignorant of it, without falling into groſs and unaccountable Miſtakes; for no Part of Hiſtory, or even ſo much as a Gazette, can be underſtood without it.

Above all it is uſeful to Merchants and Sailors, for directing them in their Commerce or Navigation; nor can Travellers by Sea or Land be without it, if they have a mind to reap either Pleaſure or Profit by their Travels.

Nay, the very Husbandmen, with ordinary Mechanicks, and their Families, muſt be convinc'd of its Uſefulneſs, to inform them of the Quality and Product of the Soil which Mankind lives upon; of the Air they breath in, and of the Waters they uſe for Drink, Fiſhing, Trading, and other Conveniences of Life.

To conclude this Head, it ought not to be omitted, that as this Science is neceſſary for all Ranks of Men, from the Prince to the Peaſant, ſo it is by the Bounty of Heaven more eaſy to be attain'd than many others that are of much leſs Uſe; for it is now brought to ſuch a Degree of Plainneſs, that no more is requiſite for underſtanding what Parts of it are uſeful to Mankind in general, than to be able to read or hear.

Of the Globe and Planiſpheres.

IT being now agreed, that the Earth is of a globular Form, Artificial Globes are made uſe of as the moſt proper and natural Inſtruments to repreſent its Surface, according to the Situation of all its Parts, with reſpect to one another, and to the Poſition of the Heavens.

But as thoſe Globes are not ſo eaſy to be purchas'd, or carry'd about, and made uſe of on every Occaſion, general Maps call'd Planiſpheres were contriv'd, which repreſent the Globe cut into two equal Parts by a Meridian; and, being as it were the two Sides of it made flat or plain, give us the Surface of this lower World in two Circles at one View.

The Grounds on which Artificial Globes were invented.

But before we proceed any farther, 'tis proper to give an Account of the Grounds upon which the Invention of thoſe Artificial Globes was founded, and that the Reaſons were taken from Aſtronomical Obſervations.

When Pythagoras's Syſtem (which was not reviv'd till Copernicus did it in the Fifteenth Century) came to be forgot or neglected, Aſtronomers, according to Ptolomy's Syſtem, ſuppos'd the Earth to lie fix'd and immoveable in the Middle or Center of the World. Accordingly they thought that the Sun and Stars turn'd round the Earth from E. to W. in 24 Hours: Then, agreeable to this Notion, they obſerv'd, that as the Stars did ſo turn, the Circles they deſcribed were not always of an equal Extent; that thoſe which correſponded to the middle of the Earth, were much larger than thoſe at a Diſtance from it on either Side; and that the greater the Diſtance was from the Middle, the Circles were the leſs.

They alſo obſerv'd, that there were two Points in the Heavens which had always the ſame Situation; and theſe they call'd Poles, from a Greek Word which ſignifies to turn; becauſe they fancy'd them to be the Center of all the Celeſtial Motions, and that the Heavens turn'd round them.

They obſerv'd farther, that the Sun at the Equinoxes, which now fall about March 10 and September 12, did in 24 Hours deſcribe a Track in the Heavens equally diſtant from the two Poles; and this they thought might be repreſented by a Circle, which they call'd the Equinoctial.

Having alſo obſerv'd that the Sun, from the longeſt Day which now falls about the 11th of June, to the ſhorteſt Day which now falls about the 11th of December, advanc'd about one Degree every Day towards a certain Point; and that when he came to that Point, he return'd towards the firſt, as now from the 11th of December to the 11th of June; and being again arriv'd at the firſt, he began to remove from it afreſh: They fix'd thoſe Points, which they call'd the Solſtices, as if the Sun had made a ſtand there; and they repreſented thoſe Boundaries of the Sun's Motion by the two Circles, which they call'd the Tropicks, from a Greek Word which ſignifies to Return, becauſe the Sun appear'd to return back when he came to thoſe Points.

Having likewiſe obſerv'd the Motion of the Sun more cloſely, and that as he turn'd daily round the Earth, he remov'd from or approach'd to the Tropicks obliquely about a Degree every Day; and that in a Year's time he deſcrib'd a Circle in the Heavens, without deviating from it to the N. or S. as the other Planets did more or leſs; they repreſented this Circle by 12 Conſtellations of the fix'd Stars which appear'd in or near it, that they might trace out the annual Motion of the Sun and Planets: Theſe Conſtellations they call'd the 12 Signs, as Marks to diſtinguiſh whereabout the Sun was; and the Circle they call'd the Zodiack, from a Greek Word ſignifying an Animal, becauſe they fancy'd that thoſe Signs upon it did repreſent the Animals whoſe Names they gave them, and accordingly they painted them either in Specie or by proper Hieroglyphicks: So that whether the Earth turns round, or is immoveable, be it the Center of the World or not, the Artificial Globe equally ſerves all the Purpoſes of Geographers.

For the better underſtanding of Terraqueous Globes and Planiſpheres, Geographers invented imaginary Poles, Lines and Circles upon them, which correſpond with the like imaginary ones in the Heavens. And here 'tis proper to obſerve, that ſome of 'em are ſuppos'd to be within the Globe, and others are deſcrib'd on its Surface, both which we ſhall here define, and give an Account of their Uſes.

Thoſe within it are,

I. The Center.

This is a Point ſuppos'd to be in the middle of the Globe, and equally diſtant from all Parts of its Surface, from which Point all the Right Lines drawn on the Surface are Semi-diameters, and equally diſtant from all the exterior Points upon it.

The Uſes of this Center, 1. It is the Foundation and Baſis of all the Semi-diameters. 2. It is the Center of all the great Circles, deſcrib'd on the Surface of the Globe, and which divide it into two equal Parts. This is reckon'd by the Vulgar to be the Center of the Univerſe.

II. The Diameter, and the three Axes or Axletrees.

Diameter is a Greek Word, that ſignifies the Meaſure of any thing through the Middle: Thus the Diameter of the Globe is a Right Line drawn from the one Side to the other through the Center.

An infinite Number of them may be imagin'd, but Geographers frequently content themſelves with three, which they call Axes.

The firſt, which points to the N. and S. is call'd the Axis of the Globe. The ſecond, whoſe Motion round the Pole deſcribes the Polar Circles, is call'd the Axis of the Ecliptick. The third, which points to the Zenith and Nadir of each Place, is call'd the Axis of the Horizon.

The Uſes of the Diameter, 1. The Circumference of the Earth, multiply'd by its Diameter, gives us nearly the Extent of the Surface of the Terraqueous Globe. 2. This Surface, multiply'd by the ſixth part of the ſame Diameter, gives us nearly the Solidity of the Globe.

The Uſes of the Axis of the Globe, 1. This Axis marks upon the Surface of the Globe, by its two Extremities, the two Points which we call Poles. 2. As in reality the Terraqueous Globe, ſo the Heav'ns are reckon'd by the Vulgar to turn round this Axis in 24 Hours.

The Uſes of the Axis of the Zodiack, 1. By its two Extremities it deſcribes, on the Surface of the Globe, the two Polar Circles. 2. The 12 Signs appear to make their Courſe round this Axis once a Year in a Circle in the Heav'ns or among the fix'd Stars.

The Uſe of the Axis of the Horizon is, by its two Extremities, to give us the Zenith and Nadir of every Place.

Of the Points and Circles deſcrib'd on the Surface of the Globe.

THEY are reckon'd 10 each; and of the 10 Points four are nam'd Cardinal, four Collateral, and two Vertical.

The four Cardinal Points are ſo nam'd, becauſe they point out the four principal Parts or Regions of the World, viz. the North, South, Eaſt and Weſt.

Of the Poles.

The Points of the North and South are reckon'd immoveable, and are the ſame with the Poles, already mention'd, at the two Extremities of the Axis of the Globe.

That which we call the North Pole, was nam'd Arctick by the Greeks, becauſe the Conſtellation Urſa minor is in their Language call'd ἄρκτος, and the Polar Star is at the end of the Tail of that Conſtellation two Degrees and ſome Minutes from the Pole: the Latins call'd it Septentrio, becauſe of the ſeven Stars, by which that Point is directed to, in the Celeſtial Globe.

The South Pole was call'd Antartick, becauſe it lies in direct Oppoſition to the other. It is known by four pretty large Stars ſomewhat like a Croſs; from whence it is nam'd the Croiſado, and which are about 30 Degrees from the South Pole.

As theſe two Points are fix'd, they may better ſerve for all Parts of the Globe, under the Names of Arctick and Antarctick; for as to the Name South, which we give the Antarctick, 'tis only with reſpect to thoſe who live betwixt the Equator, or at leaſt betwixt the Tropick of Cancer and the Arctick Pole, that we can properly call it ſo; ſince the North Point is that of the South to thoſe who live betwixt the Equator, or at leaſt betwixt the Tropick of Capricorn and the Antartick. The Greeks and Latins therefore expreſs'd themſelves more naturally by the Words Meridies and μεσημβρία, which ſignify Midday or Noon, when we reckon the Sun to lie South.

Of the Points Eaſt and Weſt.

The Eaſt and Weſt in a large Senſe are moveable Points, which the Sun changes as often as he does Meridians; but theſe Points, properly taken, muſt be underſtood of the Interſection of the Equinoctial and Horizon, on which when the Sun riſes, the Days and Nights are of equal Length.

The Eaſt is that Point where the Sun riſes, and begins to appear above the Horizon when he makes his Courſe upon the Equator, and therefore is more naturally expreſs'd by the Latin Word Oriens, and the Greek ἀνατολή, which ſignify Riſing.

The Weſt is that Point where the Sun ſets, and deſcends below the Horizon when he moves on the Equator, and therefore the Thing is much more naturally expreſs'd by the Latin Word Occidens, and the Greek δύσις, which ſignify going down.

Though theſe two Points be moveable in the Senſe above, they are mark'd as fix'd at the Extremity of each Hemiſphere upon the Equator; the E. on the right, and the W. on the left.

Of the four Collateral Points.

They are ſo call'd, becauſe they lie betwixt the Cardinal Points. The Latins expreſs them more naturally than we, for they call the firſt Oriens Æſtivus, or the Point near which the Sun riſes on the longeſt Day of Summer, which anſwers to our N. E. The ſecond they call Occidens Æſtivus, or the Point near which the Sun ſets on the ſame Day, which anſwers to our N. W. The third they call Oriens Hibernus, or the Point near which the Sun riſes on the ſhorteſt Day of Winter, which anſwers to our S. E. The fourth they call Occidens Hibernus, or the Point near which the Sun ſets on the ſame Day, which anſwers to our S. W.

Thoſe Riſings and Settings of the Sun, on the longeſt and ſhorteſt Days of the Year, happen only when he has his Courſe on the Tropicks; upon which, though theſe Collateral Points are always moving, yet they are mark'd as fix'd at the Place where the Tropicks are cut by the Colure of the Equinoxes.

For the Uſe of thoſe who live in our Northern Hemiſphere, the N. E. and N. W. are mark'd near the Tropick of Cancer, and the S. E. and S. W. near the Tropick of Capricorn.

But for thoſe who live in the Southern Hemiſphere, the N. E. and N. Weſt are mark'd near the Tropick of Capricorn, and the S. E. and S. W. near that of Cancer; ſo that the Points which are N. E. and N. W. to us, are S. E. and S. W. to them, &c.

The two Vertical Points

Are 1. The Zenith, an Arabian Word ſignifying an imaginary Point exactly over our Heads, which changes as we change Place. 2. The Nadir, another of the ſame Language, which ſignifies the Point directly under our Feet, and changes in the ſame manner. 'Tis proper to obſerve, that our Zenith is the Nadir of our Antipodes, and our Nadir their Zenith, & vice verſa; becauſe our Feet and theirs point mutually at one another's Zeniths, as our Heads and theirs do at one another's Nadirs.

The

The Uſes of the ten Points.

1. The four Cardinal and four Collateral Points ſerve to ſhew us how Countries are ſituate with reſpect to one another. 2. They regulate and compoſe the 32 Points of the Winds in the Mariner's Compaſs. 3. According to the Cardinal Points, the World is divided into four principal Regions or Parts, and the four Continents have their Names from them. The old World, or Europe, Aſia and Africa is call'd Eaſt; and the new World, or America, the Weſt: The Terra Magellanica is the South, and the Arctick the North. 4. The S. and N. Poles, by their Elevation above the Horizon of a Place, ſhew in what Latitude that Place is ſituate, which we ſhall explain when we come to treat of the Degrees of Latitude. 5. The N. is the Point, towards which all the Geographers of our Northern Hemiſphere are ſuppos'd to look and project their Maps; for which Reaſon they either place, or ought to do ſo, the N. on the upper Side of them, the S. on the lower; the E. on the right; and the W. on the left.

The Zenith and Nadir ſerve, 1. As Poles to the Horizon. 2. They ſhew us the Country where the Inhabitants are Antipodes, or live diametrically oppoſite, with their Feet one to another. And, 3. they determine the Azimuths or Vertical Circles which all paſs thro' them.

The ten Circles.

They are conſider'd, 1. Either as Parallel or Interſecting each other. 2. As great or little. 3. As fix'd or moveable. There are five of them Parallels, viz. the Equator, the two Tropicks, and the two Polar Circles. The five Interſecting ones, and which cut one another, are the Ecliptick, the Horizon, the Meridian, and the two Colures.

Of theſe ten Circles, there are ſix great and four ſmall. The ſix great ones are the Equator, the Ecliptick, the Horizon, the Meridian, and the two Colures. The four little ones are, the two Tropicks, and the two Polar Circles.

Though theſe ten Circles be mark'd, as fix'd in the Maps or Planiſpheres of the Globe, the Horizon and the Meridian are changeable, according to the diverſity of Places we go to. The eight others, viz. the Equator, the two Tropicks, the two Polar Circles, the Ecliptick, and the two Colures are fix'd to all the Inhabitants of the Earth, and meet always at the ſame Place, let us go where we will.

The great Circles are equal in Bigneſs, have all the ſame Center with the Globe, which they divide into two equal Parts, and cut one another into the like.

The little Circles are unequal, and have not ſo much Circuit as the reſt, becauſe each of them have another Center than that of the Globe, which occaſions their cutting it into two unequal Parts.

The Equator

Is a great Circle, equally diſtant from both Poles, and is call'd by that Name, becauſe it divides the Globe into two equal Parts. It is alſo call'd the Equinoctial; becauſe, when the Sun appears to move in it, he makes the Days and Nights of equal length in all parts of the World. Mariners call it the Line, by way of Excellence, as being the firſt and principal Circle deſcrib'd on the Globe.

The Uſes of the Equator.

1. As it divides the Globe into two equal Parts, it diſtinguiſhes betwixt the Northern and Southern Hemiſpheres.

2. It marks the true E. and W. which are call'd the Equinoctial Points to all the Regions of the Earth.

3. Being the firſt and chief of the Parallels of the Latitude, it ſerves to find out and reckon the Latitude of any Place, which is its Diſtance from the Equator, as we advance to the one or the other Pole, and accordingly is call'd North or South Latitude.

4. It marks on the Ecliptick the two Points of the Equinoxes, thro' which the Sun appears to paſs when he makes the Days and Nights of equal length, and divides 'em into 12 Hours each, except under the Poles, where at the ſame time there begins a Day and a Night of ſix Months each: So that when a Day of ſix Months begins under the North Pole, a Night of ſix Months begins under the South Pole, & vice verſa.

5. It ſerves to ſhew us, that thoſe who live under the Equator have not only their Days and Nights of equal length at the Equinoxes, but always; becauſe their Horizon cuts into equal parts all the Circles which the Sun deſcribes each Day of the Year; all the reſt have their Days and Nights unequal; but as they live nearer to or farther from the Equator, their Equality or Inequality is the greater.

6. It ſhews us, that when the Sun comes to the Equinoctial Points, he makes Spring or Autumn to all the parts of the Globe; but at different times, as the Spring to the Northern, when Autumn to the Southern Hemiſphere, & vice verſa.

7. The Equator ſhews on its Circle the 360 Meridians or Degrees of Longitude, which is the only Place where they are equal to the Degrees of Latitude.

8. Upon its Circle, it determines the Natural Day of 24 Hours, the Sun appearing to move 15 Degrees in an Hour; ſo that 24 multiply'd by 15 makes up the Number of its Degrees 360.

9. By cutting the Zodiack into two equal Parts, it ſeparates the Northern from the Southern Signs, and divides betwixt the long and the ſhort Days.

The Zodiack and the Ecliptick.

The Zodiack is one of the great Circles. We have already acounted for that Name, and muſt obſerve, that it is alſo call'd the Oblique Circle, and the Ecliptick. It is call'd Oblique, becauſe it lies ſo with reſpect to the Equator, which cuts it at Oblique Angles; and it is call'd Ecliptick, becauſe the Eclipſes of the Sun and Moon happen in it.

The Zodiack is the only Circle in the Globe which has breadth aſſign'd it; but the Ecliptick, which lies in the middle of it, and ſhews the Courſe of the Sun, is all that's mark'd by Geographers on their Globes and Planiſpheres, by a Circle equally diſtant from the two Tropicks. The Breadth of the Zodiack is commonly reckon'd 16 Degrees, viz. eight on each ſide the Ecliptick; but our Modern Aſtronomers give it ten on each Side, to terminate the Courſe of the Planets; becauſe, beyond ten Degrees N. or ten S. the Latitude of no Planet ever reaches.

The Ecliptick, as the Zodiack, is divided into 12 Parts, and each Part into 30 Degrees, which, multiply'd by 12, make up the 360, into which it is divided.

The Uſes of the Ecliptick.

1. Each Degree of it marks, near upon the matter, the Courſe which the Sun runs every Day. By each of the 12 Parts, it ſhews the Sign and the Month; by the 30 Degrees of each Sign, it ſhews the 30 Days that the Sun takes to run through each; by the 360 Degrees, it ſhews us the annual Courſe of the Sun, which is 365 Days, ſix Hours, and ſomething more, which 6 Hours every four Years make up a Day, which being added to that Year, make it conſiſt of 366 Days, and is call'd Biſſextile, becauſe the Ancients, on every fourth Year, reckon'd the ſixth of the Calends of March twice; but the Moderns add this Day to February, which Year they call Leap-Year.

2. Each 13 Degrees of the Ecliptick mark the Courſe of the Moon for each Day; ſo that going from 13 to 13 Degrees, ſhe runs through the whole Ecliptick in about 27 ½ Days, which added to the Sun's Motion in the mean time is about 29 ½ Days, or little leſs than one Month, and between 12 and 13 of thoſe Months do make up the Solar Year.

3. The Ecliptick ſhews us the Eclipſes of the Sun and Moon; becauſe, making their Courſe upon this Line, but differently, ſometimes they are in Conjunction, with reſpect to us, and ſometimes in Oppoſition.

The Eclipſe of the Sun happens when the Moon is in conjunction with him, that is, when ſhe comes betwixt the Sun and us: And the Eclipſe of the Moon is when ſhe is in oppoſition to the Sun, and that the Earth is directly betwixt them. The Eclipſe of the Moon is univerſal, and all thoſe above whoſe Horizon ſhe is, ſee her eclips'd; but the Eclipſe of the Sun is particular, and only to thoſe whom the Interpoſition of the Moon hinders to ſee him more or leſs; for all the reſt, above whoſe Horizon ſhe is, ſee the Sun entire.

4. The Ecliptick being divided by the Equator into two equal Parts, that which advances towards the North Pole, marks all the long Days of the Northern Hemiſphere, and the ſhort ones of the Southern; and the other Part, which advances towards the South Pole, does the like, with reſpect to the other Hemiſphere and ours.

5. The Ecliptick, divided into four Parts by the Colures, marks out three Signs for each of the four Seaſons of the Year. The North Hemiſphere has for its Spring-time, Aries, Taurus and Gemini; for Summer, Cancer, Leo and Virgo; for Autumn, Libra, Scorpio and Sagittarius; and for Winter, Capricorn, Aquarius and Piſces. And juſt on the contrary, the laſt three Signs make Summer in the South Hemiſphere; Libra, Scorpio and Sagittarius make the Spring; Cancer, Leo and Virgo the Winter; Aries, Taurus and Gemini the Autumn; ſo that when it is Spring in the one, 'tis Autumn in the other; and when Summer in the one, 'tis Winter in the other.

6. It cuts the Terraqueous Globe into two equal Parts uncertainly; and obliquely in an Angle of 23 ½ Degrees with reſpect to the Equator and the Poles.

7. It deſcribes by its Poles the Polar Circles.

8. It comprehends, by its Obliquity, all that Space of the Terraqueous Globe which is call'd the Torrid Zone.

The 12 Signs of the Ecliptick are expreſs'd by this Latin Diſtich:

Sunt Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libraq; Scorpius, Arcitenens, Caper, Amphora, Piſces.

The Names, Situation and Characters of the Signs are thus:

Northern.		Southern.
1. Aries	♈	1. Libra	♎
2. Taurus	♉	2. Scorpio	♏
3. Gemini	♊	3. Sagittarius	♐
4. Cancer	♋	4. Capricornus	♑
5. Leo	♌	5. Aquarius	♒
6. Virgo	♍	6. Piſces	♓

The Northern make our longeſt Days, and the Southern the ſhorteſt, & vice verſa. The Conſtellations which formerly anſwer'd to theſe Signs, don't ſo now, for they are near 30 Degrees or an entire Sign more E. than anciently; ſo that when we ſay the Sun is in ſuch a Sign, it muſt not be underſtood now of thoſe Conſtellations, but of a 12th Part of the Zodiack, formerly call'd by ſuch Names.

'Tis to be obſerv'd, that the Sun appears to make ſeven Revolutions more in the North than in the South Hemiſphere, where it makes only 179, but in ours 186, which proceeds from the Excentricity of the Sun, that is, becauſe the Circle, which the Sun deſcribes each Day on the Ecliptick, has another Center than that of the Earth.

The Tropicks.

They are two ſmall Circles deſcrib'd by the Sun at different Times, and are equal and parallel betwixt themſelves and parallel to the Equator, from which they are equally diſtant 23 Degrees and ½. Having already accounted for the Names, we go on to obſerve, that the Tropick, which is on the North ſide of the Equator, is call'd by the Name of Cancer, becauſe it is form'd at the firſt Point of that Sign. It is the Summer Tropick to us, and that of the Winter to thoſe who live in the South Hemiſphere.

The Tropick, South of the Equator, is call'd by the Name of Capricorn, becauſe form'd in the firſt Point of that Sign; and is the Summer Tropick to the South Hemiſphere, as it is of the Winter to us.

Theſe Circles are alſo call'd Solſtices, becauſe the Sun advances ſo little, when he approaches or removes from the Tropicks, that he ſeems for ſome time to ſtand ſtill; ſo that neither Days nor Nights ſenſibly increaſe or diminiſh, but continue in the ſame State for ſeveral Days. Dr. Halley

Halley says, the Difference is ſcarcely ſenſible from five Days before to five Days after.

The Uſe of the Tropicks.

1. They include a certain Space, beyond which the Sun never paſſes, and in this Space he appears to make his daily Courſe by a ſpiral Line, in advancing towards the one or the other Tropick. 2. They mark on the Ecliptick the two Points of the Solſtices, which give us the longeſt and ſhorteſt Days in the Year; that of Cancer gives us the longeſt, and that of Capricorn the ſhorteſt. 3. Their Diſtance from the Equator marks the greateſt Declination of the Sun towards the one or the other Pole, at 23 ½ Degrees. 4. They incloſe and ſeparate the Torrid Zone from the Temperate ones.

The Polar Circles

Are two ſmall ones, which the Poles of the Zodiack or the Ecliptick deſcribe, round the Poles of the World: They are equal and parallel betwixt themſelves, as they are parallel to the Tropicks and the Equator, and are 23 ½ Degrees diſtant from the Poles.

That round the North Pole is call'd the Arctick Circle, and that round the South Pole the Antartick.

Their Uſe is, 1. To ſhew us the Track of the Poles of the Zodiack or Ecliptick. 2. They incloſe the cold or frozen Zones, and ſeparate them from the temperate. 3. They incloſe the great Climates, where they have the longeſt Days and longeſt Nights of ſeveral Months, and ſeparate them from the ſmall Climates.

The Colures.

They are two great Circles, which cut one another at Right Angles, in the two Poles of the World. The Name is deriv'd from the Greek Words κολόω and ὐρά, which ſignify cut into Tails or Angles.

The one is call'd the Colure of the Equinoxes, becauſe it cuts the Equator and the Ecliptick at the two firſt Points of Aries and Libra, where the Equinoxes happen.

The other is call'd the Colure of the Solſtices, becauſe it cuts the Ecliptick and the Tropicks at the firſt Points of Cancer and Capricorn, where the Solſtices happen.

As thoſe two Circles are entire Meridians, the Colure of the Equinoxes is ſometimes mark'd on the Terraqueous Globe by the firſt Meridian wherever that be plac'd. And theſe two Colures cut the Ecliptick of the Celeſtial Globe into four equal Parts, and mark the four Points where the four Seaſons of the Year begin.

The Uſes of the Colures.

In the Northern Hemiſphere, the Colure of the Equinoxes marks the Equinox, or the beginning of the Spring, at the firſt Point of Aries, about the 10th of March; and the Equinox, or the beginning of Autumn, at the firſt Point of Libra, about the 12th of September. And the Colure of the Solſtices marks the Solſtice, or the beginning of the Summer, at the firſt Point of Cancer, about the 10th of June; and the Solſtice, or beginning of Winter, in the firſt Point of Capricorn, about the 10th of December.

But for the Southern Hemiſphere, it is juſt the Reverſe, becauſe their Seaſons are contrary to ours, as has been obſerv'd already.

The Horizon

Comes from a Greek Word, which ſignifies, to bound or terminate, becauſe it bounds our View. 'Tis divided into two, viz. the Senſible and Rational. The Senſible Horizon is that which bounds our Sight when abroad in the Fields, &c. and ſeparates that part of the Sky and Earth which we ſee from what we do not ſee.

The Rational Horizon, being only what we conceive by our Reaſon, is a great Circle parallel to the former, whoſe Center is that of the Terraqueous Globe: Its Poles are our Zenith and Nadir, round which it is deſcrib'd, and it divides the Heav'ns and the Earth into two Hemiſpheres.

The Horizons change as we change Place, and therefore may be numberleſs: But Geographers confine them to three ſorts; the firſt is the right, which has its Zenith in the Equator, paſſes through the four Cardinal Points, and cuts the Equator at Right Angles. 2. The Oblique Horizon, whoſe Zenith is betwixt the Equator and one of the Poles, and cuts the Equator at Oblique Angles. 3. The Parallel Horizon, which has one of the Poles for its Zenith, and the Equator for its Horizontal Circle.

The Right Horizon is that of thoſe who live under the Equator. The Oblique is generally for thoſe who dwell betwixt the Equator and one of the Poles; and the Parallel is only for thoſe who live directly under the Poles.

The Uſes of the Horizon.

1. The Rational Horizon equally divides the Terraqueous Globe into the upper and lower Hemiſphere. 2. The Senſible Horizon ſhews us the Length of the Artificial Day, while the Sun makes its Courſe upon it; and the Length of the Artificial Night, when the Sun is below it.

Thoſe who have the Right Horizon live under the Equator, and have their Days and Nights continually of equal Length, as has been already ſaid. Thoſe under the Poles, who have their Horizon the ſame with the Equator, have their Days and Nights of ſix Months each. Thoſe whoſe Horizon is oblique have the Equinoxes only twice in the Year, all the reſt being unequal, in proportion to their Diſtance from the Equator, and the Elevation of the Pole above their Horizon.

Betwixt the Equator and the Polar Circles, the Days increaſe from 12 Hours to 24, becauſe thoſe who live under thoſe Circles have their Sun 24 Hours above their Horizon. Betwixt the Polar Circles and the Pole, the Days increaſe alſo in proportion to the Sun's continuing above the Horizon, from one Day to ſix Months.

The Horizon ſhews us the Height of the Pole, that is, how much it is elevated above our Horizon, and at the ſame time marks the Latitude of Places, which is the Diſtance from the Equator, becauſe the Diſtance of the Equator from our Zenith is equal to the Diſtance from our Horizon to the Pole.

The Meridian.

Every Meridian is a great Circle, which paſſes through the Poles of the World, and through our Zenith and Nadir, and cuts the Globe into two Hemiſpheres, call'd E. and W.

It is call'd Meridian, becauſe when the Sun paſſes through that Circle, it is Mid-day to all thoſe who are in the part of that Circle expos'd to the Sun, and Mid-night to all thoſe in the ſame Circle, which is oppoſite.

We may fancy as many Meridians as there are Degrees of Longitude on the Equator, but Geographers mark only 360 upon the ſame; and, to avoid Confuſion, trace the Lines only from 5 to 5, 10 to 10, or 15 to 15, according to the Size of their Globes or Maps.

Aſtronomers not having yet determin'd where the firſt Meridian is, the Poſition of it is left arbitrary.

The ancient Geographers, conſidering that the Meridians ſerv'd to meaſure the Length of the Earth, call'd them alſo by the Name of Circles of Longitude, and plac'd the firſt Meridian at the Weſt Extremity of our Continent; from whence they began to count Eaſtward the 360 Meridians, which we ſhall explain when we come to deſcribe Longitude and Latitude.

The Uſe of the Meridian.

Each whole Meridian divides the Globe into two Hemiſpheres, Eaſtern and Weſtern, of which thoſe divided by the firſt Meridian into the Eaſtern on our Right, and Weſtern on our Left, are prefer'd by Geographers to repreſent the Terraqueous Globe on a Planiſphere. 2. The Meridian helps us to gain the Height of the Pole, and the Diſtance of any Place from the Equator or Latitude; becauſe the Arch of the Meridian betwixt the Equator and the Zenith, and the Arch of the ſame Meridian betwixt the Horizon and the Pole, are equal. 3. It marks Mid-day and Midnight to all thoſe who are in its Circle. 4. It divides the Artificial Day into two equal Parts. 5. The Meridian of every Country ſhews which of them have Noon ſooner or later, and at the ſame time, for every 15 Degrees Eaſtward, they have it an Hour ſooner than ſo far to the Weſtward. 6. By reckoning the Meridians from 15 to 15, we know what Hour it is at the ſame time in each Country. 7. The Meridians ſerve to reckon the Latitudes, which are counted along a Meridian from the Equator towards the one or the other Pole.

The Zones

Are ſo call'd from a Greek Word, that ſignifies a Girdle, becauſe they incloſe the five Parts into which our Globe is divided, according to the Temperature of the Air from whence they are denominated.

The firſt Zone, which lies in the Middle of the reſt, is call'd the Torrid Zone by the Ancients, who thought it not habitable, becauſe the Sun darts its Rays perpendicularly upon it; but Experience has prov'd the contrary, for the Heats are not ſo violent under the Equator, and the Places neareſt it, where the Sun paſſes only in a tranſient Manner, as in the Neighbourhood of the Tropicks, near which the Sun making his Courſe for ſeveral Days ſucceſſively, occaſions exceſſive Heats; but the Mountains and Neighbourhood of the Sea in ſome Places, the long Nights thro' moſt of that Zone, and the frequent Rains, and great Dews, refreſh it ſufficiently, to make the Earth not only habitable, but ſo abundantly fertile, that in many Places it yields two Harveſts in a Year, and produces not only all ſorts of Spiceries and Drugs, but furniſhes a greater Quantity of perfect Metals, precious Stones and Pearls, than all the other Zones together; ſo that the great Deſarts which are found there, as in the Parts of Africa, Aſia and America, that lie in it, are rather Proofs that the Soil in thoſe Parts is barren of its own Nature, than made ſo by the Heat of the Sun, ſince ſuch Deſarts are found in the Middle of the Temperate Zones; and that in part of Africa, which lies under the Torrid Zone, there are Countries extremely fertile; that moſt of the Countries and Iſlands in Aſia, under that Zone, are very fruitful; and 'tis the ſame as to what lies under it in America, ſo far as is yet known.

This Zone is divided into two equal Parts by the Equator, extends to the Tropicks on each ſide of it, and contains about 47 Degrees of Latitude. In moſt Places of this Zone they have only two Seaſons, viz. Summer and Winter; and the latter is not diſtinguiſh'd by Froſt and Cold, but by Rains and a leſſer degree of Heat.

Varenius diſtinguiſhes the Seaſons into the Celeſtial and Terreſtrial, in which reſpect the Terreſtrial Summer of a Place is the hotteſt of the four Seaſons; the Celeſtial, that of the four in which the Sun is neareſt, Winter being the contrary, and ſo of the reſt. According to which Notions the Celeſtial Summer of any Place, is that Seaſon of the Year whoſe beginning is that Day on which the Sun hath the leaſt Meridian-Diſtance from the Zenith of that Place, (and that the firſt time, if the Sun is twice in a Year Vertical to that Place) but the End, that Day on which the Sun hath a mean Meridian-Diſtance from the Zenith of that Place. 2. Winter, whoſe beginning is that Day on which the Sun hath the greateſt Meridian-Diſtance from the Zenith of that Place; and whoſe End when a mean Diſtance. 3. Spring, from the end of Winter to the beginning of Summer. 4. Autumn, from the end of Summer to the beginning of Winter.

According to theſe Definitions, the Celeſtial Summer of thoſe Places of the Earth, which lie between the Tropic of Cancer and the N. Pole, begins when the Sun enters the firſt Degree of Cancer June 10, and ends when the Sun enters the firſt Degree of Libra Sept. 11; and that at the ſame time in all theſe Places. So it is Autumn to theſe Places, when the Sun paſſes from the beginning of Libra to the beginning of Capricorn, from Sept. 11 to December 10. Winter beginning then, ends when the Sun enters Aries March 11, between which and Summer falls the Spring.

To all Places between the Tropic of Capricorn and the S. Pole, their Summer is during our Winter, and their Autumn during our Spring, &c.

Thoſe

Thoſe Parts of the Torrid Zone, that lie under or very near the Equinoctial, have two Seaſons of each ſort, as two Summers, &c. Their firſt Summer, while the Sun moves from the firſt Deg. of Aries to the ſecond of Taurus, viz. from March 11 to April 12; their firſt Autumn, from thence to the firſt Deg. of Cancer, June 11; the firſt Winter, thence to the 28th Deg. of Leo, Auguſt 9; the firſt Spring, thence to the firſt Deg. of Libra, March 11: The ſecond Summer, thence to Oct. 12; the ſecond Autumn ends Dec. 11; the ſecond Winter, Febr. 9; their ſecond Spring, March 11.

The Places in the Northern half of the Torrid Zone end Autumn, and begin Winter, Dec. 11. the Sun having then the greateſt Meridian-Diſtance from their Zenith; but they don't begin and end Summer and Spring, nor begin Autumn at one and the ſame, but at different Times; for their Summer beginning when the Sun, returning from the firſt Deg. of Capricorn, becomes Vertical, which is at different Times, according to their different Latitudes, it muſt commence differently with regard thereto. The end of Summer and beginning of Autumn, and the end of Winter and beginning of Spring, muſt alſo differ accordingly.

The Caſe is the ſame on the Southern half of the Torrid Zone, allowing for the difference of North and South Latitude.

2. The two Temperate Zones are ſo call'd, becauſe lying betwixt the Torrid and the Frozen Zones, they enjoy a Temperate Air, eſpecially about the Middle; for at the Extremities they partake of the exceſſive Heat of the Torrid, and of the exceſſive Cold of the Frozen Zones, in proportion, as they lye near the one or the other. The Temperate Zones are bounded by the Tropicks and the Polar Circles. That betwixt the Tropick of Cancer and the Circle of the North Pole, is call'd Northern; and that betwixt the Tropick of Capricorn and the Circle of the South Pole, Southern. Each of 'em contains about 43 Deg. of Latitude.

3. The two Cold or Frozen Zones lie betwixt the Polar Circles and the Poles, or rather are included within the Polar Circles which encloſe them, one round the North, and the other round the South Pole. They are call'd Frozen, becauſe for the greateſt part of the Year they are extreme cold, and every thing freezes, eſpecially when the Sun appears but little, or not at all above their Horizon. Each of them contains about 23 Deg. ½ of Latitude.

'Tis eaſy to account for the Breadth of each Zone, by reckoning 60 Geographical Miles to a Degree, thus:

Sanſon jun. in his Introduction to Geography, printed at Amſterdam in 1708, ſays, The Torrid Zone has 1175 common French Leagues in breadth, which at 2400 Geometrical Paces per League, is 2820 Miles

The N. Temperate Zone 1075 Leagues	2580
The S. Temperate Zone the like	2580
The N. Frozen Zone, 587 ½ Leagues	1410
The S. Frozen Zone the like	1410

But the Length of the Circuit of the Zones is not ſo eaſy to be reckon'd; for tho' each of them runs the whole Circumference of the Globe, and has 360 Deg. in Circuit, yet as the Deg. of Longitude diminiſh in Extent, according to the Deg. of Latitude they lie in, and as they approach the Poles where they end in a Point: the neareſt Computation that can be made of their Circuit is thus:

Sanſon ſays, The Torrid Zone has 9000 common French Leagues under the Equator, where its Circuit is largeſt, which makes	21600 Miles
At its Extremities under the Tropicks, the Circuit is a little more than 8250 Leagues	19800
The N. Temperate Zone has the ſame Circuit as the laſt under the Tropick, but about the middle in Lat. 45 has only about 6350 Leagues	15240
And at its Extremity, under the Polar Circle, it has 3575 Leagues	8580
The S. Temperate Zone, the like under the Tropick	15240
And under the Polar Circle	8580
The N. Frozen Zone under the Polar Circle is	8580
Its Middle is only about 1850 Leagues	4440
And its Extremity under the Poles ends in a Point
The S. Frozen Zone has the like under the Polar Circle	8580
Its Middle is only about 1850 Leagues	4440
And its Extremity under the Poles ends in a Point

By this the Goodneſs of God may be ſeen, in ordering it ſo that the far greateſt part of the Earth may be comfortably inhabited.

'Tis to be obſerv'd that none of the Zones is yet perfectly diſcover'd. The N. Temperate and the Torrid Zones are better known than the reſt. Nothing of the S. Temperate Zone is known, but what lies in our Continent and in America. Some Iſlands and Coaſts of the N. Frozen Zone are known, but we have yet no Knowledge of any Countries in the S. Frozen Zone.

To ſum up the Matter, and to ſhew what Proportion each of the Zones bears to the Surface of the Earth, let us ſuppoſe with Mr. Senex, that it is divided into equal Parts 520

The Torrid Zone contains of thoſe Parts	207
Both Temperate Zones	270
And both Frigid Zones	43

The ſame Author gives the Dimenſions of each Zone in Engliſh ſquare Statute Miles, of 69 ½ to a Degree, thus:

The Torrid Zone	41547452845 7
Each Temperate Zone	27002571093 3
Each Frigid Zone	4320939651 0

The Diviſion of the Surface of the Earth, according to the Shadows of its Inhabitants.

THIS proceeds from the different Situation of the Zones; and the Diverſity is taken either from the Poſition of the Shadow at Noon, or its going quite round all Objects.

The Ancients having found out, that the Shadow turn'd round the Inhabitants of the Frozen Zones, when the Sun gave them continual Day; that the Inhabitants of the Temperate Zones had their Shadows always towards the ſame Point at Noon: Thoſe of the Northern towards that Point; thoſe of the Southern towards the other: And that the Inhabitants of the Torrid Zone had their Shadow at Noon ſix Months towards the one Pole, and ſix towards the other: They call'd the Inhabitants of the Frozen Zones Periſcii, from a Greek Word which ſignifies the Shadow's going round. Thoſe of the Temperate Zones they call'd Heteroſcii, which ſignifies, that their Shadow lay only either North or South; and thoſe of the Torrid Zone they call'd Amphiſcii, which ſignify'd that their Shadow at different Times lay both ways.

Reaſon and Experience have ſince prov'd, that the Inhabitants of the Torrid Zone are Aſcii, or without Shadow at Noon, when the Sun is vertical, or right over their Heads; and that when he is otherwiſe, thoſe under the Tropicks have their Shadow always on one ſide; whereas theſe have it ſometimes on one ſide, and ſometimes on t'other.

Therefore the Diviſion of the People, according to their Shadows, was more exactly made into Periſcii, Heteroſcii and Aſcii, which they ſubdivided into Aſcii-Heteroſcii and Aſcii-Amphiſcii.

The Periſcii, or Inhabitants of the Frozen Zones, are divided into three ſorts, 1. If any live under the Poles they are always Periſcii, and their Shadow turns round during the ſix Months that they have the Sun continually. 2. Thoſe under the Polar Circles have their Shadows turn'd round only when their Day is 24 Hours, which is their longeſt. 3. The Shadows of the reſt turn round for ſeveral Days, Weeks or Months, according as they are nearer or farther from the Pole. Thoſe under the Pole have their Year divided into a Day and a Night of ſix Months; and all the Periſcii in general have only one Summer that is very moderate, and one Winter that is very cold.

The Heteroſcii, or Inhabitants of the Temperate Zones, have their Shadow at Noon always towards one of the Poles. Thoſe of the Northern towards the North, and thoſe of the Southern the contrary; and the Nights and Days are always unequal, except at the time of the Equinox.

The Aſcii, or Inhabitants of the Torrid Zone, are of three ſorts, 1. Thoſe directly under the Equator are twice a Year without Shadows, and all the reſt of the Year they are Amphiſcii, and have the Noon Shadow the one way or t'other, according as the Sun moves to the North or South of the Equator.

2. Thoſe who live betwixt the Equator and the Tropicks are alſo twice a Year without Shadow, and the reſt of it, their Shadows turn either one or t'other way; ſuch as live near the Equator have alſo two Summers and two Winters, but the Seaſons terminate in one of each, in proportion as they approach the Tropick, and their Days and Nights have more of an Equality, according as they lie nearer the Equator.

3. Thoſe who live under the Tropicks are never Aſcii, but have always a Shadow at Noon, except on the Days of the Solſtices; all the reſt of the Year they are Heteroſcii, and caſt their Shadow at Noon on one ſide, and they have but one Summer and Winter.

Thus the three ſorts of Aſcii abovemention'd, with the Heteroſcii, and the three ſorts of Periſcii, give us ſeven different ſorts of Habitations, according to the Shadows upon the Surface of the Earth.

Diviſion of the Surface of the Terreſtrial Globe, by the Poſition of its Inhabitants.

THE Inhabitants of the Globe may be diſtinguiſh'd into Periœci, Antœci and Antipodes, Names deriv'd from their different Relations to one another with regard to their Situation.

The Periœci are thoſe who live under the ſame Parallel of Latitude, but in oppoſite Meridians. They are equally diſtant from the Equator, under the ſame Degree of Latitude, are in the ſame Zone, have the ſame Seaſons, the ſame Climate, the ſame length of Days and Nights, and have all things alike at the ſame time, except that in the Torrid and Temperate Zones, when the one have Day, the other have Night; and in the Frozen Zones, when the Days are continual, they have only oppoſite Hours.

The Antœci are thoſe who inhabit the ſame Meridian, but in oppoſite Parallels towards the different Poles, and are ſaid to live over-againſt one another. They agree in all things as the former, but being in oppoſite Hemiſpheres; when the one have Winter, the other have Summer. The Antipodes are diametrically oppoſite to one another in Parallels and Meridians, have the ſame Situation, with reſpect to the Equator and Poles, &c. as the other two above-mention'd; but being diametrically oppoſite, their Seaſons, &c. are juſt the contrary to one another.

As to thoſe that dwell under the Poles, they being diametrically oppoſite to one another, and their Seaſons at quite contrary Times, they may juſtly be reckon'd Antipodes; but their Situation at the two Extremes of the ſame Meridian, their equal Diſtance from the Equator, and their having the ſame Hours in the Natural Day, makes them paſs for Antœci; but with this difference, that when the one has a Day, the other has a Night of ſix Months.

As to thoſe who live under the Equator, they may be conſider'd both as Periœci and Antipodes, though they agree in nothing with the other Antipodes, but that they are diametrically oppoſite to one another, being in all other Reſpects true Periœci.

'Tis to be obſerv'd, that our Periaci are Antœci to our Antipodes; that our Antipodes are Periœci to our Antœci; and our Antœci, Antipodes to our Periœci.

Of the Diviſions of the Surface of our Globe by Climates and Parallels.

THE Ancients, beſides obſerving the Situation of Places by the Height of the Pole, or by Latitude or Diſtance from the Equator, contriv'd to find it by the difference of the Length of Days alſo; and therefore divided the Surface of our Globe by Circles, parallel to the Equator, into ſeveral ſmall Parts, in each of which the ſame Lengths of Days were comprehended.

They call'd them Climates from the Greek Word κλίμα, a Country or Tract, or, as ſome think, from κλίνω; which ſignifies to decline or bend downwards, as they do from the Equator. They ſubdivided them by a Parallel Line into two Semi-Climates, which they call'd Parallels.

The Climates are of two ſorts; thoſe betwixt the Equator and the Polar Circles, where the Artificial Days increaſe inſenſibly, and are regulated by half Hours; and thoſe between the Polar Circles and the Poles, which have continued Days, and are regulated by Months, or 30 continued Days.

The Parallels are also of two sorts. The one divides the Climates into quarters of Hours; and the other divides the Days of the Months into 15; so that a Parallel is a Space of our Globe's Surface, betwixt two Circles or Parallel Lines, betwixt which there's a Variation of a quarter of an Hour, or of 15 Days in the longest Day of the Year.

The Climates are very unequal in Breadth; those of the Artificial Days are the larger the nearer they lie to the Equator, and diminish in proportion to their Distance from it.

The Climates of the continued Days, on the contrary, are the larger the nearer they lie to the Poles, and diminish in proportion to their Distance from them.

This Inequality proceeds from the different Obliquities of the Horizon, with respect to the Course of the Sun when in the Tropick, where he determines the Length of the greatest Days to all the Inhabitants of the same Hemisphere where he is.

The Climates are 60 in Number, viz. 30 betwixt the Equator and each Pole, and the 30 in each Hemisphere are divided into Climates of half an Hour, Artificial Days, or continued Days. Those of half an Hour, betwixt the Equator and each Polar Circle, are reckon'd 24; because the Artificial Day being always 12 Hours under the Equator, it increases proportionably by half Hours, till it comes to be 24 Hours long on the longest Day of the Year, under the Polar Circles.

The Climates of continued Days, from the Polar Circles to the Poles, are reckon'd six, and by Months, because they increase according to that Proportion, till they come to be six Months long under the Pole: From hence 'tis easy to conceive, that by dividing each Climate into Parallels of a quarter of an Hour, there must be 60 for each Hemisphere.

The ancient Geographers, who knew only a part of the Temperate and part of the Torrid Zone, and thought all the rest uninhabitable, both towards the Equator and the Poles, mark'd only seven Climates, that comprehended what part of the World they knew, and pointed out the Climates of the opposite Hemisphere, that they believ'd to be habitable, though they did not know them, by their opposite Position to those in our own Hemisphere, which they did know.

They began to reckon the known Climates, where the longest Day was 12 Hours three quarters, which they thought the beginning of the habitable Places under the Torrid Zone, and so fix'd their first Climate betwixt 12 Hours three quarters and 13 Hours one quarter, and so on from half Hour to half Hour. They call'd their Climates by the Names of the most famous Towns, Islands and Seas through which the middle Parallel pass'd: Thus they call'd the first Meroe, the second Siene, the third Alexandria, the fourth Rhodes, the fifth Rome, the sixth the Euxine Sea, the seventh the Boristhenes, because it pass'd by the Mouth of that River; then they added an eighth, which pass'd through the Riphean Mountains, and a ninth through the River Tanais.

To these Ptolomy, in his Geography, added nine more, so much of the World being known in his Time, viz. two for the Southern, and seven for the Northern Hemisphere; but, contrary to his Predecessors, instead of reckoning by Climates, he did it by Parallels of quarters of Hours, half Hours, and Hours: He began them at the Equator, which he repeated in his Almagest, where, after distributing his Parallels a little otherwise than in his Geography, which comes however to the same Increase, he adds, that the Day increases to 24 Hours under the Polar Circle, and betwixt that and the Pole he places six Parallels, which contain each the Increase of a Month.

This shews the vulgar Opinion, that the Ancients agreed in reckoning no more than seven Climates, to be false.

Of the Division of the Globe, according to the Latitude and Longitude.

GEOGRAPHERS perceiving that the Division of it by Climates, serv'd only to distinguish its Surface from S. to N. they found that an exacter Division was not only necessary to mark the Situation of Places more regularly towards those Points, but that there must also be a Method of doing the same from E. to W.

And knowing that the Poles determin'd the S. and N. Points, and that the Extent of the Globe from E. to W. is exactly mark'd out by the Equator, whose Circuit is double the circular Distance betwixt the two Poles, they call'd the Extent of the Globe from S. to N. Latitude, and that from E. to W. Longitude, because they knew twice as much of the World that way as they did the other.

In Imitation therefore of Astronomers, who divide all Circles into 360 Parts, they divided the Circumference of the Globe into 360 Degrees, by Semi-Circles or Meridian Lines from one Pole to the other, which they call'd Degrees of Longitude.

And because the Distance betwixt the Poles makes only the Half of a great Circle on the Globe's Surface, they divided it into 180 Parts, with regard to North and South, which they call'd Degrees of Latitude; and those Degrees they distinguish'd by the Poles and 179 Circles parallel and equidistant.

As the Equator is the greatest of the Parallel Circles, and equally distant from the two Poles, Geographers have made it the Rule and first of the Circles, and begin from it to reckon the Degrees of Latitude towards the North or the South Pole, and distinguish 'em accordingly into North and South Latitude, there being 90 Degrees on each side the Equator.

And because each Parallel Circle, by its Circumference on the Globe, marks the same Degree through its whole Circuit, that is to say, in both Hemispheres, Geographers divide each Hemisphere by the Equator into two Parts, the Northern and Southern, which make four quarter Parts for the whole Surface of the Globe; and to shew in what Part of either Hemisphere, Eastern or Western, this Latitude is found, they express whether it be in the South or North Part of the one or other Hemisphere; and so, to avoid Confusion, they reckon the Degrees of Latitude four times, 90 betwixt the Equator and the North Pole, and 90 betwixt it and the South Pole, for ours or the Eastern Hemisphere; and in the same manner for the Western, which makes up 360, though they mark only 180 Degrees of Latitude by the Parallel Circles, which so include a Degree of each Hemisphere.

In Planispheres, or Maps which represent the Globe, the Latitudes are mark'd on the first entire Meridian, which, by dividing the two Hemispheres, does also cut all the Circles of Latitude into two equal Parts, therefore the Degrees are mark'd there four times, one for each Semi-Circle or Parallel of Latitude.

All these Degrees in Globes and Maps are mark'd one by one; but the Lines or Circles, which separate them, are drawn from 5 to 5, 10 to 10, or 15 to 15, according to the Size of the Globe or Map, to avoid crowding it too much.

The Degrees of Latitude thus mark'd, shew the Latitude, or at what distance the Countries or Places propos'd are from the Equator, and at the same time how much the Pole is elevated above their Horizon, which goes as much below the Pole as they are distant from the Equator, the Latitude of a Place and the Heighth of the Pole being equal.

The Degrees of Longitude are mark'd on Globes and general Maps of the World, in the same manner as the former, but are reckon'd on the Equator from West to East, because the Ancients knowing the Western Extremity of our Continent with more certainty, as being near it, they fix'd the first Meridian or Line of Longitude there. These Lines of Longitude are drawn, as has been said, from Pole to Pole, and contract gradually in proportion to their Distance from the Equator, till they end in a Point under each Pole. The Degrees of Longitude of Countries and Towns, which is their Distance from the first Meridian, are reckon'd on the Equator, Longitude being an Arch of the Equator, or of a Parallel comprehended betwixt the Meridian of a Country or Town and the first Meridian.

Tho' Degrees of Latitude be all of equal Breadth, yet Degrees of Longitude in all Parallel Circles diminish in proportion, as they approach the Poles.

Therefore to prevent Mistakes in Calculating Distances of Places from West to East, Geographers have form'd a Table of the Diminutions of the Degrees of Longitude according to each Degree of Latitude; but this being of little Use, except to such as make Maps, we omit it.

Astronomers having as yet found nothing in the Heavens to determine the first Meridian, Geographers are much divided in their Opinions about placing it.

The Western Inhabitants of our Continent, and the Arabians have plac'd it at the western Extremity of our Hemisphere, and reckon the rest from West to East; but the Eastern Nations, and chiefly the Indians, have fix'd the first Longitude in the middle of our Hemisphere, at a Town situated 90 Degrees from both Poles under the Equator; and they also pretend, that 'tis 90 Degrees distant from both the East and West Extremities of our Continent. They afterwards, quite contrary to us, fix'd their first Longitude at the Eastern Extremity of our Continent, that in counting the rest, they might follow the natural Order, and the Course of the Sun.

Though the Western Nations agree to fix it in the West of our Continent, they don't agree on the Place where. Ptolomy, and the Ancients, fix'd it at one of the Fortunate Islands, now generally suppos'd to be the Canaries. Some of the Arabians follow'd him, and others plac'd it at Hercules's Pillars, or the Streights of Gibraltar. Some Moderns would fix it at the Tercera, others at the Isles of Cape Verd or Cape Verd it self, and some at the Pike of Teneriff, one of the Canaries. The Spaniards would have it at Toledo; the Portuguese at Lisbon; and, in short, every Nation may fix it at their own Capital if they please; but as Ptolomy has been follow'd by most, 'tis like so to continue, especially since Lewis XIII of France did, by the Advice of the ablest Mathematicians, publish an Order of April 23, 1634, that it should be fix'd by his Subjects at the Isle of Fero, the most westerly of the Canaries.

It is now become usual to count the Longitude westward as well as eastward, from the Place where Geographers fix their first Meridian.

The Difference among 'em about fixing this Meridian has made great Confusion in their Maps, and occasion'd much difficulty in finding the Longitude of Places, some placing them in one Degree, and others in another. The only way to remedy this at present is, to give an account of the different Places where they fix their Meridians, and of their Distance from one another.

The Spaniards, since their Conquest of the West-Indies, place their first Meridian at Toledo; and from thence, contrary to all other Europeans, account their Longitude from East to West.

Bleau, the Dutch Geographer, and most of his Countrymen, place it at the Pike of Teneriff, one of the Canaries.

The French, as we have heard already, generally fix theirs at the Isle of Fero, and some of them at Paris.

Our English Geographers, as Camden, Speed, and others, fix it in the Azores Islands; some at the Isle of Corvo; and others, which is most follow'd, at the Isle of St. Michael's; and later ones place it at London.

The Distances betwixt those Places in the western Part of our Hemisphere is thus:

		Degrees	Minutes
From the Pike of Teneriff	to Toledo	15	53
	to Gratiosa	10	25
	to Tercera	9	00
	to Palma Fero, or Fer	2	50
	to Corvo	13	25
	to St. Michael's	8	15

So that to find the Longitude of a Place in your Map, consider where it begins its Longitude, and whether the Place where it begins lies East or West from any of the Places above-mention'd, and how many Degrees; and accordingly subtract or add such Difference from or to the given Longitude of any Place, to find the Longitude of the Place you seek for in your Map. For Instance, suppose I look in a Map for London, whose Longitude from St. Michael's I know to be 27 Deg. 30 M. and that the Map I look in begins the Longitude from the westermost Part of Spain, which is 16 Deg. East of St. Michael's, then I must subtract 16 Deg. from 27 Deg. 30 M. and the Remainder 11. 30. is the Longitude of London in such a Map; but if the Map had begun its Longitude from any Place West of St. Michael's, as from Corvo, which is about 5 Deg. 20 M. West of it, I must add that Distance to the 27 Deg. 30 M. and it would make the Longitude of London 32 Deg. 20 M. in that Map which begins its Longitude at Corvo.

Of the Measures us'd by Geographers.

IN Imitation of Geometricians, who divide their Cireles into 360 Parts, and each of theſe into 60 others, Geographers have divided the Globe into 360 Degrees, every Degree into 60 Minutes or Miles, each Mile into 1000 Paces, each Pace into five Foot, and each Foot into 12 Inches, which the French ſubdivide into 12 Lines, and the Line into 12 ſenſible Points, one againſt another in a direct Line; but a Point is conſider'd as Indiviſible.

A Degree thus divided into 60 Minutes of 1000 Geometrical Paces each, ſerves as a Foundation to regulate all the Meaſures us'd by Geographers for Journeys, Voyages, and the Diſtance of Places; this Pace being the moſt certain and commodious Way of meaſuring them.

For the Eaſe and Inſtruction of thoſe who read ancient or modern Geography, we have drawn up the Alphabetical Table following of all the Countries whoſe Meaſures are mention'd by Geographers, with the Number of Geometrical Paces that each of thoſe Meaſures contains; and how many of each of thoſe Meaſures make up a Degree.

But it muſt be obſerv'd, that Geographers differ in Opinion as to the Miles on the Surface of the Earth, which anſwer to a Degree in the Heavens; of which Mr. Leybourn, in his Introduction to Aſtronomy and Geography, gives us this Account:

The Ancients reckon'd to a Degree 60 Engliſh or Italian Miles, 20 French or Dutch Leagues, 15 German Miles, 17 1/2 Spaniſh Leagues.

Of Engliſh Miles Alhazard the Arabian, and Gaſſendus reckon'd 73 to a Degree; Fernelius 68, Wilbrordus Snellius 70, Oughtred 66, Norwood 69 1/2, and 14 Poles of 16 Foot and half each.

Mr. Norwood meaſur'd the Diſtance betwixt London and York by a Perambulator, Anno 1635, and being an able Mathematician, his Computation is reckon'd very exact. The French Academy of Sciences agree very near with him, and make 69 9/10 Engliſh Miles in a Degree; ſo that to allow 70 Miles for a Degree, as ſome of our modern Geographers direct, does not at all ſeem unreaſonable.

By this it may be eaſily ſeen how Geographers come to differ ſo much in their Computations of the Extent of Countries, and Diſtance of Places: Some of them, and eſpecially ſuch as only copy from others, never conſider the difference of Meaſures us'd by different People, nor even the difference betwixt Meaſures of the ſame Denomination in one and the ſame Country; but whenever they find a Mile or a League, &c. mention'd, they take it to be the ſame with that of the Place where they live, or don't diſtinguiſh between the common and uncommon Meaſure of the Places they treat of.

This is alſo owing in a great degree to the Careleſſneſs or Ignorance of Travellers, who, not obſerving thoſe neceſſary Diſtinctions, make groſs Miſtakes both in the Extent of the Countries and Diſtance of Places, which they give us an Account of in their Travels; and thus their Errors are very unjuſtly charged upon Geographers and Map-makers, who are oblig'd to truſt what Travellers write, until their Miſtakes be made evident by thoſe of better Credit and Abilities, or at leaſt of more Diligence.

Many Inſtances of Miſtakes of this Nature might be given, but we ſhall inſiſt only upon a few. Some French Travellers, who have been in Indoſtan, ſay, their Coſs makes only 1/3 a French League; and others ſay, it makes a whole one. Some Engliſh Travellers ſay, that two Coſſes go to an Engliſh Mile. Some Dutch Travellers ſay, that three Coſſes make up two German Miles; and others ſay, that two of 'em make a Dutch Mile; but they don't ſay what ſort of French, Engliſh or Dutch Miles they mean.

The Effect that this want of Care has in the Accounts of the Extent of Countries, is evident from the following Inſtance in Tavernier a French Traveller, who makes the Diſtance betwixt Surat and Goa, two Places on the ſame Coaſt, which lies from North to South 61 Goſs, and each Goſs he makes four Coſs's, and the Coſs equal to the ordinary French League, which make above nine Degrees and 1/3 of Latitude betwixt the two Places; whereas, according to all the printed Maps, and the Portugueſe and Dutch Manuſcripts, there are only ſix Degrees of Latitude betwixt thoſe Places.

Another Inſtance of groſs Miſtakes in Travellers is that of Father Marini, who, in his Relation, places Tunquin in China according to thoſe of the Country in the 50th Journey of Length from South to North, and in the 20th of Breadth from Eaſt to Weſt; having ſaid before that the Length was 1500 Miles, and the Breadth 600, by which it appears that he aſſigns 30 Miles to each Journey. But as that Country has only about 13 Degrees of Latitude, which make no more than 780 Miles in a ſtrait Line, it follows, that the Journeys can be no more than about 15 or 16 Miles each, ſince otherwiſe Tunquin muſt be in the 35th Degree of Latitude, which muſt take in two thirds of China.

The only Way that Geographers have to prevent ſuch Miſtakes, is to ſet down in their Scales of Meaſures what ſort it is they make uſe of, and how many of 'em goes to a Degree.

It muſt here be obſerv'd, that Geographers reckon all their Meaſures in a direct Line; becauſe if it were according to the Turnings and Windings of Roads, they could not truly repreſent the Situation of Places.

How to find out the Situation of Places in Maps, and the Diſtance betwixt one Place and another.

IF you know the Longitude and Latitude of any Place, 'tis eaſy to find where it is or ought to be in a Map, by the direction of your Eye to the Place where the Lines of the given Longitude and Latitude cut one another. The Degrees of Longitude being generally mark'd at the top and bottom of Maps, and the Degrees of Latitude on the Sides; or if the Maps be large, ſo as you can't ſo well be directed to the Situation of the Place by a Glance of the Eye, you may lay a Ruler or a ſtrait Thread over the Place whoſe Poſition you ſeek for, directly to the Longitude or Minute of Longitude againſt the Place at top and bottom, and in like manner apply the Ruler or Line to the Degree or Minute of Latitude on each ſide the Map, and thus you may find the exact Longitude and Latitude of the Place you ſeek for according to your Map; or if you know the Bearing and Diſtance of one Place from another beforehand, you may eaſily find its Poſition by your Scale and Compaſs.

But if you don't beforehand know the Longitude and Latitude, or Bearing and Diſtance of the Place ſought for, you muſt either conſult ſuch Dictionaries as treat of the Longitude and Latitude of Places, or the Indexes of ſuch Geographical Books as will direct to it; or in ſuch Syſtems of Geography as give the general Diviſions of Countries, with their principal Towns, as Sanſon and Luyts do in their Tables, you may find the Place, if it be of Note, in thoſe Diviſions, and then it may be eaſily found by Inſpection into the Map; as alſo its Longitude and Latitude as before.

To find the Diſtance betwixt one Place and another in a Map, you muſt conſider whether that Map you make uſe of have the Degrees of Latitude mark'd on the Sides, which all but general Maps or Planiſpheres commonly have; for then putting the Points of the Compaſſes on the two Places, and applying the Diſtance to the Degrees of Latitude oppoſite to the Places, you'll find nearly how many Degrees or Minutes they are diſtant from one another, and for every Degree you muſt reckon 60 Miles, and for every Minute a Mile; but this will be true only on a Globe.

If the Diſtance be greater than can be meaſur'd at once by your Compaſs, as frequently happens in large Maps, when Places are at a great diſtance, lay a ſtrait Thread or a Ruler betwixt the two Places, and apply your Compaſs to one or more Degrees of Latitude on the Side of the Map; as the Caſe requires, you may meaſure the Line or Ruler by the Degrees contain'd in the opening of your Compaſs, and by calculating the Degrees and Minutes, as above, you have the Diſtance you ſeek for.

In general Maps or Planiſpheres the Degrees of Latitude are mark'd on the Circle which incloſes each Hemiſphere, ſo that by uſing your Compaſs, as above, or making uſe of a Ruler or Thread, if the Diſtance be great, you may find it in the ſame Manner as before directed; and the Degrees of Longitude being mark'd on the Equinoctial Line in ſuch Planiſpheres, the Difference of Longitude betwixt Places may be eaſily found the ſame Way: Only you muſt obſerve, that the Diſtance betwixt Places from Eaſt to Weſt, or any of their collateral Points, is not to be meaſur'd by the Degrees of Longitude, but by thoſe of Latitude, becauſe the Degrees of Longitude contract gradually from the Equinoctial, till they end in a Point under each Pole. The Diſtance of Places might be meaſur'd this Way, by conſulting a Table of Diminution of the Degrees of Longitude in each Degree of Latitude, but it wou'd be both more troubleſome and leſs exact. N. B. Theſe are the ways uſually directed to, but can't be true to any Exactneſs.

In

In particular Maps of larger or leſſer Countries, there is generally a Scale of Leagues or Miles, &c. ſo that to find the Diſtance of Places in ſuch Maps, you put the Points of your Compaſs upon the two Places, and meaſure the Diſtance by the Scale; or if the Diſtance be greater than the Scale, you may meaſure the Scale twice, or oftner, with your Compaſſes, as the Caſe requires; and if the Compaſs be not large enough, it may be done by a Ruler or Thread, as before.

'Tis to be obſerv'd, that when Maps are ſmall, the Minutes of Degrees are frequently omitted, and the Degrees divided into four, five, or more Parts, one of the Diviſions being black and the other white, which are eaſily underſtood as being ſo many parts of 60, and may be ſpeedily reduc'd to Geographical Miles.

Sometimes when the Maps are large, and the Space wery wide betwixt one Degree and another, the Minutes or other Diviſions are mark'd on the Sides betwixt the Degrees, but in leſſer Figures.

The Bearings of Places from one another, as E. W. N. or S. &c. may be found out by the Compaſs in the Maps, or by the Words North at top, South at bottom, Weſt on the Left Hand, and Eaſt on the Right.

There are ſome Maps ſo contriv'd, for particular Purpoſes, as that inſtead of Longitude and Latitude they have only Lines drawn parallel to the ſides, and others drawn parallel from top to bottom, which divide the whole into little Squares; and on both ſides of the Map againſt each Space, there are Letters ſet, as A, B, C, &c. and there are other Letters, different from the former, plac'd againſt the Spaces at bottom and top. By the help of theſe Letters an Alphabetical Table is form'd, with the Names of all the Places, and againſt each Name is plac'd one of the Letters in the ſides, and another of thoſe at top and bottom; by looking for which in the Map, the Poſition of the Place is eaſily found, as ſuppoſe a Place mark'd in the Table A B, and that A is the top and B the ſide Letter, I look for A on the top, and B on the ſide, and in the Space where the Lines drawn from each Letter meet, the Place will be found. Adams's Map of England, and Ogilby's Map of the Roads of England, and others are form'd after this manner; and ſome of this ſort have Longitude and Latitude alſo.

Of the Lower WORLD, or EARTH and SEA in General.

'TIS obvious to common View, that our lower World is divided into Land and Sea: The Learned have been very curious in their Enquiries about the Dimenſions of each, and their Proportion to one another, but have not yet been able to determine with any certainty, whether Sea or Land takes up moſt of the Surface of our Globe, becauſe we know but little of thoſe Parts of the World about the North Pole, and nothing of what there is about the South Pole. 'Tis doubted by the Learned, whether there be any Inhabitants under either Pole; yet 'tis probable there may, ſince Dr. Halley has prov'd, that the Solſtitial Day under the Pole is as hot as under the Equinoctial, when the Sun is vertical to them, or in their Zenith, becauſe for all the 24 Hours of that Day under the Pole, the Sun-Beams are inclin'd to the Horizon with an Angle of 23 Degrees $\frac{1}{2}$; whereas under the Equinoctial, tho' he becomes vertical, yet he ſhines no more than 12 Hours, and is abſent 12; and beſides, for three Hours eight Minutes of that 12 Hours he is above the Horizon there, he is not ſo much elevated as under the Pole.

Of the Dimenſions of the Earth and Sea together.

Anaximander, who liv'd about 550 Years before Chriſt, is the firſt that we know of, who offer'd to deſcribe the Circumference of the Earth and Sea; and his Dimenſions are ſuppos'd to be thoſe mention'd by Ariſtotle, at the cloſe of his Second Book concerning the Heavens, viz. That the Circumference of the Earth was 400000 Stadia, each Greek ordinary Stadium being reckon'd 600 Foot. This Opinion was follow'd till Eratoſthenes, who liv'd about 200 Years before Chriſt, made the Circumference about 252000 Stadia; but then this muſt not have been the ordinary Stadium, becauſe Pliny reduces them to 315000 Roman Miles. Hipparchus, who liv'd 100 Years after Eratoſthenes, added 25000 Stadia to his Number. Poſſidonius, who liv'd in Cicero's Time, made the Circumference 24000 Stadia, according to Cleomedes, and but 180000 according to Strabo. Ptolomy, who liv'd 144 Years after Chriſt, agreed with the latter. Maimon, or Almanon, a King of the Arabians, about A. C. 827, order'd ſome Learned Mathematicians to meet in the Fields of Meſopotamia, and meaſure them from North to South, in order to find out the Quantity of a Degree, and thereby to compute the Circumference of the Earth, which they determin'd, ſome ſay, to be 20060 Miles, and others 20340: From that time the Arabians follow'd their own Mathematicians, and the Latins follow'd Ptolomy; and the Problem lay in a manner neglected, till Snellius, a very Learned Man, and Profeſſor of Mathematicks at Leyden in 1613, finding theſe Computations defective, apply'd himſelf to this Study, and computing a Degree of the Earth to make 19 Dutch Miles of 18000 Rhinlandiſh Feet each, he made the Circumference of the Earth to be 8640 ſuch Miles. The Curious may find the ſeveral Ways of making up thoſe Computations in Sir Iſaac Newton's Edition of Varenius, with his own Opinion and Animadverſions upon them, Lib. 1. cap. 4.

The Learned Mr. Keil, in his Examination of Dr. Burnet's Theory, makes the Surface 170981012 Italian Miles.

M. de Fer, in his Methode Abregée, or Short Method for learning Geography, printed at the Hague in 1706, ſays, the French Royal Academy of Sciences computed a Degree upon the Earth to be 57060 Toiſes of the Chatelet of Paris, which make 28 Paris Leagues of 2000 Toiſes each; according to which Computation, he makes the Circumference of the Earth 10080 Paris Leagues, its Surface 36356814 Leagues, its Diameter 3210, and its Solidity 17312949004 Cubical Leagues.

M Bion in his L' Uſage de Globes, or Uſe of the Globes, approv'd by M. de la Hire, of the French Royal Academy of Sciences, printed at Amſterdam in 1700, differs from de Fer in ſeveral Reſpects; he computes a Degree upon the Earth at the ſame Number of Toiſes at ſix Foot each, but ſays, they make up 25 common French Leagues of 2282 $\frac{2}{7}$ Toiſes each, and that multiplying by 360, the Value of a Degree, we find the Circumference of the whole Earth to be 9000 Leagues; and according to the proportion of a Circle to its Diameter, which is as 355 to 113, we ſhall find that the Diameter of the Earth is 2864 $\frac{18}{113}$ common French Leagues; and the Demi-Diameter, or the Diſtance of the Surface of the Earth from its Center 1432 $\frac{9}{113}$.

That if we multiply 9000 Leagues, the Circumference of the Earth, by its Diameter 2864 $\frac{18}{113}$, the Product will be 25783200 ſquare Leagues for the Surface of the Earth and Sea, if we conſider the Terreſtrial Globe as regular.

And if we multiply again that Surface by its Semi-Diameter, and take the third of its Product, that third will give us 12310618560 Cubic Leagues for the ſolid Quantity of the Terreſtrial Globe.

Sanſon jun. in his Introduction to Geography, printed at Amſterdam in 1708, does, upon the ſame Foundations, make the Circumference of the Globe 9000 common French Leagues, or 21600 common Italian Miles.

The Surface of the Globe 25 Millions and half of common French Leagues, or 148 Millions 510800 of Geometrical or common Italian ſquare Miles.

The Solidity of the Globe 12 Millions of Millions, and 310 Millions of common French Cubic Leagues, or 170 Millions of Millions, 181 Millions and 900 Geometrical or common Italian Cubic Miles, that is, ſo many ſquare ſolid Maſſes of a Mile in Length, Breadth and Thickneſs each.

Dr. Harris in his Lexicon Technicum, ſays, that according to the French Meaſures, the Circumference of the Earth is 123249600 Paris Feet, or 24649 $\frac{6}{10}$ Engliſh Miles; the mean Semi-Diameter 19615800 Paris Feet, or 3933 Miles of 5000 Feet to a Mile. But the Earth is higher at the Equator than at the Poles 85200 Feet, or 17 Miles, ſo that the Radius of it may be taken in a round Number, as 20000000 Feet, and he makes the ſolid Content 3000,000000,000000,000000 Cubic Feet.

Mr. Senex in his Introduction to Geography, printed at London in 1719, reduces the Dimenſions of the Earth, according to the French Meaſures, into Engliſh thus: A Degree 69 $\frac{3}{10}$ Engliſh Miles; the Circumference 24898 $\frac{1}{10}$; the Diameter 7925 $\frac{1}{2}$; the Semi-Diameter 3962 $\frac{1}{4}$; the Surface 1041944743343 Eng. Miles ſquare; the Solidity 726704427266200 1379 Engliſh Cubic Miles.

We have given the Reader this Variety, that he may ſee the great Difference betwixt Authors on this Subject, and chuſe which Computation he pleaſes; though we think the laſt Account to be the moſt exact, becauſe it agrees with Mr. Norwood's Experiment, and that of the French Mathematicians, as Dr. Harris hath ſhewn.

The Dimenſions of the Sea by it ſelf.

Mr. Keil, in the Book above-mention'd, computes the Surface of the whole Ocean, or of all the Seas of the Globe at 854900506 ſquare Miles; and therefore ſuppoſing the Depth, one Place with another, to be $\frac{1}{4}$ of a Mile, the Quantity of Water in the whole is 2137626 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cubic Miles.

Sanſon jun. ſays, that tho' the Magellanick Continent be not entirely diſcovered, and that it is the ſame with the Arctick, yet the Globes and general Maps give us no ground to think that there's near ſo much Water as Land on the Surface of our Globe: He ſuppoſes therefore the Surface of the Water to be 74,255,400 common Italian ſquare Miles.

As to the Depth of the Sea, 'tis pretty well known near the Coaſts; but that's nothing in reſpect of the great Extent of the reſt of the Sea, whoſe Depth is not known. Pilots reckon it without bottom when it exceeds 200 Fathom in depth; and ſome alledge, that it no where exceeds 500 Fathom, yet others pretend that in ſome Places it exceeds four Geometrical Miles.

But ſuppoſing it were a Mile deep every where, the ſolid Content would be about 74,255,400 Geometrical Miles.

If you ſuppoſe the Earth to be every where as thick as its Semi-Diameter, except where we ſuppoſe the Sea to be a Mile deep; ſubſtracting the 74,255,400 Cubical Miles of the Sea from the ſolid Content of the Terreſtrial Globe, which we have computed at 170,181,000,900, there will remain 170,106,745,500 Cubic Miles for the ſolid Contents of the Earth. But all this is very uncertain.

Varenius ſays, that the Depth of the Sea is various, according as the Channel is more or leſs deep; that in ſome Places it is found to be a whole German Mile, and that from Obſervations in moſt Places, it has appear'd that 'tis very near equal to the Heighth of the Mountains and Inland Places; and that as much as they are higher than the Shores, ſo much are the Channels deeper: But the Depth is ſometimes alter'd by the Flux and Reflux, by the Increaſe and Decreaſe of the Moon, by Winds, and by the ſettling of Sand and Slime in the Channels.

Whether the above-mention'd Calculations of the Proportion the Sea bears to the Earth be any thing near the Truth or not, it is certain that the Earth, conſider'd in its Bulk, muſt take up a great deal more of our Globe than the Water; becauſe the Water, wherever it is, has Earth under it, ſo that even taking in the vaſt Abyſs of Waters, ſuppos'd to be in the Bowels of the Earth, the latter ſtill carries it in Point of Dimenſions.

The Figure of the Earth.

The Learned think it moſt probably to be that of an Oblate Spheroid ſwelling out towards the Equator, and flatted or contracted towards the Poles; ſo that the Diameter of it at the Equator is longer than the Axis about 62 Miles, according to Sir Iſaac Newton, in the New Edition of his famous Philoſophiæ Naturalis Principia Mathematica. The late Learned Dr. Gregory, in his Aſtronomia Geometrica & Phyſica, Prop. 52. Lib. 3. exhibits a Method to determine the Figure of the Earth exactly, and to find the Ratio of the Axis of it to its Equatorial Diameter; and offers Demonſtrations, to prove that the Figure of the Earth muſt be an Oblate Spheroid.

But whatever be its exact Figure, Geographers are all now agreed that 'tis Spherical or Globular, and accordingly aſſign it 360 Degrees of Latitude, and as many of Longitude.

That it is Spherical from Eaſt to Weſt, is evident from daily Experience, becauſe the Sun and Stars riſe and ſet ſooner to thoſe who live Eaſt from us than to thoſe who live Weſt from us; and on the other Hand, they riſe and ſet later to thoſe who live Weſt from us than they do to us, according to the proportion of Time, which the Diſtance of their Meridians have from ours. This cou'd not be unleſs the Earth were Globular; for if it were plain or flat, as ſome of the Ancients imagin'd, all the Inhabitants of the World muſt ſee the Sun and Stars riſe and ſet at the ſame time, and the Eclipſes wou'd be viſible to them in the ſame manner.

That 'tis alſo Spherical from South to North, is as evident; for as Travellers or Sailors advance towards the one or the other Pole, the Pole they advance to is regularly elevated above their Horizon the Quantity of a Degree for every 70 Miles they travel or ſail; and the other Pole is ſo much depreſs'd or ſunk, till at laſt they quite loſe the Sight of the Pole they ſail or travel from, and alſo of the Stars about it, if their Journey or Voyage the other way be long enough.

There are other Arguments, obvious to every one's Apprehenſion, to prove the Spherical Form of the Earth, as the round Shadow it caſts upon the Moon in an Eclipſe; and that when we travel either by Land or Sea, from Places where there are high Towers and Mountains, the lower Parts of 'em diſappear firſt, and then we gradually loſe ſight of them till they diſappear wholly. In like manner, when we ſail or travel towards a Tower or Mountain, the tops of 'em firſt appear to our View, and then the lower Parts appear gradually as we approach, until we ſee the lowermoſt. The like is to be ſaid of Ships which go from or come towards the Shore; when they ſail from us, the Hull firſt diſappears, then the Sails, and at laſt the top of the Maſt, till ſhe is quite out of ſight. The Spherical Form of the Earth has been alſo prov'd by the Obſervations and Practice of Foreign and Domeſtick Navigators, who ſailing round the Earth, either Eaſtward or Weſtward, have arriv'd at the ſame Meridian from whence they ſet out.

Of the Motion and Situation of the Earth.

There are five different Syſtems about this Matter; of which we ſhall give a brief Account as follows:

1. Ptolomy's is commonly, tho' not truly reckon'd the moſt ancient. He ſuppos'd the Terraqueous Globe to be immovably fix'd in the Center of the World; that the Stars turn'd round the Earth; that the Moon was neareſt, and then Mercury, Venus, the Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, and the fix'd Stars above one another in their ſeveral Orbs. The Stars he fancy'd to be carry'd round the Earth in 24 Hours by the Primum Mobile. He thought the Planets mov'd in a little Circle, call'd by him an Epicycle, whoſe Center mov'd in the Circumference of the great Circle of each Planet. He conceiv'd the fix'd Stars, which are always equally diſtant from one another, to have only one Heav'n, call'd the Firmament, over which he fancy'd there were two Chryſtallines, one to explain the proper Motion of the Stars, and the other to account for the Inequality of the Ecliptick. The Primum Mobile he fancy'd to incloſe all the Heav'ns, and that in 24 Hours it carried about all the other Spheres or Heav'ns.

The ſecond is that of Copernicus, who indeed reviv'd the firſt and moſt ancient Syſtem of Pythagoras. He places the Sun in the Center; makes Venus and Mercury turn round the Sun, and the Earth the like, as alſo round its proper Center. The Moon turns round the Earth, afterwards Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, and the fix'd Stars have their proper Orbs above one another; and the latter are ſo far from the Sun, that the Diſtance of Saturn is nothing in compariſon to theirs.

The third is that of Tycho-Brahe, who places the Earth in the Center; he makes the Moon, the Sun, and the fix'd Stars turn round the Earth, and Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn revolve round the Sun.

The fourth is call'd the Compoſite Syſtem, invented by Martianus Capella, in which the Moon, Sun and Stars are plac'd as in the Syſtems of Tycho and Ptolomy; Saturn, Jupiter and Mars, as in that of Ptolomy; and Mercury and Venus, as in that of Tycho.

The fifth Syſtem is that of Des Cartes, who explains that of Copernicus. He ſuppoſes the World divided into ſeveral Vortices; the Sun immovable in the middle of his Vortex; the fix'd Stars as ſo many Suns, who have their proper Vortices: The Earth he reckons among the Planets, and to turn with them, and all the Matter round the Sun from the Weſt through the South, towards the Eaſt.

There are five Planets which turn round Saturn, and four round Jupiter, call'd their Satellites, that were unknown to the Ancients.

But of all thoſe Syſtems, that of Pythagoras, reviv'd by Copernicus, and improved ſince his Time, is moſt generally receiv'd and adher'd to by Aſtronomers. Dr. Harris in his Lexicon Technicum gives it in brief as follows:

1. The Sun is ſuppos'd to be plac'd in the Middle, very near the Center of Gravity of the intire Syſtem, in the common Focus of every one of the planetary Orbits.

2. Next to him Mercury, in about three Months, deſcribes his Ellipſis round the Sun, and that ſo near, that we rarely obtain a diſtinct View of him.

3. Next to Mercury is the Elliptick Orbit of Venus, whoſe Period round the Sun is ſeven Months $\frac{1}{2}$.

4. Next to Venus, the Earth with its Attendant the Moon perform a joint Courſe round the Sun, and meaſure out the annual Period.

5. Next to the Earth, Mars alone, without any viſible Satellite attending him, revolves round the common Centre, the Sun, in about two Years.

6. Next to Mars, though at a mighty Diſtance, Jupiter the largeſt of the Planets, with his four remarkable Satellites, makes his Round in 12 Years.

7. Saturn, with his five little Moons about him, according to Caſſini, deſcribes in 30 Years the fartheſt and remoteſt Orbit, and compleats the intire planetary Chorus.

That the annual Motion belongs to the Earth about the Sun, and not to the Sun about the Earth, is prov'd by the Learned Mr. Whiſton in his Lemmata ſo demonſtratively, that the Controverſy betwixt the Ptolomaick and Pythagorean Syſtems is thereby for ever determin'd.

As to the Swiftneſs of the Earth's annual Motion, Dr. Halley in his Obſervation of Mercury in the Sun at St. Helena, Anno 1677, tells us, that it far exceeds the Swiftneſs of a Bullet-Shot out of a Canon, is after the rate of three Engliſh Miles and a half in a Second, which is 210 Miles in a Minute, and 12600 Miles in an Hour.

Dr. Gregory in his Aſtronomy ſays, that the Axis of the Earth is inclin'd to that of the Ecliptick, in an Angle of 66 Degrees 30 Minutes; and though in one annual Revolution its Axis appears to keep exactly parallel to it ſelf, yet in many Years this Poſition becomes ſenſibly chang'd, and that the Reaſon of the Inequality of the Earth's Motion is, becauſe ſhe does not deſcribe an Orbit round the Sun, properly by her own Center, but by the common Center of Gravity of the Earth and Moon.

According to M. Caſſini, the Earth's greateſt Diſtance from the Sun is 22374 Semi-Diameters of the Earth: the mean Diſtance 22000, and the leaſt Diſtance 8022.

Mr. Whiſton, on ſuppoſition that the Sun's Parallax is 10 Seconds, makes the Earth's mean Diſtance from the Sun 81 Millions of Miles.

Sir Iſaac Newton alſo takes the Earth's Diameter ſeen from the Sun to be 24 Seconds, and conſequently the Sun's Parallax to be 10, which agrees with the Obſervation of Mr. Flamſtead our famous Aſtronomer; and in that caſe, the Diſtance from the Earth to the Sun will be as ſtated by Mr. Whiſton.

From the above-mention'd Obſervations and Reaſons, among others, the Copernicans bring many Arguments againſt Ptolomy's Syſtem, as, Firſt, It is very improbable that ſo many and ſo great Bodies ſhou'd be carry'd with ſo ſwift a Motion, viz. above Hundreds of Thouſands of Miles in a Minute, as the fix'd Stars muſt be, according to Ptolomy's Hypotheſis, and to the leaſt Diſtance that any other aſcribes to them: eſpecially when all the Ends aſſign'd to this Motion, as to give us Night and Day, Winter and Summer, may be as fully obtain'd by the comparatively ſlow Motion of the Earth, which, in reſpect to them, is but a Point. II. Since the Earth borrows Light from the Sun, as all the Planets do, 'tis very probable that the Earth moves with them, whilſt the Sun and fix'd Stars, which have Light of their own, are at reſt. III. It ſeems very reaſonable that the Periods of revolving Bodies ſhould be proportionable to their Orbs, for the longer the Space is in which they move, the longer muſt be the Time. Now, according to Ptolomy, the Primum Mobile, which is his higheſt and moſt extenſive Sphere, moves round in a Day, Saturn in 30 Years, Jupiter in 12, Mars in two, the Sun, Venus and Mercury, which have ſeveral Orbs, he ſuppoſes to agree in making their Revolutions in about a Year. The Abſurdity and Contradiction of this, conſidering the different Extent of their Orbs is palpable, whereas, by making the Earth a Planet, nothing can be more harmonious, than that juſt Proportion betwixt the Bigneſs of its Orb and the Time of its Motion. IV. Ptolomy's Hypotheſis is very perplext and intricate in ſolving thoſe Hypotheſes which his Followers pretend may be ſolv'd by it, as, 1. Why the Planets ſometimes appear retrograde, and particularly Saturn oftner and longer than Jupiter, Jupiter than Mars, &c. and ſometimes Stationary. 2. Why Venus is never diſtant from the Sun above 50, nor Mercury above 30 Degrees, and conſequently are never oppoſites to him. 3. Why Venus appears juſt after the ſetting, and before the riſing of the Sun. V. Venus and Mercury, when view'd through a Teleſcope, are plainly ſeen to increaſe, decreaſe, and to have their Phaſes like the Moon; whereas, according to Ptolomy, their enlighten'd Sides could never be towards us, but when they were in oppoſition to the Sun, that is, when the Earth was nearly between the Sun and them, as it is with the Moon; but they never are in oppoſition to the Sun, as already obſerv'd, and appear full at their Conjunctions with him, about whom they therefore evidently move.

There are many other Arguments urg'd againſt Ptolomy's Hypotheſis, for which we refer the Curious to thoſe who have writ expreſly on the Subject; what's ſaid above being enough for Geography, and to give us a Light into the Motion and Situation of the Terraqueous Globe.

Of the Diviſions of the Earth into Continents, &c.

The Earth and the Sea divide one another into Parts upon the Surface of our Globe; and the Conſideration of this is what the Learned call Natural Geography.

The great Parts of the Earth are nam'd Continents, becauſe they contain vaſt Tracts of Land; and the leſſer Parts, divided from thoſe Continents, are call'd Iſlands.

The Continents are reckon'd four, viz. 1. Ours, which is the largeſt, becauſe it contains Europe, Aſia and Africa; 'tis called Eaſtern, in reſpect of its Situation to America; and the Old World, becauſe firſt known and planted. 2. America call'd Weſtern, in reſpect of its Situation to ours; and the New World, becauſe not known to us till diſcover'd by Columbus. 3. The Southern unknown Parts call'd Terra Magellanica, from Magellan the firſt European Diſcoverer. 4. The Northern unknown Parts; but we know ſo little of the two laſt, that 'tis not certain whether they be Iſlands, or join'd to the other Continents.

'Tis to be obſerv'd, that Continents are alſo call'd Terra Firma, or Main Lands; and larger Iſlands are ſometimes call'd ſo, in reſpect of the leſſer Iſlands that lie about them.

A Peninſula, in Greek Cherſoneſus, is a Tract of Land that runs out into the Sea, which encompaſſes it on all Sides, except a ſmall Neck which joins it to the Main Land.

An Iſthmus is that Neck of Land which joins a Peninſula to the Main Land.

A Promontory, Cape, or Head Land, is a Mountain or high Hill on any Part of the Coaſt, which runs out into the Sea; and if there be no Riſing, or but a ſmall one on ſuch Part of a Coaſt, 'tis call'd a Point.

Downs are Hills of Sand along the Coaſt, and commonly near the Mouths of great Rivers. Riſing Tracts of Land within the Country are alſo call'd by that Name in England, as Banſtead-Downs, &c. It comes from the old Gauliſh or Celtic Word Dun, ſignifying an Hill, as was long ago obſerv'd by Plutarch in his Book of Rivers, and comes from the Welſh to us.

For the Definitions of Mountains, Valleys, Lakes, Rivers, Forreſts, Deſarts, &c. with which ſome Geographers crowd their Books, we paſs them over as known to every Body.

The Diviſions of the Ocean.

As the Sea divides the Earth, the Earth alſo divides the Sea. That which ſurrounds the Earth is properly call'd the Ocean, being ſo nam'd by the Greeks, becauſe of its ebbing and flowing; but they firſt call'd it Ogenos, from the Phœnician Word Og, becauſe it encompaſs'd the Earth. The Ancients call'd it the Exterior Sea, to diſtinguiſh it from the Mediterranean, which they call'd Interior: But now any great Part of the Sea is call'd Ocean, as the Northern, the Weſtern or Atlantick, the Great Pacifick, the Ethiopick, and the Indian Ocean, &c. and Sea is generally given to the ſmall Parts, and as well as Ocean, receives its Denomination from the Countries which lie upon it, as the German Sea, &c. and therefore belongs to the Political Part of Geography.

There are alſo Seas in Inland Countries which have no viſible Communication with other Seas, as the Caſpian, the Sea of Galilee, &c. in Aſia; and there are ſeveral great Lakes in Europe call'd Seas by the Germans and Dutch, as the Lakes of Haerlem, Conſtance, Geneva, &c.

The Name of Archipelago was formerly peculiar to the Ægean Sea, becauſe of its great Number of Iſlands that communicated their Names to the Parts of the Sea which ſurrounded them; but now it's becomne an Appellative to any Sea where there are many Iſlands near one another, as the Archipelago of St. Lazarus in the Eaſt-Indies, where the Maldiva Iſlands lie.

Straits are either ſuch narrow Parts which open a Communication betwixt different Seas, as thoſe betwixt Dover and Calais, which paſs betwixt the German and Weſtern Ocean; thoſe call'd the Straits of Magellan, which paſs betwixt thoſe nam'd the South and North Sea, on the Eaſt and Weſt Side of America, or ſuch as open a Paſſage betwixt the Main Ocean and Inland Seas, as the Sound which paſſes betwixt the German Ocean and the Baltick, and the Straits of Gibraltar, which open a Communication betwixt the Atlantick and the Mediterranean.

A Gulph is a Part of the Sea which runs far into the Country betwixt two Points, which incloſe it as 'twere in a Boſom; hence the Latins call it Sinus, and the Greeks κολπος, whence ſome derive our Word Gulph. Of this Sort is the Gulph of Florida or Mexico. Such of 'em as are large, go indifferently by the Name of Sea or Gulph, as that of Mexico, the Baltick, call'd anciently Sinus Codanus, the Red Sea call'd the Arabian Gulph, and the Adriatick call'd the Gulph of Venice.

A Bay ſeems only to be diſtinguiſh'd from a Gulph, becauſe it does not run ſo far into the Land; to which Hudſon's Bay ſeems to be an Exception, though it might be more properly call'd a Gulph, as being of a vaſt Extent, and running far within Land.

In Scotland they have ſeveral Diviſions of the Sea they call Firths or Friths, from the Latin Word Fretum, as the Frith of Edinburgh, ſo large at the Mouth, and running ſo far into the Country, that 'tis alſo call'd the Scottiſh Sea by ancient Authors. Of the ſame Nature are the Friths of Clyde and Murray; but that call'd Penthland-Frith, betwixt Caithneſs and the Orkney Iſlands, is properly a Strait, which opens a Paſſage betwixt the German and Deucaledonian Seas. In this Country, and in the North of Ireland, great Inlets of the Sea are alſo call'd by the Name of Loughs or Lakes.

For Harbours, Creeks, &c. made by Inlets of the Sea, they are ſo well known that they need no Deſcription.

Of EUROPE in General, and its Name.

AUTHORS are not agreed as to its ancient Name, or the Cauſe and Etymology of the Preſent. Ortelius and others ſay, 'twas firſt call'd Japetia, becauſe moſt of it fell to the Poſterity of Japhet, Noah's Third Son. Theocritus ſays, it was call'd Tyria, from a Tyrian Damſel, raviſh'd by Jupiter; and her Name being Europa, 'twas alſo communicated to this Part of the World. Others derive it from Europus, a King of the Sicyonians, mention'd by Pauſanias and Euſebius; and ſome from a ſmall Province in Thrace, anciently call'd Europa, which lying near to the Aſiaticks, might occaſion their calling our whole Continent by this Name. There are ſome who with more probability derive it from the Greek Word Εὐρύοπα, becauſe of its being ſo Famous and Remarkable; and others will have it ſo call'd from its Beauty, both which agree well enough with the Humour of the Greeks, and the Nature of the Country in general; but whence ſoever the Name came, it has continu'd for many Ages, and the greateſt Princes or Conquerors have never attempted to change it. Diodorus Siculus ſays, it was call'd Galatia, and moſt of its Inhabitants Galatians. Ptolemy ſays, it was call'd Celtica, becauſe the Celtæ were ſpread through moſt of it. This is confirm'd by Ortelius and Cluverius, but theſe Names ſeem to have been given it by Foreigners, becauſe thoſe People were moſt remarkable, or lay neareſt them; for at this Day the Aſiaticks call us in general Franks, and ſome of the Africans gave us the Name of Alfrangues; the Reaſon of which ſeems to be, that the French made the greateſt Figure of any Europeans who undertook the Recovery of the Holy Land. 'Tis alſo obſervable, that ſome of the Aſiatick Turks call us Romæi, which ſeems to be deriv'd from the ancient Conqueſts of the Romans in Aſia, and from the later Wars betwixt the Turks and the Roman Emperors. So much for the Name.

Of its being firſt peopled.

THat Europe, as well as the reſt of the World, was firſt peopled from Aſia, there can be no doubt, but how, when, and by whom, is controverted among Authors: They generally agree that it was by Japhet's Poſterity; and ſome are ſo particular as to derive the Cimbri, Germans and Gauls from Aſkenaz, Noah's Great Grandſon by Japhet. Others ſay, that Tuſco, Founder of the German Government, was one of Noah's Sons. Some derive the Greeks from Javan, one of Japhet's Sons, becauſe the Name Jones, by which the Greeks were anciently call'd, ſeems eaſy to be deriv'd from Javan. The Planting of Italy is by thoſe Authors aſcribed to Gomer, Japhet's Eldeſt Son; that of Spain to Tubal, his Fifth Son; and that of Gaul and Great Britain to Meſhech, his Sixth Son.

One may eaſily conceive that there's little Ground for thoſe Conjectures, becauſe the Greeks, from whom we receiv'd our Learning, and whom we have reaſon to ſuppoſe to have been one of the firſt Colony's that came from Aſia, had not the Uſe of Letters till the Year of the World 2500, or 2600, nor any Writers for ſome Time after.

But though there be Ground to believe that we are the Poſterity of Japhet, yet there's little Reaſon to think that Europe was planted ſo early as the Time of the Perſons above-mentioned; for we muſt reaſonably ſuppoſe, that all the beſt Parts of Aſia and Egypt were peopled before any Colonies wou'd paſs the Seas into Europe.

This ſeems agreeable to the Scripture Account in the 10th of Geneſis, where we find that Part of Noah's Poſterity peopled the Country from Aſſyria to the Mediterranean, and that Nimrod extended his Kingdom Eaſtward; therefore 'tis reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that Noah's Poſterity planted the beſt Parts of Aſia that way, before they ſought out Habitations elſewhere. And that Egypt, and others of the beſt Parts of Africa, were planted before Europe is very probable, becauſe the Paſſage was more eaſy from Aſia into Africk, by the Iſthmus of Suez, than over the Seas into Europe. And thus we find, that when Abraham went to Egypt, Gen. xii. which is reckon'd about 367 Years after the Flood, that Country was not only peopled, but had a fix'd Government under their King Pharaoh, who is ſuppos'd by ſome to be Mizraim, Grandſon to Noah by Ham, mention'd Gen. x. 6. and, according to Talents in his Chronological Tables, is thought to be the Egyptian Oſiris. By this it is plain that we can be at no certainty when Europe was firſt peopled; but have Reaſon to believe, that the beſt Parts of Aſia and Africa were peopled before it.

As to the Place from whence it was firſt peopled, 'tis much more probable that it was from that Part of Aſia which lies on the Eaſt Side of the narrow Streights at Conſtantinople, &c. than by wandring about betwixt the Caſpian Sea and the Palus Mœotis through Tartary and Scythia into Norway and Denmark, and from thence into Germany, France, &c. as ſome have imagin'd; for when there was none to oppoſe them, the Colonies wou'd certainly take the ſhorteſt Way, and poſſeſs themſelves of the moſt pleaſant and fruitful Countries; and that none wou'd chuſe thoſe Northern, cold and barren Parts, but for want of Room, or becauſe forc'd to it by War; neither of which cou'd be the Caſe when Europe was firſt peopled. And though there was little of Navigation known ſo early, yet the Ark built by Noah, and the Methods that his Poſterity found to paſs the great Rivers, when they enlarged their Boundaries, wou'd readily teach them a Way to paſs the narrow Sea about Conſtantinople.

The Qualities of Europe and its People.

THough Europe was certainly not ſo ſoon peopled as Aſia, and probably later than part of Africa; and though it be the leaſt of the three ancient Parts, into which the then known World was divided, yet it has for many Ages had the Preference of the reſt in all thoſe Reſpects which make a Country or its Inhabitants Valuable.

Brietius tells us, that even the Saracens, our ancient Enemies, own'd that Europe was very Fruitful; and that its Inhabitants were very Religious and Warlike, and fit to Govern the reſt of the World.

The ancient Greek and Latin Authors, as Herodotus, Strabo, Ariſtotle, Varro and Pliny, &c. obſerv'd, that it was the wholſomeſt Part of the World, abounded with all Neceſſaries for Life, communicated its Product to the other Diviſions, and needed nothing from them but what her Inhabitants might very well want. They alſo obſerv'd, that the Europeans exceeded the reſt in Learning, Valour and Politicks, and were ſo prolifick as to become the Nurſery and Seminary of Nations; nor did thoſe Authors omit to take notice of Europe's Fame and Power, by being the Mother of the Grecian and Roman Empires, which extended their Conqueſts over the greateſt Part of the then known World; whereas neither Aſia nor Africa cou'd ever extend their Conqueſts over Europe.

'Tis now agreed on all Hands, that 'tis by far the beſt cultivated and moſt populous Part of the World. M. D. Fer reckons it contains 117 Millions of People. It certainly has much the greateſt Number of fine well-built Cities and Fortifications, and exceeds all the other Parts of the Earth in Learning, Politeneſs, Laws, Military Power, and Commerce.

'Tis alſo the Seat of three of the Nobleſt and moſt Renown'd Empires in the World. The firſt is the German, or Remains of the ancient Roman, which has not only ſav'd the Weſtern Parts of Europe from being ſwallow'd up, as the Eaſtern Parts were by the Turks, but has regain'd Hungary, Tranſilvania, and other neighbouring Countries from them, and ſo broke their Power, that they are ſooner like to loſe all their Footing in Europe, than to retain or enlarge it. The Second is that of the Ottoman Port, which was founded on the Ruins of the Eaſtern or Greek Empire, and extends it ſelf in Aſia Eaſtward to the Frontiers of Perſia; and from the Euxine Sea on the North, to the Indian Ocean on the South; as alſo over Egypt and a great Part of the Coaſt of Barbary in Africa. The Third is the Empire of Muſcovy, which extends, according to Ysbrant Ydes, the Muſcovite Embaſſador's Map and Travels, from the Baltick Sea and the Frontiers of Lithuania on the Weſt, to the great Sea that ſeparates Corea, Japan, &c. from Aſia on the Eaſt, from the Northern or Frozen Ocean on the North, to the Euxine and Caſpian Seas on the South, and to the Frontiers of China on the South Eaſt; ſo that it includes a great Part of the ancient Tartary, and runs the whole Length of the North Parts of Europe and Aſia.

As to Commerce and Navigation, it muſt be own'd that Europe far exceeds all the reſt of the World.

They have infinitely out-done the Phœnicians and Carthaginians, the famous ancient Traders of Aſia and Africa, both as to Diſcoveries, and the Length and Importance of Trading-Voyages. 'Twas, as is ſaid, the Europeans who diſcover'd the Way to the Eaſt-Indies by the Cape of Good Hope. 'Twas they who diſcover'd the New World, or America, and the Way to the South Sea through the Streights of Magellan, and afterwards by Cape Horn, &c. to the Eaſt-Indies. 'Twas they who diſcover'd what is yet known near the North Pole, and the profitable Whale-Fiſhery of Greenland, as well as the Trade to Muſcovy by the White Sea, and by this Means have extended their Commerce to all the Parts of the known World that have any Materials for it, and have ſettled ſuch Factories and Plantations, both in Aſia and Africa, as not only ſecure their Trade, but keep the greateſt Powers of thoſe Countries in Awe. Nor have their Travels by Land been leſs Remarkable, having found out a Way through the Continent to Perſia and China, and to the innermoſt Parts of Africa.

Divine Providence has fitted the Europeans for thoſe great Undertakings beyond the Inhabitants of the other Parts; for as they have nothing ſhocking in their Features and Lineaments, as is the Caſe of moſt other People, they are of ſtronger Conſtitutions; and being alſo bred in the Northern Temperate Zone, and having better Notions of Learning, Religion and Liberty than others, their Minds are thereby more adapted to generous and bold Attempts, and to deſpiſe Dangers, than thoſe of the Aſians, Africans and Americans, who never were a Match for them in any thing upon equal Terms.

Europe is alſo better furniſh'd with the chief Materials of Commerce, that are uſeful in general to Mankind, as they are with Shipping, Sailors and Proviſions for long Voyages, as will appear when we come to treat of its particular Countries.

Bochart, who was a very great Divine, ſuppoſes in his Phaleg and Canaan, that the Prophecy, Gen. ix. 27. That God ſhall enlarge Japhet; he ſhall dwell in the Tents of Shem, and Canaan ſhall be his Servant, promis'd the largeſt Share of the Earth to Japhet and his Poſterity, which, he ſays, every one muſt own to have been fulfill'd, when they conſider, that beſides Europe, which fell to their Lot, they did likewiſe inhabit Aſia Minor, Media, part of Armenia, with Iberia, Albania, and thoſe vaſt Countries towards the North, formerly inhabited by the Scythians, from whom the preſent Tartars derive their Origin: Beſides which, ſeveral learned Men think it probable that the Scythians ſent a Colony from the North or North-East Parts of Asia into America; but however that be, 'tis certain the Europeans have brought the greatest and best part of America under Subjection.

Dr. Heylin, in his general Description of Europe, agrees with Bochart, and observes, that the Greeks, one of the first Colonies of Japhet's Posterity that came into Europe, honour'd him under the Name of Japetus in their Mythological Writings, where they make him the Son of Cœlum and Terra, and Father to Prometheus. Nor is it improbable that Ovid glanc'd at this, though confusedly, in his Metamorphosis, when he makes Prometheus, whom he calls Satus Japeto, or Japhet's Descendant, the Former of Mankind, and Promethides, or Prometheus's Son, the Restorer of them after Deucalion's Flood.

Dr. Heylin adds, that the second part of the Prophecy, That Japhet should dwell in the Tents of Shem, was fulfill'd in the Literal Sense, when the Greeks and Romans of Japhet's Posterity made themselves Masters of Asia, which was possess'd by the Seed of Shem; and also in the Mystical Sense, when God was pleas'd to break down the partition Wall, and to incorporate the Gentiles, of the House of Japhet, into the Body of the Church, which for a long time was restrain'd to the Line of Shem.

And it must indeed be own'd, that Europe has this peculiar Blessing and Glory, that as she receiv'd the Christian Religion from the Apostles themselves, it has been the principal Seat of Christianity almost ever since; whereas it has been for most part extinguish'd in Asia and Africa, there being scarce any Remains of ancient Christianity left in Asia, but what hardly deserves that Name among the Georgians, Armenians, Maronites, &c. in the hither Parts, and among those call'd the Christians of St. Thomas in the Indies. Nor is there any thing of it left in Africa, but a Shadow in the Empire of Abyssina, and some poor Remnants of the Greek Church in and about Egypt; whereas it has been the general Establishment in the greatest part of Europe since Constantine's Time, except during the short Reign of Julian the Apostate. Europe has also had the Glory of propagating the Christian Religion in China and the East-Indies, and of settling it in her Factories in Africa, as well as of extending it throughout her Dominions in America; nor ought it to be omitted, as a mighty Addition to her Honour, that they were Europeans who by the Reformation recover'd Primitive Christianity from the Corruptions of the Church of Rome.

The Boundaries and Extent of Europe.

THE Ancients differ'd much as to its Northern and Eastern Boundaries. Herodotus and Ptolomy doubted whether it was bounded by the North Ocean; but Pliny, Mela and Stephanus justly agree that it was. Herodotus, Dionysius, and others, mention'd by Eustathius, thought it was bounded on the East by the Conjunction of the Northern and Caspian Seas. Some divided Europe from Asia by an Isthmus betwixt the Caspian and the Euxin Seas. There were other Opinions which we pass over, this being enough to shew how imperfect the Geography of the Ancients was, even with respect to their own Country, or Quarter of the World.

As they differ'd in its Boundaries, it follows of Consequence that they must differ about its Extent. Thus Strabo made it 30000 Stadia, or about 3750 English Miles long, and 14100 Stadia, or about 1712 Miles broad. Pliny made it 8414 Miles long, and 6018 broad. Ptolomy made it 3000 Miles long, and 1750 broad; and according to Brietius's Map, the Ancients plac'd it betwixt the North Latitude 35 and 70, but the Longitude very uncertain.

The Boundaries of it are now known to be, on the North the Icy or Frozen Sea, call'd by the Ancients Mare Hyperboreum, on the South the Mediterranean, on the West the Atlantick, on the East the Archipelago, anciently call'd the Ægean Sea; the Streights of Gallipoly or the Dardanelles, anciently call'd the Hellespont; the Sea of Marmora, or White Sea, formerly call'd the Propontis; the Streights of Constantinople, anciently nam'd the Bosphorus Thracius; the Black Sea, formerly call'd the Pontus Euxinus; the Streights of Caffa, formerly the Bosphorus Cimmerius; the Sea of Zabaque, formerly the Palus Mæotis; the River Don, formerly the Tanais, and a Line drawn from the Eastern Part of that River North East to the River Oby, and from thence by the latter to the North Sea, over-against the East Part of Nova Zembla as far as it is discover'd.

The Situation of Europe is altogether in the North Temperate Zone, except a Part of Norway, Swedish and Muscovite Lapland, and of the Czar's Dominions, as far as the River Oby, which lie beyond the Arctick Circle, as do Greenland, Nova Zembla, Groneland and Friezeland, which several Writers make Parts of Europe.

Modern Authors differ as to its Dimensions: Cluverius makes the Length from the Cape of St. Vincent to the Mouth of the River Oby 900 German Leagues, or 3600 Italian Miles; and the Breadth from Cape Matrapan in the Morea, to the North Cape in Norway, 500 German Leagues, or 2200 Italian Miles. They differ likewise in the Degrees of Longitude and Latitude, betwixt which it is situated; but according to our Map it lies betwixt North Latitude 32 and 73, and betwixt Longitude West from London 11, and East from London 45: So that the Length from Cape St. Vincent on the South-West, to Longitude 45 beyond Archangel on the North-East, is 2100 Miles, and from Cape Caglia in the Morea, to the North Cape in Norway, 1800 broad.

The Ancient and Modern Languages.

THE ancient Languages were reckon'd four, of which the rest were only Dialects, 1. The Sarmatian, from whence came the Sclavonick. 2. The Celtick, from whence were deriv'd the German or Teutonick, the Illyrick, Gaulick and British. 3. The Latin, divided into the Ancient call'd Osca, and the New call'd Romana. 4. The Greek, with its five Dialects, subdivided into several others. Dion Halycarnassens thinks the Latin was deriv'd from the Æolick.

The principal Languages now spoke in Europe are deriv'd from the Latin, Greek and Teutonick, but none of the three can now well be said to be living Languages, or to be spoke in their original Purity. The French, Italian and Spanish are deriv'd from the Latin; High-Dutch, Low-Dutch, and the several Dialects spoke in Germany, Denmark, Sweden and Norway are deriv'd from the Teutonick; and our Language in England is deriv'd chiefly from the old Saxon, but mix'd with old British, Danish and French, and many of our Compounds and Terms of Art are from the Latin and Greek. We have likewise a mixture of other European Languages, occasion'd by our Commerce and Travels. The modern Greek differs so much from the ancient, that those who understand the School-Greek only, can make little more of it than one who understands only School-Latin can do of Italian and French. The Sclavonick is spoke in Sclavonia, Bohemia, Poland, Muscovy and Turky in Europe; and the Tartarian Language is a Dialect of it. There are several Languages of less Note spoke in particular Places of Europe, but are Dialects of some of the former, and therefore we shall not insist upon them. The Irish, Welch and Biscayan are by some reckon'd distinct Languages; but Mr. Lhuyd in his Archeologia Britannica makes it evident, that they were originally one and the same, and deriv'd from the old Celtick or Gaulish, though they now differ in Dialect; and what's call'd the Irish He proves to be the ancient Scots, which is still retain'd in the Highlands and Western Isles of Scotland.

The Religions in Europe are, 1. The Christian, which is most general, but divided into the Greek, Popish and Protestant Churches, and each of these have their Sub-divisions. 2. There are many Jews in Europe, and they are allow'd the Freedom of their Worship in most trading Countries. 3. There are some Pagans in Lapland and Finland, but their Number inconsiderable. 4. The Turks and Tartars in Europe, as else-where, are Mahometans; but in European Turky, there's such Numbers of Greeks, and other Christians, as M. D. Fer says, they very far exceed the Mahometans.

It is usual with Geographers to give a general Account of the Divisions of Europe, into its Northern, Midland and Southern Parts, &c. and of its remarkable Rivers, Mountains, Capes, Bays, Lakes, &c. and likewise of the Governments into which it is divided; but as all these Things will be taken notice of in the Description of the particular Countries, 'tis needless to insist on them here.

We come now to describe the particular Countries of Europe, and shall begin at those Parts next to the North Pole which belong to it.

GREENLAND,

Of its Situation, Discovery, and the Controversies about the Title to it.

IT lies nearest the North Pole of any Place yet known, and has been discover'd on the West Side to about Lat. 82. The hither Part of it lies in 76; but Sailors are not agreed whether it is join'd to the Continent, or be a Number of Islands near one another. The Dutch Sailors think it reaches much farther North than is yet known, because they found the Ice firm and stable in the Northern Parts, as is usual about Continents in those Climates. Captain Wood, who was sent in 1676, by King Charles II. in quest of a North-East Passage to China, supposes it to be join'd to Nova Zembla, because he attempted to sail betwixt them, but could get no farther than Lat. 76, the Sea being so hard frozen, and the Ice so join'd to Nova Zembla, that he said it would require some Centuries of the Sun to thaw it; and he observ'd, that there could be no Passage between Greenland and Nova Zembla, as Barents the famous Dutch Pilot imagin'd, for then he would have found a Current, whereas he saw none, but only a small Tide which rose about eight Foot high.

As it is represented in our Maps, the South part of it looks towards Finland and Lapland, the West towards Groneland, and the East towards Nova Zembla. The Dutch call it Spitsbergen, because of its sharp pointed Rocks and Mountains, and alledge that it was first discover'd by their Sailors Hemskirk, &c. in 1596, as they were searching for a North-East Passage to the Indies. But 'tis more probable that Sir Hugh Willoughby was the first Discoverer, because, by the Notes found on his Table in the Harbour of Arzina in Lapland, where he and his Company were frozen to Death, it appear'd, that in August the 14th, 1553, he had been 160 Leagues North and East from Seynam, which lies in North Lat. 70, and continued sailing till the 14th of September, when he landed on a high rocky desart Country; from whence he was forc'd back by Cold and Ice, and came to Lapland, where, next Spring, he and his Crew were found dead in the Ship. Besides, Captain Stephen Burroughs, afterwards Comptroller of the Navy to Queen Elizabeth, going in quest of a North-East Passage to the Indies, did, in 1556, arrive at a Country in 80 Deg. 11 Min. North Lat. which he found desolate, but abounding with Fowls, and the Ice in the adjacent Sea of a blue Colour. This is a strong Presumption that it was Greenland, and confirms the Title of the English to the first Discovery.

The

The Engliſh Trade to thoſe Parts began in 1553, when Philip and Mary incorporated the Ruſſia Merchants, who employed ſeveral Perſons to find out a North-East Paſſage to the Indies in 1580, when Arthur Pett and Charles Jackman were ſuppoſed to have been upon Greenland, for they entred the Streights of Weygats, but were forced back by Ice. The firſt time that we hear of any Dutchmen's being in thoſe Seas was in 1578, when they ſent a Ship to Cola in Lapland, near the Entrance of the White Sea; and a Year or two after they ſent another to St. Nihcolas or Archangel, by the Advice of an Engliſhman, who had a Quarrel with the Ruſſian Company. In 1594 the Dutch employed Barents to ſeek for a North-East Paſſage to the Indies, whom they own, in the firſt Volume of the Voyages of their East-India Company, printed in 1646, to be the firſt of their Countrymen that ſail'd ſo far North. They ſent him again in 1595 and 1596, when he ſaw Greenland, and wintered in the North of Nova Zembla, where he and his Company having ſuffered much, he died in his Return.

In 1608, the famous Diſcoverer Henry Hudſon ſail'd as far as Lat. 82, ſaw ſeveral Iſlands beyond it, and gave Names to ſome Places of Greenland. But our Trade thither ſeems not to have been effectually minded till 1610, that the Company ſent Captain Pool a Whale-fiſhing: He was the firſt who called it Greenland, becauſe of the Green Moſs he found upon the Shoar, and that the neighbouring Sea appeared of that Colour. He call'd it alſo King James's Newland, took Poſſeſſion of it for his new Maſter, and for that end ſet up a Red Croſs with a Writing upon it. In 1611 and 1612, the Company ſent more Ships thither, and in the latter a Dutch and a Spaniſh Ship were conducted thither by two Engliſh Pilots, who were threatned by the Engliſh, but made a good Voyage. In 1613 the Company ſent ſeven Ships with a Patent, to prohibit all Strangers to fiſh there, except the Muſcovia Company. They found fifteen Dutch, French, and Flemiſh Ships there, and ſeveral Engliſh Interlopers, to ſome of whom our Commander gave Liberty, with others he compounded for half their Fiſh, and ſome he drove away after taking the Engliſh Seamen from them. At this time our Men diſcovered Hope Iſland, and ſeveral other to the Weſt. In 1614 the Company ſent fourteen great Ships and two Pinnaces well arm'd, but the Dutch being ſtronger, continued their Fiſhery. Our Men then diſcovered to Lat. 80, and took Poſſeſſion of ſeveral Parts of the Coaſt for the King in the uſual Form, and the Dutch did the like in the ſame Places for the Prince of Orange. In 1615 the Dutch out-numbred us again, and the King of Denmark ſent three Men of War with Engliſh Pilots to demand Cuſtom for fiſhing on his Iſland, as he call'd it; but the Engliſh refuſed it, and aſſerted their own Right. In 1617 and 1618 the Engliſh out-numbred the Dutch, forc'd them from Horn Sound, took their Fiſh and their Engliſh Sailors, with their Ordnance and Ammunition, but the latter were afterwards reſtor'd.

In 1619 the Dutch worſted the Company's Ships, which with other Misfortunes made them give over that Trade as a Society; but it was continued by ſeveral of the Members with pretty good Succeſs.

The COUNTRY deſcribed.

THE beſt Account we have, is from Frederick Martens an Hamburger, who was here in 1671: He arriv'd firſt at Charles-Iſle, which is ſeventy Miles long and ten broad, and is ſeparated from Greenland by a narrow Streight, nam'd Foreland's Ford. The Country, he ſays, is generally made up of Rocks and Mountains, which riſe above one another from the Shoar towards the Midland Parts to a prodigious Height; and the Rocks being Red, they appear like Fire, eſpecially before a Storm. The Tops of the Mountains are cover'd with Fogs and Snow, and when the Sky is clear, reflect as glorious a Light as if the Sun ſhin'd upon them. The Clefts make the Snow, when it melts, appear as if it were flowered with the Branches of Trees. At the Foot of thoſe high Mountains there are others of Ice, which increaſe continually by the Rain and Snow that falls and freezes upon them. There are ſeven of thoſe Icy Mountains in a Line betwixt the Rocks, that are the higheſt in the Country, and appear of a glorious Blew, with abundance of Holes and Clefts. Some of the Rocks look like a Wall of one continued Stone, and ſmell ſweet after Rain. The Stones for the moſt part are vein'd like Marble, with White, Red and Yellow; they ſweat againſt an Alteration of Weather, and give a Red Tincture to the melted Snow and the Rain which run down from them.

In ſome Parts there are great looſe Rocks, which look as if they had fallen by chance upon one another, which form Caves and Holes for Birds and Beaſts. They are mixed with Stones of a grey Colour, which have black Veins, and gliſter like Silver Ore.

The Mountains, becauſe of their Heighth, look as if they had Soil on the Tops, but are all barren Rocks, or Heaps of Stones and Slates ſtanding edgewiſe. They are ſo high, that when the Day is not clear, one half of them ſeems to be above the Clouds. They are very dangerous to climb or walk upon, and thoſe that do ſo, mark their Way with Chalk, that they may know how to return. The Sharpneſs of the Rocks and Want of Paths, ſoon heat thoſe that walk upon them, be the Weather ever ſo cold. When Pieces fall, or Stones are thrown down from them, they make a Noiſe like Thunder, and ſome of them look as if they would tumble down every Moment. The great Pieces that have fallen from the Icy Mountains into the Sea, are much more firm than the other Ice, and waſh'd by the Waves into curious Figures, reſembling Churches, with Doors, Windows, and Pillars of a curious Blew; others are form'd like round and ſquare Tables. The Country at a diſtance looks like a Cloud.

The SOIL and PRODUCT.

WHAT Mold there is, comes from Moſs and the Dung of Birds waſh'd down from the Hills. It bears Heath-Graſs, and Herbs that are good againſt the Diſtempers of the Climate. They grow up to Seed in June and July. The chief of 'em are, ſmall Houſe-Leek, Crows-Foot of ſeveral Sorts, Sorrel, Snake-Weed, Mouſe-Ear, Perriwinkle, Cabbage-Lettuce which taſtes like Creſſes, Ranunculus's of diverſe Kinds, Herbs like Aloes, Wall-Pepper, Prick-Madam and Scurvy-Graſs in abundance, but ſo mild that the Sailors eat it for Sallads. They have ſeveral others unknown in our Parts.

The CLIMATE and AIR.

THIS Country being in the North Frozen Zone, and betwixt the third and fifth Climates of Months, muſt needs be exceſſive cold. The Froſt is almoſt continual, but ſtrongeſt in April and May, when Men can ſcarcely live there. Dead Corpſes immediately freeze, and ſome ſay they have been found entire after thirty Years Burial. During thoſe Months, the Weather is very unconſtant. When the Wind blows hard from North and Eaſt, the Cold is almoſt inſupportable; but when the Wind continues in the Weſt or South for any time, it brings much Snow, and ſometimes Rain, which moderates the Cold. In June, July and Auguſt the Air is for moſt part tolerably calm. The Winds change here ſtrangely by the Clouds, ſo that when it is South-Weſt in one place, it blows quite contrary at a few Miles diſtance. In July the Sun ſhines ſo warm as to melt the Pitch of the Ships betwixt the Seams, where the Wind can't come at it; and yet during a clear Sun-ſhine, the Meteors or Vapours condenſed in the Air, fall down like ſmall Needles of Snow into the Sea, and cover it as if ſprinkled with Duſt, or a tender Ice, which taſtes freſh. They ſparkle like Diamonds, but are ſo ſmall as not to wet one's Cloaths; and about Noon, when the Sun is warmeſt, they melt in the Air, fall down like Dew, and ſometimes occaſion Reflections like Rainbows. They have others that they call Seabows, which appear in the Atmoſphere of the Water, and ſeem to be blown up by the Wind. In Clouds near the Sun they have Parrhelia, or Mock-Suns, which the Seamen call Weather-Galls: They move about with the Sun Day and Night, and are much larger at Morning and Night than in the Day-time. Barents and his Company were much ſurpriz'd when they firſt ſaw thoſe Parrhelia, and they are engraved in the Dutch Travels as Wonders, becauſe they did not underſtand the natural Cauſes from whence they proceed. When the Cold increaſes, the Sea emits Vapours which turn to Rain or Snow in the Air, and ſmell like Fog. When great Vapours riſe conſtantly during the Sun-ſhine, 'tis a Sign the Cold abates. When they overburden the Air, they laſt a great while with a conſtant Wind, and fall down at firſt in various Shapes of Ice or Snow like Needles, Croſſes, Roſes and Stars, according as the Cold is more or leſs intenſe, and if not diſperſed by the Winds, they fall down in Cluſters of Snow.

The Sun appears here about the middle of February, and diſappears the firſt of October; but when it returns towards their Horizon, they have a long Dawn. From the beginning of May to the firſt of Auguſt the Sun never ſets, yet they reckon it Night when the Sun comes to the Weſt, and the beginning of another Day when it comes about to the Eaſt.

The Sun never riſes more than 33 Degrees above their Horizon, ſo that his Heat is not ſtrong enough totally to melt the Ice and Snow, nor to raiſe the Vapours ſo high as to make the Air temperate: This makes them hang for moſt part in ſuch dark thick Miſts, that a Man can ſcarce ſee the Length of a Ship.

Their Principal HARBOURS.

1. SOUTH-HAVEN, large and commodious, where Ships are commonly repair'd, and forty may conveniently anchor at a time. Here the Sailors take in freſh Water, which runs plentifully down from the melted Snow and Ice on the Mountains, there being no other freſh Water yet diſcovered. The Bays or Inlets, which they commonly call Rivers, are all ſalt or brackiſh. It has a high Mountain on both ſides, which are generally covered with a thick Miſt that darkens the Harbour when blown into it by the Wind. Here are ſeveral Iſlands that abound with Fowls, and one call'd Deadman's Iſland, where they bury ſuch as die, and heap Stones upon the Coffin, becauſe they can't dig the Ground, which is frozen and rocky.

2. Maurice's-Bay, call'd otherwiſe Smearburg, and the Harlingiſh Cookery, becauſe here the Dutch make their Oil, and have a few Cottages and Warehouſes, which they defend by Great Guns, and leave them ſtanding, whereas all other Nations burn their Houſes when the Fiſhing Seaſon is over.

3. The Northern Bay, in which there is an Iſland abounding with Fowls. This, with the South-Haven, and one call'd Safe-Harbour, are the beſt known in the Country.

4. Monyer's Bay, which lies the fartheſt North-Weſt of any in Greenland.

5. Roefield, ſo call'd becauſe it abounds with Deer.

6. Muſcle-Haven, at the Mouth of that call'd Weygats, not the Streights of that Name, but an Inlet ſo call'd by the Dutch, becauſe the Winds blow frequently here. Martens ſays, the loweſt part of the Country lies about this Harbour, and that he ſail'd to Lat. 81, and ſaw ſeven Iſlands farther North, but could not approach them becauſe of the Ice.

7. Alderman Freeman's Inlet, which lies at the Mouth of a large Bay or River, not yet fully diſcover'd.

There are others call'd the Engliſh, Hamburg, Daniſh and Magdalen Havens, and one nam'd the Bay of Love. There's likewiſe Bell-Sound, Fair-Haven, and Horn-Sound on the Weſt ſide of the Country towards the hither End, and one call'd Fowl-Sound on the Eaſt ſide, but not ſo diſtinctly mentioned in the Voyages, as to let us know whether they may not be ſome of the former, which the Dutch call by other Names.

Their BEASTS are,

1. WHITE BEARS, that have long Heads and bark like Dogs. They are ſlenderer and ſwifter than other Bears. Their Hair is long, and ſoft like Wool; their Noſes, Mouths, and Talons black. Their Skins make very warm Cloaths, fit for thoſe Climates, and are dreſs'd by treading them in hot Saw-duſt, which ſucks up the Fat and dries them. The Greaſe melted out of their Feet is good for Rheumatick Pains, and to haſten the Delivery of Women in Childbed: 'Tis very ſoft and ſpongy, and ſudoriſick: Their other Fat is like Suet when try'd up: It is frequently ſold for Train Oil, but nothing ſo good, and ſoon ſtinks, which Martens ſays may be prevented, were it try'd up with Orrice-Root. 'Tis much uſed for Lamps, and ſtinks not ſo much in burning as Train-Oil. Their Teeth burnt to Powder is given inwardly, to diſperſe congeal'd Blood. Some of them are ſix Foot high, and fourteen Foot long, and yield a Hundred Weight of Fat. They run to help one another when attack'd, and their Heads are ſo hard that they matter not a Cudgel that would knock down a Bull. They are very fierce, and will rather be kill'd than leave their Young. When the Sailors go into the Country, they carry Launces and Guns for their Defence againſt them. When any one is kill'd, the reſt will carry him off and eat him, if not prevented. Their Fleſh is whitiſh and fat like Mutton, but the Sailors think it makes their Hair grey. They are apt to ſurprize and eat Men up, and frequently tumble off the Stones from the dead Bodies, which they greedily devour. There is another ſort called Water-Bears, that have been ſeen twelve Miles from Shoar, and ſometimes attack the Whale-Fiſhers in their Boats. They eat the Carcaſſes of Whales, and devour young Birds and Eggs. The Milk of the Females is very white and fat, and the Cubs are perfectly form'd in their Bellies, ſo that there's nothing in the Story of their licking them into Shape.

2. Deer of a greyiſh yellow Colour, with Horns like a Hart or Elk. They feed on Graſs and Moſs, and grow very fat in three Months, which enables them to hold out all Winter; yet many of them are then ſtarved, and in the Spring they are very lean.

3. Foxes, which differ very little from ours, but ſome of them have their Heads black, and their Bodies white.

Their BIRDS.

THERE's a Land-Fowl no bigger than a Lark, with a ſquare Bill, which feeds upon Worms; and another call'd the Snow-Fowl, with a white Belly, and of the Size and Colour of a Sparrow. When pinch'd with Hunger, they flee in great Numbers to the Ships, where the Seamen take them with Eaſe before they are fed, but then they fly away. There's ſuch abundance of Water-Fowl, that in their Flight they darken the Sun, and make a mighty Noiſe when they riſe. The moſt remarkable are,

1. One which the Dutch call Raadtſheer, white as Snow, except his Bill, Feet and Eyes.

2. A Diver, ſo call'd becauſe it continues a long time under Water; 'tis almoſt as big as a Duck, with a thin crooked ſharp Bill, two Inches long, black Feathers, and red Legs and Feet. They ſwim very faſt, have little Horns above their Eyes, and are tolerable Meat.

3. The Lumb, much like the former, only its Belly is white, and it croaks like a Frog. They build in the Mountains, carry their Young in their Beaks to the Sea to teach them to ſwim and dive, and will be kill'd rather than leave them. They are not good Food.

4. A Mew, with a crooked Bill and a Bunch under it, a white Belly, grey Wings and Back, black Pinions, Legs and Feet, and a red Ring about his Eyes. The Seamen take 'em by Hooks baited with Whale's Fleſh.

5. The Dung-hunter, ſo call'd becauſe it purſues the Mew for his Dung, which when he drops, he eats up and leaves him.

6. The Allen, which purſues and beats the other Birds till they vomit what they have eat, and then he feeds on't.

7. Mallemuchs, which eat dead Whales with ſuch Greedineſs, that, rather than leave it, they ſuffer the Seamen to knock 'em down. They eat till they vomit, and tumble about in it.

8. Mountain Ducks, which are very good Meat, but their Fat taſtes like Train-Oil, and is thrown away.

The Birds of Prey are not ſo good to eat as others, till they be hung up by the Legs, that the Train-Oil may run out, and the Air run thro' them. All theſe Birds come hither at certain times, ſtay as long as the Sun ſhines, and then go away in Flocks.

Their FISH are,

1. WHALES, the taking of which is the chief Occaſion of People's reſorting hither. They are numerous and large, and differ from other Whales in their Fins and Mouths. They ſeem to ſtand up when they couple; the Genital Parts are like thoſe of four-footed Beaſts; the young ones when brought forth are as big as a Hogſhead. The Females have Nipples like a Cow, and their Milk is very white and ſweet, but taſtes fiſhy. Their Sperm, when freſh, ſmells like wheaten Flower boil'd in Water, and may be drawn out in Threads like Glew. It ſwims upon the Sea like Fat, and may be taken up by Pailfuls at a time; the Mallemuch and other Sea-Fowl devour it greedily. Their Fleſh is coarſe and hard like that of a Bull; the Sailors ſometimes cut off and boil the tendereſt parts about the Tail, which looks like powder'd Beef. Their Food is ſuppoſed to be ſmall Sea-Snails, Herrings, and other ſmall Fiſh. In May and June they keep to the Weſt, near that call'd Old Greenland or Mayen's Iſland, and come to that call'd Spitzbergen in July and Auguſt. Thoſe Years which have the feweſt foggy and cloudy Days, are beſt for catching Whales; and where the Fiſh call'd Butskophs appear in great Numbers, 'tis a Sign of a good Whale-fiſhing; but 'tis the contrary where Sea-Dogs are numerous, for they devour the Food of the Whales. Thoſe caught betwixt this Country and Norway are not ſo large, nor don't yield ſo much Oil as thoſe of Greenland.

2. The Fin-Fiſh; they come to the Coaſt after the Whales, which 'tis then ſuppoſed go to other Seas. The Fin-Fiſh are as long as Whales, but ſcarce ſo bulky by two thirds. They are ſo call'd becauſe of the Fins on their Back near their Tail. They ſpout out the Water higher and with more Force than the Whales. They yield Whale-bone and Oil as the other, but not in ſuch Quantities, and are more dangerous to take, becauſe more nimble, and apter to draw the Boats under the Ice, therefore they are commonly kill'd with Launces.

3. The Sea Horſe, alias the Morſe, Walruſh and Horſe-Whale, is ſhap'd much like a Seal, but as big as an Ox. They yield Oil, their Fleſh is like that of a Hog, and their Tongue, Heart, and Liver eatable. They are chiefly valued for their Teeth, of which they have two great long ones in their upper Jaw, ſometimes above two Foot long. They are reckon'd better than Ivory, being whiter, firmer and heavier. The Icelanders make Buttons of them, and they excel that call'd the Unicorn's Horn againſt Poiſon and malignant Diſeaſes. They lie in great Numbers upon the Shoals of Ice call'd Icefields, but jump immediately into the Sea when allarm'd, are very fierce, and ſometimes purſue the Fiſher-Boats, ſtrike Holes in them with their Teeth, or leap in and over-ſet them. They roar terribly, ſtand by one another when attack'd, and won't leave their Young while they have Life. Their Skins are like thoſe of Seals, and their chief Strength is about their Heads and Necks. They are ſcarce to be pierced with Harpoons, but are eaſilieſt kill'd with Javelins. The Skins of their Necks, when dreſs'd, is as good as the beſt Buff, and very light. They blow the Water out at their Noſtrils, but not with ſuch Force as the Whale. Their Dung reſembles that of Horſes, and is greedily eat up by the Sea-Fowl.

4. The Dragon-Fiſh has two Fins on his Back, and two Holes in his Neck inſtead of Gills, on each ſide of which there are two ſhort Fins, and under thoſe two broad ones. Under his Belly there is a long narrow Fin, that reaches to the Tail. His Head is long, with a riſing Noſe, and its Body long, round and thin, not unlike a young Shark. His Skin ſhines like Silver.

5. The Butskoph, or Plaiſe's Head; he has Fins like the Dolphin, a Tail like a Whale, and a Spout-hole above his Neck. They are from ſixteen to twenty Foot long, and delight to follow Ships, with which they will keep Company a long while. They often tumble in the Sea during the Eaſt-Wind, and give over when it turns to another Corner.

6. The White Fiſh is of the Size of a large Butskoph, not unlike a Whale, and where they are numerous 'tis a Preſage of good Whale-fiſhing. They have Spout-Holes near their Necks.

7. The Dolphin; here are great Numbers of them, and when they tumble or jump in the Sea, it preſages a Storm.

8. The Unicorn; they ſwim in Shoals, reſemble Seals, but the undermoſt Fins and Tail are like thoſe of a Whale. Some are black, and others of a dapple grey. They are from ſixteen to twenty Foot long, and ſo ſwift that 'tis hard to catch them. They have a ſort of Horn in their Snout, from whence they had the Name, and when they ſwim they hold up their Horns out of the Water.

9. The Saw-Fiſh or Sword-Fiſh, ſo call'd from a long broad Bone fix'd to his Noſe, with ſharp Teeth on each ſide. He has two Fins on his Back, and four underneath. They are from two to twenty Foot long, and their Shape reſembles a Man's naked Arm ſtretch'd out. They aſſault the Whale in great Numbers, never ceaſe till they kill him, and then leave him an eaſy Prey to the Whale-Fiſhers.

10. The Hays, or Sharks of ſeveral ſorts, which have been ſo often deſcribed that we paſs them over. They are from one to three Fathom long, and bite ſuch great Pieces out of the Whales, that the Fiſhers many times find them half devour'd. The Liver of the Shark yields Oil, and the Seamen cut the Fleſh of their Backs, hang it ſome Days in the Air, and think it good Food boiled or roaſted, when other Proviſions are ſcarce.

There are many other ſorts of Fiſh, as fine Mackarel, Crane-Fiſh, alias the Sea-Spider, ſhap'd like Lobſters, without Tails, and are eatable. Here are alſo Garnels or Prawns, with abundance of Slime-Fiſhes of ſeveral ſorts, which are Food for the Birds and Whales. There's one call'd a Whale-Louſe, which has a Head like that Vermin, annoys the Whales mightily in warm Weather, and bites pieces out of 'em. It has Scales harder than a Prawn, ſix Plates on its Back, and ſharp crooked Feet, by which it faſtens to the Whale.

The SEA and ICE.

THE Stream among the Ice was obſerv'd to run South, but at Muſcle-Haven to the North, as it does with a rapid Motion betwixt Schetland and this Country. If the Air be clear, the Water is as blew as a Sapphire; if cloudy, as green as an Emerald. During a Fog and Sun-ſhine it is yellow, and in a Storm it looks like Black-Lead. When Whales and other great Fiſhes appear in Numbers, and leap or play about Ships, it preſages a Tempeſt; and when the Stars appear larger or more numerous than ordinary, 'tis the like. There ſeems to be no continual Ebbing and Flowing here, only after ſtormy Weather the Water is obſerv'd to be higher near the Land than otherwiſe.

The Ice here is not ſo ſmooth, clear and cutting as with us, but much harder, and looks like Loaf-Sugar. In ſome Parts at a great diſtance from the Coaſt it is fix'd and cover'd with Snow, which reflects ſuch a Brightneſs on the Sky, that Sailors know at a diſtance where the Ice is fix'd, and they frequently perceive the Tracks of Bears, Foxes, &c. upon thoſe Ice-Fields, as they are call'd. The Sea by daſhing againſt them makes ſeveral fine Figures like Mountains, Tables, Chapels and all ſorts of Beaſts. They lie much deeper under Water than they riſe above it. The ſmaller Shoals or Fields of Ice float upon the Sea, are very dangerous for Ships, and frequently break them in pieces. The beſt Defence they have againſt them is, to faſten the dead Carcaſſes or the Fins and Tails of Whales to the Sides of the Ships; and ſometimes they bear them off with Ice-Hooks, and with the ſame Inſtruments faſten themſelves, as with an Anchor, to the large Ice-Fields, yet ſometimes they break, give way, and make a terrible Noiſe. Several of them appear ſixteen Fathoms high above Water, and freeze to the bottom where the Sea is ſhallow. And ſome of them have been found above thirty five Fathoms under Water. 'Tis obſerv'd, that the Ice which is below is more ſalt, and melts ſooner than that above, and the Sea has been found very calm among thoſe Ice-Fields, when it ſwell'd like Mountains elſewhere.

On the Eaſt ſide of Greenland there are ſeveral Iſlands: That called Wych's Iſland is the largeſt ſet down in the Maps, but we have no Deſcription of it. Hope-Iſland lies Eaſt from the South Part, call'd Point-Lookout, and Bear-Iſland lies South from it about Lat. 74.

Cherry-Iſland, ſo call'd from a Ship belonging to Sir Francis Cherry, that touch'd upon it in 1603, lies South from Greenland about Lat. 74. 'Tis about five Miles long, and abounds with Fowls and Morſes, from the latter of which our Fiſhers did formerly make conſiderable Profit, by bringing home their Oil and Teeth. In 1610 ſome Veſſels belonging to our Ruſſia Company took Poſſeſſion of it for their Maſters, and diſcovered three Lead-Mines and a Coal-Mine upon it.

Mayen's Iſland, ſo call'd from John Mayen a Dutchman, ſuppoſed to be the Diſcoverer. Some take it to be that which the Engliſh call Hope-Iſland, Iſland, but Captain Halley, in his Draught of the North Pole, places it a great deal further to the South-Weſt in Lat 72, and Long. Weſt from London 5. It was formerly much frequented for Whale-Fiſhing, and known to moſt of the Northern Adventurers, but the Whales are now ſaid to have left it. 'Tis not ſo much incloſed with Ice on the Weſt, as on the North ſide, therefore Mariners commonly ſteer their Courſe Weſt of it; but if by miſtake they come to the Eaſt ſide, they are forc'd to ſail North about the Iſland, which is very dangerous, becauſe the Ice continues there all the Year at ten Miles diſtance from the Shoar, and alſo becauſe of the floating Ice on that Quarter, and the Whirlwinds which come from Bears-Mountain at the North end, which abounds with Bears, and is ſo high as to be ſeen thirty Miles at Sea. There's one Bay here, call'd the Engliſh; and the Dutch have given Names to ſeveral others. The Sea is ſixty Fathom deep about a Musket-ſhot from the Shoar, but a little farther ſo deep that a Sounding-Line can't reach the Bottom.

GROENLAND.

GRONELAND, or ENGROENLAND; Part of it is commonly repreſented by the Maps in our Hemiſphere, and Part in the Weſtern; but we chuſe to deſcribe it here, becauſe the North-Eaſt part of it is in the ſame Latitude with Cherry-Iſland, from whence it lies about 300 Miles Weſt, and about 270 South-Weſt from Greenland. It is repreſented as a ſort of a Triangle, betwixt Lat. 64 and 80, which makes 960 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth in the North is about 600. The Acute Angle lies to the South, but its Breadth and Length towards the North are not yet fully diſcovered. It has Davis's Streights on the Weſt, and Sir Thomas Smith's Sound at the North-Weſt Corner. It has Iceland and Mayen's Iſland on the Eaſt, together with the Great Sea that lies betwixt itſelf and Norway. That call'd the Iſle of Deſolation, with ſome other ſmall Iſlands, lie on the South of it. The longeſt Day in the South Part is twenty one Hours and a half, and in the moſt Northerly Parts they have no Night for three Months and two Weeks.

The firſt Diſcoverer is ſaid to have been a Norwegian, who having committed a Murder in Iceland, fled from thence, and landing in this Country, which is about 240 Miles to the Weſt, call'd it Greenland, becauſe of its Verdure. He ſent his Son to Olaus Trugger the King of Norway, who upon this Diſcovery granted his Pardon; and ſeveral Norwegian Adventurers did afterwards ſettle and plant here, and built two Towns called Garde and Albe; the latter was made the Seat of the Vice-Roy and a Biſhop's See. Norwegian Authors ſay, that beſides the Cathedral dedicated to St. Anthony, they had a Monaſtery dedicated to St. Thomas, built of Pumice-Stone, with a Spring ſo hot as to boil their Meat, and the Water being convey'd into their Rooms by Pipes, warm'd them as well as Stoves. This Colony fail'd about 1349, being either cut off by a Plague, or the Natives. The King of Denmark ſent a Fleet in 1389 to recover it, but it was caſt away, and the Deſign ceaſed, till Chriſtian IV. renew'd it. The Norwegians ſay, there were ſeveral Nations here govern'd by different Kings, who all join'd in War againſt their Colony. This Account of its ancient State depends on the Credit of thoſe Writers, but the later Diſcoveries give us the following Account of the Country and its People. The firſt was by Sir Martin Frobiſher, who going in queſt of a North-Weſt Paſſage to China, in 1576, came to that Inlet betwixt this Country and the Iſle of Deſolation, about Lat. 63, which he call'd Frobiſher's Streights. He ſail'd into it about ſixty Leagues, and found Ore which he thought to be Gold, but it prov'd Black-Lead. He found likewiſe a Silver-Mine, but it lay ſo deep in the Rocks that they could not dig it. He melted ſome Gold from Ore he found in Smith's Iſland, but in very ſmall Quantities. He found a dead Fiſh twelve Foot long, reſembling a Porpoiſe, with a Horn in its Snout like that call'd the Unicorn's Horn, and brought it to Windſor, after having taken Poſſeſſion of this Couutry for Queen Elizabeth in 1578, and given it the Name of Meta Incognita.

Mr John Davis being employ'd on the like Deſign in 1585, 1586, and 1587, enter'd the Streights on the Weſt of this Country, which he call'd by his own Name.

In 1605 the King of Denmark ſent three Ships under John Cunningham a Scotſman, as Admiral. He went a great Way up Davis's Streights, and at a Place he nam'd Cunningham-Ford, he found Stones, from One Hundred Weight of which he extracted twenty ſix Ounces of fine Silver, and brought three of the Natives to Denmark.

In 1619, that King ſent John Munck hither with two Ships. He touch'd at Cape Farewel, South of Groneland in Lat. 60 ½, where the Weather was ſo cold, that he could not handle his Tackle for Icicles. He call'd that part of Hudſon's Bay towards Groneland, Mare Chriſtianum, and the South part of it Mare Novum. There are many ſmall Iſlands and Sounds on the Weſt ſide of this Country, but not deſcrib'd. Eight of the Natives were brought to Denmark at ſeveral times, where the King ordered them to be treated with all Humanity. They lov'd raw Fiſh and Fleſh better than any other Meat, would not touch Bread, Wine, or Brandy, but drank Train-Oil greedily. Moſt of them dy'd of Melancholly, for being brought from their Native Country. Two of them, who were good Seamen and Divers, endeavoured to make their Eſcape, and fancy'd that they could direct their Courſe home by the Stars, but being much employ'd by the covetous Governour of Koldingen to dive for Pearl-Muſcles, one of them was kill'd by the Cold, and the other died ſoon after of Grief.

Deſcription of the COUNTRY and NATIVES.

MOST of it is High-land cover'd with Snow. Here is no Wood but a few Shrubs, nor are Herbs of any ſort to be found in Plenty. 'Tis ſubject to Earthquakes, and yet healthful. The North Parts are not fully diſcovered becauſe of the Ice. The South conſiſts of many Iſlands, which occaſion variety of ſtrong Currents. The Soil ſeems to be fertile and pleaſant betwixt the Mountains, but the Natives neither plant nor ſow.

They live chiefly upon Fiſh, Fowl, and ſome ſmall Beaſts. They have vaſt Numbers of Fowl, and particularly of Solan-Geeſe, ſuch as are found in Scotland. The Natives uſe their Skins for Cloaths, with their Feathers next them in Winter, and outwards in Summer. Their Skins are thicker, and their Fleſh worſe taſted than thoſe elſewhere. They abound ſo much here, that two or three of our Men are ſaid to have kill'd 1500 of 'em with Guns in one Day.

Their Fiſh are chiefly Whales, Dog-Fiſh, and thoſe call'd Unicorns: The latter fight the Whales with their Horns, which the Natives ſharpen and uſe for pointing their Darts and Arrows.

Their Beaſts are Foxes, Bears, Black Cattle, Rane-Deer and Dogs: Thoſe of a large Size they uſe for drawing of Sleds, and the leſſer they feed for Meat.

The Natives are generally of a low Stature, with black Hair, flat Noſes, broad Faces, and an Olive Complexion, with Lips turn'd up, and ſome of them quite black. The Women paint their Faces with blew and black Streaks, prick their Skin with a ſharp Bone, and let in the Colour ſo as it can never be taken out. The Men reſemble the Samoieds and Laplanders, are active, ſtrong, and couragious, and chuſe rather to throw themſelves headlong from Rocks, than to be taken. They ſeem to be very kind to one another, but thieviſh, revengeful and treacherous towards Strangers, and ſo far from being to be gain'd by Civilities, that they have frequently attempted to kill our Men after being kindly entertained by them. They delight exceedingly in Muſick, and keep Time to it in their Way with their Hands, Voices and Feet.

In Summer, when they go a fiſhing, they carry their Tents about in their Boats. They conſiſt of four Poles, which they cover with Seal-Skins, &c. when they land. In Winter they retire to the Valleys, dig round Caves at the Foot of the Mountains, and have Paſſages within to one another. The Entrance is always to the South; and they form Porches with Ribs of Whales cover'd with Seal-Skins, raiſe the Places where they lie higher than the reſt, and cover them with Moſs.

Their Cloaths are either the Skins of Birds, as mentioned before, or thoſe of Seals or Dog-Fiſh with the Fur outward, the better to deceive the Seals when they fiſh for them. They ſew their Cloaths with Needles made of Fiſh-Bone, and uſe the Sinews of Beaſts inſtead of Thread.

Their Way of Trading is to make two Heaps, one of ſuch things as they would purchaſe, and the other of ſuch as they would ſell, and they ballance the Account by adding to or taking away from the reſpective Heaps. They readily barter any thing for Knives, Needles, Looking-Glaſſes, and ſuch like Trifles.

Their Boats are made of Whale-Bone, cover'd with Seal-Skins and ſtitch'd with Sinews of Beaſts. They are ſhap'd like a Weaver's Shuttle, and row either Way. They cover them above with Seal-Skin, and make a Hole big enough for a Man's Waſte. He goes into it, ſtretches his Feet forward into the Boat, and ſtops it ſo cloſe with his Seal-Skin Frock, that no Water can enter it. His Frock is tied ſtrait to his Wriſt and Neck, and his Hood over his Head is ſo cloſely ſew'd to it, that if his Boat be overturned, he riſes again without being much wet. He has but one Oar, of about ſix Foot long, with a Paddle ſix Inches broad at each end; with this he ballances his Boat, and rows faſter than one of ours with ten Oars. Their Fiſhing Inſtrument is a long barb'd Dart, with Bladders tied to it to prevent its ſinking, or being drawn under Water by the Fiſh they ſtrike, which they ſuffer to ſtruggle till they are ſpent, and then they are eaſily taken. They have ſome Boats from ten to twenty Foot long, and others from thirty to forty, with Seats for ten or more Rowers.

The Inhabitants are groſs Idolaters, and ſeem principally to worſhip the Sun; for when our Men deſire to ſpeak with them, they hold up their Hands to it, cry Totan, and will not come near a Stranger till he does the like. They have alſo Images of the Devil, with Altars, and the Bones of Beaſts in Heaps by them. They are given to Inchantment and Sorcery, and when they practiſe them, lie flat on their Bellies, and mutter ſomething to the Ground, under which they conceive the Devil to have his Abode. In ſome Diſeaſes they tie a great Stone to a Stick, pray to it, and if they can lift it up eaſily, think their Prayers are heard.

About the time of the New Moon, there appears in the North here a Pillar of Fire call'd the North Light; it darts out Streams on all ſides, moves from place to place, enlightens this Country, Iceland, Norway and other Parts, continues till obſcured by the Sun-beams, and leaves a Miſt or Cloud behind it.

NOVA ZEMBLA,

WHICH in the Ruſſian ſignifies New Land, is Eaſt from Greenland about 270 Miles; it reaches from Lat. 70 to 77, and betwixt Lon. 58, Eaſt from London to 80. It lies from South-Weſt to North-Eaſt. Authors are not yet agreed whether it be an Iſland, or join'd to the Continent.

There was a Letter ſent to the Secretary of the Royal Society at London from a Correſpondent at Amſterdam, and inſerted in Tranſact. N°. CI. with a new Map of Nova Zembla and Weygats, as diſcover'd and drawn by Order of the Czar, and ſent to the Author of the Letter from Moſcow; by which it appears, that the Eaſt part of Nova Zembla is join'd to the Continent of Tartary, a good way beyond the River Kitaie in Aſia, whoſe Fountains lie towards China. That what's call'd The Icy, is a freſh Water Bay; the Tartars and Samoeids, who fiſh in it, aſſert it to be ſo, and that by paſſing on the Back of Nova Zembla at a conſiderable diſtance from the Shoar, one may ſail as far as Japan; whereas the Engliſh and Dutch have always attempted to paſs by the South ſide, thro' the Streights of Weygats, where there is no Paſſage, and the Mouth of that Streight is very difficult to paſs, becauſe of the great Quantity of Ice that falls into it continually from the River Oby. But the Map ſent from Moſcow having neither Latitude nor Scale, ſeems not much to be depended upon; and ſo much the leſs, that in the Voyage made to thoſe Parts in 1676, by Captain Wood and Captain Flawes, who were ſent on Diſcoveries by our King Charles II. they could find no Certainty about it, and charge the Relations both of the Dutch and our own Countrymen with Falſhood. The Journal kept on board Captain Flawes, ſays, they could not get beyond Lat. 76, where they found the Sea frozen without Intermiſſion; and the Author is of Opinion, that Nova Zembla and Greenland are Part of the ſame Continent, and he ſuppoſes that Nova Zembla may join to Great Tartary.

That Part of the Country which they ſaw, is almoſt continually covered with Snow. They were here in July, and by digging found an entire firm Body of Ice, two Foot under the Surface of the Ground; ſo that 'tis not poſſible for Men to ſhelter themſelves there in the Winter by digging of Caves. They add, that ſome Part of the Ground was boggy, with a kind of a Moſs on its Surface, which bore a ſmall blew Flower. At ſome Diſtance from the Sea, they ſaw the Tops of Mountains without Snow, and found the Tracks of Bears, large Deer, and Foxes. They have a little Creature like a Rabbet, but no larger than a Rat, and ſome ſmall Birds like Larks. They found nothing upon the Hills but Slate-Stones. Many ſmall Rivulets run from the Hills into the Sea, near which there's abundance of black Marble with white Veins. They obſerv'd, that in other Climates the Snow melts ſooneſt near the Sea, but here the Snowy Cliffs continue near the Shoar in ſome Places as high as the Forelands in Kent. The Tide riſes eight Foot, and ſets directly upon the Shoar, which they take as a certain Sign that there's no Paſſage to the North. The Sea-Water near the Ice and Shoar was much ſalter and heavier than any they ever ſaw, but ſo clear and tranſparent, that they could plainly ſee Shells at the bottom eighty Fathom deep. Captain Wood loſt his Ship here by ſtriking againſt a Rock, which he call'd Point Speed-ill, and places it in North Lat. 74½, and Long. Eaſt from London 63. He obſerved the Variation of the Compaſs to be thirteen Degrees Weſt, and that it was full Sea at a South-Weſt Moon. He gave Names to ſeveral Places of the Country; the high Hills he call'd King Charles's Snow Hills, the Weſt Point James's Foreland, and the North Point York Point.

Gerat de Veer, who was here in 1596 with Barentz the Dutch Pilot, and wrote the Voyage, gives a very diſmal Account of the Country. Their Ship being broke by the Ice, they ſtay'd here from the Cloſe of July to the fourteenth of May next Year, in a Houſe which they built of the Materials of their Ship, and ſome Drift-Timber they found in a River about Lat. 76, and at laſt with much Danger got to Cola in Lapland, after ſailing 318 Dutch Miles, in two Boats which they built of the Wreck of their Ship. They were ſcarce able with all their Induſtry, tho' they had Fire both of Wood and Sea-Coal, to keep themſelves from being ſtarv'd to Death with exceſſive Cold; for moſt part of the time they had Tempeſtuous Snowy Weather, and were frequently in danger of large fierce Bears that attack'd them when they went out, and kill'd two of their Men at one time. Theſe Beaſts had ſuch hard Heads and thick Skins, that they could ſcarcely be kill'd either by Shot or Launces, and ſo ravenous, that they would ſometimes carry off and eat their Fellow-Bears when kill'd. They dug deep Dens in the Ice, from whence they frequently came out to ſurprize the Men, as they were at work about their Ship, Boats, Houſe, &c.

The Author of the Journal obſerves, that the greateſt Hindrance of their Diſcoveries was the Ice about Nova Zembla, from Lat. 73 to 76, being more than they met with at Sea when more Northerly; which ſhew'd, that it was not the Nearneſs of the North Pole, but the Ice that came from the Tartarian Sea about Nova Zembla, that made them feel the greateſt Cold. They likewiſe obſerv'd, that in Greenland, under Lat. 80. there's Leaves and Graſs on which Deers, &c. feed; whereas in Nova Zembla there was neither, and no other Beaſts but thoſe of Prey, ſuch as Bears, Foxes, &c. tho' it lies from four to ſix Degrees more Southerly than Greenland.

Barents was informed by the Samoieds, whom he found about the Streights of Weygats in 1595, that after five Days Sail North-Eaſt he might come to a great Sea towards the South-Eaſt, and that the Sea Eaſt of Weygats was call'd the Calm Sea. The People of Wardhouſe in Norway told him the ſame, and that it was ſometimes ſo frozen over, that they paſs'd it with Sleds; and he had the like Information from ſome Ruſſes he met then at Sea: So that he died of Opinion, that the Diſcovery of a Paſſage this Way to Japan might have been accompliſh'd, had he held a North-Eaſt Courſe from the North Cape, which he could not hold from Nova Zembla becauſe of the Ice. But this being contrary to Captain Wood's Obſervation already mentioned, it ſeems not to be depended on.

In Barents's firſt Voyage, there's a Map of Nova Zembla from North Lat. 70 to 77, and of the ſeveral Places to which the Dutch gave Names on the Weſt ſide; but the Eaſt they did not diſcover, except a little of the Coaſt of Tartary within that call'd the Streights of Weygats. His Company made the following remarkable Obſervations here, viz. that on the firſt and ſecond of November 1596, the Sun was no higher above the Horizon than that they could juſt ſee it; that after the third they ſaw it no more till the twenty fourth of January following, when they juſt ſaw the Edge of it, and on the twenty ſecond, Day-light began to appear to them; but Barents an experienc'd Pilot being then ſick in the Houſe, would not believe them when they told it, ſaying, that it was fourteen Days too ſoon, but was convinced of the Truth, when on the twenty ſeventh, which was a fair Day, they ſaw it fully above the Horizon. This occaſioned great Diſputes among them, becauſe 'twas alledged to be contrary to the Globular Form of the Earth, and to the Opinions of the Learned on that Subject. Therefore ſome objected, that being ſo long without Day-light, they might have over-ſlept themſelves and miſtaken their Reckoning. But beſides that they kept conſtant Watch, and made uſe of their Clock till it was frozen, and of an Hour-Glaſs of twelve Hours afterwards, they had with them, and conſulted Joſeph Scala's Ephemerides, printed at Venice, for the Years 1582, &c. till 1600, and thereby found, that upon the ſaid 24th of January, at One in the Morning, the Moon and Jupiter were to be in Conjunction at Venice, and they found that ſame Day at Six in the Morning, the Moon and Jupiter were in Conjunction over their Houſe, North and by Eaſt; upon which they concluded, that they were 75 Degrees of Longitude further Eaſt than Venice, reckoning 15 Degrees for each Hour's difference as uſual. We refer it to the Judgment of the Learned, whether this be not a Proof that the Globe is of a Spheroidical Form, and by Conſequence more flat towards the Poles than at the Equinoctial.

From the 30th of April to the 14th of May, when they left the Country, they had the Sun continually.

ICELAND, or ISELAND,

SO called from its being continually cover'd with Ice and Snow. It lies, according to our Map of Europe, betwixt Lat. 62½ and 67, and Weſt Long. 15 and 40. The greateſt Length from South-Eaſt to North-Weſt is 345 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth 180. Some ſay, that in Summer the Sun never goes entirely under their Horizon for two Months, and that half remains above it from Ten at Night till Two in the Morning, when it riſes quite above the Horizon. But according to the Tables of the Climates, the longeſt Day in the North Parts ſhould not be above One Month, and the longeſt in the South Parts about Nineteen Hours and a half; but the Difference ariſes from the different Computations of its Latitude, ſome extending it as far North as Lat. 69, by which they muſt there have two Months Day in Summer, and two Months Night in Winter.

'Twas firſt diſcovered by a Norway Privateer in 860, and planted by one of their Lords in 874. The Government was Ariſtocracy till 1262, that the King of Norway reduc'd them. Chriſtianity was brought hither about the Beginning of the Eleventh Century, and Luther's Reformation introduced by Chriſtian IV. of Denmark in 1550.

Grotius thinks Mexico was firſt peopled from hence; and others ſay, that Ericus Rufus peopled Groneland from it in 982.

'Tis divided into Four Quarters according to the Cardinal Points, and ſubdivided into Twelve Bailywicks and Three Hundred and Thirty Pariſhes, in ſeveral of which there are Latin Schools.

Angrim Jonas, Dr. Wormius, and others who have been here, ſay the Air is very cold, but healthful, yet ſoon ruſts Iron. The Weather is very uncertain, and does not always agree with the Seaſon; for ſometimes they have Hail, Snow, and furious Tempeſts of Wind in the middle of Summer, and the Froſt does not penetrate above four Foot into the Earth in Winter; ſo that Oil and Spirits of Wine don't freeze here. The common Meteors are the Draco Volans and the Mock-Suns, with Rainbows paſſing thro' them and the true Sun.

The Sea flows about the Riſing and Setting of the Moon, and ebbs when ſhe is North or South. In Autumn the Tides riſe twenty Foot, but but at other times not above ſixteen. The greateſt Depth about the Coaſt is eighty Fathom, and the Declination of the Compaſs here is to the North-Weſt. The Country is Mountainous for moſt part, and, according to the Philoſophical Tranſactions, N°. III. the greateſt part of their Soil is Clay, and in ſome Places Sandy. In the South Parts their Paſtures are ſaid to be ſo rich, that they ſtint their Cattle to prevent their Burſting. Their Black Cattle have no Horns, and in Winter both they and their Horſes feed on dry Fiſh, or on what Moſs and Graſs they can ſcrape from under the Snow.

The Wool of their Sheep is as coarſe as Hair. The Natives love the Fleſh of Bears, Wolves and Foxes, better than their Beef and Mutton, becauſe they are rank till dry'd in the Sun; yet their Graſs has ſuch an agreeable Smell, that they ſcent their Cloaths with it.

The Iſland was formerly ſaid to be fruitful in Wheat, but now there's none, and little, if any, Tillage. It is alſo ſaid, they had ſtore of Wood for building Ships, whereas now there's nothing but low Shrubs of Birch and Juniper. There are very large Roots dug up in the Places where thoſe Woods are ſaid to have been, and the Timber of them is as black as Ebony. Vaſt Trunks of Trees, with Stags, Foxes, Bears, Wolves, and what they call Unicorns, are brought hither on Shoals of Ice from the North at certain Seaſons, when the Inhabitants flock to the Shoars to watch for them: The Timber helps them for Building and Firing, and the Beaſts for Suſtenance.

Here are many clear and wholſome Springs, and the Water of ſome of them is reckoned as nouriſhing as Beer. Here are alſo Ponds, Lakes, many Brooks, and ſome Navigable Rivers, that abound with Fiſh of various ſorts.

Blefkenius ſays, there is a Lake in the Weſt Part of the Iſland which always ſmoaks, and yet is ſo cold that it petrifies every thing put into it. He ſaw the Experiment tried on a Piece of Wood, which being ſtuck into this Lake, that Part of it under Ground turned to Iron, ſo much of it as was cover'd with Water turned to Stone, and the Part above it continued Wood. He adds, that there's a Lake in the middle of the Iſland, the Exhalations of which kill ſuch Birds as fly over it; and that here are Springs ſo hot, as the Water burns one's Hand, and will boil Beef when ſet over them in Pots full of cold Water, and when ſet to cool, has a Sulphur on the Surface. Near ſome of thoſe hot Fountains there are cold Springs, whoſe Waters being conveyed by Pipes into one Baſon, make excellent Baths. He mentions another Spring which taſtes like Wheat, and is very good againſt Venereal Diſtempers.

Here are three Vulcano's, viz. Hecla, Helga, and La Croix. They are very high Mountains cover'd with Snow, and at times vomit Fire. The firſt is the moſt remarkable; ſometimes it iſſues Fire, ſometimes ſcalding Water, or Torrents of Sulphureous Liquor that burns like Spirit of Wine. Theſe Irruptions are commonly followed by vaſt Quantities of black Aſhes and large Pumice-Stones, which are thrown out with ſo much Violence and ſo far, that 'tis dangerous at ſuch Seaſons to come within ſix Miles of the Mountain. There are rich Mines of Sulphur at the Bottom of it, but it is dangerous to work them, becauſe the great Quantities of Brimſtone thrown out from the Mountain are many times cover'd with Aſhes, and the People ſwallow'd up in them before they are aware. The ignorant Natives call it the Mouth of Hell, and fancy that they ſee Troops of Infernal Spirits carry Damn'd Souls thither, eſpecially after a Battle any where; and they are ſo weak, as to take the Noiſe of the Shoals of Ice daſh'd againſt the Shoar, to be the Groans of Souls damn'd to exceſſive Cold, as they do thoſe carried to Mount Hecla to be damn'd to exceſſive Heat.

The Inhabitants are as great Pretenders to fabulous Antiquity as the other Northern People, and derive their Origin from Wodin or Odin, the Common Father of the Germans. They have Annals in Verſe, by Poets whom they reckon inſpired, and that they had a Faculty of mixing Sorcery in their Satyrs. Dr. Wormius tells an Inſtance of this, when he was Vice-Chancellor of the Univerſity of Copenhagen. An Iceland Student complain'd, that one of his Fellow-Students and Countrymen had writ a Satyr that would ruin him; upon which the Doctor examined the Satyriſt, who confeſs'd that there was Sorcery mixed with it; for which the Doctor threatning to have him puniſh'd, he tore it, and was reconciled to his Fellow-Student.

They have a Book call'd Edda Iſlandorum, which is a ſort of Mythology of their ancient Fables, and gives an account of the fooliſh Opinions of their Anceſtors about the Creation and ancient Hiſtory, &c. Some charge them with being ſtill addicted to Heatheniſh Superſtitions and Sorceries, and particularly to the ſelling of Wind: But Angrim Jonas ſays, that all their Skill this Way proceeds only from their Obſervations of the Diſpoſition of the Air, and when they find Strangers credulous, they pretend to ſell them Wind, by tying Knots in their Handkerchiefs, and muttering certain Words over them; and that their Conjectures this Way do more frequently fail than hit.

The People are generally poor, have low Huts built of Wood, and half under Ground, becauſe of their high Winds. They have no Windows, but a Hole at top, which lets the Smoak out and the Light in; and they are cover'd with Barks of Trees or Turf, which is alſo their general Firing. They dwell near the Shoars and Rivers, for Conveniency of Fiſhing and Paſturage, and remove their Huts accordingly, ſo that moſt of their Inland Country is deſolate. Many of them live in Caves during the Winter, and in Summer they have Tents made up of the Bones of Whales and other large Fiſh. Olaus Magnus ſays, that in his Time they had a ſort of Familiar Spirits that ſerv'd them in their ordinary Affairs.

Their chief Employment is Fiſhing and Hunting, and making a coarſe ſort of Cloth. Their Breeches, Boots and Stockings are made of Sheep-Skins, and their Shoes of Seal-Skins. They make their Bread of Cod-Fiſh, and ſometimes of the Bones ground to Powder. They have many ſorts of Birds in Summer, which retire elſewhere in Winter; but Ravens, Wild-Ducks and Swans ſtay all the Year. Here are alſo Faulcons, and fine little Shock-Dogs, which they eſteem much. Here is alſo a ſort of Eagles, which very much infeſt their Sheep, and ſometimes carry off their Children; to prevent which, they put Collars of Bells about their Necks, the Noiſe of which frightens the Eagles, or gives the People Notice to come to the Childrens Reſcue.

Theſe People were formerly reckon'd equal to any of the Northern Nations for Wit and Judgment, and had a pretty good Taſte of Latin and Greek. They are ſtrong, but of a low Stature, ſcarce any of them being above five Foot high. They are generally long liv'd, ſeveral of them having reach'd 150 Years. Their Women are fair, and ſcarce diſtinguiſhable from the Men by their Garb.

Their Trade is by Barter. Their chief Product is Dry'd Fiſh, Butter, Tallow, coarſe Wollen Cloth, Brimſtone, the Skins of Foxes, Bears, Stags, Wolves, Seals, &c. When the Germans or Danes arrive here, they ſet up Tents, wherein they exchange Flower, Cloaths, Iron, Beer, Wine and Strong Waters for their Commodities.

The King's Revenue is paid in Dried Fleſh, Fiſh, Oil, Coarſe Cloth, and Brimſtone. He ſends eight Ships every Year to bring home his Revenue, and to carry them other Goods in exchange for their Commodities, ſo that he engroſſes moſt of their Trade. The Dutch fiſh in their Harbours for Grampuſſes and Baſtard-Whales. The Chronical Diſtempers here are the Cholick and Leproſy; but they have none that practiſe Phyſick, except a few Surgeons.

The Northern Quarter is the largeſt and beſt Peopled. The chief Town of this Part is Holar, or Hola, on the Gulph of Staga, on the North ſide of the Iſland: 'Tis a Biſhop's See, has a Preſs, a Grammar-School, and a good Harbour pretty well frequented. In the South Quarter, about the middle of the Iſland, lies Skalholt, a Biſhop's See, and the Seat of the chief Court of Juſtice. At Coningsgard, or Beſted, in the Neighbourhood, there's a ſmall Fortreſs, where the Viceroy ſent hither from Denmark reſides. Hanar and Keplarwick in this Quarter are commodious Harbours, and pretty well frequented.

FREESLAND.

SOME deny the Being of it, others reckon it Part of Groenland, and place it betwixt Lat. 60 and 63½. 'Tis reckon'd the fartheſt Weſt of any Part of Europe, and ſaid to have been diſcover'd by two Venetian Gentlemen that were Shipwreck'd here. Some tell us the People are Chriſtians, very civil, and govern'd by a Great Lord: That they reſemble the Groenlanders in every thing, have a good Fiſhery on the Coaſt, with pale Coral, and little Stones as clear as Chryſtal, in a Place they call Weſt-England. The chief Town is ſaid to be of the ſame Name with the Iſland, and the Country is very dangerous to be approach'd, becauſe of the Shoals of Ice.

NORWAY

IS the firſt Part of the Continent of Europe to the North and North-Weſt. It derives its Name from its Northern Situation; is bounded on the North and Weſt by the North Ocean, on the Eaſt by a Ridge of Mountains called Doſrine, or Daarfiel, which ſeparate it from Sweden, and on the South, by the Entrance of the Baltick, call the Schagger-raak.

It lies in the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth North Climates, betwixt Lat. 58½ and 71½, and Long. Eaſt from London 9 and 11. The North Part of it, call'd Lapland or Finmark, is beyond the Artick Circle in the Frozen Zone. Their longeſt Day is two whole Months, and the ſhorteſt in the South Parts about ſix Hours and a Quarter.

The Length of this Country is about 840 Miles; the Breadth is very unequal, being much contracted towards the North; the broadeſt Part in the South is about 240.

'Tis divided into Iſlands and Continents. Some reckon among its Iſlands thoſe we have already deſcrib'd about the North Pole, but with how little Ground we have heard already, except as to Groenland and Iceland. The Iſlands of Fero are properly enough aſcrib'd to it, tho' ſome ſay they formerly belong'd to Scotland. The reſt of the Iſles ſcarce merit a Deſcription.

The Continent is divided into Five Governments, of which in their Place.

The AIR is generally very cold. The Mountains that divide it from Sweden are always cover'd with Snow. The cold Winds which blow from them makes the Valleys barren; but Southerly, and along the West Coast, the Air is more temperate, unless when corrupted by the Putrefaction of a sort of Rats called Lemmer, which occasion a sort of a Jaundice to the Inhabitants, and a Giddiness of Head that's dangerous to Strangers. Most of the Country is nothing but Rocks, Forests and Mountains. In the Valleys they have a good Breed of Black Cattle and little Horses, which are very swift and capable of Fatigue.

Their TRADE lies in Deals, Masts, Pitch, Tar, Iron, Copper, dry'd Fish, Train-Oil, Filberts, Butter, Tallow, Hides, Cheese and Furs. They have no Corn in the North Parts, and but little in the South; so that the Poor eat dry'd Fish instead of Bread, and the Rich get Corn in exchange for their Commodities. Their only Rivers that carry Vessels are Teno in the North, and Galiva in the South, but they have many Creeks and Harbours.

This COUNTRY was part of the ancient Scandinavia, and the old Inhabitants were call'd Sitones; the Moderns were formerly call'd Normans and Norwegians, from their Country. Jonas Ramus, their last Historian, says, their Ancestors were Savages and Giants, and civilized by one Norus, about A. M. 2910, but owns their History before A. C. 868, to be fabulous. It was sometimes divided betwixt two or more Kings, which occasioned Civil Wars: Several of them were dethroned for Tyranny, some of them fell in the Wars which they and the Danes made in England and Scotland, and others were Kings of Denmark and Sweden. But since 1387 they have been under Denmark, the Heir of their Crown having married Margaret the Heiress of Denmark, who having defeated Albert King of Sweden, succeeded him, and was call'd the Semiramis of the North. Since that time they have been governed by Viceroys, who are frequently the King's Natural Sons.

Christianity was first introduced here by King Haquin, call'd Athelstane, in 933, he being educated in England by King Athelstane; but it made little Progress till the Time of their King St. Olaus, who A. C. 1000, did propagate it farther. In 1486, Pope Innocent VIII. gave leave to the Priests of this Country, and others in the same Climate, to celebrate the Communion with other Liquor than Wine, because they could not well have it. The Reformation according to Luther was settled here in 1523, and has continued ever since; but many of the Laplanders in the North Parts are still Heathens.

The PEOPLE in general are reckon'd Clownish, but Industrious, Honest, Strong, Brave, and Civil to Strangers. They are able to endure more Hardships and Fatigue than the Danes, whom they despise, but are kept under by their Policy, the Danes having gradually remov'd their ancient Nobility, and keeping the People from improving themselves in the Art of War.

The LANGUAGE in most Places is the same with that of Iceland, but the better Sort speak Danish.

Of its Divisions into GOVERNMENTS.

NORWAY is divided into Five Governments, as follows:

I. AGGERHUYS. (We begin with this, because it is the Seat of the Government.) It has that of Bergen on the West, the vast Mountains of Dalecarlia that divide it from Sweden on the East, that Part of the Baltick nam'd the Categat on the South, and the Government of Drontheim on the North. 'Tis the South-East part of the Country, 360 Miles from South to North, and 80 where broadest from East to West. 'Tis Mountainous and Woody; but its Valleys being watered with Rivers and Lakes that fall into the Baltick, are reckon'd the most fruitful of Norway.

The chief Towns are, 1. Anslo, Obslo, Opslo, or Christiana, so called from Christian IV. King of Denmark, who rebuilt it in 1614. It lies in Lat. 60. 12. and Long. 9. on the Mouth of a River that falls into the Bay of Onslo, which comes up from the Baltick.

It is the Seat of the Supreme Court of Judicature for the Kingdom, and a Bishop's See. The Sword of Haquin, one of their Kings, educated in England, is kept in the Cathedral: 'Tis very large, has a Hilt of Chrystal finely polish'd, and is valued for its Antiquity. This Town is remarkable for the Nuptials of King James IV. of Scotland with Anne of Denmark in 1589. Here's a good Trade for Pitch, Fir, and other Commodities of the Country. 'Tis also remarkable for Mackarels and Pearl-Muscles, whose Shells are larger than ordinary, and the Fish like an Oyster: They produce a Cluster of Eggs like those of Crane-Fish, which when ripe issue out and become Muscles; but sometimes one or two of the Eggs stick fast, and, not being voided with the rest, grow into Pearls of different Sizes. Philos. Transact. N°. CI. p. 11. It was possessed by the Swedes in 1716, but they were afterwards forc'd to quit it, and received two considerable Defeats at the Passes of Mos and Besmo, at the last of which the King of Sweden and the Prince of Hesse-Cassel were both wounded.

2. Aggerhuys, which gives Name to the Province, lies on the other side of the Bay, West from Christiana, has a strong Castle, and is remarkable for the Defeat of the Swedes before it in 1567, after a Siege of eighteen Months. They were also repuls'd before it in 1716.

3. Torsberg, or Tonsberg, a small Town with a large Harbour, 30 Miles South-West from Christiana on the West side of the same Bay: It has a good Trade, because of its Situation, and the neighbouring Mines of Copper and Iron. A Silver Mine was discovered here in the Time of Christian IV. but turns to no great Account. Mr. Molesworth observes, that the Ports of this Country in general are so deep, that they have no good Anchorage for Shipping, the Shoar being all along high Rocks, at the Foot of which there is 200 Fathom Water, so that 'tis the most dangerous of any in Europe to fall in with either by Night or in a Storm.

4. Skeen on the Mouth of the Bay of Christiana, noted for Mines of Copper and Iron: It had also one of Silver in Christian the Fourth's Time, but now exhausted.

5. Frederickstad, 65 Miles South-East from Christiana, built by Frederick XI. in the last Century, at the Mouth of the River Glammer, where it falls into the Categat. It was attack'd in vain by the Swedes in 1716.

6. Frederickshall, or Hall, is a Town with a Bridge over a River in the same Province, about 39 Miles South-East from Frederickstad, and upon the same Coast. 'Twas storm'd and taken by the Swedes in 1716; but the Danes retiring to the Castle, set Fire to the Town with their Bombs, one of which falling into the Room where Charles XII. the King of Sweden was, a Splinter of it scratch'd his Cheek, and a Major General, with whom he was talking, was killed by a Cannon-Ball from the Citadel. He was forc'd to leave the Town with considerable Loss; but attacking the Citadel again on the 11th of December 1718, he was shot dead from the Citadel, as he went into the Trenches to give Orders, which will for ever make this Place memorable.

7. Saltzberg, on the River Drammen, 20 Miles South-West from Christiana, noted for Mines of Iron, Copper and Silver, from whence the neighbouring Mountains are called Silver-Hills.

8. Hammer, 90 Miles North from Frederickstad, on the River Drammen, formerly a Bishop's See, now united to Christiana. Olaus Magnus says, that a monstrous Serpent always appeared in a neighbouring Island, called Moos, before any great Revolution in Norway.

9. Holte, on the Lake call'd Nord-Sea, 72 Miles South-West from Tonsberg, remarkable for a Church cut out of a Rock, with a Burying-Place at the top of it, supposed by Wormius to have been a Heathen Temple.

II. THE Government of BERGHEN has the Ocean on the West, North and South, and the Government of Drontheim on the North and N. E. 'Tis 270 Miles from South to North, and about 80 where broadest. 'Tis divided into the two Districts of Bergen and Stavenger, and several Bailiwicks. The chief Town is Bergen or Baern, so ancient and famous a Harbour, that 'tis mention'd by Mela and Pliny. It lies in Lat. 61, and Long. 6, East from London on the West side of the Country near the Coast.

It is suppos'd to be the Bergos of Pliny, the Bergium of Jornandes, and has its Name from its Situation among Hills. It was built mostly of Timber, which made it very subject to Fire, so that it has been five times burnt down; but being much frequented because of its great Trade and commodious Harbour, which makes it the principal Mart of the Country, 'tis now well built, and has a stately Exchange. 'Tis defended by a strong Castle, which in our Charles the Second's Time protected the Dutch East-India Ships from our Fleet. It is also the See of a Bishop. The Inhabitants were at first so averse to the Settlement of Foreigners here, that they would allow none the Freedom of the Town, unless he consented either to be whipt, roll'd in Mud, or hung in a Basket over Smoak; but the Advantage of Trade soon oblig'd 'em to quit this barbarous Custom, so that they have now Factors of most Nations in Europe. The City is endowed with many Privileges, and is honoured with the Seat of the Viceroy. The Haven is safe in all Weathers, because of the Hills round it; is very capacious, and deep enough to receive large Ships. Their chief Trade of Export is Furs, Hides, Tallow, Masts, Deals, Stock-Fish, which are caught on the Coast in January, and dried in the Air. 'Twas one of the four ancient Mart-Towns of Europe.

2. Stavenger lies in a Peninsula on a great Bay full of small Islands, Lat. 60, Long. 5, 80 Miles South from Berghen. The Bay is guarded by the strong Castle of Doefwick, two Miles from the Town. 'Tis the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Drontheim, and the Seat of a Governour, subject to him of Bergen. It has a good Harbour, but its Trade is eclipsed by that of Bergen. This District is divided into several Bailiwicks, and Tyle-Marchia belongs to it, from whence Procopius conjectur'd, that this Country was the ancient Thule.

III. THE Third Government is that of DRONTHEIM, the largest in Norway, reaches beyond the Polar Circle, has Bergen on the South-West, that of Wardhuys on the North-East, Aggerhuys and Dalecarlia on the South, the Ocean on the West and North-West, and Muscovite-Lapland on the East. The Length, South and North is 365 Miles, and the greatest Breadth 160, but it grows narrow in the North Parts. It was given to the Swedes by a Treaty in 1638, but restored to the Danes in 1660; yet the Swedes still retain those Parts of it call'd Harndal and Jempterland, by a Treaty in 1645. The Country in general is mountainous, woody, barren, and ill inhabited, especially towards the North. Its chief Places are,

1. Drontheim, or Druntheim, in Lat. 65½, Long. 10, 8, 345 Miles North-East from Bergen. 'Twas called Nidrosia in Latin, because built on the River Nidir, where it falls into the Bay; was formerly the Seat of the Kings, and Capital of the Nation. 'Twas made an Archbishoprick by Pope Eugene III. and its Cathedral dedicated to St. Olaus, and the most stately and beautiful in the North, as appears still by its Ruins, which shew its admirable Architecture. The Town has never recover'd its Splendour since it was burnt, together with the Cathedral, in 1522. The Swedes advanced near this City in 1718, and being superiour in Number, defeated the Danes in two Engagements, which obliged them to retire to the Town: But the Castle being strong built upon a Rock, impregnable by Land, and easily relieved by Sea, the Swedes did not think fit to attack it. They have no Wood in the Neighbourhood, so that they build their Houses of the Bones of Whales and other Fish, which they likewise use for Fuel. There's a Lake in the Neighbourhood, which never freezes.

2. Romsdal is a large Town, 160 Miles South-West from Drontheim, on the Bottom of a Bay, and has a tolerable Trade.

Maelstrom is a noted Gulph or Whirlpool near this Coast, about Lat. 68. Mariners call it the Navel of the Sea. At the time of Flood it forms such a terrible Whirlpool for two Leagues round, as swallows up every thing that comes near it; and during the six Hours Ebb, throws out the Water with such Violence, that the heaviest Bodies won't then sink in it, but are cast back by the Force of the Stream. The Fishermen catch abundance of Fish about it during the Ebb, when being forc'd up to the Surface of the Water, they can't dive again.

Halgoland, North of the Polar Circle, is a District of this Government, and was the Country of Ogther, our King Alfred's Geographer, who fancied, that there was no inhabited Place farther North than this.

IV. THE Government of WARDHUYS, alias FINMARK, or NORWAY-LAPLAND, is the most Northerly Part of this Country; lies beyond the Northern Circle; has Muscovite-Lapland on the

the East, the Frozen Ocean on the West and North, and Swediſh-Lapland on the South. It lies betwixt Lat. 67, 72 ½. The Length is 425 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth 80. The Finni of Tacitus are ſuppoſed to have dwelt here. 'Tis but ill peopled, becauſe of the exceſſive Cold. They have no Trees but Pines and Firs. Rane-Deer, Bears, White Hares, Squirrels, Black Foxes, Beavers and Otters abound here; ſo that Furs is their greateſt Trade. They have Plenty of Fiſh in their Rivers and on their Coaſts. The Men are Savage, Revengeful, Jealous, much inclined to Cheat, and induſtrious in nothing but Fiſhing and Hunting. Their Women have the ſame bad Qualities, and are of a low Stature. Moſt of the People are Pagans, and given to Sorcery. They pretend to ſell favourable Winds to Sailors, and to raiſe Tempeſts if they be not brib'd. They have no diſtinct Poſſeſſions, but roam about, and ſettle where they think beſt.

The chief Place is Wardhuys, in Lat. 70, 12, Long. 29, which gives Name to the Country, and is the Seat of the Governour. It lies in an Iſland called Warda, about 8 Miles from the Continent, and 15 in Compaſs. There's a Caſtle with ſix Baſtions, where the Governour reſides, and has always a good Garriſon, to oblige the Ships bound for Muſcovy to pay their Toll. The Town conſiſts only of a few Cottages inhabited by Seamen. The People of this and the neighbouring Iſlands, which are not conſiderable enough to be deſcribed, live chiefly upon Stock-Fiſh, with which they feed their Black Cattle in Winter. They have no Bread nor Beer but what's brought from other Places. In two of the Iſlands they have Churches, and on the Continent their Villages don't exceed ten or twelve Huts apiece.

In the Iſland of Maggero, which is the moſt Northerly Part of this Country, lies the Weſt Cape, ſo well known to Sailors, who double it in their Voyage to Archangel, &c. and is generally mentioned as the moſt Northerly part of Europe.

V. The Fifth Government, BAHUS, being ſurrendered to the Swedes by the Treaty of Roſchild, is deſcribed in Sweden.

The Islands of Fero belonging to this Country:

THEY are Seventeen, and lie betwixt Lat. 60 and 61, and Long. Weſt 10 and 12. They ſtretch in Length about 65 Miles, in Breadth about 51; have Norway on the Eaſt, Schetland on the South-Eaſt, and Iceland on the North-Weſt. An Account of them by Mr. Jacobſon Debes, Provoſt of the Clergy there, was printed at London in 1676, from which we have the following Deſcription.

The largeſt of them is Stromo, 24 Miles long, and 8 where broadeſt. It has ſeveral Harbours and Creeks, but the beſt is Thor's-Haven, which is good tho' ſmall, and has one Entrance from the North and another from the South. This is the chief Place of Commerce. The Iſland abounds with high Hills; and the higheſt, named Skellingfel, is a good Direction for Sailors bound to the North Entrance of Thor's-Haven.

2. Oſteroe is 20 Miles long, and from 2 to 6 broad. It has many Inlets with good Harbours, one of them called the King's-Haven, becauſe his Ships uſe to lie there when they put in after cruiſing on Pirates. There are ſeveral others, remarkable for little but ſafe Harbours, ſo that we ſhan't inſiſt on them. There's one called Storediemen, of a round Figure, a large Mile in Diameter, encompaſſed with high Clifts and Rocks, and has but one Paſſage, by which it is difficult for a ſingle Man to enter; ſo that, were it worth while, it might be render'd impregnable at a ſmall Expence. It has a Farm-Houſe upon it, with Black Cattle, Sheep, and Fowl enough to ſubſiſt thirty People. It was held out a great while by a Farmer's Wife and her Servant, who had murder'd her Husband to cover their Lewdneſs; but growing ſecure at laſt, becauſe of the Strength of the Place, they were ſurpriz'd and brought to Juſtice.

The moſt Remarkable Things in and about theſe Iſlands, are, 1. A dangerous Whirlpool, call'd the Monk, from a high Rock of that Name on the South end of the Iſland of Sunderoe. In calm Weather it draws in and ſinks Ships which come near it; but ſometimes they eſcape by driving with the Stream. Debes ſays, there are two more of them, but this is the moſt dangerous, and deſcribes it thus. The Sea round it is eighty or ninety Fathom deep; a little farther in it is from twenty five to thirty five Fathom, where the Sea begins to riſe and turn round: Further in, the Ground is from eight to twelve Fathom deep, and lies Snailwiſe in four Rounds. This Ground has Cliffs on the top about eight Fathom deep, and ten or twelve from one another; ſo that when a Veſſel comes upon it, ſhe is turn'd round thoſe Cliffs with ſuch Swiftneſs, as the Men on board are forced to lie down to avoid being giddy. She is carry'd round all the four Circles, in which there are Channels from twenty five to thirty five Fathom deep. On the Eaſt ſide there's a Gulph, where the Stream runs in as thro' a Sluice. In the Middle of this Whirlpool the Water is ſixty one Fathom deep, and runs about ſlowly. On the South ſide of the Whirlpool, the Rock called Sumboe-Monk riſes ten Fathom above Water, and the Depth about it is fifteen. Our Author had this Account from the Fiſhermen, who in calm Weather, during an Ebb, ventur'd to fiſh upon it, and to climb the neighbouring Rock for Fowl. They obſerved, that on the top of this Rock the Compaſs runs round as the Whirlpool does, and is thereby ſpoiled. The Air is ſo very cold on this Rock in the Heat of Summer, that thoſe who climb it for Fowl are ſcarce able to bear it. By his Draught of this Whirlpool 'tis about a Mile in Diameter, and above half a Mile from Sumboe-Rock, where the Water begins to ſuck in the Veſſels. Our Author thinks that this, as well as the Coldneſs of the Air on the top of the Monk, proceeds from the Magnetick Force of the Rocks, becauſe the Winter in thoſe Iſlands is for moſt part temperate, which he aſcribes to the Saltneſs of the Sea. From hence he takes occaſion to combat the Opinion of thoſe, who fancy thoſe Whirlpools proceed from Abyſſes, or bottomleſs Pits in the Sea; and ſuppoſes, that they all proceed from ſuch a Situation of the Ground and Rocks at Bottom, as is here deſcribed: But it muſt be left to the Inquiries of the Curious, whether they mayn't ſometimes proceed from narrow Gulphs, that ſwallow the Water gradually, and iſſue it again in Places at a diſtance; as the famous Whirlpool of Norway is ſuppoſed to empty its Water by a Paſſage under Ground in the Bay of Bothnia, as Herbinius maintained in a publick Diſſertation at Copenhagen, and as Athanaſius Kircher ſuppoſes in his Tabula Geographica-Hydrographica. Debes ſeems however to be in the right, that this Whirlpool of Fero is not occaſion'd by any ſubterraneous Paſſage, becauſe it has thrown up Trees caſt into it, with the Roots, Branches and Bark tore off by the circular Rocks at bottom.

2. He ſays that there are Loadſtones in thoſe Iſlands, on which if a Compaſs be ſet, it will vary much, in ſome Places to the Eaſt, and in others to the Weſt: But the ordinary Declination of the Loadſtone here is 13 Deg. 19 Min.

When the Sun is in Cancer, they have no Night for a whole Month, and in the middle of Winter they have little Day. In their longeſt Day the Sun riſes at 2 a Clock 7 Minutes in the Morning, and ſets at 9 Hours 53 Minutes at Night, which makes the Day 19 Hours 46 Minutes. And from the Setting to the Riſing of the Sun, 'tis but 4 Hours 14 Minutes, during which the Night is ſcarce perceptible, the Sun being then but 4 Degrees and 29 Minutes under their Horizon; and there's little Difference to be perceived till the ſeventeenth of Auguſt, when he is 18 Degrees. In the middle of Winter the Sun riſes at 9 Hours 53 Minutes in the Morning, and ſets at 2 Hours 7 Minutes in the Afternoon; ſo that they have but 4 Hours 14 Minutes Day; but their Dawning begins about 8 in the Morning, and the Twilight laſts till about 4 at Night.

He obſerves, as to the Currents, that before one comes to the Iſlands the Stream is ſcarcely to be diſcerned, but it thruſts it ſelf betwixt the Iſlands, as a River thro' a Sluice. At New and Full Moon they run very ſtrong and ſwift, which proves many times fatal to their Fiſhermen, when ſurpriz'd by a Storm at Sea, for they can't put in till the Current runs towards the Land; and when it runs againſt the Wind, there's ſuch a dreadful turbulent Sea, as the Waves break over the tops of the Promontories. When the Streams run even betwixt the Iſlands, there's a principal Current, which the firſt two Hours runs pretty faſt, the ſecond two it is very rapid, and the third two it decreaſes by Degrees; and in Spring and Summer, when the Sun has moſt Force, it is ſtronger at every Change of the Moon than in Autumn and Winter. He cannot exactly deſcribe how high or low the Tides riſe or fall, becauſe there's a great deal of Inequality in it, occaſioned by the Changes of the Seaſons and Moon. They uſually riſe ſeven Fathoms at a Weſt Moon, and but three at an Eaſt. In particular Streams it is high Water at different Hours, there being ſometimes at one Inlet five different Currents that run againſt one another.

The Air in Summer is temperately warm, and tho' never very hot, yet ſometimes it rents their thin Mould to the Rock. Their Winter is not exceſſive cold; and tho' they be under North Lat. 62, it ſeldom freezes a Month together. There's no Ice in their Bays, and they have miſtling Rains in the Valleys when it ſnows on the Mountains. They have ſometimes ſuch Storms of Wind, as tear up Stones from the Ground, and roll up the Earth on the Rocks like Sheets of Lead. They have alſo dangerous Whirlwinds, which frequently ſink Ships, and bear down Men and Horſes in the Valleys; but they are generally forewarned by a terrible Noiſe betwixt the Rocks, and then ſuch as are on Horſeback alight, lie flat on the Ground, and catch hold of the Graſs or Stones, till the Blaſt be over. He aſcribes thoſe Whirlwinds to the ſtreight Paſſes betwixt the Mountains, where the Rocks jut out on both ſides, and occaſion the Winds to rebound, and ſometimes to blow contrary to one another. He gives a ſtrange Inſtance of this, which he aſſerts to be true, viz. That a Clergyman on Horſeback was blown over the Edge of a Promontory near Sumboe by ſuch a Whirlwind, but immediately blown up again by a contrary Wind, without receiving any Hurt. The ordinary Winds here are for moſt part Weſt and South-Weſt, eſpecially in Spring and Harveſt, and thoſe Winds being moiſt, it is uſually Rain and bad Weather on that ſide of the Land where the Wind blows, while it is fair and clear on the other. This he aſcribes to the Height of the Mountains and the Land. The Summer not being hot, they have no Thunder then, but in Winter, Autumn and Spring they have it with great Storms and Rain, which is the more terrible, becauſe all of them are then very turbulent.

The Air being thus purged at thoſe Seaſons by ſtrong Winds and Thunder, the Inhabitants have ſeldom any contagious Diſtempers, but what are brought in by Foreigners. This is particularly obſerved of the Small-Pox, which they dread ſo much, that every one avoids the infected Family as they would do the Plague; yet notwithſtanding all their Precautions, the Iſlands are ſometimes infected with it.

The Diſeaſes proper to the Country, are, 1. A ſtrong Rheum in Spring and Autumn, with a violent Cough and Spitting, Head-ach and Pain in the Limbs, of which ſometimes they die, and are frequently ill of it a long time. Their Medicine is ſowre Whey, as hot as they can drink it. They reckon this Diſtemper purges them of Phlegm, and other Impurities contracted or occaſioned by their cold and moiſt Air, &c.

2. A Diſtemper they call the Hot-Sickneſs, like that which affects Soldiers in cold and moiſt Camps during the Winter. The Patient is hot with accute Pains in the Head that frequently occaſion Diſtraction and a Flux in the Summer. It conſumes the Marrow of ſuch as die of it, but the greateſt part eſcape by Providence, for they know no Medicine againſt it, nor is it ſo frequent as the former. The third is the Scurvy, which is pretty general, and their Medicine againſt it is New Milk alone, or with Scurvy-Graſs boiled in it. They are alſo troubled with a Leproſie, which our Author thinks to be an Exceſs of the Scurvy.

The Product of the Country; with an Account of the People and Government.

MOST of theſe Iſlands being rocky Mountains, the Soil upon them is thin, but in the Valleys the Mould is thicker, and produces Plenty of Graſs and Corn. Several of the Iſlands are uſed only for Paſturage, and ſome of the moſt rocky ſerve only for Fowls to build Neſts in. Debes believes, that there are Mines of Copper and Iron here, becauſe the Rivulets which come from the Hills look green in dry Weather, like Verdigreaſe. Here are Salt-Petre Stones of two ſorts, but yield no great Store of that Commodity. In the Cliffs on the Shoar, there are tranſparent Stones that cut Glaſs, are of a whitiſh Colour mixed with Blew or Yellow, but loſe their Colour when tranſported, therefore not valued by Jewellers, and are ſuppos'd to be a ſort of of Jaſpers. Here is alſo ſome Chryſtal, but ſo brittle that it can't be poliſh'd. Here are alſo Pearl-Muſcles like thoſe of Norway and Denmark; and Molucca Beans are found on the Coaſt, ſuppoſed to be drove hither from the Weſt-Indies. The ignorant People took them to be Stones, and thought the Kernel to be another bred within.

Here are no Trees, but ſome Juniper-Shrubs and Willows. The People planted Fruit-Trees, but they did not thrive. No Corn, except Barley, comes to Maturity here, and that yields twenty or thirty-fold, which ſerves them for Bread, &c. Their beſt Paſtures lie North-Eaſt and North, and are ſo good, that one of their Cattle yields a Hundred Weight of Tallow. Our Author thinks, the Fruitfulneſs of the Valleys proceeds from Nitre, which the Winds bring with the Rain and Snow. He ſays, that during the two Months when they have little or no Night, the Corn and Graſs grow very little; but as the Nights begin to lengthen, they grow more in one Day than in fourteen before.

Here are the ſame Garden Herbs as with us, and four which grow wild in great Plenty, which they value much, becauſe good Antiſcorbuticks, viz. Scurvy-Graſs, Creſſes, Baccabunge and Sorrel. Here's alſo Store of Tormentil, which they uſe for Tanning of Hides; and Plenty of Angelica, the Stalks of which they pill and eat as we do Fruit, and in time of Dearth eat the Roots. They have another Root, ſuppoſed to be the Radix Rhodia, which they call Hielperod, from which they diſtil a Water in Smell and Taſte like that of Roſes, and ſerves to the ſame Purpoſes.

Their Beaſts are Black Cattle, Horſes and Sheep, which feed abroad all the Year, unleſs the Snow be very deep. They are of a ſmall Size, yet their Horſes are ſtrong, ſwift, and ſo ſure-footed, tho' not ſhod, that the Inhabitants think themſelves ſafer among the Hills and Rocks on Horſeback than on Foot. They breed them to hunt Wild Sheep, which they graſp with their fore Legs when they come up with them, and run over Rocks and Hills without Fear. The Tame Sheep they feed in Incloſures ſeparated by Ditches; and he is reckon'd a great Farmer who has twenty Horſes and Black Cattle, or five hundred Sheep. They loſe many in hard Winters, becauſe they have no other Shelter but earthen Dikes, and ſometimes they are cover'd quite over with Snow, ſo that they are loſt for a Month together, when they eat the Earth about them, and the Wool off of one anothers Backs. They are not to be diſcovered but by a Damp which riſes from the Snow above them, and then the Inhabitants dig them out. The Natives are ſuch ill Husbandmen, that they ſave nothing to relieve their Cattle in the Winter; and their Paſtures being over-ſtock'd, and not duly cultivated, many of their Cattle are ſtarv'd, or fall from the Rocks and Cliffs into the Sea as they are ſeeking their Food during the Snow. 'Tis obſerv'd, that moſt of their Sheep in the Weſt parts are white, and thoſe in the South black: Our Author aſcribes this to the Vapours from the Sea, to which the South Parts are moſt expos'd, or to the Nature of the Soil, which is much impregnated by Brimſtone or Salt-Petre. Here are Dogs like Greyhounds, which they breed to catch ſuch Sheep as are pointed out to them, which they do without biting them, but keep them down till their Maſters come. One of theſe Dogs well trained yields as good a Price as a Cow.

Here's great Numbers of Land and Sea-Fowl, which ſerve the Inhabitants for Food, and bring in Money by their Feathers. Some ſtay all the Year, and others go off in Winter. Their Birds of Prey are Owls, Sparrow Hawks, Crows and Ravens. The latter are of ſeveral Sorts; ſome of them all Black, others Black and White, and ſome all White. They cut the Tongues of the Particolour'd ones, and teach them to ſpeak as we do Parrots. The Wild ones are ſo deſtructive to the Sheep, that there's a Law obliging the People to deſtroy them; and every Man who does not bring one of their Beaks to the Seſſion-Houſe at a certain Seaſon of the Year, is fin'd. Here's a Bird which they call a Teal, that lives both by Land and Water, and is much cheriſh'd by the Natives, becauſe it deſtroys the Ravens. Their Water and Sea-Fowl are much the ſame with ours, but they have ſeveral unknown to us, that are ſomething extraordinary in their Form and Way of Breeding. Some of them are very good Food, frequent the freſh Water Lakes, where the Inhabitants hunt them with Boats, and catch great Numbers. Abundance of Swans come hither in the Spring, but make no great Stay. Here's a Bird called the Sea-Daw, which comes and goes at certain Seaſons: The Inhabitants hunt them more than any others, and tho' they breed but one at a Seaſon, they are ſo numerous that they darken the Sun like a Cloud, and make a Noiſe with their Wings which reſembles Thunder. The People take 100000 ſome Years. There's another call'd a Skrabe, which digs its Neſt in the Ground with its Beak and Claws. They have ſeveral Turnings like the Holes of Foxes, go out to Sea in the Morning, and return with Food to their Young in the Evening. The Inhabitants pull out the Young ones with Hooks, ſalt them up for Winter Proviſion, and uſe their Fat for Lamps. They avoid killing the Dam, except ſhe be in the Neſt unknown to them, becauſe ſhe always returns to it in the Seaſon, unleſs it be ſpoil'd by the Hooks while the People ſearch for the Young ones, and this they endeavour to ſhun as much as they can. There are many others which we can't inſiſt upon. There are vaſt Multitudes of Fowls that build their Neſts in the Rocks, where the Inhabitants let one another down by Ropes to catch the Young ones, and frequently loſe their Lives in the Attempt, by the breaking of the Ropes, that are cut by the Rocks, or by the falling of Stones upon their Heads, tho' they have ſtrong Caps on purpoſe to prevent it. The Natives are very expert in climbing thoſe Rocks, and throw down the Fowl into Boats that wait on purpoſe. They eat part of them freſh, ſalt the reſt for Winter, and ſell their Feathers.

Their Fiſhery, ſays our Author, is much decay'd, by which the poorer ſort are frequently reduced to great Want; but he obſerves, that they have the greateſt Plenty of Fiſh when their Corn and Cattle fail. In Autumn their Creeks ſometimes abound with Pilchards, which they take only for preſent Uſe, becauſe they have not Salt enough to cure them. The other Fiſh are Cod, Whitings, large Flounders, Plaiſe and Trouts. Here are abundance of Seals, which they ſometimes ſhoot, or hunt by Dogs bred to it, which ſwim againſt the Wind, that the Seals mayn't ſmell them, catch them by the Throat, and hold 'em till their Maſters come up. At other times they run into the Caves, where the Seals breed, with Lights, and kill Hundreds of them by Night. They eat their Fleſh, melt their Fat into Train-Oil, and make Shoes, &c. of their Skins. Here are ſeveral ſorts of Whales, which come in great Numbers under the Land in foggy Weather, and then the Fiſhermen, upon Signals by Fire, come together in their Boats, and drive the Whales into Creeks, where the other Inhabitants wait and kill them with Whale-Spears; but frequently the Whales overturn the Boats and Fiſhermen. The Natives make Train-Oil of the Fat, and ſalt part of the Whales inſtead of Bacon with Aſhes of burnt Sea-Weeds, which preſerve it very well. Some part of the Fat they uſe like Butter, part of the Fleſh they dry in the Wind, and they pickle the Tails of the Young ones, which taſte like Neats-Feet. Here's a Creature they call a Sea-Dog, whoſe upper Parts are like thoſe of a large rough Spaniel. They purſue the Whales, and ſometimes drive them aſhoar, which makes them an eaſy Prey to the People. Here are large Whales which play about the Boats, and ſometimes riſe under and over-turn them. To prevent this the Natives have Caſtoreum either in a Place made on purpoſe at the Head of their Boats, or in Pieces of Wood, which they throw among the Whales with a Line, upon which they ſink immediately, they have ſuch an Averſion to the Smell of it.

Our Author ſays, that he has known Men who could ſwim very well, that have ſunk immediately when they had Caſtoreum about them. Bartolinus, in his Anatomical Hiſtory, confirms this. The Natives of Fero ſay, that Juniper-Wood does likewiſe drive away the Whales. Debes ſays, that Mermaids have been ſeen on theſe Coaſts, in ſuch Form as we uſually paint them. He gives us the following Account of the Peopling of thoſe Iſlands, of their Government, Manners, Cuſtoms and Religion.

He ſays from Sturleſon's Chronicle of Norway, that theſe Iſlands were firſt diſcovered by a Pirate from that Country, and peopled about A. C. 868, by thoſe that fled from Norway when Harold Pulchricomus reduced all the little Princes of Norway under his Subjection. He thinks the Iſlands were called Fero from a Word in their Language which ſignifies Ferries, becauſe of the many Streams betwixt the Iſlands, which they are obliged to ferry over. The Norwegian Gentry divided the Iſlands among themſelves, and govern'd them by a ſort of Ariſtocracy, but were afterwards reduced by the Kings of Norway; and now Denmark is Proprietor of moſt of them, and the Remains of the old Freeholders are much poorer than the King's Tenants.

The Kings of Norway formerly governed by Bailiffs, but now ſome Perſon of Honour from Denmark has uſually that Poſt, with a Deputy and inferiour Magiſtrates under him, to take care of Juſtice and Trade. The Iſlands are divided into Six Diſtricts, with a Magiſtrate in each, who determines ſmall Cauſes, but the great ones are referred to the Chief Court, which is held at Thor's-Haven in the Iſle of Stroma once a Year, where the Governour preſides. Here alſo they have a Yearly Synod of the Clergy, who with their Provoſt determine Church-Cauſes, but the Deputy preſides. They have alſo a Seſſions in each Diviſion once a Year, when the Deputy preſides, and determines Cauſes by the Aſſiſtance of the inferiour Magiſtrates, and Six Men choſen for every Diviſion. The Clergy are call'd in the firſt and laſt Day of the Seſſion, to give an Account of what Publick Matters they deſire to be conſider'd; and when the Court is done, the Deputy aſſures them of his Majeſty's Protection, if they continue to pay their Tribute, to which they give their Conſent by clapping their Hands. Then the Court and the Clergy make merry, by drinking the King's Health, &c. after which the Solemnity is concluded by a ſet Speech, and a ſhort Hymn in Latin ſung alternately. One of their chief Laws relates to the Management of their Sheep, and aſcertaining their Property in them, and the Places where they feed. 'Twas granted them by a King of Norway in 1040, renewed by Chriſtian IV. of Denmark, and is reckon'd very equitable. That ſame Prince built a Fort of Thor's Haven for Defence of the Country againſt Pirates, with which they were much infeſted.

Debes ſays, they were Pagans till A. C. 1000, and had Biſhops ſettled about 1200, who bought their Office of the King of Norway; but ſince the Reformation they have only had a Provoſt. They have thirty nine Pariſhes in all, but their Benefices being only from fifteen to thirty Guilders, (i. e. about 30*s.* and 3 l. per Annum) one Prieſt ſerves from four to ſeven Pariſhes, ſome of them at four Leagues Diſtance from one another; but they make a ſhift to live by the help of their Glebe and Cattle, and aſſiſting their Wives and Servants to knit Hoſe, which is their chief Manufacture, about 60000 Pair being exported annually. They have likewiſe a Proportion of Wool, Butter and Fiſh, with a free Houſe, and one allowed for their Widows. They have ſometimes Preſents from their Pariſhioners; but with all their Perquiſites the beſt Benefice is ſcarce 10 l. per Annum. The People in the ſmall and remote Iſlands are but indifferently ſerv'd, eſpecially in the Winter, when it is dangerous ferrying over the Streams; but one among them that can do it beſt, is appointed to read Homilies and ſing Pſalms on Sundays and Holidays, for which they have a ſmall Allowance. By this means, ſays Davis, with their Diligence in reading the Scriptures and good Practical Books, they underſtand Religion better in general than the Common People in Denmark, and have many of the Pſalms, with Luther's Catechiſm and a ſhort Explanation of it by Heart.

The Buſineſs of the Provoſt is to viſit their Churches, and preach in them by turns. They have but one School, which is at Thor's-Haven, where they learn to Write and Read; and thoſe deſigned for the Miniſtry are taught Latin by the Prieſt of the Place, who is allow'd 7 l. per Annum for it; and when his Students are ſent to the Univerſity at Copenhagen, they are allowed their Diet gratis. Their Churches are ſmall, built with Deals; their largeſt, which is at Thor's-Haven, is built with Beams, and has a Steeple.

Debes ſays, they were formerly much troubled with Spectres and Evil Spirits, which ſometimes deſtroy'd the Inhabitants, and at other times carry'd them to inacceſſible Rocks, and brought them back again without any Hurt. In thoſe Caſes their Relations have recourſe to Faſting and Prayer, by which the Perſons carry'd away are frequently recover'd. Debes gives a ſtrange Inſtance from his own Knowledge, of an Apparition to a Young Man of twenty four Years of Age, in 1667. Being ſick abed, there appeared one to him in ſhining Rayment, which fill'd the Room with Light. He ſaluted the Young Man, ſtroak'd him with his Hands, eaſed him of his Pains, taught him a Prayer to be ſaid three times a Day, order'd him to teach it to others, and to admoniſh them to forbear Curſing, Swearing, &c. After this the Apparition ſeem'd to vaniſh vaniſh through the Roof. He appeared thus ſeveral times, and pretended that he was the Apoſtle St. John; but at laſt the Devil put off his Diſguiſe, taught the Young Man ſeveral Popiſh and Heatheniſh Superſtitions, appeared to him as coming down from the Sky in the Habit of a Prieſt, with Red and White Garments, and a Red Croſs upon his Back, and in Concluſion tempted him to Fornication. Before this, the Young Man being of a good Converſation, had ſeduced many of the People, who pretended to the like Viſions, but grew diſobedient to their Miniſters, and looſe in their Converſation. Upon this Debes examined the Young Man, took his Confeſſion, ſent a Copy of it to be read in their Churches, with his Cenſure upon it, and an Exhortation to the People to adhere to the Word of God as the only Rule of Worſhip; and having ſent Notice of it to the King of Denmark, his Majeſty ordered the Young Man to be admoniſhed of his Errors from the Scriptures by the Biſhop of Zeeland, and to be abſolved from Cenſure, if penitent; which was accordingly done, and with the Provoſt's diligent Inſtruction of the People, put an end to thoſe Deluſions.

Our Author gives the following Account of the Manners, Cuſtoms, and Trade of theſe People. They are humble, civil, and courteous to Strangers, whom they entertain gratis, and allow them Carriages from Place to Place, but are troubled with few of them. They are temperate in their Diet, which is generally Milk, Fiſh and Gruel, and ſome Fleſh; this and their Fiſh they dry in Houſes made up of Half-Deals, at ſuch a diſtance as the Wind may go through them. They ſalt ſome of their Fleſh, which they dry in the ſame manner. 'Tis pretty ſavoury, but hard of Digeſtion. They boil it in Water with a little Barley-Meal, and ſome of the Fat that drops into Veſſels from it as it drys, which when cold makes it like Peaſe-Pottage, and then they daſh it with a little Vinegar; or, when they have not Fleſh enough, they boil a little preſerv'd Tallow in their Pottage.

They preſerve their Tallow thus: When freſh, they roll it in little Pieces, let it rot a while, cut it ſmall, and half melt it into great Pieces of thirty ſix Pound each; then put it into Holes, which they dig in the Ground, where it keeps moiſt, and when long kept it cuts and taſtes like old Cheeſe. This they uſe likewiſe inſtead of Butter, and call it their Hidden Treaſure, becauſe the Pirates don't know where to find it. The poorer ſort uſe the Fat of Whales in the ſame manner. They have Beer, but ſeldom uſe it, unleſs to treat their Miniſters and other Gueſts, only at Chriſtmas they are pretty jovial, and the poorer ſort are given to Exceſs of Brandy. The People in general eat their Meals without Bread, Beer, or Salt.

As they don't abound in Proviſions, they are frugal in Houſe-keeping, portion out Meat to their Servants, give the Men twice as much as the Maids, and expect Work in proportion. They weigh out two Pounds of Wool for them to ſpin and knit into a Pair of coarſe Stockings per Day. Their Cloaths are generally of a coarſe Flannel, and of one Faſhion; but they have a finer ſort for Church and Market. The Mens Coats are ſhort and wide, and they ſeldom wear Linnen. The Womens Cloaths are all of one Faſhion for rich and poor, being Boddice without Skirts ſew'd to their Petticoats, which are pleated. They chiefly affect a dark Blew or a Red Colour. The richer ſort wear Velvet ſew'd on Red Cloth for Trimming, and large Stomachers adorn'd with Silk-Fringes, Ribbons or Lace on the upper Part. On the Stomacher they have a little Piece of Silver gilt, of an oblong Square, with Buckles and thin gingling Plates hanging at it. The poorer ſort have them of Copper with Pewter Rings. The Maids go bare-headed, with their Hair pleated, and the Marry'd Women wear red knit round Caps. The Womens Shoes are of Sheep-Skins, and the Mens of Neats-Leather tanned. They have but one Sole, are ſewed together a little about the Toes and Heels, and tied with Strings above their Ankles.

Their Bedding is Hay, with a little Flannel ſpread over it. Every one makes their own Cloaths. The Women weave fine Bed-Cloaths of ſeveral Colours, with fine Stockings and Woollen Waſtecoats, and dye all themſelves. They have a ſort of a Red Colour, which they call Cork, that none elſe can imitate. They have few Paſtimes but at Weddings and at Chriſtnings, when they uſe plain Dances, hold one another by the Hand, and ſing Ballads in Praiſe of their Champions, of whom they give Romantick Accounts. It is certain that one Magnus Heineſon, one of their Country-men, prov'd a great Sea-Captain, and did many brave Exploits under Frederick II. and Chriſtian IV. of Denmark, and was executed upon a falſe Accuſation by the latter; but his Innocence appearing afterwards, that Prince did Juſtice to his Memory, and in 1590 ordered his Corpſe to be taken up and buried in great State, and a pompous Epitaph to be put on his Tomb.

On Holidays they ſing Pſalms, and at vacant Hours play at Cheſs, wherein both Sexes are pretty expert. They are naturally inclined to obſerve the Stars, eſpecially that called Bootes, by which they know the Hours in Winter Mornings to direct them in their Work. They know the Courſe of the Moon by the Increaſe and Decreaſe of the Sea; and and this is the Rule by which they compute the Fix'd and Moveable Feſtivals.

Their Language is that of Norway mix'd with Daniſh; but the South and North Iſles differ in Dialect. They live to 80, 90, and ſome of them to above 100 Years.

They are Charitable to the Poor, though there's no great Inequality among them as to Riches, which conſiſt chiefly in Cattle. Theft is ſcarcely known here, except now and then that the poorer ſort ſteal ſome Food, or Pewter Spoons, which they melt down into little Rings for their Bodice; but they will not meddle with Silver or Gold, becauſe they can't alter their Form.

They formerly had Trading Veſſels of their own; but being very raw in Commerce, King Frederick II. appointed a Company to furniſh them Neceſſaries, and with theſe they were only to trade. Their Commerce is managed by Barter for their own Commodities, which are Skins, Feathers, Tallow, Train-Oil, Dry'd Fiſh and Stockings.

The King's Revenue is paid in Skins, Butter and Tallow. His Farmers are obliged to keep a certain Number of Sheep and Black Cattle for his Uſe, and to pay him a fix'd Rate for their own. Their Poor and their Lepers are maintained by a Fourth Part of the Tithes, and the Charity of the other Inhabitants. Their Lepers have a particular Place aſſigned them to live in, with ſeparate Ground for their Cattle. This Diſtemper is chiefly among the Poor, occaſioned by their moiſt Air and ill Diet, which is Fleſh or Fiſh half rotten in Winter, and Milk and freſh Fiſh without any Salt in Summer.

DENMARK.

IT was part of ancient Scandinavia, and Jutland being a Peninſula; was call'd Cherſoneſus Cimbrica, from the Cimbri its old Inhabitants. Some derive the preſent Name from one Dan, a Prince Cotemporary with David King of Iſrael; others from Dan a Gothick Prince; and ſome from the Sinus Codanus; ſo that there's no Certainty about it. The Swedes and Danes vie with one another for Antiquity; but the Accounts of both are reckoned Fabulous by the Learned.

This Country is ſurrounded on all ſides by the Sea, except on the South, where the River Eider ſeparates it from the Dutchy of Holſtein. On the Weſt and North-Weſt it has the German Ocean, on the North-Eaſt it has the Entrance into the Baltick, named Categat, and on the Eaſt the Baltick it ſelf. It lies betwixt the tenth and twelfth Climates, betwixt North Lat. 54½ to 57½, and betwixt Eaſt Long. 8½ and 12½. The Extent from South to North is 180 Miles, and from Eaſt to Weſt in the middle, including the Iſlands, about 150; but it is much contracted at both Ends. The longeſt Day in the South Parts is 17 Hours, and in the North 17½.

'Tis divided into the Peninſula of Jutland, and the Iſles. We begin with the latter, and particularly with Zeeland, becauſe it is the Seat of the Government.

ZEELAND.

CLUVERIUS ſays, it was anciently named Codonania, from the Sinus Codanus. It lies betwixt Lat. 55 and 56, and Eaſt Long. 11½, and 12½. Its Extent from South to North is 58 Miles, and from Eaſt to Weſt, where broadeſt, 52. It has part of the Baltick on the North, a narrow Streight betwixt it and ſome other Iſlands on the South, the Great Belt and the Iſle of Fubnen on the Weſt, the Sound and the Province of Schonen on the Eaſt.

The Air of this Iſland is groſs and foggy, eſpecially near Copenhagen; yet Colds in the Lungs are very rare here, which is aſcrib'd to the Pureneſs of their Firing, which is Beach-Wood. Here and thro' all Denmark they have only Two Seaſons, which are Summer and Winter, ſo that Extreams of Heat and Cold ſucceed one another. In June, July and Auguſt the Heat is greater than in England. The Nights then are very ſultry, and during the Summer they are plagued with Swarms of Flies, which they are obliged to kill with poiſon'd Water. This Iſland is tolerably fruitful in Corn, and abounds with Black Cattle. The Woods are full of Game. The Face of the Country is pleaſant, by the numbers of little Hills, Woods and Lakes. Mr. Moleſworth ſays, here are few Meadows, but Plenty of good Hay from the Graſs that grows by the ſides of the Corn-fields, and in their Marſhy Grounds. Here are no Rivers, and but a few Brooks that are capable to turn a Mill; but there are many fine Lakes well ſtor'd with Fiſh, beſides what they have from the Sea which ſurrounds it. This Iſland is ſo well peopled, that it has 340 Pariſhes.

Copenhagen, anciently call'd Segelburg, the Metropolis of the Kingdom, lies on a Point near the middle of the Eaſt ſide of the Iſland, Lat. 55, 32. Long. 12½. Saxo Grammaticus ſays, it had its Riſe from a Citadel built in the Twelfth Century to defend the Country from Pirates. This encouraged Traders and Fiſhermen to ſettle here, from whence it was called Kopenſhaven, i. e. Merchants Harbour, and now for Shortneſs Copenhagen. It was enlarged and beautified by Chriſtian IV. of Denmark, who join'd it to the neighbouring Iſland of Amack on the Eaſt ſide, by a Bridge. Here he built that call'd Chriſtian's Haven, a new Town of 4 or 500 Houſes and a large Exchange, with great Vaults below for Merchants Ware-Houſes. He built likewiſe an Arſenal, which is well provided with Artillery, particularly for Ships, many of which are 48 Pounders, and Braſs Guns here as plentiful as Iron Guns elſewhere. Each Ship of the Navy has a diſtinct Chamber with all manner of Rigging, and other Rooms for their Small Arms; and for the Conveniency of Loading and Unloading, the Arſenal is built upon the Brink of the Sea. Here are Plenty of Braſs Mortars, 100 and 200 Pounders, and a Braſs Culverin 21 Foot long. For Land-Artillery, here's thirty Battering-Pieces from 12 to 48 Pounders, twenty Mortars from 100 to 200 Pounders, and ſeventy Field-Pieces all of Braſs, with twenty thouſand Muskets and ſix hundred compleat Sets of Armour, beſides Swords, &c. The famous Globe of Tycho Brahe, ſix Foot Diameter, and the only Remains of the Inſtruments that belong'd to him, are kept here.

The City ſtands low, but there's a Riſing Ground within half a League, and two or three little Hills on the Weſt ſide, from whence it may be bombarded. Mr. Moleſworth ſuppoſes the Town to be near as large as Briſtol. There's a regular Citadel on the North and North-Weſt, built on the Shoar with fine Baſtions, with Ravelins of Earth paliſadoed and well ſtored with Cannon. Here are ſeveral Royal Baſtions with Ravelins before the Courtins, which reach from the Citadel to the South part, and continue beyond the Channel which ſeparates Zeeland from Amack. The other ſides of the Citadel are of difficult Acceſs, becauſe of Marſhes. A Circuit of Fortifications, conſiſting of eight Royal Baſtions and a Ravelin, incloſes the new City and Port with the Fleet, and faces the Cuſtomhouſe-Battery, which ſecures the Entry into the Haven. The Fortifications make the City of a round Form, but the Houſes don't take up half the inclos'd Ground.

The Harbour is excellent, but the Entrance ſo narrow that only one Ship can paſs at a time, and 'tis ſhut up at Night with a ſtrong Boom to ſecure the Navy. The Citadel on one ſide, and the Block-houſe on the other, well mounted with Cannon, command the Mouth of the Harbour, which is large enough to hold 500 Sail, and neither Wind nor Enemy can annoy them. The Road without is good and ſafe, being fenced from the Sea by a large Sand-Bank, on the Point of which there's a couple of Buoys to direct Ships. Here are no Tides, but always a ſufficient Depth of Water; ſo that it may be reckon'd in all reſpects one of the beſt Harbours in the World, and this would certainly be the Staple of the Baltick, were it a free Port.

This City has Ten Churches. That of St. Mary's is the Cathedral, where Coronations, &c. are celebrated: It has a fine Dome and magnificent Steeple. The Church of the Holy Ghoſt is a fair ancient Structure. That of St. Nicholas is inferiour to none of them, has a ſtately Steeple, and was built ſince the Reformation. St. Peter's was new built by Frederick II. in 1574, and the Worſhip here is perform'd in High Dutch according to his Order. Trinity-Church is alſo a fine Structure, was finiſh'd in 1656, and the Publick Library, moſt of which was given by Chriſtian IV. is kept in an Apartment over it. It joins to the round Tower built by the ſame King, and call'd Uraniberg, inſtead of that in the Iſle of Huen, which belonged to Tycho Brahe. The Stairs are fifteen Foot broad, and ſo eaſy that a Coach may go up them. It was deſigned for Aſtronomical Obſervations. 'Tis flat at top, and has a Balcony with Iron Baniſters round it. The Chamber of Curioſities here contains a great Number of Rarities of Nature and Art, of which there's a Catalogue publiſhed in Folio, but we can't inſiſt on them. The Univerſity was founded by Chriſtian I. about 1475, and enlarged and beautified by his Succeſſors. It has a Settlement for an Hundred poor Students, and Frederick II. augmented the Penſions of the Profeſſors. The Streets of this City are enlighten'd in the Night by Lanthorns, for they muſt uſe no Flambeaus, becauſe of the many Timber-Buildings, which makes the City liable to Fire; ſo that every Maſter of a Family is obliged to have a large Veſſel of Water at his Door, to be ready upon Occaſion. Coaches are much uſed here in Winter, becauſe the Streets are dirty.

The Iſland Amack, or Amagar, joined to the City by the Bridge, is called the Garden of Copenhagen, and was planted by Dutchmen ſent hither at the Deſire of Chriſtian the Second's Queen, who was Siſter to the Emperor Charles V. that they might make Gardens there to furniſh her with ſuch Herbs and Fruits as ſhe lik'd. The Iſland is almoſt oval, and about ſix Miles long. The Inhabitants ſtill retain the Dutch Faſhions, are very induſtrious, neat in their Houſes, and beſides Fruit and Herbs, they furniſh the City with Milk, Butter and Cheeſe to the Value of a Thouſand Crowns per Week. Here is likewiſe Plenty of Wheat, Barley, Oats and Hares. The Swedes landed on this Iſland in 1658, under their King Charles-Guſtavus, but were defeated, and the King narrowly eſcap'd. Next Year they laid Siege to Copenhagen, which they continued for a Twelvemonth, but were at laſt obliged to raiſe it with Loſs. Amalienburg, one of the fineſt Caſtles or Houſes of Pleaſure here, belonging to the Crown, was burnt in 1689 on the King's Birth-day, during an Opera; and it was obſerv'd, that juſt as Mercury appeared over the Theatre repeating a Verſe with theſe Words, Thunder, Thunderbolts, Fire, Hail, Lightning and Tempeſt, a Candle ſet the Scenes on fire, which ſpread with ſuch Violence and Swiftneſs, that the Houſe with 300 People, and many of them of Quality, was conſumed. A Plague ſwept away ſome Thouſands of the Inhabitants in 1712, ſo that the Bill of Mortality amounted that Year to near 23000.

2. The ſecond Town of Note is Roſchild, at the bottom of the Bay of Iſone, 17 Miles Weſt from Copenhagen, 'Twas formerly the Reſidence of the Kings of Denmark, and ſtill their Place of Sepulture. Here are ſeveral ancient Tombs of the Royal Family. It had once twenty ſeven Churches, and in the old Cathedral there's a fair Marble Pillar erected by Queen Margaret to hang the Whetſtone upon, which Albert King of Sweden ſent her in Deriſion to ſharpen her Needles. The Jeſt coſt him dear; for ſhe took him in Battle, kept him Priſoner ſeven Years, and forced him to renounce his Crown. Here's a Convent of the Lutheran Nuns of Quality, but under no Reſtriction as to Habit or Vows, ſo that they may leave it and marry when they pleaſe. The Situation of this Town brings the Inhabitants ſome Trade, and 'tis noted for a Treaty with Sweden in 1658.

3. Elſineur, or Helſingore, lies on the North-Eaſt Corner of the Iſland over-againſt Helſingburg in Schonen, 17 Miles North from Copenhagen. 'Tis chiefly remarkable for the ſtrong Caſtle of Cronenburg on the Shoar, about half a Mile diſtant. 'Twas formerly the Reſidence of the Kings, well adorned and ſumptuouſly furniſhed, but now in decay. Its Fortifications are mounted with good Cannon; and the Danes have ſuch an Opinion of its being able to command the Sound, that no longer ago than 1691, their King ſtruck a Medal, on one ſide of which there was a Key with a double Handle, and this Motto, Claudit & Recludit; ſignifying, that 'twas in his Power to open or ſhut the Sound. Charles XII. King of Sweden, landed near this Place in 1700, which ſo allarmed Copenhagen, that the Clergy, the principal Burghers, and Univerſity came to requeſt him that he would ſpare the Town, the Churches and Schools, which together with the Sollicitations of the Engliſh and Dutch, who took part with the King of Sweden, ſav'd that City, and brought on the Treaty of Travendahl.

4. Fredericksburg, a Caſtle, or rather a Palace, belonging to the King, and reckoned the Glory of Denmark, 11 Miles South-Weſt from Elſineur, and 17 North-Weſt from Copenhagen. 'Twas very richly furniſh'd, till plunder'd by the Swedes, and has ſtill noble Apartments, Pictures and Hangings, with a Terraſſe built at great Charge upon Piles in the Lake, a fine Flower-Garden, and a Park 19 Miles long and proportionably broad, in which there's abundance of Pools, Fiſh-Ponds, Green-Plats, ſmall Valleys and little Hills: 'Tis ſtock'd with Fallow-Deer.

5. Sora, upon a Lake 31 Miles South-Weſt from Copenhagen, formerly a conſiderable Town, noted for its Univerſity founded by Frederick II. for educating Youth of Quality, and therefore called Academia Equeſtris. It had very Learned Profeſſors, and gave Education to Charles-Guſtavus, King of Sweden, who therefore would not ſuffer it to be ſpoil'd when he invaded Denmark. It had alſo a famous Monaſtery, where Saxo Grammaticus was bred; but the Revenues both of the Univerſity and Monaſtery being annexed to the Crown, the Town is grown inconſiderable. There's a large pleaſant Foreſt in the Neighbourhood, reſerved for the King's Diverſion and Game.

6. Kingſtede, 22 Miles South-Weſt from Copenhagen. Several Daniſh Kings are buried here in St. Canute's Church; but the Town is decay'd for want of Trade.

7. Korſor, formerly a conſiderable Town of a great Trade, with a good Harbour, defended by a ſtrong Fort and Caſtle, on the Weſt ſide of the Iſland, 48 Miles South-Weſt from Copenhagen, but is now ruinous. Charles-Guſtavus of Sweden landed here with his Army in 1658.

8. Holbeck, a conſiderable Town at the Bottom of a Bay, 30 Miles almoſt Weſt from Copenhagen.

9. Kallundburg, or Kalunden, 44 Miles Weſt from Copenhagen. It has a good Trade, a ſafe and convenient Harbour, a Caſtle, Church and other Publick Buildings.

10. Koge, or Kioge, a little but populous Town, with a good Trade in Corn and Fiſh, upon a Bay, 15 Miles South-Weſt from Copenhagen. The Bay is a ſafe Retreat for Ships, and noted for ſeveral Actions with the Swedes.

There are other Towns in this Iſland with ſome ſmall Trade, but we can't inſiſt on them.

The ISLE of FUHNEN.

'TIS divided from Zeeland by the Great Belt on the Eaſt, and from Jutland by the Little Belt on the Weſt; it has ſeveral ſmall Iſlands on the South and North, is about 45 Miles long and 34 broad. This is reckon'd more populous in proportion than Zeeland, and the moſt fruitful place in Denmark. The Soil is good and well manur'd. Here are many ſmall but fruitful Hills, and ſome of them covered with Woods. The Inhabitants have Store of Corn, great Herds of Black Cattle, a good Breed of Horſes, and Plenty of Hogs. This Iſland has 4 Garriſon-Towns, 348 Pariſhes, 88 Fiſh-Ponds, 39 Rivulets, and is the Appennage of the King's Eldeſt Son. 'Twas reduced by the Swedes in 1658, but quitted that Year by the Treaty of Roſchild.

The Remarkable Places here are, 1. Odenſee, Lat. 55. 4½, Long. 10. 55. much about the middle of the Iſland, 78 Miles Weſt South-Weſt from Copenhagen. Before the Crown was made Hereditary in 1660, the States of the Kingdom uſed to meet here; and the Kings made it ſometimes the Place of their Reſidence, and ſeveral of them are entomb'd here; particularly St. Canute, who lies in the Church dedicated to him in a Coffin of Copper gilt and adorned with Precious Stones. They have another Church dedicated to St. Francis, and a ſtately Town-Houſe. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, noted for excellent Beer, and Linnen as good as any in Holland.

2. Nyborg, on the Eaſt ſide of the Iſland, upon the narroweſt Place of the Great Belt. 'Twas ſtrong, and ſometimes the Reſidence of the Kings, but the Caſtle and other Fortifications are decay'd. 'Tis an excellent Port. The neighbouring Country is pleaſant and fruitful, and it is noted for a Victory over the Swedes in 1659. There are ſeveral other Towns of ſome Trade; and it is obſervable, that the Froſt here is ſo ſtrong in Winter, that the Swedes have ſeveral times march'd their Armies over the Ice into this Iſland.

The other ISLANDS of DENMARK, are,

1. ARROE, South from Fuhnen. It is 8 Miles long and 3 broad, abounds with Corn, Anniſeed, Black Cattle and Horſes. It has three Pariſhes and one Town, nam'd Koping, in the South part of the Iſland, that has a Harbour, and and is a Place of ſome Trade. Part of this Iſland is controverted betwixt the Danes and the Duke of Holſtein.

3. Laland, South-Eaſt from Langland and South from Zeeland. 'Tis 23 Miles long, and 10 broad. It produces abundance of Corn of all ſorts, and particularly Wheat, which the Dutch ſhip off in great Quantities. It has ſeveral other Iſlands under its Juriſdiction, and is divided into Four Lordſhips. The chief Places are, 1. Naſchow, on the Weſt ſide of the Iſland, a large well fortified Town; 2. Maribo, on a Lake in the middle of the Iſland, formerly remarkable for a great Nunnery, 3. Nyſted, in the South part of the Iſland, a large Town, which once had a famous Monaſtery.

4. Falſter, Eaſt from Laland and South from Zeeland, ſeparated from both by narrow Streights. 'Tis 17 Miles long, 12 broad, and produces abundance of Wheat and Barley. The chief Places are, 1. Nykoping, a pleaſant and uniform Town, with a ſtrong Caſtle and well-frequented Harbour; 2. Stolekoping, or Stubkoping, in the North End of the Iſle, a Place of Trade, being the Thoroughfare betwixt Zeeland and Germany.

5. Mona, North-Eaſt from Falſter and South-Eaſt from Zeeland, 14 Miles long and 4 broad, divided from both by ſmall Channels, is chiefly remarkable for good Paſture, lies high, and is a good Land-mark for Ships. It was formerly part of the Daniſh Admiral's Allowance, and thought moſt proper for him to reſide in. The only remarkable Place here is Steg, or Steka; 'tis well fortified, and noted for a noble Defence againſt the Lubekkers and Swedes.

6. Alſen in the Great Belt, South-Weſt from Fuhnen, and on the Eaſt ſide of the Dutchy of Sleſwick, 'Tis 15 Miles long and 7 broad, has 13 Pariſhes, is very fruitful, and ſo populous, that it affords ſome Thouſands of Fighting Men. 7. Femeren, on the Coaſt of Holſtein, North-Eaſt from Oldenburg, 13 Miles long and 8 broad, being look'd upon as the Key of Denmark on on the ſide of the Empire. It was well fortify'd with Caſtles and numerous Garriſons by Chriſtian IV.

8. Samſoe, Weſt from Zeeland, North from Fubnen, and Eaſt from the Coaſt of Jutland, 10 Miles long and 3 broad. It abounds with Cattle and Corn, and is ſo pleaſant, that it was called the Samos of the North.

9. Bornholm, the moſt Eaſterly Iſland belonging to Denmark, in Lat. 55. 2. Long. 14. 3. It lies 19 Miles South-Eaſt from Schonen, is 17 Miles long and 10 broad, has frequently been a Bone of Contention between the Danes and Swedes, becauſe it lies convenient for a Retreat to their Fleets in the Baltick, in caſe of a Storm, &c. and was taken by the Swedes from Frederick II. but they were obliged to reſtore it by the Treaty of Copenhagen in 1660. Its Places of Note are, 1. Nex, a large Town, well fortified, on the South-Weſt of the Iſland; 2. Rattenby, North-Eaſt from Nex, a good modern Fortification, and commands the beſt Road in the Iſland.

There are many other ſmall Iſlands belonging to Denmark, inhabited by a few People, or left for Paſturage, which we paſs over.

JUTLAND.

PART of the ancient Cimbrica Cherſoneſus, is the moſt conſiderable of the King of Denmark's Dominions, and amounts to about two Thirds of the whole. It has the German Ocean on the Weſt and North, the Baltick on the Eaſt, and Holſtein on the South. It lies betwixt Lat. 54 ½. and 57 ½. is 180 Miles long, and 88 where broadeſt. 'Tis divided into North and South; the latter part is better known by the Name of the Dutchy of Sleſwick, and divided from the other by the River Rypen. North-Jutland is reckoned to have about 950 Pariſhes, and the Dutchy of Sleſwick 280. This Country in general has Plenty of all Neceſſaries for Life, and Corn enough for their own Conſumption; but their chief Wealth conſiſts in great Numbers of Black Cattle, Horſes and Hogs. The Dutch tranſport annually many of their Black Cattle while they are lean, and ſoon fatten them in their own Paſtures. The fruitfulleſt Part of this Country is about the Coaſt, where there are ſome tolerable Harbours, but the inland Parts are full of Heaths, Lakes and Woods.

NORTH-JUTLAND is divided into Four Dioceſes, as follows:

I. AALBOURG, ſo called from the Multitude of Eels taken in a neighbouring Gulph. This Dioceſe lies in the moſt North Part of Jutland, is 55 Miles South and North, and 68 Eaſt and Weſt, has 108 Pariſhes, 13 Courts of Judicature, 6 Cities, and 18 Noblemens Seats. The North Part of it is called Wenſyſſel, and by Latin Authors Vandalia; whence ſome think it to be the old Seat of the Vandals.

The chief Places are, 1. Scagen, Lat. 57. 27. Long. 10 ½. on the Promontory, at the Entrance into the Baltick. 'Tis the moſt frequented Port of the Country, becauſe Ships touch here in their Way to and from the Sound; and 'twould be a Place of better Trade, were not the neighbouring Coaſt very dangerous.

2. Aalbourg, a Biſhop's See, which gives Name to the Dioceſe; it lies 14 Miles Weſt from the Baltick on the Gulph of Limford, which runs 100 Miles Weſt into the Country, within a very little of the German Ocean, from which 'tis divided by a narrow Ridge of Sand-Hills over againſt the great Shoal called Juts-Riff.

3. Nikioping, a conſiderable Town ſituate in the Iſle of Mors, which lies in the Gulph of Limford, Lat. 56. 31 ½. and Long. 9. 13.

4. Tyſted, North-Weſt from the Iſle of Mors, from whence 'tis ſeparated by a ſmall Channel. It's a ſort of Univerſity, and the adjacent Country is the moſt fruitful Part of this Dioceſe.

II. THE Dioceſe of WYBOURG; it has that of Aalbourg on the North, from which 'tis ſeparated by the Gulph of Limford, the Dioceſe of Arnhuyſen on the Eaſt and South-Eaſt, and that of Rypen on the Weſt and South-Weſt, is about 43 Miles South and North, and 58 Eaſt and Weſt. It is full of Woods, Mountains and Lakes, and in general more barren than the reſt. It has 218 Pariſhes, 3 Caſtles, and as many Towns.

The Places of Note here are, 1. Wyborg, anciently Cimmersberg, ſuppoſed to have been the Capital of the Cimbri. It lies in Lat. 56. 10. and Long. Eaſt from London 9. 53. upon a Lake near a Branch of the Gulph of Limford, 32 Miles South-Weſt from Aalbourg. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, and the Seat of a Court of Judicature, from which there are no Appeals but to the King.

2. Scheve, or Schiffhuis, Weſt from Wyborg. This Place, with the Peninſula of Saling (the Seat of Ptolomy's Salingi) on the South ſide of the Gulph, is noted for the beſt Breed of Horſes in Denmark.

III. THE Dioceſe of RYPEN has the German Ocean on the Weſt, Wyborg on the North-Eaſt, Arnhuyſen on the North-Eaſt and Eaſt, and Sleſwick on the South. It contains 30 Bailiwicks, 280 Pariſhes, 10 Caſtles belonging to the King, 100 Gentlemens Seats, and 7 Towns. 'Tis about 95 Miles long; in ſome places 60, but towards the North not 20 broad. This Province is equal to any in Jutland for Corn and Paſture. Wormius ſays, that in 1639 a poor Girl found at Oſterby, a Village here, a Golden Veſſel ſhaped like a Horn; it is 2 Foot 5 Inches long, the Diameter of the larger End is 4 Inches, and of the leſſer 1 ½: It weighs 99 Ounces, 2 Drams, and contains 2 Quarts and a half. The Gold is incomparably fine. It has many raiſed Hieroglyphical Figures, which Wormius, who explain'd them at the King's Deſire, takes to be Leſſons of Morality. The Uſe and Antiquity of it is only conjectured at. The King gave the Girl that found it a conſiderable Reward, and it's kept in the Chamber of Rarities at Copenhagen.

The Places of Note here are, 1. Rypen the Capital, Lat. 55. 14. Eaſt Long. 9 ½. The River Nipſaw divides it into three Parts, and falls into the North Sea about three Miles below the Town, where it has the beſt and moſt frequented Harbour in Jutland. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, has an Univerſity and a good Caſtle. Their Church is of hewn Stone, of good Architecture, with a very high Steeple, which ſerves for a Land mark to Sailors on this dangerous Coaſt.

2. Colding, thought to be Ptolomy's Coldinga; it lies about 26 Miles N. E. from Rypen, on a River which falls into a Gulph of its own Name, that comes from the Little Belt. The Town is ſmall, but lies ſo pleaſantly, that Chriſtian III. made it his Reſidence. Here is a large Caſtle which commands the Town. The moſt remarkable thing is the Bridge, which yields the King a conſiderable Revenue, becauſe all the Horſes and Black Cattle that come from Jutland muſt paſs it, and pay a Crown per Head. The King has Stables for fine Horſes, and an Academy for riding the Great Horſe on one ſide of the Bridge. The River ſeparates North-Jutland from Sleſwick, and yields excellent Eels and other good Fiſh.

3. Frederick's-Odde, 15 Miles North-Eaſt from Colding, on a Point that runs into the Little Belt. It was well fortify'd, but now in Decay, and has ſeveral Corn-Fields and Orchards within the Walls. 'Twas formerly an Aſylum for Jews and Bankrupts, but has loſt that Privilege, and never recovered its Luſtre ſince burnt by the Swedes in 1659.

4. Weil, about 15 Miles North-Weſt from Frederick's-Odde, and 15 North from Colding, on a River which falls into a Bay of the Little Belt. 'Tis a ſmall Town, well built, and has a good Harbour.

5. Warde, about 18 Miles North from Rypen, on a River which falls into the German Ocean about 10 Miles below the Town, and brings a Trade to it.

6. Ringkoping, on the Coaſt, about 25 Miles North-Weſt from Warde. Here's a Bay formed by Iſlands, and a Peninſula which is 30 Miles long from South to North, and makes a ſafe Harbour in all Winds.

IV. THE Dioceſe of ARNHUYSEN lies Eaſt and North-Eaſt from Rypen, and has the Baltick on the Eaſt. It contains 3 Bailiwicks, 304 Pariſhes, and 5 Caſtles, is about 60 Miles from South to North, and about 32 where broadeſt. It abounds with Corn, Cattle and Game.

The Places of Note are, 1. Arnhuyſen, the chief Town on the River Gude, which falls into the Baltick about 2 Miles below. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, with a neat Cathedral, and is a Place of good Trade. 'Tis 30 Miles North-Eaſt from Weil, and about 64 from Rypen.

2. Scanderborg, or Aunsberg, a good Fortreſs near the Head of the River Gude, 25 Miles North-Weſt from Arnhuyſen.

3. Randers, about 18 Miles North from Arnhuyſen, a Place of good Trade, and noted for the beſt Salmon in Jutland.

SOUTH-JUTLAND, or the DUTCHY of SLESWICK, has the Little Belt on the Eaſt, the German Sea on the Weſt, Jutland on the North, and Holſtein (from which 'tis ſeparated by the River Eider) on the South. 'Tis about 62 Miles from South to North, and 45 where broadeſt. It anciently belonged to the Crown of Denmark, was given to the Dukes of Holſtein in 1338, but their Poſterity failing in 1459, Chriſtian I. re-united it to the Crown. 'Tis now divided betwixt the King of Denmark and four of the Dukes of Holſtein; but the Juriſdictions of the Danes and the Dukes of Holſtein-Gottorp are ſo intermixed, that in time of War People know not which to obey. 'Tis divided into Twelve Bailiwicks, in ſome of which the Dukes of Holſtein and Kings of Denmark divide the Revenues, and jointly chuſe the Magiſtrates, and in others they chuſe by turns. The chief Bailiwicks are as follows:

I. THAT of GOTTORP. The Places of Note here are, 1. Sleſwick, on the River Sley, which falls into the Baltick, about 20 Miles below the Town, which is in Lat. 54. 33. Eaſt Long. 10. 14. Adam of Bremen, who lived about 1100, ſays, it was then called Haithobu, was a large, populous and rich City, being a Staple for all the neighbouring Country and Iſlands. Chriſtianity was eſtabliſhed here about A. D. 800; but in 1064 the Sclavonians ſubdued the Country, reſtor'd Paganiſm, and built Idol-Temples, the Ruins of which are ſtill to be ſeen in the Neighbourhood. The Danes ſoon drove them out, re-eſtabliſhed Chriſtianity, and the Angles, a Powerful and Trading People in this Country, built the Church of the Holy Ghoſt, with an Hoſpital near the Market-Place. 'Tis ſuppoſed, that they were of the ſame Race of People with thoſe who came over with the Saxons, and gave England its preſent Name. This Town is a Biſhop's See, belongs to the Duke of Holſtein-Gottorp, lies 46 Miles North from Hamburg, and 35 South-Weſt from Lubeck.

2. Geltingen, the chief Town of a Diſtrict, ſuppoſed to be the Seat of the Angles, who came hither from Mecklemburg. It lies about 18 Miles North-Eaſt from Sleſwick, near the Shoar of the Baltick.

3. Gottorp, about 2 Miles Weſt from Sleſwick, on the ſame River. 'Tis the Reſidence of the Duke of that Title, who has a Noble Caſtle here in a Lake on the Weſt ſide of the River or Gulph. 'Tis a ſtately Structure, well fortify'd, and had it been finiſh'd according to the Project by the late Duke, would have been one of the fineſt Palaces in Europe. Here are fine Gardens, with noble Waterworks, curious Walks and Fiſh-Ponds, with Arbours and Statues about 'em, a handſome Bridge over the Lake, a fine Orangery, and noble Terraſſes, from whence there is a charming Proſpect into the Country. There's a large Park adjoining, well ſtock'd with Deer, &c. and the Duke has a conſiderable Revenue from the Toll upon Black Cattle, which paſs this Way into Germany. In 1700 the Caſtle was taken by the Danes, and the Garriſon made Priſoners of War.

4. Chriſtianpriſs, or Fredericksfort, Capital of a Bailiwick of the ſame Name, divided betwixt the King and the Duke. It lies about 21 Miles South-Eaſt from Sleſwick, on a Gulph from the Baltick, is a ſmall but neat Town, very well fortify'd, and has a ſtrong Caſtle.

II. THE Bailiwick of EYDERSTED lies South-Weſt from Sleſwick on the German Ocean, and has its Name from the River Eyder. The chief Town is Tonningen, on that River; 'tis ſmall, but the ſtrongeſt Town belonging to the Duke. The Houſes are well built; and the Port, form'd by the River and Bay, is capable of great Ships, though 11 Miles diſtant from the Sea. Here is one Church for the Inhabitants and another for the Garriſon, and the adjacent Country is fruitful. In 1700 it held out a Siege againſt the Danes, but ſuffered much by their Bombs; upon which the Duke allow'd them Repairation, and order'd Ducats to be coined there, repreſenting the Bombardment on one ſide, and the Peace which followed on the other. It was treacherouſly delivered up to the Swedes by the Adminiſtrator of Holſtein in February 1713, which ſo provoked the King of Denmark, that he ſeiz'd all the Revenues

Revenues in Holſtein and Sleſwick belonging to the young Duke; and the Town being afterwards cloſely beſieged by the Danes and their Allies, Count Steinbock, the Swediſh General, was obliged to ſurrender himſelf and his Garriſon Priſoners, till they could be tranſported to Sweden. The Holſteiners however kept Poſſeſſion of the Town, and the Danes, after a long Blocade, had it ſurrender'd to them by Capitulation in January 1714, by which they became Maſters of all the Duke of Holſtein's Dominions.

III. THE Bailiwick of HUSUM lies North from Eyderſted, belongs to the Duke, who has a Palace here of Free-Stone, and the chief Town is of the ſame Name, about 18 Miles South-Weſt from Flensburg, and 8 North-Eaſt from Tonningen, at the Mouth of a ſmall River that falls into the Sea. The Town is well peopled, has a good Trade, and large Veſſels come up to the Bridge. It was quitted by the Swedes to the Danes in 1700.

2. Frederickſtad, ſo called from Duke Frederick its Founder, who peopled it with Dutch, allowed them great Privileges and Liberty of Conſcience. It lies on the ſmall River Tren, near where it falls into the River Eyder, about 5 Miles South-Eaſt from Huſum, and 6 North-Eaſt from Tonningen. 'Tis ſquare and neat, divided into two Parts by a Canal, with Trees on each ſide; and there's another Canal round it, planted in like manner. Pretty large Veſſels come up to the Town by the River Eyder at High Water, and the Duke has generally a Garriſon here. It was taken by the Danes in 1700, and the Garriſon made Priſoners. The Swedes repoſſeſſed it, but 'twas taken from them in 1713 by the Czar of Muſcovy, then in Alliance with the Danes.

IV. THE Bailiwick of FLENSBURG lies North from that of Gottorp, and belongs to the King. The chief Town of the ſame Name lies about 14 Miles North-Weſt from Sleſwick at the bottom of a Bay that falls into the Baltick, South from the Iſland of Alſen. The greateſt Ships ride ſafe cloſe by the Town. On the Land-ſide 'tis encompaſs'd with Mountains which ſhelter it from the Winds, and ſupply it with Water. There's a Caſtle upon an adjoining Mountain, which commands the Gulph. 'Tis one of the moſt conſiderable Towns next to Copenhagen which belongs to the King. The adjacent Country is called the Diſtrict of Angelen, or Engeland, being part of that poſſeſſed by the Angles, the Predeceſſors of the Engliſh.

V. THE Bailiwick of GLUCKSBURG joins to that of Flensburg on the Eaſt, lies on the Baltick, and belongs to the Duke of Holſtein. Gluckſburg the chief Town is of the ſame Name, about 4 Miles Eaſt from Flensburg, on a Branch of the ſame Gulph.

VI. THE Bailiwick of APENRADE is ſo called from a Town of that Name, which lies about 12 Miles North from Flensburg, on the bottom of a Bay that falls into the Baltick on the North-Weſt ſide of the Iſle of Alſen, and has a good Trade with the Daniſh Iſles.

VII. THE Bailiwick of TUNDER, or TONDEREN, ſo called from its chief Town on the River Bre, that falls into the German Ocean. It belongs to the Duke, is about 32 Miles North-Weſt from Sleſwick, 18 South-Weſt from Apenrade, a large Town, and ſtands well for Trade. There are ſeveral Iſlands on this Coaſt, divided betwixt the King and the Duke.

VIII. THE Bailiwick of LOHM has a Town of the ſame Name, lies about 6 Miles North-Weſt from Tonderen, and belongs to the Duke.

IX. THE Bailiwick of HADERSLEBE has a little Town of the ſame Name with a good Harbour on a Bay that falls into the Little Belt, and is about 13 Miles North from Apenrade. It belongs to the King, and is the moſt Northerly Bailiwick in the Dutchy of Sleſwick.

The TRADE of DENMARK.

MOST Authors obſerve, that 'tis under a Decay, which is aſcribed to the arbitrary Form of their Government, their high Taxes, and being obliged to maintain a ſtanding Army.

The chief of their Export from Denmark and Norway together, is Black Cattle, Horſes, Butter, Tallow, Barley, Wheat, Rye, Stockfiſh, Train-Oil, Tar, Pitch, Iron and Timber of all ſorts, eſpecially Fir; but the Exportation of Oak is forbid.

Some of their Great Men did lately attempt the ſetting up of Manufactories, but they came to nothing, becauſe the Undertakers did not think their Property ſecure.

Their Trade of Import is Salt, Wine, Brandy, Silks from Portugal and France. They have begun of late to bring Spices in their own Ships from the Eaſt-Indies, where they have a ſmall Fort on the Coaſt of Coromandel; and they have alſo an Eaſt-India Company, of which moſt of their Great Men are Members. The Engliſh and Dutch import the Product of their own Countries and Plantations; ſo that 'tis reckon'd, 300 Ships from England and 1000 from Holland, paſs the Sound annually in Time of Peace; and both thoſe Nations pay ready Money for moſt of the Goods they export from Norway.

Their HISTORY.

WHAT they ſay of their Antiquities, is owned by Olaus Wormius to be obſcure and fabulous, ſo that many of their Kings may juſtly be ſtruck out of the Catalogue. The firſt of Note ſeems to be Gotrick, who taking part with the Saxons againſt Charles the Great, was defeated, and to ſecure his Territories built a Wall, called Daniwerk, croſs the Iſthmus of Jutland, from the Mouth of the River Eyder to Gottorp.

Erick, who began his Reign about A. C. 846, is reckoned their firſt Chriſtian King; but his Succeſſor Erick, called the Child, perſecuted the Chriſtians, ſo that Chriſtianity loſt its Ground, and ſeems not to have been fully eſtabliſh'd in Denmark till their Princes were educated in England after their Conqueſt. For their Wars in England, and Expulſion from it, we refer to the Engliſh Hiſtory. It is certain, they were very powerful and valiant, and extended their Conqueſts a great way in the Continent, of which their Hiſtorians give very Romantick Accounts, and aſcribe to their Countrymen all the Great Actions that were done by the ancient Getæ and Goths. They were ſubject to Civil Wars and Competitions for the Crown, ſo that they have had three or four Kings at a time, which broke their Power.

Among their later Sovereigns, Waldemar III. and his Daughter Margaret make the greateſt Figure in Hiſtory. Waldemar was very ſucceſsful in War, and ſo little regarded the Pope's Threats of Excommunication for ſlighting his Orders, that he wrote him a Letter, wherein he told him, That he held his Life from God, his Kingdom from his Subjects, his Riches from his Parents, and his Religion from the Pope's Predeceſſors, which if the Pope envy'd him, he was willing to quit it to him.

His Daughter Margaret had the Adminiſtration during her Son Olaus the Sixth's Minority, and after his Death was elected Queen by the Danes and Norweigians. In one Campaign ſhe took the King of Sweden, the Duke of Mecklemburg, and the Counts of Holſtein and Repnin Priſoners; after which the Swedes ſubmitted to her, and in 1396 ſhe united the two Kingdoms by the Treaty of Calmar, but it was of no long Duration.

The preſent Royal Family comes from Chriſtian of Oldenburg, who was elected in 1448. He was a great Prince, obtained Ditmarſen in Fief from the Emperor Frederick III. marry'd his Daughter Margaret to James III. of Scotland, and for Dowry quitted his Pretenſions to the Iſles of Orkney and Schetland. He died in 1481. Chriſtian II. his Grandſon was ſuch a Tyrant, that he was called the Nero of the North, dethron'd, and died in Priſon. The Danes choſe his Uncle Frederick Duke of Holſtein in his ſtead, A. D. 1524, in whoſe Reign the Reformation according to Luther was eſtabliſhed in this Country.

His Succeſſors made War againſt the Swedes with various Succeſs, and were very like to have been ruined by them in the Reigns of Guſtavus-Adolphus and Charles-Guſtavus of Sweden, had it not been prevented by Treaties and the Mediation of neighbouring Princes; and particularly in 1658, when by the Treaty of Roſchild the Danes were obliged to give up ſeveral Provinces and Iſlands to the Swedes.

Frederick III. of Denmark had acquired great Reputation and Love from his Subjects, by his Gallant Defence of Copenhagen, when cloſely beſieged by the Swedes in 1659. He forced them to raiſe the Siege and agree to a Peace, but he pretended he could not disband his Army, nor indeed could he well do it for want of Money to pay their Arrears. The Three Eſtates were aſſembled to raiſe Money for that End; and the Nobility declaring, that the Money ought to be levied on the Commons, and that they themſelves would only give voluntary Contributions. This did ſo much diſguſt the Commons, who were very much impoveriſh'd by the War, and oppreſs'd by the Nobility, who were the chief Proprietors of the Land, that they proteſted againſt it, and urged, that the Nobility ſhould pay their Share. Otto Craeg, one of the Nobles, did with equal Inſolence and Imprudence tell the Commons, that they were only Slaves, and had no Right to diſobey the Orders of their Maſters the Nobility: Which ſo provoked the Commons, that Nanſon their Speaker reply'd, They were not the Nobility's Slaves, and that the Nobles ſhould ſoon find the Truth of it to their Coſt. Upon this the Commons and Clergy went to the King, offer'd to make him Abſolute, and his Family Hereditary. He made ſome Difficulty to accept the Propoſal, but was over-perſuaded to it by the Queen; and next Day the Speaker told the Nobles what the Commons had propoſed, with which they were Thunder-ſtruck, and deſired the Matter might be duly conſider'd; but Nanſon refuſed to allow them any more Time, and went with the Commons and Clergy to renew the Propoſal, which the King accepted, thank'd them for it, and ordered the Gates of the City to be ſhut, and that none of the Nobles ſhould depart till this great Affair was finiſhed. They were forced to comply. Thus the King was made Abſolute, and both Lords and Commons took an Oath on their Knees, and ſign'd it the 23d of October 1660, that they would obey him as their Hereditary Monarch without Reſerve. At the ſame time they gave up to him the Book of their Laws, which contained all that had ever been made againſt Abſolute Power, and declared their Kings to be the only Legiſlators, accountable to none; that no former Laws were binding upon them; that they may put in and out what Officers they pleaſe, do in Church-Matters what they think fit, and make Peace, War and Treaties without Advice of their Council. The Commons did this, ſays Mr. Moleſworth, to revenge themſelves upon the Nobility, but have frequently repented it ſince. Chriſtian IV. dy'd in 1670, and was ſucceeded by his Son Chriſtian V. who made War upon the Duke of Holſtein and the Swedes with various Succeſs, but was at laſt obliged by the Treaty of Fontainbleau in 1679, to reſtore what he had taken. He afterwards made an unſucceſsful Attempt upon the City of Hamburg, and was like to have been embroiled in a new War with the Swedes on account of the Duke of Holſtein, whoſe Part of Sleſwick he had ſequeſter'd; but the Difference was made up at the Treaty of Altena, by the Mediation of England, Holland, and the neighbouring Princes of Germany, ſo that the Duke was reſtored to all his Dominions.

Frederick IV. the preſent King of Denmark, made War again upon the Duke of Holſtein, over-run his Country, and beſieged Tonningen his chief Fortreſs, but was obliged to raiſe the Siege by the Swedes and the neighbouring Princes of Germany; and at the ſame time the Engliſh, Dutch, and Swediſh Squadrons diſperſed the Daniſh Fleet, and purſued them to Copenhagen, but did not think fit to attempt any thing farther. Charles the Twelfth, King of Sweden, invaded Zeeland at the ſame time, and advanced within a few Miles of Copenhagen. This brought on the Treaty of Travendahl in 1700, by which the Duke had all his Pretenſions ſettled, and and Compensation allowed him for his Damages: But the present Duke has fallen under the same Misfortunes, by his Administrator's taking part with the Swedes in the present War of the North, and surrendring Tonningen to them, as mentioned before.

The KING's TITLES and REVENUES.

THE King's Titles are, King of Denmark, Norway, of the Goths and Vandals, Duke of Sleswick, Holstein, Stormar, and Ditmarsh, Earl of Oldenburg and Delmenhorst.

His Revenues arise from Customs of Import and Export, Taxes on Houses and Land, the Tenths of all Product, from the Crown-Lands, Confiscated Estates, Excise upon Provisions, and the Tolls of the Sound, &c. amounting in the whole to about 639250*l.* Sterling per Annum, as Mr. Molesworth computes.

It is proper here to take notice, that the Tolls demanded of Ships that pass the Sound, had their Origin from the Court of Denmark's being at the Expence of Buoys and Lights, that Ships might thereby know how to avoid the Shelves and Banks. But that Court began to be arbitrary in imposing this Toll, which occasioned great Disputes, and sometimes Wars, with the Princes and States who traded that Way, so that at last it was brought to a fix'd Rate by Treaties. This is the best frequented Pass or Streight, next to Gibraltar, of any in Europe, and lies convenient for shortening the Voyage of Ships into the Baltick; tho' Ships may otherwise go into it by the Little and Great Belt, as may be seen by our Maps; nor can the Danes hinder it, without being at the Expence of Squadrons to dispute those Passes; and even that of the Sound has been passed by the Dutch and others, when at War with Denmark and Sweden, notwithstanding the Fortifications on both sides; and though the Streight here be not above one English Mile and an half over, they received little or no Damage from the Guns of the Castles.

Their NOBILITY and KNIGHTS.

THE Nobility here rose anciently from the Valour and Wealth of the Persons entitled to it; but their Number is much decreased, and none can enjoy it now but by Patent; nor have they such Privileges as our British Peers, but only some airy insignificant Claims, which distinguish them from the Commons. It is seldom bestowed on any but Favourites, and the highest Titles here are Earls and Barons. They have not above seven antient Families of Note left in Norway and Denmark; and the Posterity of the antient Nobility, who, before the Crown was made Hereditary and the Government Despotical, lived in great Affluence and Power, are not able to maintain their Character without some Military or Civil Employment from the Court; yet they love sumptuous Diet and Apparel, and are very expensive at their Marriages, Funerals, and such Occasions, which with the heavy Taxes on their Estates does so much exhaust them, that they oppress their Tenants. By this means the whole Country is reduced to Poverty, and the antient Warlike Genius of the People is sunk.

The Orders of Knighthood here are, 1. That of the Elephant: Its Origin is ascribed by some to King Canute VI. in 1190, and by others to Christian I. in 1463, but it lay neglected till revived by Frederick II. in 1580. Their Badge is an Elephant of Gold adorned with Diamonds, and a Tower on its Back full of armed Men, with the King's Cypher on its side, and a High Dutch Motto round it, signifying, My Help is in God alone. Under the Elephant's Feet are the Letters T. I. W. B. to which some of their Authors ascribe this whimsical Interpretation, True Is Wild Brat; alledging, that Frederick II. having a Dog called Wild Brat, which constantly attended him, added those Letters to express, that the said Dog was more faithful to him than the best of his pretended Friends. Christian V. a Magnificent Prince, gave a new Lustre to this Order, revived its antient Statutes, and added new ones. The Collar is a Gold Chain with an Elephant hung to it.

2. The Order of Dannebrog, said to be founded by King Waldemar II. who came to the Crown in 1202. It was instituted on occasion of a Victory against the Heathen Livonians. The Legend says, that during the Battle, a Red Standard, with a White Cross in the middle, appeared in the Air, which Waldemar took for a Presage of Victory, order'd such a Standard to be made, and appointed it to be the Palladium of the Danes, who called it Dannebrog. Others think with more Probability, that such a Standard was sent by the Pope to encourage that King in his War against the Livonians. This imaginary Palladium was taken and cut to pieces by the Ditmarsians, in their Wars with the Danes, about 200 Years after. This Order was revived by Christian V. in 1671. The Collar is of wove Work, intermixed with a Cross of Gold enamelled; at the End of it hangs such a Cross as abovementioned, set with Diamonds and surrounded with Rays. The Knights have the Cross embroidered on their Coats with this Motto, Tessera Fidelium, i. e. A Badge of Loyalty. It is not so honourable as that of the Elephant, yet is not conferred on any but Persons of Quality and Distinction.

Their MILITARY FORCE by Sea and Land

MR. Molesworth observes, that the Soldiers are thought to be the Riches of the Nation; because when the King has no Occasion for them at Home, he hires them out to other Powers. He levies more than his Country can maintain, and generally keeps 18000 at Home for less than 100000 Crowns per Annum, because he provides them with nothing but Arms. The Way he does it is thus: He has divided his Dominions into so many Plows, and every three of them is to find a Soldier, and to give him so much a Day when he marches. Our Author observes, that most of the Army consists now of Strangers, the Natives being so much dispirited that they are not thought fit for Military Service.

The King's best Seamen come from Norway: He has 3000 in constant Pay at Copenhagen, and some thousands more at Hamburgh, Lubeck, &c. who are at liberty to employ themselves when he has no Occasion, but he retains them by giving them a Month or two's Pay gratis now and then, so that they are ready at a Call. He has also a proportionable Number of Ship-Carpenters in constant Pay at Copenhagen; so that in twelve Days he can fit out a Squadron of fifteen Men of War. He has always 36 Ships of the Line, 16 Frigats, 10 Fire-ships, with Bomb-Vessels and Yatchts from 16 to 36 Guns in the Bason at Copenhagen; but most of them are scarce fit for any other Service than that of the Baltick, only he has a few for Cruisers and Convoys that are proper for the Ocean.

The PEOPLE in general.

MR. Molesworth says of the Danes, that for most part they are Tall, Handsome, Straight, and of a fair Complexion, but the Country is not well peopled, which he ascribes to their hard Usage, Poverty, and bad Diet. Their Burghers best Fare is commonly Rye Bread, lean salt Flesh, Stock-Fish, Bacon, and sorry Cheese. The Peasants live on Roots, Milk, and Rye Bread; seldom have any fresh Fish, and scarce ever any Flesh, except on extraordinary Festivals. They are as absolute Slaves as any in Barbadoes, but not so well fed, and they are sold with the Land to which they belong, as Timber is with us; so that the Gentry estimate their Riches not by the number of Acres, but by the number of Boors; and those poor Creatures having no Property, lay out the little Money they get in Brandy; and, besides all these Hardships, they are oppressed by quartering and paying of Soldiers, and furnishing the King's Family, the Nobility and Officers of the Army, with Horses, Waggons and Attendants, &c. in their Journeys. It follows naturally from all this, that Travellers can have very little Accommodation in Denmark; for our Author says, even at Copenhagen there are scarce Lodgings to be let in private Houses; and in Taverns one must be content to eat and drink in a publick Room among all sorts of Company.

Their RELIGION and LAWS.

AS to their Religion we have heard before that it is Lutheran. The Clergy, he says, depend entirely on the Crown, have no Power in Civil Affairs, nor are they encouraged to come to Court, so that the Pulpit is their only Province. They subsist chiefly by the Bounty of the People, whom they keep in Awe by obliging them to Confession before they receive the Sacrament. This, with Crucifixes and a few other Ceremonies, is all they retain of the Romish Church.

They have ten Superintendents, who take it kindly to be called Bishops, and my Lord; viz. one in Zeeland, one in Fuhnen, four in Jutland, and four in Norway. They all depend on the Superiour Consistory, or Assembly of the Clergy. They have no Temporalties, Ecclesiastick Courts, Cathedrals, &c. but only the Rank before their Inferiour Clergy, and a Power to inspect their Doctrine and Manners. Their Revenues are from 2000 to 1000 Crowns per Annum, with the Benefit of two or three Parishes each. Their Habit is the same with other Ministers, viz. a pleated Black Gown, with short Sleeves and round Caps. Such of them as have study'd at Oxford are more valued than the rest. The Common People frequent the Churches well, and they are kept very decent and clean, and look almost as gaudy in their Ornaments as the Popish Churches.

Mr. Molesworth commends very little in this Country but their Laws, which exceed all that he knows in the World for Justice, Brevity and Plainness. They are contained in one Quarto Volume in the common Language. Any Man who can read may understand his Case, and be able to plead it, if he thinks fit, without the Assistance of Lawyers; so that a very few Advocates do their Business, nor are their Fees exorbitant. No Suit, tho' of the greatest Importance, needs lie in Suspence longer than thirteen Months, unless a Man be wanting to himself; for in that Time he may go through all their Courts, and have Execution. They have three sorts of Courts here, viz. one in Towns or Cities, from whence they may appeal to that of the County, and from thence to the highest Court in Copenhagen, which resembles our Court of Chancery, is composed of the Chief Nobility, and sometimes honoured with the King's Presence. If any thing happens in Debate, for the Decision of which there is no positive Law, it is determined by the King or the other Judges present. Their Laws are very just in respect of Shipwrecks; for they preserve the Goods that can be sav'd, for the Use of the Owners, if they be claimed within a Year and a Day; and if they be such as can't be well kept, they are sold to the best Advantage, and the Money secured to the Owner; but if there be no Claim as above, the Wrecks and Goods fall to the King.

Their LEARNING and LANGUAGE.

OLAUS WORMIUS says, that anciently they had so very few Scholars, that any one who could but read and write, was very much esteemed; particularly the Poets, who, as that Author says in his Literatura Runica, were much caressed by their Kings, and that their Rhimes, or Rhunes, were reckon'd capable of raising or allaying the Passions; but their common Subject was the Lives and Actions of their Kings and other brave Men. The Learned Spelman thinks the Word Rhune or Rhunes comes from the Saxon Word Ryne, which signifies a Mystery, because the Poets affected thereby to conceal the Knowledge of what they said from the People, as the Egyptian Priests did by their Hieroglyphicks. Wormius fancies that the Runic Character is more ancient than the Greek, and taken from the Hebrew. Selden and Salmasius are of the same Opinion, and Wormius says they have Inscriptions in Denmark 600 Years older than Charlemain. He says they have 28 kinds of Alphabets, and that the Scythian, Massagetic and Getic Characters have a great Affinity with the Runic, which he proves from a Table of 72 different sorts of Characters writ by James Bonaventura Hepburn a Scotsman, printed at Rome in 1617. Saxo Grammaticus, and Wormius in his Monumenta Danica, give us abundance of their Inscriptions engraven on Rocks; but many of these Inscriptions were destroyed by those employed in converting the Danes, because they did not understand, and would not be at the Pains to learn them. The Romish Priests did also bring them into Contempt, on pretence that they contained Sorcery and Magick, which, with the Eaſineſs of the Roman Character both to read and write, brought the Runic into Diſuſe.

Mr. Moleſworth ſays, that Learning runs very low at preſent in Denmark, only their Clergy ſpeak more Latin than ours. He ſays, few Books are printed here, but ſome dull Treatiſes againſt the Papiſts and Calviniſts, and that the Belles Lettres can hardly be introduced here till a greater Affluence among the Gentry makes Way for them. The Revenues and Buildings of the Univerſity at Copenhagen are mean, and that at Sora is now become deſolate, as already mentioned. The Chief of their ancient Scholars was Saxo Grammaticus, who lived in the Twelfth Century, was Hiſtoriographer to the King, and wrote the Hiſtory of Denmark in ſuch Elegant Latin, that Eraſmus was amazed to find ſo much Eloquence in ſuch a barbarous Age. Stephanus Stephanius, Regius Profeſſor of Hiſtory at Sora, wrote learned Notes on Saxo, and compoſed the Hiſtory of Denmark from 1550 to 1559. Arild Whitfield, a Nobleman and Chancellor of Denmark, reduced Saxo to a Chronological Method, and wrote a Daniſh Hiſtory of the Kings of Denmark and Norway, much eſteemed by Pontanus. Tycho Brahe, a Rich Lord and Native of Schonen, then under the Danes, has obliged the World with his Improvements in Aſtronomy, and Olaus Wormius abovementioned was a very famous Antiquary; but of late we hear of no Scholars of Note in this Country.

Their Language is an Idiom of the Teutonic, but Wormius ſays, 'tis much changed within theſe 400 Years; and of late they have borrowed much from the High-Dutch, which the Court, Gentry, and Burghers of Note uſe in common Diſcourſe; and they commonly ſpeak French to Strangers, to whom the Daniſh is unpleaſant, becauſe of its bad and languiſhing Tone.

SWEDEN

IS bounded on the North with Norwegian Lapland, on the North-Eaſt by Muſcovite Lapland, on the Eaſt and South-Eaſt by Muſcovy, on the South by Courland, part of Poland, and the Baltick, on the South-Weſt by the Sound and the Entrance into the Baltick, and on the Weſt and North-Weſt by Norway, from which 'tis ſeparated by almoſt impaſſable Mountains. The moſt South part of Schonen is in Lat. 53 ½, and the moſt North part of Norwegian Lapland is about Lat. 69. The Longitude from the Frontiers of the Government of Bahus, to the Eaſt ſide of the Lake of Onega, is between Long. Eaſt from London 10 ½, to 55 ½. The Extent from Schonen on the South to Norwegian Lapland on the North, is about 810 Miles; and from the Frontiers of Bahus on the Weſt, to the farther ſide of the Lake of Onega on the Eaſt, about 840; but the Breadth is in many Places very unequal, as may be ſeen by the Map. It lies betwixt the Tenth Climate of Hours, where the longeſt Day in the South parts is Seventeen Hours, and in the ſecond Climate of Months, where the longeſt Day in the North is about Two Months.

The NAME.

SOME of the fabulous Antiquaries derive it from Suenno, Grandſon to Noah by Japhet; others from Suen, which in their Language ſignifies Valiant and Sprightly, and ſome from its being the Seat of the Suiones, or Suevi, mentioned by Tacitus, Lib. de Moribus Germanorum, Cap. 44, 45. But that it was a great Part of the ancient Scandia or Scandinavia,, and of the Country of the Goths, as the Province of Gothland ſtill teſtifies, is not doubted; yet we are not to imagine that the Goths, who overſpread ſo great a Part of Europe and Aſia, were all from Scandinavia; for 'tis certain, that the Name was given to moſt other Nations in the Northern Parts of Europe, and ſeems to have been Synonimous with that of the Scythians, from whom 'tis ſuppoſed they had their Origin.

The AIR.

IT may eaſily be gueſſed, by the Climates in which the Country lies, to be very cold for moſt part of the Year. Their Winter laſts nine Months. Schefferus, Profeſſor of Antiquity and Hiſtory at Upſal, ſays, the Froſt pierces two Ells into the Earth, and, inſtead of Moiſture, it has a white Ice. Standing Water freezes three Ells deep, which kills the Fiſh if the Ice be not broke, as it is commonly in their great Lakes and Bays, either by the Force of the Water, or the impriſon'd Vapours, with a Noiſe like Thunder, and the Fiſh are preſerved by the Air let in at thoſe Clefts. The Severity of the Seaſon makes their Hares and Foxes White in the middle of Winter, and their Squirrels of a mix'd White and Grey, Philoſoph. Tranſact. N°. XIX. p. 350. The Froſts here come by the North-Eaſt Winds from Muſcovy, Tartary, and the Frozen Ocean. In the North Parts they have Mountains of Ice on the Sides of their Rivers in May and June, as Charles the Eleventh's Mathematicians found in their Journey to Bothnia.

The Heat of their Summer, which immediately ſucceeds their Winter, (for they have no Spring nor Autumn) is almoſt as intolerable as the Cold, comes all of a ſudden, and ſo intenſe, that it ſometimes ſets Woods on Fire, which can't be extinguiſhed till it comes at ſome River, Lake, or large Plain: Yet the Air in general is ſo clear and dry, that, except in the Neighbourhood of Lakes, the People are for moſt part healthful, and many of them live to 120 and 130 Years of Age.

The SOIL.

THE Country is ſo full of Mountains, Foreſts, Lakes, Marſhes, and Heaths, that a great Part of it is not habitable, ſo that the Number of the People bears no Proportion to its Extent. In the middle it is indifferent fertile, and they have ſome fruitful Valleys, but the Mold is ſeldom above half a Foot deep, and where it is ſhalloweſt they have moſt Corn. This makes their Ploughing ſo eaſy, that they ſeldom have above one Ox in a Plough. They enrich their barren Soil by the Aſhes of Trees, which they burn on the Place, and rake the Seed among the Aſhes, which yield a plentiful Crop without farther Pains; but the danger of deſtroying their Woods by this Practice, has occaſioned its being limited by ſome Laws of late Years. However, were the Inhabitants induſtrious, they might have Corn enough of their own, whereas now they are obliged to have much from other Countries, and particularly from Livonia, which is called their Granary. The Poor in the Northern Places grind the Bark of Birch-Trees, mix it with Meal, and make it into Bread. The Corn and other Fruits ripen very ſoon here, as in other Northern Countries; ſo that uſually they have but ſix Weeks between Seed-time and Harveſt. This is aſcribed to the great Heat of the Sun, which ſcarce going below their Horizon during that Time, acts forcibly upon the Oil and Sulphur which abound in their Soil, as appears by their Trees and Minerals, and is pent up during the Winter; yet even in this Seaſon their Grain is frequently hurt, and ſometimes deſtroy'd by cold Dews and Froſts.

In Summer the Fields are covered with Flowers, and they have Plenty of Currants, Strawberries, and Rasberries, but little Wall-Fruit. Their Cherries are tolerable; but their Apples, Pears and Plums are ſcarce, and don't taſte well. They abound with Roots, which is a great part of the Poor People's Food; but in the Northerly Parts, where the Ground is always covered with Snow and Ice, they ſubſiſt chiefly by Hunting and Fiſhing.

Their TREES are,

OAKS, Pines, Fir, Beech, Birch and Elder; and all of them grow ſo cloſe, that where they fall and rot, the Woods are ſcarce paſſable.

Their MINES.

THEY are chiefly Copper and Iron, and ſo many, that they ſupply moſt part of Europe with theſe Metals, which are reckon'd better than thoſe of other Countries. Their Iron Mines are chiefly in the Mountainous Parts, where the great Foreſts ſupply their Forges with Charcoal, which is ſix times cheaper than ours, but not ſo good. There are Magnets found in theſe Mines, and thoſe of Lapland are reckoned to exceed all others in attractive Force.

They have a Silver Mine at Salberg in Weſtmannia 145 Fathoms deep. It is ſo ancient, that they can give no account of the Time of its Diſcovery. The Ore ſeldom yields above 4 per Cent. The yearly Produce is reckoned about 20000 Crowns of Fine Silver, and the King has the Pre-emption, for which he pays ⅓ leſs than the intrinſic Value. Here's alſo a Copper Mine 80 Fathom deep. The annual Product is about 200000 Pounds, the Fourth of which belongs to the King, and he has 25 per Cent. upon the reſt when exported; ſo that the Proprietors have very little Profit. Here is alſo ſtore of Vitriol, Allum and Sulphur; and they have a Yellow Stone with Streaks of White, which looks as if it were compoſed of Gold and Silver. It runs in Veins thro' the Rocks, and from hence they make Vitriol, Allum, and Red Lead. The Curious may ſee the Way of preparing them in the Philoſophical Tranſactions, N°. XXI. p. 375.

Their BEASTS.

THE Cattle are of a ſmall Size, and when larger are brought from elſewhere; they ſoon degenerate, becauſe the Graſs is not nouriſhing, and in Winter they are almoſt ſtarved. The Wool of their Sheep is very coarſe. Their Horſes, eſpecially the Finniſh, are ſmall, but vigorous, ſure-footed and ſwift. Wild Beaſts abound chiefly in the Northern Provinces; as Bears, Elks, Deer, Wolves, Foxes, Wild Cats, Hares and Ermins, ſome of which they hunt for Food, and others for their Furs.

Their FOWL.

THEY have ſtore of Wild and Tame, and good of their kind; one called Orrus, as big as a Hen; another named Kedlars, as large as a Turkey. Here's Plenty of Small Birds, but few Pigeons, becauſe they are deſtroyed by their Eagles and ſeveral ſorts of Hawks, with which they abound, and they are ſo much valued that other Nations covet them.

Their FISH.

THEY are what's common in the Baltick; and they have many Lakes and ſmall Rivers, which are well ſtored with Salmon, Pikes, Perch, Tench, Trouts, Eels, and ſeveral unknown to us; as one called a Streamling, leſs than a Pilchard, which they ſalt and ſend over the Country in great Quantities, as they do their Pikes, and ſell them very cheap.

Their BAYS are,

1. THAT called the Gulph of Bothnia, which ſeparates Sweden Proper from Finland, runs up from the Baltick about 360 Miles into the Country, and abounds with Seals, which yield ſtore of Seal-Skins and Train-Oil.

2. The Gulph of Finland, which ſeparates Finland from Livonia, runs about 250 Miles Eaſt into the Country, and has a Communication with the Lake Ladoga by a ſort of a River about 40 Miles long.

3. The Gulph of Riga, or Livonia, which runs from the Weſt End of the Gulph of Finland, about 130 Miles South, being ſeparated from the Baltick on the Weſt by the Iſles of Dagho and Oeſſel.

Their LAKES.

THE Face of the Country is almoſt overſpread with them, as may be ſeen by the Map; but the Chief, of which we have any Deſcription, are as follow:

1. The Veter, Vater, or Waſter Lake in Eaſt-Gothland, about Lat. 58. Long. 14. The Natives ſay, it makes a Noiſe like Thunder in that Quarter from whence a Storm is to happen the Day after; and that the Ice upon it in Winter thaws ſo ſuddenly, as to ſurprize Travellers, and becomes navigable in half an Hour's time. 'Tis in ſome Places above 300 Fathoms deep.

2. Lake Wener, ſomething further to the North-Weſt. 'Tis about 90 Miles long from South-Weſt to North-Eaſt, and above 40 Miles broad from South to North. It receives above 24 Rivers from the Mountains of Norway, and gives Riſe to the River Elve, or Trolhetta, which after a Courſe of 40 Miles runs into the Baltick, and near Gottenburg falls over a Rock 60 Foot high, with ſuch a Noiſe, that 'tis heard many Miles.

3. Meler Lake, which falls into the Sea Eaſt from Stockholm, and furniſhes that City with freſh Water. 'Tis about 50 Miles long, 20 broad, and full of ſmall Rocks or Iſlands.

4. Ladoga in the Province of Carelia, betwixt Lat. 60 and 62, is about 125 Miles from South to North, and 80 from Eaſt to Weſt. Some reckon it the greateſt freſh Water Lake in Europe. It abounds with Iſlands and Fiſh.

5. Lake Onega, or Ozero, about 70 Miles to the North-Eaſt from Ladoga, with which it has Communication by a River. Some reckon this to be the Eaſtern Boundary betwixt Sweden and Muſcovy, and others reckon it in the latter. 'Tis about 150 Miles long, but of an unequal Breadth, the broadeſt Part being about 45. It has alſo ſeveral Iſlands, and abounds with Fiſh.

Their RIVERS.

MOST of them riſe from the abovementioned and other Lakes, or from the Mountains in Norway, but none of them are navigable, as being either too rapid in their Courſe, or obſtructed by Cataracts and Rocks.

Their ISLANDS.

THEY are ſo numerous in and about theſe Lakes and Gulphs, and on the Coaſts of the Baltick, that ſeveral Thouſands of them are reckoned to be inhabited, and the reſt are deſert Rocks.

The GEOGRAPHY of SWEDEN.

IT is divided into the Eight following Parts, viz. Sweden Proper, Gothland, Schonen, the Government of Bahus, the Nordelles, or Northlands, Finland, Ingria, and Swediſh Livonia.

I. SWEDEN PROPER,

HAS the Nordelles on the North-Eaſt, Gothland on the South, the Baltick on the Eaſt, and Norway to the North. 'Tis pretty fruitful in Corn, and is ſubdivided into the Five following Provinces:

I. UPLAND, which has Geſtricia and Part of the Gulph of Bothnia on the North, Sudermannia on the South, the Baltick on the Eaſt, Weſtmania and Nericia on the Weſt.

The chief Places here are, 1. Stockholm, the Capital of the Kingdom. It lies about Lat. 59½, according to their own Mathematicians, and about Long. Eaſt from London 17¾. About 300 Years ago it conſiſted only of ſome Fiſhermens Cottages in an Iſland; but upon building a Caſtle there to ſtop the Inroads of the Muſcovites, and becoming the Seat of the Court, it grew populous by degrees, and became the Metropolis. The firſt Houſes were built on Piles drove into the Ground, from whence it was named Stockholm. 'Tis naturally fortified by Rocks, which towards the Sea over-top the Houſes, and make the Proſpect not very pleaſant. 'Tis built upon ſix Iſlands join'd together by Bridges, and has two large Suburbs, one on the South and t'other on the North. Its Port is ſo large and ſafe, that a Thouſand great Ships may lie here without Cable or Anchor. The neighbouring Mountains defend it from Storms, and the Citadel and two Forts defend the Canal from the Attacks of Enemies; but it has this Inconvenience, that it lies above 40 Miles Weſt from the Baltick, or at leaſt before one can get clear of the Rocks and Iſlands, which, with the Windings of the Lake Meter, and the want of Tides, makes it difficult for Ships to get out; yet, being the general Reſidence of the Court, it has moſt of the Trade of the Nation, is reckoned one of the fineſt Cities in the North, and almoſt as populous as Briſtol. The Streets are large, and there are many Gardens and Walks in and about the City, which make it pleaſant. Here are nine large Churches built with Brick and covered with Copper. That of St. Nicholas is moſt remarkable, and by the Altar in the King's Chapel, there is a Silver Statue of our Saviour on the Croſs at full Length. Here's a large Caſtle covered with Copper, but has neither Strength nor Beauty. It ſerves for Publick Offices, and the Officers of the Court lodge in it. Here's a Citadel mounted with 400 Braſs Guns; the Palace that is ſtrong and high, and lies within it; and at Jacobdal, within half a League, there's a Caſtle where the King reſides in Summer. This City ſuffered much by Fire in May 1697, when the Palace, Magazine for Ships, the Court of Juſtice, the Royal Sepulchre, the Place for the Records and Treaſury, &c. were almoſt conſumed.

2. Enkoping on the ſame Lake, near 40 Miles North-Weſt from Stockholm, Lat. 60. Long. 17. It lies on the River Sala, is the moſt ancient City of Sweden, was formerly the Reſidence of their Kings, who before the Reformation were crowned and buried here. It has a Caſtle built after the Gothick Manner, which commands the City. 'Tis the See of an Archbiſhop, and has an Univerſity, whoſe Library is well furniſh'd with Books that Guſtavus Adolphus took in Germany during his Wars there. It was famous for a ſtately Heathen Temple, which, according to Johannes Magnus, exceeded all in the World for Riches and Beauty, being lined with Gold, and encompaſſed with a maſſy Gold Chain. But his Accounts are not much to be relied on. One of the greateſt Rarities now here, is the Clock of the Cathedral, which is of admirable Workmanſhip.

3. Oregrond, about 38 Miles North-Eaſt from Upſal, on the Gulph of Bothnia. 'Tis an ancient Town, has a good Port, and tolerable Trade.

II. SUDERMANIA lies South from Upland, is fruitful in Corn, and abounds in Mines. It had formerly Dukes of its own. The chief Places are, 1. Nykoping on the Baltick, about 60 Miles South-Weſt from Stockholm. It has a good Port and Trade, a ſtrong Caſtle, and a Dock for building Ships. Here are ſeveral othet little Towns, of which Stregnes on the South ſide of Lake Meler, is the moſt remarkable. It lies about 40 Miles South-Weſt from Stockholm, is an ancient Town, a Biſhop's See, and the Burial-Place of Charles IX.

III. NORICIA is a ſmall Province Weſt from Sudermania, fruitful in Corn and Mines, and its chief Town is Orebro, about 90 Miles Weſt from Stockholm. It has four other Towns, but of little Note.

IV. WESTMANIA, North from Nericia and Weſt from Upland. The chief Town is Aroſia, or Weſteras, on the North ſide of Lake Meler, about 35 Miles South-Weſt from Upſal, and 50 North-Weſt from Stochholm. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, has a ſmall Caſtle, is noted for the Defeat of Chriſtian II. of Denmark by Guſtavus Erickſon, here in 1521, and for making the Crown Hereditary to his Family in 1544.

2. Sala, or Saelburg, about 6 Miles North from Aroſia, and 45 North-Weſt from Stockholm, remarkable for a Silver Mine. Here are ſix or ſeven other little Towns, but don't merit a Deſcription.

V. DALECARLIA, North-Weſt from Weſtmania, and Weſt from Wermeland. 'Tis a large Province, divided into Eaſtern, Weſtern, and South Dalia, and is moſt remarkable for concurring with Guſtavus the Firſt to throw off the Daniſh Yoke. It is bounded by Norway on the Weſt, is all over Mountainous and Woody, has many Villages, but no Towns. The Kings of Sweden were formerly careful to oblige this People, allowed them their own Cuſtoms, which were different from the other Provinces, exacted no Tribute of them but a ſmall Number of Furs, exempted them from having Troops or Garriſons, allowed the Eldeſt Peaſants to adminiſter Juſtice to the reſt, and never enter'd their Country without giving previous Hoſtages for ſecuring the Privileges of the Inhabitants. Stromſtad upon the Coaſt, 36 Miles North from Gottenburg, is noted for an Attack by a Daniſh Squadron upon it in 1717; when the Danes deſigning to burn the Swediſh Batteries and Magazines there, were obliged to retire with Loſs, having ſuffered much from the ſaid Batteries; but 'tis more remarkable for being the Place where Charles XII. King of Sweden's Corpſe was firſt brought, and lay in State after his being killed at Frederickſhal in 1718.

II. GOTHLAND.

'TIS a very large Diviſion, and ſubdivided into Eaſt, Weſt and South, has Dalecarlia on the North, Part of Norway on the North-Weſt, Weſtmania and Nericia on the North-Eaſt, the Baltick on the Eaſt, Schonen on the South, and Part of the Baltick on the North-Weſt.

I. WESTER-GOTHLAND is ſubdivided into Weſter-Gothland Proper, Dalia and Wermeland.

1. WESTER-GOTHLAND PROPER has the Lake Wanen, or Wener, on the North, and Schonen on the South. The chief Town is Gottenburg, near the Entrance of the Baltick or Eaſt Sea, in Lat. 58. Long. 11¾. It has the beſt and moſt frequented Port in theſe Parts, at the Mouth of the River Trolhetta, about 10 Miles South from Bahus, is a ſtrong new-built Town, and has the Caſtle of Elburg in the Neighbourhood. In 1717 the Danes attacked it by Sea, but were ſo gall'd by the Cannon of the Town and Batteries, that they were forced to ſtand off after having burnt the Magazine for Ships with their Bombs, but they block'd it up for ſome time. The Entrance of the Baltick here is above 55 Miles broad. There are ſeveral other Towns in this Diviſion, but of little Note, except Scara, which lies about 85 Miles North-Eaſt from Gottenburg near the Lakes Waner and Vater, was anciently the Seat of the Gothick Kings, is a Biſhop's See, and is noted for the Ruins of ancient Buildings.

2. DALIA has the Government of Bahus on the Weſt, the Lake of Wener on the Eaſt. 2. Stegeborg, a ſmall Town South of the former, with a good Port on the Baltick.

3. Linkoping, which lies South-Weſt from Norkoping, and has a Biſhop, Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Upſal. Here's a ſtately Church built by Herbertus, by ſome reckoned the firſt Apoſtle of Sweden.

The Coaſt is high, but in the Middle there are fine Meadows and fruitful Fields. Their Beer is very good, and reckoned better than that of Denmark.

This Part of the Country was purchaſed by the Swedes, from John Duke of Holſtein about 1330, conquered by the Danes in 1341, and reſtored to the Swedes by Treaty in 1658. Its chief Places are, 1. Lund, or Lunden, the Capital, Lat. 56½. Long. 14. It was formerly very conſiderable, and had 22 Churches, but is now diſmantled, ill inhabited, and has little remarkable, except its Cathedral, and a famous Clock contrived by Gaſpar Bartolinus, which, beſides many extraordinary Motions, has two Horſemen that come out and ſtrike the Hours in a fighting Poſture; then a Door opens, which diſcovers the Virgin Mary on a Throne, with our Saviour in her Arms, and the Wiſe Men worſhipping him, two Trumpets ſounding all the while. It was poſſeſs'd by the Danes in 1709, but quickly abandon'd.

2. Malmoe, a ſmall, neat, ſtrong Town, with a good Harbour on the Sound, 9 Miles South-Weſt from Lunden.

3. Landſcroon, a conſiderable Town, with a good Harbour and a well-fortify'd Citadel, 15 Miles South-Weſt from Lunden, and 12 South-Eaſt from Helſingburg.

4. Helſingburg, formerly a well-fortify'd and rich Town, but now reduced to a Village. The Danes were defeated near this Place by the Swedes in March 1710, and retiring to the Town, where they had their Magazines, were attacked by the Swedes, and went off in their Ships to Elſinore.

II. BLEKING, a ſmall Diſtrict on the Baltick, North-Eaſt from Schonen, and with it ſurrendered by the Danes to Sweden by a Treaty in 1658. It has good Paſturage, and abounds with Black Cattle, which are exported in great Numbers.

The chief Places are, 1. Chriſtianople its Capital, built and fortify'd by Chriſtian IV. of Denmark. It has a good Port and Trade, and lies 18 Miles South-Weſt from Calmar.

2. Carelſcroon, 18 Miles Weſt from Chriſtianople, in a little Iſle, with a good Harbour, well fortify'd, where ordinarily a Squadron of the King's Ships lie ſecure from Storms and Inſults. 'Tis joined to the Continent by a long Bridge.

'Twas retaken by the Danes in 1710, but abandon'd next Month to the Swedes.

III. HALLAND is a ſmall Diſtrict on the Baltick, Weſt from Schonen, and with it reſtor'd to the Swedes in 1658. It abounds with Woods and Lakes, and is not ſo fruitful as the reſt of Schonen.

2. Warburg, 34 Miles North Weſt from Holmſtadt, a ſmall Town on the Bottom of a Gulph, with a Port defended by a ſtrong Caſtle.

IV. BAHUS.

IT was formerly a Part of Norway, but ſurrender'd to the Swedes by Treaty in 1658. This Diſtrict is 100 Miles long from South to North, but not above 15 Miles where broadeſt. 'Tis ſubdivided into Inland and Vickſiden.

2. Maelſtrand, the Capital of Vickſiden, 7 Miles Weſt from Bahus, a ſtrong Town, with a Caſtle on a ſteep Rock, almoſt ſurrounded with the Sea. The Danes took it in 1678, but reſtor'd it by Treaty in 1679.

V. The NORDELLES, or Northerly Provinces, are,

I. GESTRICIA, which has Helſingia on the North, Upland on the South, the Gulph of Bothnia on the Eaſt, and Dalecarlia on the Weſt. It has Mines of Copper and Iron. The chief Town is Geval, which the King of Sweden's Mathematicians place in Lat. 60½, but our Map near 61, Long. 17. 'Tis the Seat of the Governour of theſe Provinces, and has a Royal School. It lies on the Gulph of Bothnia, at the Mouth of a River of the ſame Name, 89 Miles North from Stockholm. Fahtun is a pretty large Town here in the ſame Latitude, 50 Miles Weſt from Geval. Coperberg, another large Town of this Province, lies near a Mountain of the ſame Name, famous for the beſt Copper-Mines in Sweden.

II. HELSINGIA has the Gulph of Bothnia on the Eaſt, Norway on the North-Weſt, Dalecarlia on the Weſt, Geſtricia on the South, and Medelpadia on the North. It abounds with Woods, Lakes and Mountains, and the Inhabitants, who are few, live by Fiſhing and Hunting. Hudwiskwald near the Gulph of Bothnia, 77 Miles North-Weſt from Geval, is the only Place of Note here, a neat City, and ſtands well for Trade.

III. MEDELPADIA, North from Helſingia, has many Lakes and Foreſts, which abound with excellent Maſts. Here are many Caſtles, but no Towns of Note.

IV. ANGERMANIA, North-Eaſt from Medelpadia, has its Name from the River Angerman, which riſes from the Mountains of Norway. The only Town is Hernoſand, on the Gulph of Bothnia, 53 Miles North of Hudwickſwald. It has a convenient Port, and is the Seat of a Superintendent.

V. WEST-BOTHNIA has the Gulph of Bothnia on the Eaſt, Swediſh-Lapland on the Weſt, and Angermania on the South-Weſt. It has many ſmall Rivers, and good Paſtures.

The chief Towns are, 1. Torna, or Torneo, on a River of the ſame Name, which riſes in Lapland and falls here into the Gulph of Bothnia. They have a good Trade in Furs with the Laplanders, Finlanders and Muſcovites. King Charles the Twelfth's Mathematicians place it in Lat. 65½, our Map in 66, near the North End of the Gulph.

2. Lukla, 42 Miles South-Weſt from it, was built in 1622, and the new Town in 1642, but has been twice burnt down ſince.

3. Pitha, or Bithea, on the ſame Coaſt, 21 Miles farther South-Weſt, was built in 1621, has a convenient Port, and good Privileges for Trade.

4. Uma, a conſiderable Town on the Gulph, 83 Miles South-Weſt from Bithea, is the Seat of the Governour of the Province. There are many ſmall Iſlands on the Coaſt. This Country and Eaſt-Bothnia was over-run by the Muſcovites in 1714, when they burnt moſt of its Towns.

VI. JEMPTIA, or JEMPTERLAND, has Angermania on the Eaſt, Medelpadia and Helſingia on the South-Eaſt, and Drontheim in Norway on the Weſt. Reſſunt, a ſmall Town with a Caſtle, 63 Miles Weſt from the Gulph, and 122 South-Weſt from Uma, is the only Place of Note here. This Province was given to the Crown of Sweden by Treaty in 1644.

VI. FINLAND

HAS Lapland on the North, the Gulph of Finland on the South, and reaches from the Gulph of Bothnia on the Weſt, to Muſcovy on the Eaſt, from which, according to ſome, it is ſeparated by the Lakes Onega and Ladoga. Its Extent South and North is about 300 Miles, and much the ſame from Eaſt to Weſt. It had formerly Kings of its own, till conquered by St. Eric of Sweden. 'Tis barren, except on the Coaſt. A hundred thouſand Muſcovites invaded this Country in Winter, at the Death of John King of Sweden, but were ſo entangled by the great Snow, that 600 Natives with their Pattens, by which they walk or rather ſlide upon the Snow, did with great Eaſe rout them, ſo that very few of this great Army eſcaped. 'Tis divided into the Six following Provinces:

I. FINLAND PROPER. It has the Gulph of Bothnia on the Weſt, Eaſtern Bothnia on the North, Nyland on the South, and Carelia on the Eaſt. 'Tis the moſt fruitful Part of the Country, and has ſome Mines of Copper and Iron. Its chief Town is Abo, at the Mouth of the River ver Aurajoki, Lat 61. Long. 40. 31. In 1714 'twas plundered by the Czar's Troops. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, has an Univerſity and a good Harbour, which occaſions ſome Trade. Here are ſeven other Towns, but none of Note. This Country has for moſt part been taken by the Muſcovites in their War with Charles XII. of Sweden.

II. EASTERN BOTHNIA, or CAJANIA, is North of Finland Proper, has many Rivers that fall into the Gulph of Bothnia. The chief Town is Cajenburg, on the North ſide of a great Lake called Ula, Lat. 65. 6. Long. 25 ½. There are four others, but of ſmall Note. This Country was ravaged, and moſt of its Towns burnt by the Muſcovites in 1714.

III. NYLAND, or NEWLAND, ſo called from its being planted by a New Colony, when the Old Inhabitants were drove out. It lies on the Gulph of Finland, and has four or five Towns, the chief of which is Helſinfort, or Helſingar, with a good Harbour on the Gulph of Finland, Lat. 60 ½. Long. 24 ½.

IV. TAVASTHUS lies betwixt Eaſtern Bothnia and Nyland, and has nothing remarkable but Mines of Iron. Its chief Town is of the ſame Name, was formerly called Croneburg, lies 60 Miles North of Helſingar in the middle of Moraſſes, and is defended by a Fort. The great Lake Pejende lies North of it, and has much Iron at the Bottom, which the Inhabitants take out for their Uſe.

V. CARELIA has Finland and Nyland on the Weſt, Muſcovy on the Eaſt, the Gulph of Finland on the South, and Savolax on the Weſt. It has frequently been the Occaſion of War betwixt the Swedes and Muſcovites, but Guſtavus Adolphus reconquered it.

The chief Towns here are, 1. Wyburg, on the Eaſt ſide of a Bay that runs up from the Gulph of Finland, Lat. 61. Long. 29 ½. The Swedes were defeated near it by the Muſcovites in 1703. It is a Biſhop's See, has a good Port, a tolerable Trade, and is defended by a ſtrong Citadel, which the Muſcovites frequently beſieged with numerous Armies in vain, till the preſent War, when they took it from Charles XII. in 1710, and made the Garriſon Priſoners.

2. Petersburg, about 30 Miles Weſt from Notteburg, in Lat. 60. Long. 30. called formerly Schanſterney, a ſtrong Fortreſs and Emporium, which being taken and demoliſhed by the Czar in 1703, he built this Town in ſtead of it, a League nearer the Sea, in a more commodious Situation, and called it Petersburg from his own Name. He has been at great Expence in fortifying the Place, and has encouraged his Nobility, &c. to build Houſes here. His Deſign was to make this Place the Staple of the Trade for his Country, inſtead of Archangel, and intended by Canals betwixt proper Rivers to have formed a Communication betwixt this Place and the Caſpian Sea, to open a Trade betwixt Perſia, &c. and the Baltick. The building of this Place was one of the Cauſes which did moſt provoke the late King of Sweden againſt him, and the Czar's inſiſting upon retaining it, was one of the chief Hindrances of the Peace betwixt him and that Prince. The Czar has omitted nothing towards beautifying and enlarging it, and has planted abundance of Oaks about it; but whether his Deſign to make it the chief Emporium for Trade will ſucceed, muſt be left to Time. 'Tis remarkable for the Death of Alexis, eldeſt Son to the preſent Czar, in 1718, after he was declared uncapable of the Succeſſion becauſe of his Unworthineſs, and that the Czar had ſworn all the Nobility to ſettle the Crown upon his Infant-Son by the preſent Czarina, which has made ſo great a Noiſe in Europe. The Czar brought a great many Artificers of all ſorts hither, from France and other Parts, in 1717, and promis'd them great Encouragement to ſettle here for improving Manufactures and Mechanicks.

North-Weſt from hence lies the Diſtrict of Kexholm (formerly Part of Carelia) with a Town of the ſame Name, aliàs Carelogored, Lat. 61 ½. Long. 30 ½. on the Weſt ſide of Lake Ladoga. 'Tis defended by a ſtrong Citadel, and was taken from the Muſcovites in 1558, but retaken by 'em in 1710, when they found in it a great Train of Artillery and Ammunition. Some Rubies are found in the Neighbourhood. The Inhabitants of the Town and adjacent Country live chiefly by Hunting and Fiſhing. What Corn they have is on the tops of their Mountains.

VI. SAVOLAX, lies North from Carelia and Weſt from Kexholm. 'Tis a Deſert Country, full of Lakes and Woods. The chief Town is Nyſtot, on a Lake, 62 Miles North of Kexholm. 'Twas taken by the Muſcovites, after a ſtout Reſiſtance, in 1714, which made them Maſters of all Finland.

IT lies Eaſt from the Gulph of Finland, and borders on Muſcovy, from which it was conquer'd by Guſtavus Adolphus in 1617, and twice yielded by Treaty ſince. 'Tis barren, but a Frontier againſt the Muſcovites, and affords good Elk-hunting twice per Annum.

The chief Towns are, 1. Notteburg, aliàs Oreſca, Lat. 59 ½. Long. 29. 6. on the rapid and broad River Nieva, or Ny, which comes from Lake Ladoga, and falls into the Eaſt end of the Gulph of Finland. Its Fortifications are very large and ſtrong, which with the River on the Eaſt ſide make it impregnable.

2. Juanogrod, a ſtrong Town on the Borders of Swediſh-Livonia, ſeparated by a ſwift River from Narva. It's ſo encompaſſed with Rocks, that the Tops of the Houſes are only to be ſeen at a diſtance. The Muſcovites were twice repulſed before it in 1700, but took it in 1704.

There are five other Towns here, of which Caporia on the Gulph of Finland, 38 Miles North-Eaſt from Juanogrod, and Jamgorod on the River Laga, 22 Miles South-Eaſt from Juanogrod, are very ſtrong.

VIII. SWEDISH LIVONIA

HAS Courland on the South, the Gulph of Finland on the North, that of Riga on the Weſt, Ingria and Part of Muſcovy on the Eaſt. It is above 200 Miles from South to North, and about 175 from Eaſt to Weſt. The Soil is very fruitful, and in ſome Places yields thirty for one. 'Tis a Plain Country, and the Inhabitants have this particular Way of Cultivation: Wherever there is a Valley they ditch it up, make the Water overflow it to a conſiderable Depth, and let it ſtand three or more Years, during which they ſtock it with Fiſh, and then drain it; by which means the Ground becomes ſoft and fat, and requires but one eaſie Ploughing. The firſt and ſecond Years they ſow Barley, and the third Oats, and never fail of great Crops. They burn Woods, and mightily improve their Ground with the Aſhes. They have Plenty of Cattle, Fowl, Wheat, Barley, Rye, Oats, and Linſeed, of which they export many Ship-Loads, it being reckoned the beſt in Europe. They have alſo Flax, Hemp, Honey, Wax, Tallow, Cattle, Horſes, Butter, Tar, Maſts, Planks, Deals, all ſorts of Timber, Pot-Aſhes, Yarn, Hops, Goat-Skins, &c. The Air is clear and healthy, though the Winter is long. They dry their Corn in the Straw by hot Stoves, which makes it ſo hard that it will keep above twenty Years: for this reaſon the Dutch prefer it to all others, and export it to the Eaſt-Indies. The Sea, Rivers and Lakes abound with Fiſh.

The Country is divided into Letten or Lettonia, and Eſten or Eſthonia. LETTEN is the South Part. Places of Note are,

1. Riga on the Dwina, Lat. 56 ½. Long. 24. 5. 25 Miles North from Mittaw. The River here is three times as broad as the Thames at London, but not very deep. It brings the Commodities of Muſcovy, Poland, Lithuania, Courland, and Semigallia to the City, and is a good Defence to it on the ſide of Poland. On that towards Muſcovy 'tis fortify'd after the modern Way, has a fine new Citadel, is one of the largeſt, beſt built, and moſt populous Towns on the Baltick, and has a great Trade with the Hans-Towns, Engliſh and Dutch, in Corn, Hemp, Flax, Honey, Wax, Horſes, Furs, &c. 'Twas taken from the Poles by Guſtavus Adolphus in 1611, and beſieged by the Poles in 1700, when they were drove from before it by the Swedes.

2. Dunemond, a ſtrong Fortreſs at the Mouth of the Dwina, 10 Miles North on the other ſide, where it falls into the Gulph of Riga, and commands the Entrance of it. The Place is ſurrounded by Moraſſes. 'Twas taken and ruined by the Poles and Saxons in 1700, but ſoon after rebuilt by the Swedes.

3. Hocken-Hauſen, another Fortreſs on the Dwina, 72 Miles South-Eaſt from Riga, taken and deſtroyed by the Poles and Saxons in 1700, but ſoon rebuilt by the Swedes.

4. Wenden, a ſmall Town 48 Miles North-Eaſt from Riga, which ſuffered much by the late Swediſh and Muſcovite Wars.

5. The Iſle of Oeſel in the Gulph of Riga, yielded by the Danes to the Swedes at the Treaty of Bremsbro in 1645. It has a Town and ſtrong Fortreſs called Arnsburg, on the North ſide of the Iſland; and another called Sonneburg on the Weſt ſide. 'Tis 60 Miles long, and 32 where broadeſt.

6. The Iſle of Dagho, North from Oeſel, yielded at the ſame time to the Swedes. It has Dageroot and Paden, two good Caſtles, on the South ſide. 'Tis 30 Miles where longeſt, and 30 where broadeſt.

ESTHONIA is the North part of the Country. Places of Note are,

1. Revel, the Capital of the Diſtrict of Harriland on the Gulph of Finland, 148 Miles North-Eaſt from Riga, Lat. 59. Long. 25. built in 1228 by Waldemar XI. of Denmark, has an excellent and commodious Harbour, and great Trade in the ſame Commodities as Riga. It was one of the Hans-Towns above 300 Years, is ſtrongly fortify'd, has a Citadel built on a Rock, which is ſteep on all ſides but that towards the Town, and is the Seat of a Superintendant. 100000 Muſcovites beſieged it in 1557 for ſix Months in vain. Upon the Approach of the Muſcovites in 1703, the Governour demoliſhed the Suburbs, which were its greateſt Beauty. 'Twas ſurrendered to the Czar in 1710, and he was at great Expence in 1716 to erect Moles for the Security of his Men of War, and employed 15000 Men to build them upon the Ice, being perſuaded that their Weight would ſink them, and make them ſtand firm when the Ice thaw'd; they did ſink according to his Expectation, but were ſoon overturn'd by Stormy Winds and Tempeſtuous Seas.

2. Hopſal, or Hapſal, Capital of the Diſtrict of Wikeſland, 52 Miles South-Weſt from Revel, near the Mouth of the Gulph.

3. Lenal, 15 Miles South-Weſt from Hapſal on the ſame Gulph, a ſmall fortify'd Town with a ſtrong Caſtle.

4. Pernaw, 52 Miles South-Weſt from Revel, a fortify'd Town with a ſtrong Citadel, a good Harbour near the Mouth of the River Pernaw, and conſiderable for its Trade in Corn with the Dutch.

5. Weſenburg, 48 Miles South-Eaſt from Revel. Charles XII. of Sweden, laid up his Magazines here in 1700, when he marched againſt the Muſcovites.

6. Narva, near the Mouth of a River of the ſame Name, which falls into the Gulph of Finland, 120 Miles Eaſt from Revel, Lat. 59, 12. Long. 28 ½. 'Tis a Place of great Importance and Trade with Ruſſia, &c. The Way of Trading to Ruſſia by this Place, was firſt diſcovereſt by Mr. Lane, an Engliſhman, in 1561. On the other ſide the River lies that called Ruſſian Narva, or Juanogrod, already deſcribed. The River here is very ſwift, and has a great Cataract about half a League above the City, whence the Water daſhes with ſo much Violence againſt the Rocks, that it raiſes a Vapour in the Air, which frequently in the Morning when the Sun ſhines forms a Rain-Bow. This Fall obliges the Merchants to unload their Goods above it, which are brought from Poland and Muſcovy. The Town was built in 1213, by Waldemar XI. of Denmark. It was taken by the Muſcovites in 1558, upon which Sigiſmund of Poland forbad trading with it, leſt Arts, Trades, Riches, Ammunition and Cannon ſhould enable the Muſcovites to ſubdue their Neighbours. The Swedes took it in 1581, the Muſcovites retook it afterwards; but Guſtavus Adolphus recovered it in 1617. The Muſcovites betieged it in 1700, when the late Charles XII. of Sweden, then but 17 Years old, attack'd and defeated them, kill'd 20000 on the ſpot, took all their Artillery, Ammunition and Baggage, with a great many Priſoners. This being his firſt Action, filled Europe with great Expectations from him, which he afterwards diſappointed by his Precipitancy. In 1702, the Muſcovites ſurpriſed the Suburbs, killed and carry'd of many of the Inhabitants and of the Garriſon that ſally'd out upon them. In 1704 the Czar took it by Storm, cut off moſt of the Inhabitants and Garriſon, and expoſed the Town to Plunder for three Days, but gave Orders to ſpare the Engliſh and Dutch Warehouſes. The Trade of this Place is much in the ſame Commodities with Revel and Riga.

7. Dorpt, or Juanogorod, on the River Emleck or Embeck, on the South ſide of the Lake Peypus, 63 Miles South-Weſt from Narva, a ſmall ancient Town with a ſtrong Caſtle, famous for the Sieges it has ſuſtained againſt the Teutonick Knights, Muſcovites and Swedes. The latter took it in 1625, and Guſtavus Adolphus founded an Univerſity here in 1632.

The Chief ISLANDS on the Coaſt of SWEDEN.

1. ALAND or Ahland, 36 Miles Eaſt from Upland, to which Province it belongs. It lies near the Mouth of the Gulph of Bothnia, is 120 Miles long, and 7 broad, and much indented by the Sea. 'Tis noted for being the Place appointed for a Treaty of Peace betwixt the late Charles XII. of Sweden and the Northern Allies, which held a long time; the Negotiations were kept ſecret, but they were interrupted by the Death of the King of Sweden in 1718.

2. Gothland, in Lat. 57 ½. Long. 18. 60 Miles Eaſt from the Coaſt of Oſtrogothland; 'tis 60 Miles long and 20 broad. The Ruſſian Knights ſold it to the Danes in 1408. It was yielded to the Swedes by Treaty in 1645; has good Paſture for Cattle, of which they tranſport great Numbers. The chief Town is Wisby, on the North ſide of the Iſland, famous for its Antiquity and excellent Sea-Laws, which were obſerved by moſt Towns on the Baltick. Sea-Charts are ſaid to have been made here firſt. It had formerly a conſiderable Trade, which is now decay'd.

3. Huen, betwixt Denmark and Schonen, about 3 Miles Weſt from the latter. 'Tis about 7 Miles round, and one of the moſt pleaſant and fruitful Places that is to be ſeen. It produces Plenty of Corn, good Fruit, and all ſorts of Cattle, and yields the King annually about 800 Crowns. Frederick II. of Denmark gave it to Tycho Brahé, the famous Aſtronomer, for Life, and allowed him a Sum of Money, and 2000 Crowns per Annum to build him an Houſe and Obſervatory for obſerving the Courſe of the Stars. He accordingly built a fine Caſtle, which he called Uraniberg in the middle of the Iſland, with commodious Apartments, a Printing-Houſe, a Paper Mill, Laboratories for Chymiſtry, and in ſhort made it a moſt charming Place. Weſt of it he built a Houſe called Stellenburg, with all Conveniencies for Aſtronomical Obſervations; and where King James VI. of Scotland made him a Viſit, when he went to Denmark for his Queen. But the Court of Denmark at laſt turned Enemies to this Great Man, ſo that he was obliged to leave the Place, and was invited to Prague by the Emperor Rodolph II. who entertained him there till 1061, when he dy'd. Chriſtian IV. of Denmark gave thoſe fine Buildings to a Miſtreſs of his, who deſtroy'd them, ſo that there is ſcarce any Remains of them left. The Swedes have been in Poſſeſſion of this Iſland by Treaty ſince 1658.

X. SWEDISH-LAPLAND,

HAS Weſt-Bothnia on the Eaſt, Norway-Lapland on the North, Muſcovite Lapland on the Eaſt and North-Eaſt, and Norway on the Weſt. It lies on both ſides the Polar Circle, but Authors are not agreed about its Extent. 'Tis divided into ſix Juriſdictions or Countries, called Marks, viz. Uma, Anguermand, Itha, Lula, Torna, and Kemi, ſo nam'd from thoſe Towns in Weſt Bothnia already mention'd, which were formerly the Capitals of thoſe Diſtricts. Here is no conſiderable Town, but only a few Villages not worth deſcribing. The Dofrine Mountains divide it from Norway, and on the top have either barren Rocks, or are continually covered with Snow and Sand.

The Air is clear and healthful for moſt part, but they have frequent Tempeſts of Wind, which blow up Trees by the Roots; ſo that when the People are abroad in ſuch Storms, they either lie down flat on the Ground or ſhelter themſelves in the Hollows of Rocks. In the moſt Northerly Parts they have continual Day for a Month in the Summer, and a Night of the ſame Length in Winter, when the Froſt and Snow is exceſſive.

The Sun continuing ſo long above the Horizon in Summer, ſpeedily ripens their Product, which in the South Parts is chiefly Pot-Herbs, excellent Berries of divers ſorts, ſeveral kinds of Pears, Apples, Cherries and Flowers. Here is alſo divers ſorts of Moſs and Shrubs like our Juniper and Bramble.

Their Beaſts are Stags, Bears, Wolves, Lynxes, Foxes of ſeveral Colours, Elks, Bevers, Otters, Ermins, Martens, Haws, Glittens, and Rain-Deer of a peculiar Sort, both Wild and Tame. They are exceeding uſeful to the Natives both for Carriage and Food. The Milk of the Females is very nouriſhing and fat, and makes good Cheeſe. Here is alſo a good ſort of Hunting-Dogs of a bright Red Colour, whoſe Tails turn up like thoſe of our Pigs, and their Ears ſtand upright like thoſe of Wolves.

Their Birds, beſides what are common to us, are, 1. The Kniper, or a ſort of Snipe, with a black Head, Back and Wings, a white Breaſt and Belly, a red long Bill ſet with Teeth, and red ſhort Feet; 2. The Loom, which is never ſeen on the Ground, but always in the Air or Water; 3. Partridges, white as Snow in Winter, with rough Feet like thoſe of a Hare, and a ſort of Wool inſtead of Feathers.

Here are ſeveral Mines of Silver, Copper, and Iron. The Silver-Mines have been diſcovered ſince 1635, but are of little Uſe for want of Wood, or becauſe they lie in inacceſſible Places. 'Tis ſuppoſed the Natives know of rich ones, but won't diſcover them, leſt they ſhould be forced to work them. Charles the Eleventh's Mathematicians ſaw ſome of thoſe Mines in the Mark of Torna, but found that the Charge of Working, and particularly the Carriage, becauſe of the dangerous Cataracts in the Rivers, would not quit Coſt.

Here are abundance of Stones impreſſed with the Shapes of Animals, Trees, &c. and the Natives worſhip them as Idols. Here are alſo found Amethyſts, Topazes, and Pearl, but none of a good Colour.

Their Rivers and Lakes are numerous, and abound with Fiſh, and ſome of the former are of conſiderable Breadth, but made unnavigable by Cataracts; and when the Snow melts they overflow their Banks. They all come from the Mountains of Norway, and fall into the Gulph of Bothnia.

The Inhabitants are of a low Stature, and ſeldom exceed four Foot and an half. Moſt of them ſtoop, which is ſuppoſed to proceed from the Lowneſs of their Cottages. Their Complexion is ſwarthy, which is aſcribed to their ſmoaky Huts. They have flat Faces, broad, low Noſes, hollow, blear'd Eyes, wide Mouths, black, ſtraight, thin Hair, broad Breaſts, ſlender Waiſts, and ſmall Legs. They are ſwift, and ſo ſtrong, that a Norwegian is not able to bend their Bows above one half. They live to a good Age in their own Country, but ſeldom live long in milder Climates. They are very cowardly, and therefore never employed by the Swedes in their Wars. They are charitable to the Poor, and hoſpitable to Strangers, but inclined to cheat in Commerce. Thoſe who dwell on the Mountains live on the Fleſh and Milk of their Rain-Deer, and of Cows and Sheep they buy from Norway, which they kill againſt Winter; they dry their Fleſh by Cold, as others do by Heat.

Thoſe who dwell in the Woods and Valleys, feed on Veniſon and Fiſh. They have no Bread nor Salt, but ſometimes pound their Fiſh into Meal, and for Salt uſe the inner Rind of Pine-Trees boiled. They have no Drink but Water, or the Broth of Fiſh and Fleſh boiled together; and in Winter they drink their Water warm.

In Summer they wear a cloſe Garment of coarſe Wool without Dying, which reaches to their Mid-Leg and is girt about their Middle. The Richer ſort affect to have them of a Red Colour, and on their Girdles they wear Braſs Rings or Chains, with a Knife, and a Pouch for their Steel, Flint, Matches, Tobacco, &c. Their Caps are made of the Skins of the Bird Loom with the Feathers on; and at Night in Summer they cover their Faces with a coarſe Blanket, becauſe of the Gnats.

In Winter their Cloaths are of Rain-Deer-Skins with the Hair inwards; and their Caps, Boots, Gloves and Shoes are of the ſame. The Soles are ſew'd at bottom, ſo as the Hair of one ſide lies different from the other, becauſe they would otherwiſe be too ſlippery. The Womens Apparel differs little from the Mens, and neither have any Linnen. The Females hang Knives, Rings, Needle-Caſes, and other Toys to their Girdles, ſometimes to the Value of 20 Pound-Weight. They make their own and the Mens Cloaths, and ſew them with Thread made of the Nerves of Rain-Deer.

They wandered about, and had no fix'd Habitation, till Charles IX. aſſigned them Abodes in 1602; but they ſtill remove from place to place within their own Limits, as they find moſt convenient for Paſture and Fiſhing.

Their Huts are made of Rafters joined together, and covered with Turf, coarſe Cloth, or the Branches and Bark of Pines; and in ſome Places they build them on Trees, to prevent their being overwhelmed by the Snow, or deſtroyed by Wild Beaſts. They are very dextrous Markſmen and Hunters, kill the ſmall Beaſts with their Arrows, and the large with Spears or Fire-Arms. Thoſe which bear Fur, they kill with blunt Darts, to prevent ſpoiling their Skins; and the Ermins they catch in Traps. They dig Pits for Bears and other large Wild Beaſts. They eſteem Bears-Fleſh the beſt of Meat, and he that kills one by Hunting is honoured more than the reſt at the Feaſt; and when they bring home a Bear, their Wives meet them, chew Elder Bark, and ſpit in their Faces as a Mark of Reſpect and Gratitude. In Winter they make uſe of Skates, one of which is uſually as long as themſelves, and the other about a Foot ſhorter, both covered with Skins of Rain-Deer, and the Hair ſo laid as to turn againſt the Snow, which prevents their falling backwards. They have alſo long Poles, with a round piece of Wood at the End of them, to prevent their piercing too deep into the Snow; and in this manner they not only travel over the Snow with great Eaſe, but climb ſteep Mountains, and ſlide down again in a ſurprizing manner.

They make all their own Moveables, and particularly their Fiſhing-Boats. They faſten their Boards with Twigs, or the Nerves of Rain-Deer, and caulk them with Moſs. They make them ſix Yards long, one half broad, and ſometimes have four Oars. They make alſo a peculiar ſort of Sledges, in which they are drawn over the Snow by Rain-Deer. They are ſhaped much like Boats with a broad Stern; the Traveller is ty'd in them almoſt like a Child in a Cradle, with Moſs under and Seal-Skins above him. He governs the Rain-Deer by a ſort of Bridle with one Hand, and has a Stick in the other to balance his Sledge, or remove any thing that lies in the Way. They are pretty curious in the Trappings of their Rain-Deer, and hang them with Bells, which they fancy is very pleaſing to thoſe Creatures; and they always whiſper ſomething in their Ears when they begin a Journey.

Their RELIGION.

THEY were generally Pagans till Guſtavus Erickſon ſent Preachers among them; and his Example was followed by Guſtavus Adolphus, who ordered the Scriptures, &c. to be tranſlated into their Language, planted Schools, and bred up Preachers of their own Country among them; but ſtill they have too much of their old Pagan Superſtition, and ſome of them divide their Worſhip betwixt God and their Idols. They are much addicted to Magic, in which they make uſe of a Drum and other Inſtruments. They pretend alſo to make Winds favourable or croſs to Mariners; and to annoy their Enemies by ſending out Imps under the Form of Flies; but are much reſtrained in thoſe Impieties of late, by the Swediſh Government.

Their LANGUAGE,

IS a Mixture of the Swediſh, Norwegian, and Finniſh, but has moſt of the latter.

Their COURTSHIP and MARRIAGES.

THEIR Way of Courtſhip and Marriage is very whimſical: The young Men muſt not enter the Houſes of their Sweethearts without Leave of the Father or other Relations, and muſt ſtand at the Door till that be obtained by Bribes; but if they break Promiſe, the Suitors

Suitors recover all their Presents. The Bride pretends so much Reluctancy, that she must be dragged to Church; and the Bridgroom must serve her Father a Year before he carry off his Wife and her Rain-Deer, which is all her Portion, and they that have most are reckoned the greatest Fortunes. They are not very prolifick, take a good Draught of Whales Fat as soon as deliver'd, and go about their Work in four or five Days after. The Childrens Cradles are of a hollow Piece of Timber, in form of a Boat. The Child has no Bedcloaths, but soft Moss laid under it, and the Skin of a young Rain-Deer over it; and the Women, when they travel, carry the Child in the Cradle at their Backs. The Boys are taught from their Infancy to shoot at a Mark with their Arrows, and are allowed no Breakfast till they hit the Mark, which makes them dextrous Bow-Men.

Their DISTEMPERS.

THE ordinary Distempers of the Inhabitants are Pleurisies, Inflammations of the Lungs, and Giddiness of the Head. They have no Physicians nor Surgeons; and for an universal Medecine they use Angelica boiled in the Whey of Rain-Deer's Milk. For Pains in the Back they anoint with Serpents Grease. For Pains in the Limbs they apply burning Chips, till they raise Blisters. To Wounds they apply Rosin; and when their Limbs are benummed with Cold, they thrust a red-hot Iron into a Cheese of Rain-Deers Milk, and anoint the Part affected with the Fat that drops from the Cheese, and rarely fail of Success. They boil this Cheese in Milk for a Cough, and all other Distempers of the Breast and Lungs.

They tie a Brass Ring to the Right Arm of Persons that die, which, they think will preserve the Living from any Harm from the Ghosts of the Dead. They put a Flint and Steel in the Coffin, that the Deceased may strike Light in the other World; and a Hatchet, that they may hew their Way thro' Woods: And they always lay Bows, Arrows, and Victuals in the Coffin, and sacrifice some Rain-Deer annually to the Memory of the Rich.

Their GOVERNMENT.

THEY had Kings of their own, says Paulus Jovius, till 1277, when Magnus Ladustasz conquered them. They have now three Governors sent by the Court of Sweden to administer Justice in their several Districts. Their Tribute to the Crown is two Rixdollars per Annum on such an Allotment of Land, and a certain Proportion of Rain-Deer, Furs, and dry'd Fish. They also pay a Tribute to the Czar and King of Denmark, for Liberty to hunt in their Dominions.

They have certain Fairs in the Year, which they keep upon the Ice, when they barter Ermins and other Furs, with Cloaths of their own making, dry'd Pike and Rain-Deer's Cheese for Woollen and Linnen-Cloth, Copper, Brass, Salt, Ox-Hides, Needles, Knives, Aquavitæ, Tobacco, Black Cattle, and Sheep.

The TRADE of SWEDEN in general.

THEIR Materials for Commerce may easily be collected from what's said of the Product of the several Provinces. But the Trade of Export chiefly consists in Copper, Brass, Iron, Steel, Latten, Wire, Guns of Iron and Brass, Masts, Planks, Oak, Deal-Boards, Wooden Ware, Furs, Hemp, Tallow, Hides of Bucks, Goats and Oxen, and sometimes Malt, Barley, Silver, Honey and Wax. The Ignorance and Lazineſs of the Inhabitants occasioned their Trade to be managed formerly by Strangers, and particularly by the Hans-Towns in the Baltick, so that their Ore was carried to Dantzick, &c. and there forg'd into Bars. Most of their Manufactures were set up by some Mechanicks, and others, that were driven from the Netherlands by the Duke of Alva's Persecution. And the Dutch, after their Revolt from Spain, got a Share of the Swedish Trade. In time of War the English used formerly to transport most of their Commodities, but in Peace they transported them on their own Bottoms. They are not able to keep their Iron-Works going without Credit from abroad: Hence the English and others used to pay them in Winter for the Iron they were to receive in Summer; and were it not for this, Strangers could scarce live among them, for they envy their thriving, and treat them uncivilly. This appears by an Act made in 1687, that no Foreign Merchant should have Liberty to trade there above two Months per Annum, except they would be Burghers. The Third Part of every Foreign Merchant's Estate is, when he dies, seized for the King, which hinders them from Marrying, or Settling there; and sometimes they demand a Sixth Part of the Estates which Foreigners have got there, when they leave the Country, and they arrest their Effects till it be paid. These Things do very much hinder the Swedish Trade, and oblige Foreign Princes and States to prevent those Impositions upon their Subjects by Treaties, &c.

Their Trade of Import is Salt in great Quantities, without which they can't subsist: This is chiefly brought from Portugal. From England they have Woollen Manufactures, Tobacco, Coals, Pewter, Lead, Sugar, Spices, &c. This was one of their most beneficial Trades, because we paid but one Third, or at most one Half, in Goods, and the rest in Money; but of late they make coarse Cloth of their own, to supply their Army, &c. and have laid such Taxes on ours as amounts almost to a Prohibition. They have store of Herrings from Scotland, as they had formerly Wool. They have Wine, Brandy, and Fineries from France, which supply their Vanity and Luxury, but occasion little Vent for their own Commodities.

Their HISTORY.

JOHANNES MAGNUS and others say, they had Kings 3000 Years before Christ; but Puffendorf owns their Antiquity to be fabulous, and founded on nothing but old Ballads and Legends; so that the first Piece of their probable History is no older than the Year of Christ 829, when the Emperor Ludovicus Probus sent Ansgarius, a Monk of Corbi, to preach the Gospel here; but it was long after, before Christianity could be establish'd. We cannot insist on the particular Reigns of their Kings, but shall only observe, that this Country was some time divided into several Kingdoms. The Swedes and the Goths having each Kings of their own, and sometime after they were united, they quarrelled about the Successor. They had also frequent Wars with the Danes about Superiority; wherein sometimes the one, and sometimes the other, had the Advantage.

One of the most remarkable Pieces of their History is, their making Application to Margaret Queen of Denmark for Assistance against their own King Albert's Tyranny. She consented, on condition that they would chuse her for Queen; which they did, and she having subdued King Albert, united the three Northern Crowns by the famous Treaty of Calmar, on the following Articles. 1. That for all time coming, Denmark, Sweden, and Norway should have the same King or Queen, to be Elected by all the three, and the Election to be in each by turns, and spend the Revenues of each within it self, and for its particular Advantage. 3. That each of them should have for ever their own Senate, Laws and Privileges, and that none should be advanced to any Post in Church or State in any of the three Kingdoms, but Natives of the same.

The Swedes thought they had secured themselves by those Limitations, but soon found their Mistake; for Denmark being the Center of the Union, and at that time the more powerful Nation, Margaret and her Successors favoured the Danes, and oppressed the Swedes, which occasioned a War betwixt those Nations for above 100 Years, till they were at last freed from the Danish Yoke by Gustavus Ericson, whom they crown'd King in 1528. This great Prince did likewise abolish Popery, and brought in Luther's Reformation.

The greatest Figure that ever this Nation made, was in the Reign of the famous Gustavus Adolphus, who came to the Crown in 1617, upon the Exclusion of King Sigismund, and all Popish Successors. The great Actions which this mighty Prince performed in Defence of his own Country, and of the oppressed Protestants in Germany, have rank'd him among the greatest Heroes. The Curious may have a particular Account of them in Puffendorf, and in the History of the Revolutions of Sweden. After his Death at the Battle of Lutzen in 1632, his Daughter Christiana, then but six Years of Age, was declared Queen. She was very successful by her Generals against the Imperialists, and at last concluded the War by the famous Treaty of Munster in 1648. Being afterwards seduced by some Jesuits, she surrendered the Crown in 1654 to her Nephew Charles Gustavus, of the Family of Deux Ponts. He was a brave and successful Prince, subdued Poland in three Months time, and was declared King of that Nation; but they soon after revolted, because they feared he would change their Religion and abridge their Privileges. He was also successful against the Danes, and in short so formidable, that the English and Dutch declared against him if he would not make Peace with Denmark, &c. which with the Defeat of his Troops in the Isle of Fuhnen by the Danes and their Confederates, perplex'd him so much, that he called an Assembly of the States at Gottenburg for Consultation, during which he dy'd of a Feaver in 1666.

His Son Charles XI. succeeded at five Years of Age, and the States concluded an honourable Peace with their Confederate Enemies. In 1674 this King entered into the Triple Alliance with England and Holland, to preserve the Netherlands against the French, but soon after took Part with the French; which occasioned a War betwixt him, the Elector of Brandenburg, the Duke of Lunenburg, and the Danes, in which sometimes the one, sometimes the other had the Advantage; but the said War, as well as that betwixt the French and the House of Austria, &c. was concluded by the Treaty of Nimeguen in 1678 and 1679, when the Swedes had restored to them all that the Elector of Brandenburg and others had taken from them in Germany. After this Treaty his Ministers put him upon a Design of making himself Absolute, which was effected by a servile Compliance of the States, who in 1683 absolved him from that Article of his Coronation-Oath, whereby he was obliged to govern according to Law, and declared that he was not tied to the Laws then in being, but that he might alter the same, and make what others he thought fit. The Clergy, Burghers and Peasants comply'd the more willingly with this Clause, to humble the imperious Nobility; and many of them did readily comply for the sake of Court Employments, to support their Grandeur. In 1696, he profered his Mediation for concluding the War betwixt the French and the Confederates by the Treaty of Reswick in 1696, and dy'd in 1697.

His Son Charles XII. the late King of Sweden, succeeded him, and was declared of Age, tho' then but fifteen Years old. The Czar of Muscovy, and the Kings of Poland and Denmark, entered into an Alliance against him; but the English and Dutch assisting him with their Fleets, the King of Denmark was oblig'd to make Peace by the Treaty of Travendahl. The King of Sweden was likewise very successful at first against the Czar and the King of Poland; but advancing too far into the Ukrain, was routed by the Muscovites, and fled into Turky, where after some Years stay he returned to Pomerania, from whence he was totally drove out, and of all his Dominions in Germany, by the Kings of Prussia, Denmark, &c. but still continued the War against the Danes, without any certain Peace with the rest, and was very injurious to the Trade of England and Holland. Some of his Ministers engaged in a Plot with the English Jacobites, for which one of them was taken up here, and another in Holland. He invaded Norway in 1718, and was killed by a Shot from Frederickshall in December 1718. His Sister Ulrica, marry'd to the Prince of Hesse Cassel, succeeded, and has restor'd the People their Liberty.

The PEOPLE.

PUFFENDORF their Countryman says, they are grave and reserved, which, if not qualify'd by Conversation with Strangers, often degenerates into Mistrustfulness. He says, they are well versed in Dissimulation, are inclinable to make a Figure, and live beyond their Income, which ruines their Families. They had no Hereditary Titles of Honour, till the time of Eric XIV. nor any Secular Dignity besides Miles a Knight, and Militaris a Gentleman, but what was meerly Officiary, as Selden observes in his Titles of Honour; till the said Eric, in 1561, advanced a few Families to the Hereditary Titles of Earls and Barons. Their Order of Knighthood is that of the Sword, which was formerly formerly conferred with great Ceremony, when they had a Belt, Sword and Shield, with Fiefs given them; and they were obliged by Oath to defend Chriſtianity, their King and Country, and to protect Orphans, Virgins, Widows, and the Poor.

The NOBILITY and GENTRY are of a Martial Temper, Civil, love Parade, Magnificent Houſes and Equipage, and numerous Trains of Servants. They are expenſive in their Apparel and Treats at Marriages, Baptiſms, Burials, &c. but otherwiſe frugal in Houſe-keeping. They are loyal to their Prince, capable enough of the Fatigues of War, but have no great Genius for Stratagems; nor did they know much of Military Diſcipline, till improv'd in it by the Scots Officers that ſerv'd under Guſtavus Adolphus. Such as are employ'd in Affairs of State are ready enough to give Application, but their Abilities that Way ſeem to be owing more to Experience, than to Study or their natural Genius. They never allow their Children to ſtudy Law, Phyſick, or any Trade, becauſe they think it below their Birth; but they ſubmit to the loweſt Offices in Armies abroad, to gain Experience in War.

The COMMON PEOPLE are generally of a ſtrong Conſtitution, which with their hard Education, coarſe Fare, Apparel and Lodging, makes them fit for Soldiers. But they are much diſpirited of late by their Poverty, and don't ſeem qualify'd for ſuch Manufactures as require Ingenuity and Induſtry; nor have they Patience to learn Arts and Sciences to any Perfection, becauſe they are ſo ſelf-conceited, that they are apt to think themſelves Maſters before they get half way.

The PEASANTS are for moſt part ſo very poor, that they make their own Cloaths, Utenſils of Husbandry, &c. the beſt Way they can; and to keep them to this Frugality, not above one Taylor, or other Mechanick, is allowed in a Pariſh, tho' ſome of them are above 20 Miles in Extent. Their Houſes are for moſt part of Wood, and low, becauſe of their frequent high Winds. Their Apparel in Winter is generally Sheep Skins, and in Summer Coarſe Cloth; but the Gentry affect the French Dreſs, and their Houſes are for moſt part of Stone or Brick, and all of them make uſe of Stoves in Winter.

The WOMEN are commonly fair, and many of them handſome. They generally value themſelves, as more witty and polite than thoſe of other Northern Countries.

MARRIAGES are uſually made here by Order of the Parents, and moſt part for Intereſt; ſo that they are not much troubled with Extravagancies of Love. Thoſe of Quality ſeldom marry till thirty Years old, becauſe they can't live according to their Rank till the Death of their Parents, or without Publick Employments. Couſin-Germans are not allowed to marry without the King's Conſent, which is ſeldom refuſed. The Women here are prolifick, and ſeldom diſpute their Husbands Commands; tho' the meaner ſort are perfect Drudges, and put to plow, threſh, bear Burthens, and row in Boats, &c.

Their LANGUAGE is a mix'd Dialect of the ancient Gothic and Teutonic; but ſo very rough, that they ſeldom write any thing in it; and the Gentry and Citizens affect to ſpeak High-Dutch and French. The Finlanders have a Gibberiſh of their own, which ſo ſpoils their Organs of Speech for any other Language, that ſuch of them as are able and willing, ſend their Children when young to learn other Languages; for if they exceed fourteen Years of Age, they are uncapable of learning any but their own.

The KING's TITLES are,

KING of Sweden, of the Goths and Vandals; Great Prince of Finland; Duke of Schonen, Eſthen, Liefland, Carelia, Ingria, Bremen, Verden, Stetin, Pomeren, Caſſuben and Sclavonia; Prince of Rugen, Lord of Ingermanland and Wiſmar, Prince Palatine of the Rhine, Duke of Deux-ponts, Bavaria, Cleves, Bergen, &c.

His REVENUE is reckoned near a Million Sterling per Annum, and is raiſed from the Crown-Lands, Cuſtoms, Poll-Money, Copper, Iron, and Silver Mines, Law-Suits, &c. Each Peaſant above 16, and under 60 Years old, pays 12 d. per Annum, and for a certain Quantity of Ground they are obliged to furniſh Cloaths for a Soldier. Charles XI. ſettled the Number of Horſemen that the Nobles and Gentry are to provide, and ordered each Farm of 60 l. per Annum to maintain a Foot-Soldier, and to furniſh him with a Houſe, to maintain a Cow thro' the Year, and to plow, ſow, and reap for him, and when he dies muſt provide another in his Room. The Officers of Horſe and Foot have Houſes and Lands appointed by the King for their Pay.

Tho' the King be abſolute, he ſtill keeps up the Shadow of the ancient States, whoſe Buſineſs is only to ratify what he propoſes. The Nobility and Gentry are repreſented by one of each Family, which make up about 1000. The Colonels, Lieutenant-Colonels, Majors, and a Captain of each Regiment are Members of this Aſſembly, as are alſo the Biſhops and Superintendants; 200 are ſent from the Body of the Clergy, 150 from the Boroughs, and 250 from the Peaſants.

Their LEARNING and RELIGION.

THEIR ancient Learning conſiſted moſtly in Runic Poeſy, or Ballads. Its chief Beauty was a ſort of jingling Rhimes; but it fell into Diſgrace, becauſe it was made uſe of for Charms, and by this means the Knowledge of their Antiquities is in a great meaſure loſt; yet their beſt Performances are of this ſort, of which Olaus, Rudbeck, and Scheffer, whoſe Works have been made uſe of in this Account, have left ſome Specimens. They have four Univerſities, viz. 1. Upſal, which is the chief, and was founded in 1476; 2. That of Stockholm; 3. That at Abo in Finland; and, 4. That of Lunden in Schonen. 'Tis obſerved, that the Swedes are more given to collect and tranſlate, than to write Original Pieces, and that their Clergy are but indifferently verſed in Eccleſiaſtical Antiquities and Controverſies of Religion. The Ruſticks have ſtill a ſort of Almanacks in Runic Characters, engrav'd on their Clubs, which ſhew them the Full and Change of the Moon, the Leap-Year, Golden Number, and Dominical Letter.

Their RELIGION is the Augsburg Confeſſion, which was introduced in 1529. The Archbiſhops and Biſhops have little more Authority than the Name, and a bare Shew of Superiority over the Superintendents. They have ten Biſhops, who are confined to their own Buſineſs, and don't meddle with Secular Affairs, only they are allowed to come to the Aſſembly of the States. Their Salaries are moderate, the Archbiſhop of Upſal having only 400 l. per Annum. There are ſeven or eight Superintendents, who differ only from the Biſhops in Name. The Number of Churches here and in Finland are about 2000, and over every Ten there is a Rural Dean. The King is Patron of moſt of the Churches, has two Thirds of the Tithes, and allows the Clergy the other Third. He names the Archbiſhop, and is as abſolute in the Church, as in the State. They affect much of the Popiſh Gawdry in their Churches, and make uſe of the Old Stile in all their Publick Records.

MUSCOVY, its Extent.

WE muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt the Empire of Muſcovy and the Country properly ſo called. The Empire, according to the Map, and Account of Ysbrand Ides, the Czar's Ambaſſador to China in 1692, extends from the Gulph of Livonia or Riga on the Weſt, to the Sea of Japan or Corea on the Eaſt, viz. the whole Length almoſt of the North Parts of Europe and Aſia from Weſt to Eaſt, and from the Euxine and Caſpian Seas on the South, to the Icy or Great Tartarian Ocean on the North, and to the Frontiers of China on the South-Eaſt; ſo that according to that Map the Length of the Empire is about 4300 Miles from Weſt to Eaſt, and the Breadth from South to North about 1800.

What we are now to conſider is Muſcovy in Europe, which reaches from the Gulph of Riga on the Weſt, to the Rivers Irtis and Oby, or Muſcovite Tartary on the Eaſt; viz. from Long. Eaſt from London 30, to 52, which is 840 Miles; and from the Euxine and Caſpian Seas on the South, in Lat. 64, to the fartheſt known Parts of Nova Zembla on the North in Lat. 80, which is 960 Miles.

Its NAME.

IT was a great Part of the ancient Sarmatia Europea. The preſent Name is from the Dutchy and City of Moſco; and that is derived by ſome from the Poſterity of Moſoc, or Moſec, the Son of Japhet, who are thought to have peopled this Country. 'Tis alſo called White Ruſſia, from the White Caps worn by the Inhabitants, and to diſtinguiſh it from Red Ruſſia belonging to Poland. Some derive the Name Ruſſia from one of their Princes called Ruſſus; others from Roſſia, which ſignifies Diſperſion, becauſe they liv'd anciently ſcattered up and down without any certain Form of Government. Bochart (Phaleg, Lib. 3. Cap. 13.) thinks, that both Names are derived from Rhos and Meſech, mentioned Ezech. Cap. 38. Ver. 2. which ſeems to be ſupported by the Authority of Strabo, Mela, and the Nubian Geographers; but the Muſcovites derive themſelves from the ancient Greeks.

The AIR and SOIL

DIFFER much according to the Situation and Climate; for this Country extends from the ſeventh Climate of Hours to almoſt the fourth Climate of Months; ſo that the longeſt Day in the moſt Northerly Parts of Nova Zembla is four Months, and in the moſt Southerly Parts of Muſcovy is about 15 Hours and ½.

The Country in General abounds with Foreſts, Marſhes, Lakes and Pools, which hinders its being populous, eſpecially towards the North, where they have nine or ten Months Froſt and Snow, ſo that Corn there ſeldom comes to Perfection; but in the South Parts they have Plenty of Corn, with which they furniſh Lapland and Sweden, and the Dutch tranſport a great deal. The Heat is exceſſive in Summer, eſpecially where reflected by ſandy Ground; ſo that they ſow in the End of May, and reap in July. They are peſtered with Gnats and other Inſects; and the Heat ſometimes burns up their Corn and Graſs. Fruits, Herbs, and Roots of ſudden Growth, are very good here, as alſo all ſorts of Berries, Gourds and Melons; ſome of the latter weigh 40 Pound, and eat well. In the South Parts, about Aſtracan, &c. they have a ſort of Gourd and Melon call'd a Lamb, ſuppoſed to be an Animal Plant. It grows on a Stalk, eats up or withers all the Graſs within its Reach, after which the Stalk withers, and the Fruit ripens. The outer Rind is covered with a kind of Hair, or ſoft frizling Wool, which they uſe inſtead of Fur. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſaw ſome of them, and were informed by the Natives, that no Beaſt but the Wolf will eat this Melon, therefore they uſe them as Baits to catch them. Here are Apples, Pears, Plums, and Cherries, but are never quite ripe, nor can they be preſerv'd. Their Great Duke Michael Federowitz, who began his Reign in 1613, was the firſt who encouraged the Planting of Flowers, ſweet Herbs, Sallading and Aſparagus, &c. Here are no Seaſons but Winter and Summer, ſo that Strangers wonder to ſee the Ground, which was cover'd with Ice and Snow a few Days before, ſpread all of a ſudden with Plants and Graſs.

The Winter is ſo very ſevere, that the Rain freezes as it falls; and the Froſt makes long and deep Cleſts in the Earth as exceſſive Heats do elſewhere. Travellers are many times frozen to Death in their Sleds or as they walk, and they commonly rub their Noſes and Ears with Snow as the beſt Way to prevent their freezing, and wrap themſelves up with Furs in their Sleds, which are drawn by Rain-Deer, or Dogs bred to it; ſo that they travel very ſwiftly over the Snow. Hiſtory ſays, that the Turks having Invaded this Country, during Winter, in 1598, with 70000 Men, 40000 of 'em were deſtroy'd by the Cold thro' their Ignorance of the Methods to prevent it. The Natives line their Houſes with Fur, and make uſe of Stoves in this Seaſon. They pile their Dead up in Heaps then, becauſe the Froſt prevents their Putrefaction, and they bury them about the Beginning of April, when the Ground is capable of being dug; and if they bury them ſooner, they thaw the Ground with great Fires of Wood for ſome Time before.

Their Foreſts conſiſt moſt of Firs and Birch, and their Trees are reckon'd the talleſt and fitteſt for Maſts of any in the World; but the Natives are ſo ignorant and lazy, that they neither improve their Timber, nor clear their Country as they might do; ſo that there's more of the Hercynian Foreſt, which overſpread the North, to be ſeen here than any where elſe.

Their BEASTS.

THE Beaſts here, are Horſes, Black Cattle, and Sheep, and wild Beaſts, as Bears, Elks, Deer, Foxes of ſeveral Colours, and particularly Black, whoſe Skins are much valued, Ermins, Martins, Beavers, Squirrels, and Water Rats, that ſmell like Musk. Their Lakes, Pools and Rivers, furniſh them with Store of Fowl and Fiſh. Their Woods alſo abound with Fowl, and vaſt Swarms of Bees, which hive in the Trees, and yield great Quantities of Honey and Wax.

Their RIVERS.

HERE's ſo much Water, that the Country is called the Mother of Rivers. The Chief are,

1. The Wolga, anciently the Rha. It riſes in the Dutchy of Reſchow, alias Rzeva, Lat. 56. 1. near Long. 35. from a Lake, runs thro' the Lake Wolga, from whence it takes Name, and receiving many other Rivers on both Sides, and particularly the great River Kama, which Ides makes a Boundary betwixt Aſia and Europe; it falls after a Courſe of 2900 Miles, by Twenty Five Mouths into the Caſpian Sea, 12 Leagues below Aſtracan, and makes the Waters of that Sea leſs brackiſh for many Leagues. 'Tis reckoned the greateſt River in Europe, and ſerves the Muſcovites for extending their Commerce to Grand Tartary, Circaſſia, Georgia, Armenia, and Perſia.

2. The Nieper, anciently the Boriſthenes, riſes in the Dutchy of Smolensko, or, according to ſome, of Muſcow, Lat. 54. 1. Long. 37. 1 runs thro' the Frontiers of Poland; and after a Courſe of about 600 Miles, falls into the Black Sea, ſo that it ſerves the Muſcovites for ſome Trade with Poland, Little Tartary, and Turkey; but the Courſe of its Navigation is interrupted by Cataracts, about 70 Leagues from its Mouth.

3. Dwina, in Ruſſian, the Twins or Two, becauſe made up of the Rivers Suchina and Juga. The Firſt riſes in the Province of Wologda, Lat. 50. 1. Long. 44. joyns the Juga at Ouſtiough, waters Archangel, and after running about 350 Miles, falls a little below it into the White Sea. It brings the Commodities of the Country to this Place, which has long been the Staple of the Engliſh and Dutch Trade to Muſcovy, whoſe Goods are carried up the River as far as Wologda, and from thence by Land Carriage to Muſcow, &c.

4. Oby, anciently Carambucis, from whence Nova Zembla, which lies againſt its Mouth, is ſuppoſed to have been called Carambyce. It riſes from a Lake in Great Tartary; is generally reckon'd the North-Eaſt Boundary betwixt Aſia and Europe; and after a Courſe of 900 Miles, falls into the N. Sea by ſeveral Mouths. It paſſes by many Conſiderable Towns, receives other great Rivers on both Sides, and abounds with Fiſh; but is ſo full of Cataracts, and obſtructed at the Mouth by Mountains of Ice, that there's ſeldom any Paſſage from it to the Sea.

5. Irtis; it riſes near the Country of the Calmucks, Eaſt from the Caſpian Sea, and after running above 1000 Miles, falls into the Oby. On the Eaſt Shore the Country is for moſt part high Hills, with Foreſts of Cedar, and the Weſt Shore is for moſt part Hills and Paſture, abounding with prodigious Numbers of great Black Bears, Wolves and Foxes, of ſeveral Colours.

6. Don, anciently the Tanais, riſes from the Lake Juan Ozero, in the Province of Rezan, near Lat. 54. Long. 41. and after many Windings and Turnings, by which it runs firſt South, then Eaſt, South again, and at laſt Weſt, it falls into the Palus Mxotis, near the Town of Aſoph.

There is a Sort of Canal which forms a Communication betwixt it and the River Wolga, near the Country of the Nagazi Tartars, about Lat. 49.

Their LAKES.

THEY are ſo numerous, that we can't inſiſt upon them: Beſides, Authors and Map-Makers differ ſo much in the Accounts of their Extent, that ſcarce any of them is to be depended upon. Some of the Chief of them are, 1. Juan Oſero, from whence the River Don takes its Riſe; 2. Onega, And, 3. Ladoga, both which have been accounted for in the Diſcription of Sweden; the Poſſeſſion of them being controverted betwixt the Two Nations.

The GEOGRAPHY of MUSCOVY.

'TIS divided into South and North Parts, and the North contains 17 Provinces. We ſhall take them as they lie in the Map, from Weſt to Eaſt, begin at the North, and go on to the South. The North Provinces are,

I. That of MUSCOVITE LAPLAND, which has Swediſh Lapland on the Weſt, and the White Sea on the Eaſt, the Frozen Sea on the North and North Eaſt, and part of Sweden and the White Sea on the South; moſt of it lies beyond the Arctic Circle. It reaches from Lat. 64, to 71, and is betwixt Long. Eaſt from London 26, and 42½. 'Tis for moſt part Mountainous, and ill Inhabited, and divided into Three Juriſdictions, called Lepories.

The Firſt is Mouremanskoy, the moſt Northerly part. The chief Place is Kola, a Sea-Port Town on a River of the ſame Name, that falls into the North Sea, about Lat. 70. The Town lies on the Eaſt ſide of the River, about 32 Miles South from the Sea, near Lat. 69. Long. 35. 'Tis frequented by the Engliſh and Dutch, who come hither to buy Furs.

2. Terskoy, which lies in the North Eaſt part of the Country upon the White Sea, has ſeveral Rivers that abound with Salmon, but no Town of Note.

3. Bellamoreskoy, North from Mouremanskoy, and Weſt from Terskoy. Its chief Places are Kandalax and Ombay, both on the Side of a Bay, which runs up from the South Sea, but of little Note.

For the Natural Hiſtory of the Country, and the Religion, Manners and Cuſtoms of the People, we refer to what has been ſaid of Norwegian and Swediſh Lapland; only 'tis obſervable, that the Muſcovite Laplanders are rather more brutiſh than the others.

II. CARGAPOLSKAIA, or MUSCOVITE CARELIA, has Swediſh Carelia on the Weſt, the Province of Dwina on the Eaſt, the White Sea on the North, the Lake of Onega and Cargapol on the South. The greateſt Length from South Eaſt to North Weſt is about 150 Miles, and from Eaſt to Weſt 120. It has no Place but Povenza on the North End of Lake Onega, and Soma at the North Weſt Corner on the White Sea, where the Garriſons of the Iſles of Soloski, that lie over againſt it, have their Winter Quarters. This Country is for moſt part Woody and Deſart. The Eaſt Side of it is called Onega from the River that runs through it.

Cargapol, on the Eaſt ſide of Lake Onega, and that called the Quarter of Onega on the Weſt ſide, are by ſome reckon'd diſtinct Provinces, and by others a Part of Muſcovite Carelia. Theſe Two, including the Lake, are about 200 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and 125 from South to North. Cargapol has no Place of Note, but a Town of the ſame Name on the Weſt ſide of a Lake, whence the River Onega flows, Lat. 62. Long. 39. 20. And on the Quarter of Onega, there's only the Town of Oloneez at the Conflux of two Rivers, Lat. 61. 22. Long. 34½. with ſome Monaſteries and Hermitages in other Parts.

Vaga, which lies N. E. betwixt Cargapol and Dwina, and is ſo nam'd from the River Vaga that runs thro' it, is by ſome made a diſtinct Province; 'tis about 100 Miles South and North, and 70 Eaſt and Weſt, Woody, and has no Place of Note.

III. DWINA, Eaſt from Kargapolskaia, and South from the White Sea, has its Name from the River Dwina; is 210 Miles South and North, and 240 Broad. It bears no Corn, ſo that moſt of the People live on dry'd Fiſh and Veniſon. The chief Product is Iſinglaſs, Pitch and Salt. The chief Town is St. Michael Archangel on the Dwina, Lat. 64½. Long. 40. about 30 Miles from the White Sea. It is an Archbiſhoprick, and has a good Trade with England and Holland, and is the chief Staple of the Muſcovites, which makes it populous and rich, though ſmall. Sometimes there are 3 or 400 Foreign Ships here at a time in Summer, but in Winter the River is frozen up. The Way to it by Sea, was firſt diſcovered in 1553, by Mr. Chancellor, Commander of a Ship for the Engliſh Company of Adventurers. He went out with Sir Hugh Willoughby, who was frozen to Death on the Coaſt of Lapland, where he put in; but Chancellor purſuing his Voyage, came hither, and was honourably conducted to the great Duke John Baſilowitz at Muſcow, who entertained him ſplendidly, and granted him a Priviledge for Trading hither, under his Great Seal. Mr. Chancellor returned with it to England in 1554; and in 1555, that Emperor renewed the ſame with very large Privileges to the Company, who at the ſame Time obtained a Charter from Philip and Mary, to carry on that Trade excluſive of all others. In 1556, they ſent two Ships thither, who returned with an Ambaſſador from the Czar, and noble Preſents of rich Furs, &c. to the King and Queen; but one of the Ships, with Mr. Chancellor, and many of the Preſents, was Wreck'd in the Bay of Pitſligo, in the North of Scotland; but the Ambaſſador, with the reſt, arrived at the Engliſh Court; and the Company enjoy'd that Trade, and moſt of the Privileges, till the Murther of King Charles I. When the then Czar revok'd them, and tho' King Charles II. ſent an Ambaſſador thither to recover them, it proved ineffectual, ſo that our Merchants there now, have little more Privilege than others. Before this Town was diſcovered, the Trade for Ruſſian Commodities was carryed on by way of Narva and Revel in the Baltick; which, though nearer, yet the Merchants choſe rather to go to Archangel, becauſe of the great Impoſts demanded by the Swedes and Danes in the Baltick. Since the preſent Czar conquered Livonia from the Swedes, he has attempted to make Peterburg on the Gulph of Finland, the Staple for his Commodities. The River divides into ſeveral Streams at Archangel, and forms divers Iſlands. There's a Fort near the Mouth of the River, and an Iſland where they build Ships.

St. Nicholas, formerly a great Monaſtry, which gave Name to the Bay, lies on a Branch of the River, and forms a good little Harbour, about 30 Miles Weſt from Archangel. Colmogrod, another Town, lies about 45 Miles up the River from Archangel.

Candenoos, or Marſonowitz Iſland, divided by a narrow Channel, navigable by Barks, from the North-Weſt Coaſts of Jugora, runs about 150 Miles into the Muſcovite Sea, is about 50 Miles broad, Mountainous, and has the little Town of Candenos on the Eaſt ſide. Its Cape at the North End is well known by Mariners, and directs their Courſe to Archangel, &c.

IV. CONDORA, Eaſt from Dwina, and South from the Arctick Circle. 'Tis about 200 Miles from South to North, and 200 long. Mountainous, Woody and Barren: Received Chriſtianity about 1618. and was made one of the Czar's Titles by Juan Baſilouits. The Peoplare barbarous. The chief Town is Werghataura or Vaalgoria, Lat. 66½. Long. 50. ſome include this Country in that which follows.

VIII. JUHORSKI, JUGORIA, or JUGRIA, has the Muſcovite Sea on the North, and the Arctic Circle on the South. The Baron de Herberſtein thinks it was from hence that Attila over-ran Europe, and gave Name to Hungary. He ſays, the Remains of the ancient Hungarians betwixt the Theys and Danube, ſpeak the ſame Language with thoſe of Juhorski. The Country is barren and mountainous: The Capital is of the ſame Name, in a ſmall Bay on the North Coaſt: The People live after the manner of the Samoieds, by which Name Tibrant Ides calls all the Inhabitants on the North Coaſt, almoſt from the Dwina to the Oby. This Province and Condora are 230 Miles South and North, and and 240 Eaſt and Weſt.

VI. PETZORA, or BORANDAY, lies Eaſt from Juhorski, has the Streights of Weygats and Nova Zembla on the North. It has a River and a Capital of the ſame Name on a Lake, Lat. 67½. Long. 58. The River comes from the Lake Petzora, and runs thro' the Province into the Streights of Weygats. The Town has three Churches; the Natives are Chriſtians, live moſt upon Fowl, which they take in Summer, ſalt up for Winter, and ſell the Feathers. The Country abounds alſo with Salmon and Sables, is 410 Miles from South-Eaſt to North-Weſt, and 150 where broadeſt. There are Deſarts on the Eaſt-ſide of 200 Leagues.

VII. OBDORA has Petzora on the Weſt, the River Oby on the Eaſt, and Siberia on the South, is 210 Miles South and North, and 180 Eaſt and Weſt. The Inhabitants are Savage and Idolatrous Samoieds. The Muſcovites have ſome Caſtles here to keep them in Subjection, and oblige them to pay their Tribute.

HAVING thus given a ſhort Account of the Provinces which lie on the North Sea and the Streights of Weygats, 'tis proper to give an Account of the latter from Tibrant Ides, who is one of the laſt and moſt conſiderable Authors that has treated of them. He obſerves, that the Engliſh, Dutch and Danes have twice attempted in vain to find a North-Eaſt Paſſage to China and the Indies by theſe Streights, but they were always forced back by Shoals of Ice. He adds, that from Weygats to the Icy, or Holy Cape, which is the moſt Eaſterly part of the Continent in his Map, and lies on the Eaſtern Ocean that ſeparates Aſia from Corea and Japan, the Sea is not navigable: That the Sea of Siberia particularly is ſo full of Ice, that no Ship can come to the Mouth of the River Jeniſea, which is 15 Degrees farther Eaſt than Weygats, much leſs can they go farther Eaſt that Way. He tells us, from the Information of ſeveral Ruſſians, who at divers times ſail'd thro' thoſe Streights, that when they go to fiſh for Sea Calves, they ſail thither; but if the Wind blows from the Sea, the whole Coaſt is ſo covered with Ice, that they are forced to put into Creeks, and ſtay there till the Wind blows from the Shoar, and clears the Streights of Ice; and if they meet no ſuch Creeks, their Veſſels are ſhatter'd to pieces. They add, that the Sea, as far as the Icy Cape abovemention'd, to the North-Eaſt, is ſometimes frozen up two or three Years ſucceſſively, as it was from 1694 to 1697; and he ſays, that in Samojeda he has ſeen Rooks and Magpies fall down dead in their Flight, by the piercing Froſt. He adds, that about fifty Years before, the Ruſſians in Siberia had Liberty to bring their Commodities through the Streights of Weygats to Archangel, &c. upon paying their Toll to the Czar; but making uſe of the Opportunity to ſteal Goods into other Rivers and Creeks, by which the Czar ſuffered in his Revenue, the Paſſage thro' theſe Streights has been forbid ever ſince.

'Tis proper alſo to give the ſame Ambaſſador's Account of the Samoieds, who dwell upon this Coaſt. He ſays, they are under the Siberian Government, are divided into ſeveral Sorts, who differ both in Language and Cuſtoms, and that they live from the Neighbourhood of Archangel on the Weſt, as far as the Icy Cape on the Eaſt. They can ſcarce pretend to any thing of Men but Face and Shape, and are the worſt-look'd People in the World. Their Stature is ſhort, their Shoulders broad, their Faces flat, with broad Noſes, great hanging Lips, and frightful Eyes, like thoſe of a Lynx. Moſt of them have Hair as black as Pitch, which hangs diſhevell'd, and they have ſmall Beards. Their Complexion is Brown, and ſome of them of a Pale Red. They are very ſwift of Foot, have little Senſe, and like Wolves feed upon raw Carrion; for tho' their Country abounds with Fowl, Fiſh and Fleſh, they are too idle to furniſh themſelves with it. They are ſtupid Idolaters, worſhip the Sun and Moon, and Images of Wood and Iron of Human Shape. They live in Tents covered with Bark, place the Fire in the Middle, round which both Sexes lie naked at Night. Their Children lie in Cradles of Birch-Bark, fill'd with Shavings of Trees, and cover'd with Buck-Skin. Their Cloaths are of the ſame, with the Hair outward. Their Arms are Bows and Arrows tipp'd with Bone. They take as many Wives as they can keep, without reſpect to Conſanguinity, and buy them from one another with Bucks and Hides. They travel over Snow and Ice in Sleds drawn by Roe-Bucks, with incredible Swiftneſs; and have Governours, who collect their Tribute of Furs, and carry them to ſuch of the Czar's Garriſons as they are ordered. Their chief Recreation when they would be merry is, to ſtand oppoſite in Couples, throw up one Leg, and clap one another's Soles. They have many Conjurers, who play all ſorts of Diabolical and Juggling Tricks. They were firſt diſcovered by a Muſcovite who dealt in Furs, and having by his Factors got a great Eſtate among them, he acquainted the Czar with the Country, who gave him great Privileges for carrying on the Trade; and by ſending ſuch Officers and Gentlemen with ſuch Things as pleaſed them, they were brought under the Muſcovite Government, and to pay Tribute in the Reign of Theodore Joannowitz, about 1564.

VIII. PLESKOW has Ingria on the North, Lithuania on the South, and Novogorod-Welicki on the Weſt. It abounds with Wax and Honey, was formerly a Dutchy governed by its own Prince till 1509, that the Czar John Baſilowitz ſubdued it during a Civil War. 'Tis about 60 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and 190 from South to North. Pleskow, its Capital, and an Archbiſhop's See, lies on the Weſt ſide, about 30 Miles Eaſt from the Borders of Livonia, Lat. 57½, Lon. 29½. 'Tis reckoned one of the ſtrongeſt Towns in the North, and divided into four Parts, each encompaſs'd by a ſtrong Wall, beſides which, 'tis defended by a ſtrong Caſtle on a Rock. The Czar tranſported the Citizens, who, till divided by Parties, were noted for Valour, Civility, and Trade, and placed Muſcovites in their room. Stephen King of Poland beſieged and took it in 1581, when the Garriſon conſiſted of 70000 Foot and 7000 Horſe, beſides Citizens; but the Muſcovites regain'd it ſince; and the preſent Czar in 1711, inſiſted, that the Poles ſhall quit their Pretenſions to this Dutchy and Smolensko.

IX. NOVOGOROD-WELIKI has Ingria and Pleskow on the Weſt, Rzeva on the South, Onega and Cargapol on the North, Twer, Belozero and Vologda on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 270 Miles from South to North, and 250 from Eaſt to Weſt. It had formerly a Prince of its own; and its Capital of the ſame Name, which lies upon the River Wolohowa, (Lat. 58. 49. Long. 33½.) where it comes out of Lake Ilmer; was ſo Rich and Powerful, that it became a Proverb, Who can do any thing againſt God and the Great City Novogorod? The Country abounds with Wheat, Hemp, Honey and Wax, and is noted for the beſt Ruſſia Leather. The Town is large, well built, and, beſides its own Strength, is defended by two good Caſtles. The Hanſe-Towns drove a great Trade here, the River being Navigable, and having a Communication with the Lake Ladoga and the Gulph of Finland, contributed much to its Wealth. It was made tributary to the Poles in 1427, and in 1477 was reduced and plunder'd by the Muſcovites, who, it is ſaid, carry'd off 300 Cart-Loads of Gold, Silver, and Jewels, beſides other rich Goods; and in 1569 the Czar John Baſilowitz, on pretence of a Revolt, came with a great Army, and deſtroy'd moſt of the Inhabitants, after which the Remainder were ſo diſtreſs'd by a Plague and Famine, that they eat one another. The Tyrant pretending to puniſh them for this Inhumanity, deſtroy'd the greateſt Part of the reſt. In 1611 the Swedes took it by Storm, but reſtored it to the Muſcovites by Treaty. Here are about 100 Monaſteries, Churches, and Chapels, whoſe Steeples are cover'd with Gilt Copper. 'Tis the See of an Archbiſhop, reckon'd the firſt Metropolitan of the Country, as this is the moſt ancient City. 'Tis alſo the Seat of a Weywood, who reſides in the Caſtle on the Eaſt ſide of the River, which is join'd to the City by a large Bridge. Their chief Traffick at preſent is Salt, made from the River which runs thro' the Town.

X. BIELA-OZERA, Eaſt from Novogorod-Weliki, is about 130 Miles South and North, and 105 Eaſt and Weſt. It has its Name from the White Lake near 40 Miles long and 10 broad. The Capital of the ſame Name lies on a River at the North End of it, Lat. 59. Long. 39. is reckoned impregnable, and therefore the Czar keeps his Treaſures here, under the Guard of his principal Officers and a ſtrong Garriſon. 'Tis the ancienteſt Dutchy in Muſcovy, and one of the Czar's Titles. The Country is full of Woods and Lakes, which makes it unpaſſable except in Froſt.

XI. WOLOGDA lies North-Eaſt from Biela-Ozera, is about 210 Miles from South-Weſt to North-Eaſt, and 110 where broadeſt from South to North. The Country is Marſhy and Woody. Their chief Commodity is Tallow. The Capital is of the ſame Name, and ſtands in a Bog near the River Dwina, Long. 59. 10. Long. 42. 'Tis ſtrong, and defended by a good Caſtle, where the Czar keeps part of his Treaſures in time of Danger, Goods are brought hither up the River from Archangel, and ſent by Land Carriage to Moſcow; but the Country is ſcarce paſſable, except by Sledges, in Winter. 'Tis the See of an Archbiſhop, reckoned by ſome the firſt in the Kingdom.

XII. OUSTIOUGH, North from Wologda, and South from the Province of Dwina, is about 200 Miles from South-Weſt to North-Eaſt, and 150 broad from South to North. 'Tis a Woody Country, and abounds with Black Foxes, whoſe Skins are their beſt Commodity. The chief Town is of the ſame Name, but commonly called Great Uſtiga. It lies in Lat. 61. 50. Long. 43½, near the Conflux of the Juga and Suchina, which form the Dwina. 'Tis a large Town, the Seat of a Weywod, and has an annual Fair chiefly for Furs.

Tibrandt Ides ſays, that the Banks of the River Suchina, which run through this Country, are adorned with numerous well-inhabited Villages, beſides Totma, a pretty good City on its Weſtern Shore; and that while the Water is open, ſmall Ships ſail upon it with Goods betwixt Wologda and Archangel. He mentions alſo a Town called Solowitz-Jogda, which, he ſays, is a very large City, inhabited by many conſiderable Merchants, and ſeveral curious Artificers in Silver, Copper, and Bone; and that here are many Salt-Pits, which yield a great Quantity of Salt that is tranſported to Wologda, and all over the Country. He places it in Lat. 63. and 300 Miles South-Eaſt from Archangel. He ſays, the Natives have a Language of their own, which has ſo great an Affinity with the Livonian, that he ſuppoſes them to be of German Original, and that they have been tranſported hither in a time of War. They are of the Greek Church, and have the Privilege to chuſe their own Judges, from whom, in important Caſes, there lies an Appeal to the Court at Moſcow, for Foreign Affairs. They live chiefly by Agriculture, and the Manufacture of Grey Furs.

Here Geographers differ very much in the Situation of the Provinces; but our own Map being corrected by Obſervations communicated to the Royal Societies of London and Paris, we think it preferable to any other, and therefore according to it we place next,

XIII. ZIRANNIA, or the Country of the Ziranni, which has Jugoria on the North, the Czeram'ſſa-Lugovaja and Viatka on the South, Ouſtiough on the Weſt, and Permia on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 290 Miles from South to North, and 165 from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Tis a very Woody Country, watered by ſeveral Rivers, and has a Foreſt of 160 Leagues, inhabited by the Natives, who have a peculiar Language and Cuſtoms, were formerly Idolaters, but are now converted, and pay Tribute to the the Czar. There are several Towns in the North Parts, but we have no Description of them.

XIV. PARMIA, or PERMSKY, lies East from Zirannia, and South from Jugoria and Petzoria. 'Tis about 470 Miles from South-East to North-West, and near 23 from East to West where broadest, but is very narrow at both Ends. Their Capital is Perma Weliki, upon the River Vischora, Lat. 60. 20. Long. 56 ½. 'Tis a Bishop's See, was formerly considerable, but now ruinous. The Country is Mountainous, and the Inhabitants live chiefly by Hunting and selling Furs. They have a peculiar Language and Character, and pretend to be very ancient.

XV. NISI- (or LOWER-) NOVOGOROD has Wolodimer and Czeremissa-Lugovaia on the North, Part of Muscow and Rezan on the West, is 260 Miles from South to North, and 215 where broadest from East to West. 'Tis one of the best Provinces belonging to Muscovy, pleasant and fruitful, and abounds with Woods. The Capital is of the same Name, Lat. 56. 30. Long. 47 ½. and lies on the South side of the River Wolga. 'Tis a large City, well fortify'd, has a strong Castle, and a famous Church, built like that of St. Sophia at Constantinople. Basilogorod, built by the Czar Basilic against the Incursions of the Tartars, lies also upon the Volga,, about 80 Miles East from Nisi-Novogorod. The South Part of the Country is full of Forests, inhabited by idolatrous Mordua Tartars.

XVI. CZEREMISSA-LUGOVAIA lies North and North-East from Nisi-Novogorod. 'Tis about 240 Miles from South East to North-West, and 130 from East to West. Part of it is Mountainous and Woody, and the other Part low, with good Pastures, but full of Morasses. The Inhabitants are Pagans, have a peculiar Language, live in Tents, and subsist chiefly by feeding Cattle and Hunting. They are under no fix'd Tribute, but make Presents to the Czar, and, being good Archers, serve him against the Tartars. They allow Polygamy, put away their Wives for Barrenness, and have neither Priests nor set Places of Worship; yet they Sacrifice both to God and the Devil, and are so savage that 'tis not safe to travel thro' their Country.

XVI. VIALKA, or WIADSKI, lies East from Czeremissa-Lugovaia, is 220 Miles from South-West to North-East, and 190 where broadest from East to West. 'Tis marshy and barren, but yields Plenty of Honey, Wax, and Furs. It has several Towns, but none of Note.

These being the Seventeen Northern Provinces, we come now to the Southern.

I. BIELKI, or BIELA, it has Lithuania on the West, and Rzeva or Reschow on the North. 'Tis about 40 Miles from South to North, and near 80 from East to West. The Capital is of the same Name, defended by a Castle on the River Oska, Long. 35. Lat. 52. 42. 'Twas formerly a Dutchy, and governed by its own Princes, who held it of Lithuania.

II. RESCHOW, or RZEVA, lies North from Bielki, is about 60 Miles from South to North, and 225 from East to West. 'Tis remarkable for giving Rise to the great Rivers Volga, Duina, Nieper, and Lowat. 'Twas formerly subject to Lithuania, abounds with Forests, Lakes, and white Hares, which the Czar diverts himself with Hunting. The Inhabitants have a peculiar Language, and are said to be very Courteous and Genteel. The Capital is of the same Name, upon a River on the East side of the Country, near Lat. 56. Long. 37 ½. Wselikyeluki and Toropyecz, large Towns with Castles, are also in this Country.

III. TWER, or TWERA, lies North East from Reschow, is about 120 Miles from South to North, and 140 from East to West where broadest. 'Tis rich in Corn and Merchandize, and very Populous. The Capital is of the same Name upon the Volga, Lat. 56 ½. Lon. 37 ½, is a Bishop's See, has a Mint House, near 60 Churches, and is very populous and rich.

IV. MUSCOVY, or the DUTCHY OF MOSCOW, the chief Province of the Empire, lies South from Twer, and South and South-East from Reschow. 'Tis about 137 Miles from South to North, and 265 from East to West, but very unequal both in Breadth and Length, being indented by other Provinces both Ways. The Country is not fruitful, but the Air so healthful, that Epidemical Diseases are seldom heard of. The great number of Navigable Rivers contributes to their having Plenty of Provisions in Summer, and their Sledges drawn by Deer and Horses on the Ice, bring them at easy Rates in Winter. Their Horses are hardy, and will travel fifty Miles without Baiting, so that Travelling is cheap, and the Roads are safe, because the Governours of Provinces and other Officers, are continually passing and repassing to and from their Posts.

The Capital of the Province and of the whole Empire is of the same Name. It lies in Lat. 55 ½. Long. 39 ½. on the River Moscow, which begins to be Navigable about six Miles above it. The Accounts of its Largeness in former times seem Romantic, but the Houses being generally of Wood, which make it subject to Fire, 'tis now very much diminished. It was taken and set on fire by the Tartars in 1540, when 80000 of the Inhabitants were destroy'd. In 1611 the Poles burnt down 41000 Houses, and 200000 People were destroy'd; yet in 1662, when the Lord Carlisle was Ambassador there, it was judged near 16 Miles in Compass, and to contain above 40000 Houses. They have many Gardens and Meadows within the Walls. The Houses are ill contrived, built of Fir, squar'd and dovetail'd into one another, the Chinks stopped with Moss, and the Roofs cover'd with Bark, which considering the Drunkenness of the People, makes it very subject to Fire; to prevent the spreading of which, the Watch and Guards are provided with Pole-Axes to cut down the adjoining Houses. The Streets are not pav'd, but plank'd with Fir-Timber, so that People of Rank ride here in Summer, and are carry'd in Sledges in Winter. The Merchants have Vaults of Stone for their Warehouses. It was founded in 1334, by the Duke of Wolodimer, a neighbouring Province; and some time after it was made the Residence of the Czar, by which it increased till it became the Greatest and Richest City in the North. 'Tis of a circular Form, and divided into Four Parts: 1. Catagorod, or Middle City, encompass'd by a Brick Wall. Here stands the Czar's Palaces, one of Timber, and the other of Stone, which take up half the City. That of Stone is of fine Italian Architecture. The Castle is fortify'd with a good Ditch, and three Walls well mounted with Cannon. The Patriarchs Palace, the Exchequer, the Magazine, and other publick Buildings, stand also here with two Monasteries, and five Churches, among which is that of St. Michael, with the Tombs of the Czars. All the Steeples within the Castle are covered with Gilt Copper. One of them called Great John is remarkable for its Height, and another for its Bell, supposed to be the largest in the World. Its weight 336000 Pounds, is 19 Foot high, 23 in Diameter, 64 in Circumference, and two in Thickness. It was cast in 1653, by a Russian. 'Tis never toll'd but on extraordinary Occasions, when 24 Men pull the Rope below, and several others above. Without the Gate of the Castle, is the stately Church dedicated to the Trinity, and called by the Name of Jerusalem. It was built by the Tyrant John Basilowick, who caus'd the Architect's Eyes to be put out, to prevent his undertaking such another. The Second Division is called Czargorod, or the City Royal, encompassed with a Wall of white Stone. Here is the Arsenal where they cast their Guns. The Third Quarter called Skoradom, encompasses the former. The River Jaguza passes thro' it, and here they have a Market for Houses ready built, which are easily taken to pieces and transported to any Place. The Fourth Quarter lies on the South Side of the River Moscow, is fortified with Wooden Walls and Ramparts, and Inhabited by the Czar's Guards. The Chapels and Churches in this City are reckon'd 2000, and by the Patriarch's Order are built of Stone. The Number of Inhabitants is said to be above 700000. The Lutherans and Calvinists are allowed the free Exercise of their Religion here. The Trade of this City is much advanced by its Situation betwixt Narva, Archangel and Astracan.

A great Rebellion of the Strelites or Muscovite Janisaries, fomented by the present Czar's Sister, who designed to dethrone him, and set up her self and her Husband, was suppressed by the Czar near this City in 1698. This Metropolis has frequently suffered by accidental Fires, and particularly in 1697, when 1500 Houses were burnt down. In 1699, when above 15000 Houses, Churches, Convents, &c. were destroyed, and in 1701, when the Czar's Palace with all its rich Furniture, and a great number of other Houses, to the Value of several Millions, were consumed. In 1714, the Czar set up a Printing Press here, and the first that was ever known in these Parts of the World, where he has caused a great many good Books in several Sciences to be printed for encouraging Learning among his Subjects.

V. ROSTHOW or ROSTOVA, lies North from Muscovy, is about 130 Miles from South-East to North-West, but of an unequal Breadth, and about 70 where broadest. 'Tis a fruitful Country, produces store of Salt, and had anciently Princes of its own till 1565, that the last was murdered by the Tyrant Basilowick. The Capital of the same Name, stands on a Lake 195 Miles North from Moscow, Long. 40 ½. Lat. 57. 5. 2. Uglitz, 48 Miles North-West from Rosthow, is noted for excellent Bread, 3. Pereslaw, is a large populous Town, 30 Miles South from Moscow. The Czar diverts himself here in the Hunting Season.

VI. JAROSLAW, or YEROSLAW, lies North and North East from Rosthow, abounds with Corn, Cattle and Honey. It had also Princes of its own, but the last was destroy'd by John Basilowick. 'Tis about 80 Miles from South to North, and near 100 from East to West. The Capital is of the same Name, stands on the Wolga, Long. 41. Lat. 57 ½. Is strong, large, populous, and has a good Trade in Russia Leather, Linnen, &c.

VII. SUSDALE, lies East from Jaroslaw and Rostova, is about 170 Miles from South-West to North-East, and 80 where broadest from East to West. The River Wolga runs thro' its Middle. The Capital is of the same Name, and lies on the River Cleszma, 90 Miles North-East from Muscow, near Long. 42. Lat. 56. 5. It was formerly the Metropolis of Russia, is an Archbishoprick, and has a famous Nunnery.

VIII. WOLODIMER, lies East from Susdale, is about 160 Miles from South-West to North-East, and 120 where broadest from East to West. 'Tis so fruitful, that the Soil yields thirty for one, and it abounds with Honey, Wax and Woods. The Capital is of the same Name, lies on the River Cleszma, near Lon. 42. Lat. 55. 42. was formerly the Residence of the Great Dukes, and tho' in a declining Condition, is still a considerable City, and reckon'd the 2d in the Empire, and gives Title of Duke to the Czar.

IX. CZEREMISSA NAGORNIA, lies South from Czeramissa Logovia, and East from Nisi Novogorod. 'Tis about 200 Miles from South to North, and 180 where broadest from East to West. Most of the Inhabitants are Pagans, and others Mahometans. The Country is Mountainous and Barren, and has the Ruins of abundance of Towns being destroy'd by Tamerlane. In the South Part are Mines, whence they dig Salt.

X. The MORDWA TARTARS, lie South-East from Wolodimer, and South West from the Czeremissa. Their Country is reckoned part of Nisi- (or Lower-) Novogorod, about 60 Miles broad and 240 long. The Natives are Savage Pagans or Mahometans, allow Polygamy and Divorce at Pleasure. They are Tributaries to the Czar, and both Sexes good Archers. Their chief Town is Adima, Long. 46. Lat. 54 ½. When a rich Man dies, they kill his best Horse, on pretence of serving him in the other World; but at the same time eat the Carcass.

XI. SMOLENSKO, lies East from Lithuania, of which it was once a Part, and South from Biela. 'Twas subdued by the Muscovites in 1654. 'Tis about 140 Miles from South to North, but much contracted in the South, and about 90 Miles from East to West, where broadest. The Country abounds with wild Beasts, whose Furs are much valued, and the Czar diverts himself here once a Year by Hunting.

ing. The Capital is of the ſame Name, and lies on the Nieper, Long. 32. Lat. 54. 35. The Poles took it in 1711, after two Years Siege, and the Slaughter of 200000 Muſcovites. The Latter beſieged it in 1633, but were defeated before it. The City is large and populous. The Walls are 6 Cubits broad, with 52 Towers; and there's a ſtrong Caſtle in the middle of the City. There is plenty of wild Beaſts in this Province, whoſe Skins are much valued. Once a Year the Czar hunts here. Sigiſmond III. King of Poland, eſtabliſh'd an Archbiſhop here for the Greeks of the Roman Communion, and a Biſhop for the Popiſh Natives, but Czar Alexis put a Grecian Biſhop in his Place.

XII. NOVOGORODSEWIERSKI, or the Dutchy of Severia, lies South from Smolensko, to which it formerly belong'd. 'Tis 200 Miles from North to South, and about 130 where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Tis a fruitful Country. The Inhabitants are Warlike, being kept in conſtant Exerciſe by the Neighbouring Tartars. It had formerly Princes of its own, who became ſubject to the Duke of Lithuania, and afterwards to the Czar. Moſt of this Country is Woody; and in the South Parts there's a Foreſt of 24 German Leagues in Length. The Capital of the ſame Name ſtands on the River Deſna, Long. 44. 45. Lat. 52½. The Town and Caſtle are well fortify'd after the Ruſſian manner.

XIII. CZERENIKOW-DUTCHY lies Weſt from the latter, and Eaſt from Poliſh Pruſſia, of which it was formerly Part. 'Tis near 160 Miles long, and 75 where broadeſt. The Capital of its own Name lies on the River Deſna, Lat. 51. 19. Long. 33'. is a ſtrong and well-built, tho' ſmall City.

XIV. WOROTIN, or VOROTINSK, a Dutchy or Principality Eaſt of Severia, North of the Country of the Coſſacks, Weſt of Rezan, and South of Muſcovy. The South Part is Deſart, becauſe expoſed to the Ravages of thoſe of Little Tartary; but the North Part is Fruitful and Populous. 'Tis 110 Miles from North to South, and 80 from Eaſt to Weſt. Its Capital of the ſame Name ſtands Long. 38½. Lat. 53½. on the River Occa, 120 Miles North-Eaſt from Novogrodeck-Sewerski, and is guarded by a Caſtle.

XV. REZAN lies South of Moſcow, and Eaſt from Worotin. 'Tis 220 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and 150 from North to South. It abounds with Corn and good Fruits, Honey, Wax, Fiſh, Fowl, Ermins, Beavers, and other Furs; and, according to the Ruſſian Accounts, the Corn grows ſo thick here, that a Horſe can hardly paſs through it. Here are alſo ſome Iron Mines. It had formerly a very powerful Prince of its own. The Inhabitants are Couragious, Civil, and ſo numerous, that they can ſend 15000 Horſe and 40000 Foot to the Wars. Rezan its Capital is in Long. 43'. and near Lat. 54. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, and was very conſiderable, till ruined by the Tartars.

Voronecz, or Woronitz, which ſome place in the Ukrain, lies alſo in this Country, Lat. 53. 10. Long. 42½. betwixt Vorona River and a Lake thro' which the River Don has its Courſe, about 30 Miles South-Eaſt from the Lake Juan Oſero. Veronecz is noted of late, becauſe the preſent Czar ordered Men of War to be built there, the River being deep enough to carry them from thence to Aſoph on the Black Sea, at the Mouth of the ſame River. But ſince by his laſt Treaty with the Turks he was obliged to ſurrender Aſoph, his Men of War can be of no farther uſe to him, unleſs he purſue his former Deſign of making a Canal betwixt the Don and the Volga, where it is but 28 Miles over Land betwixt them, in Lat. 50. 25. and betwixt Long. 47. 20. and 48. 10. but there being a River in that Space which falls into the Don, and another into the Volga, there needs only a Canal of five Miles long. Here it is proper to take notice of a Remark in Moll's Syſtem of the Geography of Europe, p. 389. viz. that there's a Miſtake in all the common Maps of the Courſe of the River Don, and of the Situation of Aſoph; whereas they make this Town Eaſt-South-Eaſt of Moſcow, he ſays, it ſtands in truth almoſt directly South, at about 200 Miles diſtance; yet in his own Map he places it to the South-Eaſt of Moſcow, and makes it above 480 Miles diſtant. Then as to the River Don, he ſays, they make it paſs Eaſt to Long. 74. whereas it flows no farther Eaſt than Long. 69. then returns Weſt, and falls into the Black Sea at Aſoph in Lat. 47. and not in 51. as they lay it. This Correction, the Author ſays, he had from Mr. Theſing, an ingenious Merchant in Holland, at whoſe Houſe the Czar lodged, and gave him an Opportunity of making a Map from the Original Surveys that Prince had cauſed to be made of the Courſe of the River and Situation of Aſoph. Here again we muſt obſerve, that Mr. Moll himſelf, in his Map, makes this River to run no farther Eaſt than Long. 64. whereas our Map places Aſoph South-Eaſt from Moſcow, and at 510 Miles Diſtance from it, and makes the Don to run as far Eaſt as Long. 47. Eaſt from London; which, adding 18 to Moll's Longitude from Fero, makes it Long. 65. We ſhall add, that Ambaſſador Ides, in his Map, does likewiſe place Aſoph South-Eaſt from Moſcow, and makes the Diſtance about 560 Miles. He carries the Don as far Eaſt as Long. 70. where the Czar deſigned the abovementioned Canal, and places Aſoph in Lat. 47. whereas our Map places it in Lat. 46. 40.

XVI. UKRAIN, or the Country of the COSSACKS, lies South from the four laſt mentioned Provinces of Muſcovy, and extends itſelf from Long. 31. 40. to Long. 45. Its Length from South-Weſt to North-Eaſt is 530 Miles, but it grows narrower towards that Point. The greateſt Breadth from South to North is about 300 Miles, but 'tis unequal both Ways, being indented by other Provinces. (This is to be underſtood of the Muſcovite Ukrain, for that of Poland we refer to its own Place.) This Country is for moſt part Ill-inhabited, Mountainous, and has Deſarts without Water both on the South and North. 'Tis by ſome divided into Okraina, which the Sauſons make the Weſt Part; and into Pole, which they make the Eaſtern. It is watered with many Rivers, and in ſome Places has a very good Soil; but being much infeſted by the Ravages of the Tartars, 'tis not well inhabited. The chief Place of Note here is,

1. Krowa, or Kiow, Long. 32. Lat. 50. 20. on the Weſt ſide of the Boryſthenes, or Nieper. 'Tis an Epiſcopal See, the Seat of a Weywod or Palatin, has a ſort of Univerſity, and ten Churches, four for the Papiſts, and ſix for the Greeks. That of St. Sophia is the moſt ſumptuous, and its Walls are adorned with Moſaic Work. This City grew out of the ancient Kiow, the Metropolis of Tauro-Scythia, whoſe ſtately Ruins are ſtill to be ſeen at a diſtance. 'Tis defended by a Caſtle, a Trench, and ſome other Fortifications, and has a Trade for Tallow, Corn and Furs. It had its Name from Kius, a Ruſſian Prince who founded the old Town about 861. It was afterwards the Seat of the Ruſſian Empire, and at laſt governed by its own Princes; but being ſtormed and pillaged by the Tartars in 1615, it has declined ever ſince. It was afterwards poſſeſſed by the Poles, but in 1653 was taken by the Muſcovites and Coſſacks, at that time Confederates; and the Poles quitted their Pretenſions to the Town and Country for 700000 Florins. The Coſſacks rebelled, and committed great Spoils in the Country in 1618, and moſt of the Town was burnt.

Other Places of Note here,

2. Pereſlaw, on the Eaſt ſide of the River, about 45 Miles South-Eaſt from Kiow. 'Tis a ſtrong Town, contains about 6000 Families, and has a Garriſon.

3. Pultuva or Pultowa, on the River Vorskio, Lat. 49. Long. 35. 42. about 220 Miles South Eaſt from Kiow, noted for the great Victory obtained near it by the preſent Czar in 1709, over the late King of Sweden, Charles XII. whoſe Army being totally ruined, he fled from hence to Bender in Turkey; above 16287 of his Men ſurrendered with 142 Braſs Cannon, 8000 were killed in the Field of Battle, beſides thoſe ſlain in the Retreat, and above 800 Waggons taken, with all their Artillery, Ammunition, Colours and Standards.

The Coſſacks of this Country are under the Czar's Protection, and obliged to ſerve him in War, but are immediately ſubject to a General of their own chuſing.

XVII. The Country of the CIRCASSIANS, or DON COSSACKS, lies Eaſt and North-Eaſt from the Ukrain, as far as the River Don. Its Length from South-Weſt to North-Eaſt, is about 340 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth from Eaſt to Weſt, about 190. Here are abundance of Sandy Deſarts in the Weſt and North. The Capital lies on the Weſt ſide of the Boryſthenes, near Long. 43. Lat. 47. 40. about 40 Miles North-Eaſt from Aſoph. On the Palus Mæotis, about 25 Miles North-Weſt from that City, the Czar's Army in 1685, found certain ancient Monuments, ſuppoſed to be thoſe which Ptolomy called the Altars of Alexander. Aſoph was anciently the Capital of this Country, and called Tanais from the River on which it lies. It has frequently been taken and retaken by the Turks and Muſcovites. It was in vain beſieged by the Czar in 1695, with 200000 Men, of whom he loſt above 30000, the Garriſon being numerous, well ſupply'd, and the Approaches difficult, becauſe of the Bogs which ſurround it; but that Year he took and Garriſon'd moſt of the Forts that lay upon the Nieſter, as far as the Black Sea. He attacked it again next Year, and being provided with Ships, which he had not before, he defeated the Turkiſh Fleet that came to relieve it, took all the Proviſions, Ammunition, Arms and Money deſign'd for the Garriſon, with a great Quantity of Rich Silk, and Silver Stuffs. He alſo defeated the Tartar Sultan Nuradin, who came to relieve it by Land; ſo that the Governour having loſt all Hopes of Succour, ſurrendered the Town with 90 Cannon, and all the Proviſion and Ammunition, but the Garriſon had the uſual Terms of Honour. In 1697 the Muſcovites defeated the Turks and Tartars, who deſigned to have retaken the Place, under the Conduct of Sultan Galga, after a Battle of 12 Hours. Not long after, the Muſcovite Garriſon defeated a Body of Tartars, and took 30000 Horſes from them. The Czar ordered ſeveral Gallies and other Ships of Defence to be built, and a good Harbour with ſeveral Forts to be made here; ſo that he was in a fair way to become abſolute Maſter of the Black Sea, and of opening a Trade with the Caſpian Sea, by a Canal on which he ſet 20000 Men at work, betwixt the Don and the Wolga; but after his Defeat by the Turks in Moldavia, whither he purſued the King of Sweden, he was obliged to reſtore Aſoph, after he had demoliſhed the Fortifications in 1712. The Town ſtands at the Foot of a Hill, is divided by the River, and defended by a ſtrong Caſtle, &c. 'Tis ſquare, and lies very convenient for defending or invading the Palus Mæotis, the Black Sea, and Crim Tartary. Donetſchay or Hutinon, on a River that falls into the Palus Mæotis, 21 Miles to the North Weſt, ſurrendered to the Muſcovites in 1696, with 32 Cannon and great Stores.

Thoſe who extend Europe, as many Geographers do to the middle of the Caſpian Sea, and by a Line from thence, to the River Oby, include many other Countries in the European Muſcovy, which we ſhall take in order as they lie, from South to North. And,

I. The Kingdom of ASTRACAN, lies Eaſt from the Ukrain, and the Don Coſſacks, on both Sides the Wolga, Weſt from Deſart Tartary in Aſia, North from the Caſpian Sea, and South from the Mordua Tartars, &c. 'Tis 400 Miles from South to North, but very narrow towards the South; and about 300 Miles, where broadeſt, from Eaſt to Weſt. They had Kings of their own till 1554; that they were ſubdued by the Czar, John Baſilowick. The Soil is pretty fruitful, but little cultivated by the Native Tartars, who rove about in Tents, ſo that moſt of it lies deſart, tho' well watered by the Rivers Don and Wolga. The Capital is of the ſame Name, given it by a Tartarian Prince its Founder. It lies on the Iſland Dolgoy, formed by the Branches of the Wolga, Lat. 46 ½. Long. 52. The Muſcovites drove out the Tartars, and Peopled it themſelves; ſince which they have enlarged it. 'Tis fortified with a very high double Stone Wall, adorned with Towers half a Musket-ſhot from one another, which form a pleaſant Proſpect upon the River.

The Czar, Michael Theodoroneck built that Suburb called the Soldiers Town, the Tartars have a Suburb with Huts of Bulruſhes, but muſt not come within the Walls. The Houſes in the City are low, and of Wood. As it is a common Frontier betwixt Aſia and Europe, 'tis frequented by Merchants of many Nations, who have particular Places aſſigned them, and drive a conſiderable Trade; ſo that the Cuſtoms here, at loweſt, amount to 250000 Crowns per Annum. Moſt of the Materials

Materials for Building are furniſhed from the Ruins of the Great City Czarſgorod, in the Neighbourhood which was ruined by Tamerlane. The Czar keeps generally a Garriſon here of near 5000 Foot, and a Magazine of 500 Braſs Guns, to keep the neighbouring Tartars in awe. The Iſland is for moſt part Sandy and Barren, except ſome Gardens and Grounds that are well Cultivated. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, the Heats are as exceſſive here in September and October as in Germany in the middle of Summer; and the Winter laſts only two Months, but ſo very cold, that the River freezes and bears Sledges. The Fruits about the Town are equal in Goodneſs and Beauty to thoſe of Perſia, eſpecially their Apples, Quinces, Peaches and Melons. Grapes were firſt brought hither in 1613, and planted by a German Monk; ſo that they now make abundance of excellent Wine, and have Walks and Arbours of Vines. Here's alſo the Animal Plant above-mentioned, called the Lamb. About the Town, and a great way North, there is ſtore of Liquorice, Angelica, and the Herb Eſula, all of a large Size. Here's alſo plenty of Beef, Mutton, wild Swine, Fowl and Fiſh. On the Weſt ſide of the Wolga there are large Heaths, extending to 70 or 80 German Miles, which are remarkable for Salt-Pits. The Heat of the Sun does ſo bake the Salt, that it ſwims on the Surface of the Water an Inch thick, and is ſo cheap, that 40 lb. Weight may be bought for 2 d. Another Sort is dug out of the Hollows of the Rocks, about 35 Miles below the City, which lies on the Eaſt ſide of the great Stream. The River falls into the Caſpian Sea by 7 or 8 Mouths, and forms many Iſlands both above and below the Town. It abounds with Salmon, Sturgeon, White Fiſh, and Belluga, of whoſe Rows they make Caviar. 12 large Carps may be bought here for 2 d. and 200 young Sturgeon for half a Crown. The River and Iſlands abound with wild Geeſe and Ducks, which the Tartars are very expert in hunting with Hawks, and breed up great Numbers for that End. This City was taken and plunder'd by the Coſſacks in 1669, but retaken next Year by the Czar's Army, which routed and diſpers'd the Rebels.

The other Places of Note in this Kingdom are,

1. Saratoff, Lat. 52. Long. 49. 40. in a Plain upon a River that runs into the Wolga on the Eaſt ſide. It is well Fortified, Garriſon'd and Inhabited by Muſcovites to overawe the Calmuc Tartars, who Inhabit a large Country to the North-Eaſt from the Caſpian Sea.

2. Tzaritza or Czaritzan, on the Weſt ſide of the Wolga, Lat. 49. 40. Long. 48. 15. 'Tis fortified with Baſtions and Towers of Wood, and Garriſon'd by Muſcovites, who convoy the Veſſels that ſail up and down the River, and guard the Country againſt the Coſſacks and Tartars.

3. Czornogor, alias Michael Novogrod, on a high Ground near the Wolga, Lat. 48. 40. Long. 50. 35. 'Tis Garriſon'd and Fortify'd as the other, and has Watch-Houſes, 8 Miles diſtant on every Side, to obſerve the Approach of the Enemy.

II. NAGAISKY, or the Country of the Nagarian Coſſan Tartars, which the Sanſons place South from Part of Aſtracan, and Weſt from the River Wolga. 'Tis about 600 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and above 80 from South to North. The People live in Huts of Bulruſhes, which they remove at Pleaſure in Carts, and wander about in Summer for to Paſture their Cattle, but in Winter live near Aſtracan. They are obliged to ſerve the Czar in his Wars; and he keeps ſome of their petty Princes as Hoſtages in the Caſtle of Aſtracan. They are a deformed ill-looked People, low of Stature, Fat, and have broad Faces, full of Wrinkles, and of Olive Colour. They have little Eyes, ſhave their Heads, and wear little Beards. They have looſe Coats of coarſe Cloth, and Caps and ſhort Cloaks of Sheep skin, with the Wool outwards. The Women have better Features, wear Linnen, and plaited Coifs on their Heads, with Strings of Muſcovite Pence hanging down on both Sides. They are generally Mahometans, and devote ſome of their Children to God, or a Saint; if Girls, they are diſtinguiſhed by a Ring in their Noſtrils; and by one in their Right Ear, if Boys. They eat dry'd Fiſh inſtead of Bread, but the richer Sort get better Proviſions from Aſtracan. Their Black Cattle are large, and the Tails of their Sheep ſo fat, that ſome of them weigh 30 lb. Their Horſes are ſmall, and ill-ſhap'd, but hardy and ſtrong.

III. The Kingdom or Dutchy of BULGAR, or BULGARIA, lies Eaſt from Czeremiſſa Nagornaia, and North from Aſtracan. We have only a View of the Weſt Part of it in our Map; but the Sanſons make it about 450 Miles from South-Weſt to North-Eaſt, and 240 where broadeſt, from South-Eaſt to North-Weſt. The Soil is fruitful, and abounds with Paſtures. Here's plenty of Cyder, Fiſh and Caviar. The Mountains are covered with Pines, among which the Coſſacks lurk, and infeſt the Inhabitants. The Capital is of the ſame Name, near the Weſt ſide of the Country, Lat. 54. 20. Long. 54 ½. Here's no other Town of Note but Samara, on the South Frontiers, on a River of its own Name, which falls into the Wolga. 'Tis a ſquare Town, and all built of Wood, except the Churches and Monaſteries. Here are the Ruins of a great many Towns on the Banks of the Wolga, that were deſtroyed by Tamerlane.

IV. The Kingdom of CAZAN, lies North from Bulgaria. We have not a full View of it in our Map, but the Sanſons make it 360 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and about 150 from South to North. It was formerly ſubject to the Crim Tartars, and was capable of bringing 60000 Men into the Field. The Czar Baſil Juanowick ſubdued it, but the Inhabitants join'd by the Crim Tartars not only recovered it, but invaded Muſcovy, took and plundered the City and Caſtle of Muſcow, and brought the Czar and his Subjects to agree to pay them Tribute for ever, to erect the Statue of Mendigleri, one of their Leaders, in the Market-place, and made the Czar ſwear to ſmite his Head againſt it every Time he paid the Tribute. Being encouraged by this Succeſs, they invaded the Country again, and deſigned the entire Conqueſt of Muſcovy. They ſate down before Rezan, the Capital of the next Province to Muſcow, ſummoned the Governour to ſurrender, and ſent him Word that the Czar was now their Subject; the Governour reply'd, that he wou'd ſurrender immediately, if they could prove that, and deſired to ſee the Czar's Inſtrument of Submiſſion. Mendegleri being ſo weak as to ſend him the Original Inſtrument, the Governour ſent him Word, that he wou'd keep it and the Town too; which he did, forc'd the Tartars to raiſe the Siege with great Loſs, and ſent back the Inſtrument to the Czar, who afterwards laid Siege to Caſan, which he was forc'd to raiſe with Loſs. But his Son John Baſilowick took it by Storm, after a long Siege and a brave Defence in 1552, and repaired the Breaches. It has been in Poſſeſſion of the Muſcovites ever ſince. This City lies on the River Caſanka, where it falls into the Wolga, about Lat. 55 ½. Long. 55. and is very conſiderable for Extent and Strength. The Caſtle and the other Fortifications are of Stone, well mounted with Cannon, and defended by a ſtrong Garriſon of Muſcovites. The Tartars are forbid to come within the Walls of the Caſtle on pain of Death. The Country abounds with all Sorts of Fruit, and particularly with fine Melons, but is not populous, becauſe frequently ravaged by the Coſſacks.

North-Eaſt from hence, as far as the River Oby, there's a Country inhabited by Tartars, called Regahorda and Zavolhahorda. The Sanſons make it about 420 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and about 260 from South to North; but we have no Deſcription of it.

North from hence lies Siberia, which has the River Oby on the Eaſt, and the Province of Permski on the Weſt, according to ſome Maps, but Ibrant Ides makes this Country of a much larger Extent, and places it from Long. 79. from Teneriff to 140, viz. the whole Length of the North Part of Aſia, and from Lat. 53, to 65; ſo that we refer it to the Deſcription of the Czar's Dominions in Aſia.

The HISTORY of the MUSCOVITES.

THERE is little Certainty as to their Antiquity, for this Country was a long Time divided into ſeveral Principalities, before it was united under one Government. Some derive their firſt Princes from Beala, a King of Hungary, and 'tis certain, their Imperial Family bore that Name. Olga, one of their Queens, is ſaid to have embraced Chriſtianity at Conſtantinople in 876, and brought it into Ruſſia; but the firſt, of whom we have any Certainty, is Prince Woledimer, who in 988 married Anna, Siſter to Baſilius Porphyrogeneta, was baptized at Conſtantinople, named Baſil, and brought the Religion of the Greek Church into this Country. Their Hiſtory after this Period is very confuſed, and little known till 1273, when they were brought under miſerable Slavery by Batto, a Tartar Prince, which laſted 200 Years. He impoſed, beſides a large Tribute, the following Terms upon them, viz. That the Tartars ſhould from Time to Time chuſe their Princes. That thoſe Princes ſhould meet the Tartar Ambaſſadors on Foot, bare Headed, and preſent them with a Diſh of Mare's Milk; and if the Ambaſſador let any of the Milk fall on his Horſe's Mane, the Muſcovite Prince ſhould lick it up; and that he ſhould give the Ambaſſador's Horſe, Provender out of his Cap. The Tartars had alſo a Garriſon in the Caſtle of Muſcow; but in 1450, John, the Son of Baſilius the Blind, delivered the Muſcovites from this Thraldom, and erected their ſcattered Provinces into one Monarchy. He had a long War with the Knights of the Teutonic Order, and ſubdued ſome Neighbouring Provinces. His Son Baſilius took Pleſko and Smolenſko from the Poles, but was diſtreſſed by the Caſan Tartars, as we have ſaid in the Deſcription of that Country. His Son and Succeſſor, the famous John Baſilowitz, ſubdued the Kingdoms of Caſan and Aſtracan, was ſucceſsful in his War againſt the Turks, whoſe great Army he defeated in 1596, in Defence of Aſtracan; was alſo ſucceſsful againſt the Teutonic Order and the Poles; but at laſt Stephen Batthori, King of Poland, took ſeveral Places from him. He died in 1584, leaving behind him the Character of one of the greateſt Tyrants that ever lived. His Son Theodore was the laſt of the Family of Beala, a very weak Prince, and left the Country involved in great Troubles. He was ſucceeded by his Siſter's Husband, Boris Gudenow, who was hated for his Covetouſneſs; ſo that the People took part with an Impoſtor, called Demetrius, againſt him. After his Death his Son Feodor aſſumed the Title, but was defeated, taken and ſtrangled by the Impoſtor Demetrius, who was thereupon proclaimed Czar in 1605. This Demetrius was a Monk, and ſo artfully perſonated Demetrius the Son of John Baſilowitz, who had been murdered by the Advice of Boris Gudenow, that he not only impos'd upon Foreign Princes, in whoſe Countries he formed the Intrigue, but upon the Muſcovites themſelves, alledging, that thoſe employ'd them by Gudenow to murder him, had by Miſtake killed another Perſon in his ſtead, upon which he eſcaped, and conceal'd himſelf in Lithuania in Poland. The Palatine of Sendomir believing him, gave him his Daughter in Marriage, and aſſiſted him with Troops to gain the Throne of Muſcovy. But this Foreign Alliance, and his Attempts to bring in Popery, made the Muſcovites obſerve him more narrowly; and finding him to be an Impoſtor, Baſilius Zuski, a Prince of the Blood Royal, by the Mother's Side, did with 20000 Men ſurprize, kill him, and Impriſon his Adherents; upon which Baſilius was proclaim'd Czar in 1606; but was ſoon after oppos'd by another falſe Demetrius, who pretended alſo, that he had eſcaped, and that Baſilius had kill'd another in his Stead. Theſe Intrigues were fomented by Charles IX. of Sweden, who at laſt upon Terms aſſiſted Baſilius Zuski againſt the Impoſtor; but the Muſcovites refus'd to deliver up the Places which Baſilius had promis'd the King of Sweden, who thereupon took them by Force. The Swedes being afterwards defeated by the Poles, the Muſcovites dethron'd Baſilius, and offer'd their Crown to Uladiſlaus the Prince of Poland, who accepted it on delivering up Baſilius to him; but as ſoon as the Poles were admitted into the City, they, contrary to the General's Orders, quarrelled with the Inhabitants, plunder'd and burnt the Town, and divided the Wealth among themſelves. The Muſcovites being in this miſerable Condition, a Butcher, who was a bold cunning Fellow, adviſed them to find out an honeſt Treaſurer and General, and told them, they would readily find Officers and Soldiers enough of their own Nation to deliver them. Upon this the People appointed the Butcher to be Treaſurer, and bid him name a General. He accordingly pitched upon a mean, but very brave Gentleman, whom they approved; and having furniſh'd him with Money, he rais'd an Army, and drove the Poles out of the Country. After this the Nobility choſe Michael Theodorowitz, Son to the Patriarch of Moſcow, and Nephew to the Great Duke John Baſilowitz, in 1613. He made Peace with Sweden and Poland, and, after a Reign of thirty three Years, brought the Country to a proſperous Condition. He was the Founder of the preſent Family, and ſucceeded by his Son Alexius, who was very ſucceſsful againſt the Poles, took Smolenſko and Kiow from them. He was alſo ſucceſsful againſt the Swedes, but miſcarrying in the Siege of Riga, he reſtored what he had taken from them. In 1669, one Stephen Ratzin rebelled againſt him, ſeized the Kingdoms of Caſan and Aſtracan, and ravaged Muſcovy, but was at laſt taken and executed. After this many of the Coſſacks ſubmitted to Alexius, which engaged him in a diſadvantageous War with the Turks. He died in 1675, and was ſucceeded by his Son Theodore, a ſickly Prince, who dying in 1682, was ſucceeded by his Brother Peter, the preſent Czar, who governed in Conjunction with him before. This Prince narrowly eſcaped the treacherous Deſigns of his Siſters Sophia and Mary, and their Confederates, but has ſince made himſelf famous by his Travelling abroad to ſee the Cuſtoms of other Countries, and by his Endeavours to introduce Military Diſcipline, Learning and Arts among his Subjects. He had a great Regard to our King William, did him the Honour to make him a Viſit at London, and has ſince viſited France, Germany and Holland. He has had War with various Succeſs againſt the Turks and Swedes, concluded a diſadvantageous Peace with the former in 1712, and was on a Treaty with the King of Sweden when that Prince was killed, from whom he conquer'd Livonia and ſeveral other Provinces. He has been very unhappy in his eldeſt Son Alexis, who retired from his Dominions in Diſcontent, and upon his Return was condemned for a Plot againſt his Father, and died in Priſon in July 1718.

The CZAR's TITLES are,

THE moſt Serene and moſt Potent Sovereign Czar and Great Prince, by the Grace of God Emperor of the whole Great, Little and White Ruſſia; Monarch of Moſcow, Kiow, Wolodimer, and Novogorod; Czar of Caſan, Aſtracan, Siberia, Daour, and Samoiedia; Lord of Pleskow, Great Duke of Smolensko, Twer, Jugoria, Permia, Wyatka, Bulgaria, &c. Lord and Great Prince of Novogorod, of the Nederigen Countries, Czernikow, Rezan, Polosko, Roſthow, Jaroſlaw, Biela, Ozera, Udoria, Obdoria, Condoria, and of the whole North Sea; Commander and Lord of the Iverſhian Countries, the Cartilinſchean, Gruſinſchian Czars, the Kabardinſhian Dominions, the Czerkaſſian and Gorſiſchian Princes, and many other Countries and Territories, Eaſt, Weſt and North, the Inheritance of his Anceſtors.

His GOVERNMENT.

HE is Abſolute Lord of the Lives and Eſtates of his Subjects, who look upon his Will as that of Heaven, call him God Almighty's Chamberlain; and, when they talk of a Thing they don't underſtand, ſay, God only knows, and the Great Duke.

No Caſe of any Conſequence is determin'd without his Approbation; ſo that his Chief Juſtice, who receives Appeals from all Parts of his Dominions, muſt acquaint his Majeſty with them. There is a Code of Laws, printed in 1647, by which the Judges are to conduct themſelves in paſſing Sentence. When any extraordinary Laws are to be made, the Czar ſummons ſuch of the Clergy and Nobility as he pleaſes: One of the Secretaries propoſes the Law; the Clergy's Opinion is ask'd firſt, and when the Czar conſents, the Laws are drawn up in the Form of a Proclamation, and then publiſh'd.

His great Council conſiſts of ſuch as he pleaſes to call. The Great Officers of State are generally Members of it, viz. the Chancellor, who preſents Petitions and returns the Czar's Anſwers; the Treaſurer, the Conſtable, who looks after Military Affairs, the Maſter of the Horſe, who alſo commands the Guards, and the Chief Juſtice; but many have the Title of Counſellors, who are never called. The Advice of the Patriarch is ask'd in Matters of Conſcience; but the Buſineſs of the Counſellors is rather to approve, than to debate what the Czar propoſes.

He has ſix principal Councils; the firſt is for Ambaſſadors and Foreign Affairs, where the Chancellor preſides; the ſecond for War, the third for Revenues, the fourth for Trade, the fifth for determining Civil Cauſes, and the ſixth for Crimes; and every Province is aſſigned to a particular Council. They uſe Torture, if Criminals deny the Fact. Their Oaths are performed by kiſſing a Croſs in the Church; but thoſe who do it frequently become infamous, and are not admitted to enter the Church. Falſe-ſwearing, and the Frequency of Solemn Oaths, are very ſcandalous here.

Their Puniſhments are thus: Robbers are broke on the Wheel, Sacrilegious Perſons are impal'd, Traitors, or Servants who murder their Maſters, are beheaded, Debtors are impriſon'd till the Time appointed for paying the Debt; if they fail then, they are every day brought into Court, and beat for an Hour upon the Shins and Calves of their Legs; but if unable to pay, are made Slaves to the Creditors.

All Places of Honour and Profit are beſtow'd at the Czar's Pleaſure. He continues no Governour of a Town or Province above three Years. Dr. Fletcher, in his Account of Muſcovy, ſays, that the Czar ſeldom takes the Lands of Fathers from their Children; that their Eſtates paſs by Inheritance, but commonly after our Gavelkind, and the Czar has an Acknowledgment in the nature of a Herriot, or Relief; but they diſpoſe of their Goods by Will as they pleaſe. In great Frontier Cities he appoints Men of Quality and Experience for Weywods; in leſſer Towns he appoints Governours, by delivering them a Staff as a Badge of their Power, which they return when their Time is out.

Their COIN

IS only Oval Pieces of Silver of a Penny Value, with the Czar's Name on the one ſide, and his Arms on the other, with the Name of the City where coined, viz. Moſcow, Novogorod, Twer, and Ploskow; for none other have the Privilege. They have no Gold Coin, but Medals ſtruck on extrordinary Occaſions. German Dollars of all ſorts, and Spaniſh Reals, paſs current here.

Their NOBILITY.

THEY conſiſted formerly of the Younger Branches of the Royal Family, and had great Power; but ſince the Reign of the Tyrant John Baſilowitz, they have been reduced. The chief Degree of Nobility now is the Bojars, whom the Czar makes Members of his Council, and obliges to conſtant Attendance at Court, leſt they ſhould foment Rebellions in the Country. They who have born any great Office of War, as that of General, &c. leave ſomething of a Title to their Poſterity, and have the Privilege of carrying a little Kettle-Drum at the Pommel of their Saddles, on which they beat with the End of their Whip, to give the Crowd Notice to make Way for them in the Streets.

His REVENUES.

THE Czar's Revenues ariſe, 1. From the Crown Lands, which are 136 Towns with their Territories. They furniſh him with Proviſions for his Family; and the Superplus above what he ſpends is reckoned at 25000 Rubles per Annum, each Ruble being 10*s.* or, according to ſome, a Mark Sterling. 2. From Impoſts on Corn, Towns, and their Precincts, reckoned at 400000 Rubles per Annum. 3. On the Cuſtoms thro' the Kingdom, reckoned at 940000 per Annum. 4. From a Tax on Baths, Stoves, and Publick Houſes, on thoſe who are caſt in Law-Suits, on every Writ that paſſes out of the Courts, on Felons Goods, and on Lands allotted for the Maintenance of Soldiers, which all together are valued at 14000 Rubles per Annum. 5. From the Monopoly of Caviar, Iſinglaſs, Fiſhing, and Furs. 6. From the Pre-emption of all Goods imported, and 5 per Cent. beſides, of all that's imported and exported. By this it appears, that his Revenue is extraordinary great, tho' it can't certainly be computed; but his Expences are anſwerable, he having always 1000 Perſons in his Family, 16000 Foot and 5000 Horſe for Guards, and 100000 Men in Garriſon. His Table conſiſts uſually of fifty Diſhes, and he defrays the Charges of Ambaſſadors from the Time they enter his Country, till they leave it.

His FORCES and MILITARY DISCIPLINE.

BESIDES the Troops already mentioned, he has a Militia who are to rendezvous and march at his Command; they are maintained by thoſe called Sinaboiaresky, who have a great Part of the Empire let out to them, on Condition that They, their Sons, and Farmers ſhall ſerve him with Horſe and Arms at their own Charge. The Sons of thoſe Sinaboiaresky are called Sinbojars, or Gentlemen, are allowed Coats of Arms, and put into inferiour Employments by the Czar, till he can provide for them better. His Nobles and Officers maintain alſo 60000 Horſe at their own Charge; ſo that, beſides his Garriſons, he is reckoned to have 300000 Horſe ready on all Occaſions; and when he makes War, he has a ſelect Guard of 15000 Horſe, who have from 12 to 70 Rubles per Annum, each according to their Degree, beſides Lands. The Foot are armed with a Gun, a Sword, and an Ax. The Horſe were armed with Corſlets, Bows, Arrows, Iron Maces, Scymitars, Targets, and Launces; but now they have Fire-Arms. They formerly made uſe of an Intrenchment of Pales, with Holes for their Muskets to fire through; theſe they carry'd along with them, and could ſpeedily ſet them up; but now they have learned the modern Way of Fighting and Diſcipline, the preſent Czar having taken a great many Scots and German Officers into his Service for that End. The Ruſſians had formerly no Reputation either in Battles or Sieges; but they defended their Places well, becauſe it was Capital for them to ſurrender, ſo that the Women would defend their Towns and Forts as well as the Men.

Their MANNERS.

THE Account that is given of them in the Travels of the Holſtein Ambaſſadors, the Earl of Carliſle, and the Emperor's Ambaſſador, is ſuch as makes them very Ignorant and Britiſh. They looked upon Mathematicians as Sorcerers; and a Dutch Surgeon was in danger of being put to Death as a Magician, for having a Skeleton in his Room. They had no Phyſicians till of late, but made uſe of Garlick and Strong Waters as an univerſal Medicine for all Diſtempers. Their Ignorance of Sciences and of the World, makes their Converſation very brutiſh, and run upon Vices that are not fit to be named. Drunkenneſs and Whoredom are ſcarce reckon'd Crimes; ſo that neither Sex is aſhamed to appear naked in the Streets, and haunt Bawdy-Houſes. When the Husbands get drunk and fall aſleep on the Floor, their Wives will ſit upon them till they alſo fall down drunk. The Emperor's Ambaſſador, the Baron de Mayerberg, whoſe Travels were printed at Leyden in 1688, ſays, they are ſo addicted to Lying from their Infancy, that they are not to be truſted: He adds, that even their Miniſters of State are ſo addicted to this Vice, that, when catch'd in a Lye, they ſmile at it as if they had done ſome worthy Action. The Czar in his Time uſed to waſh his Hands after he had ſaluted Popiſh Ambaſſadors, becauſe he thought the Touch of them defiled him. The Common People not only ſpend what Money they get, but ſell their Cloaths for Drink; and 'tis uſual for the Prieſts to be ſo drunk, as to wallow in Kennels; and the People of Quality keep ſo many Servants, which they uſe like Slaves, as very much contributes to this Diſorder; for its common with thoſe Fellows to ſet Fire to Houſes, that they may have an Opportunity to plunder during the Confuſion, and thereby get Money to drink; and the Guards or Watch are frequently Sharers with them in their Murders and Robberies by Night, ſo that the Bodies of People murdered are generally found in the Streets every Morning. Reading and Writing was the higheſt Degree of their Learning; and even their Miniſters of State ſcarce knew any thing of Foreign Affairs, but what they had from Dutch or German Gazettes, brought thither ſometimes by Merchants; and their Generals were very apt to believe whatever was told them from the meaneſt Priſoner of War, after they had threatened him with Torture to diſcover what he knew. They are inſufferably inſolent in Proſperity, and as much dejected when things go ill with them, which makes Negotiations at the Czar's Court very troubleſome and uncertain: Foreign Ambaſſadors were in effect kept Priſoners at Court, forbid writing Letters to their Friends, and many times Letters to and from their Maſters were intercepted. They have more Monaſteries for divorc'd Wives than for Maids; and the Ambaſſador ſays, they are both ſo ſcandalous and lewd, that they walk abroad after their Mattins, and rather court than ſtay for Temptations. This per-perhaps may be the Reaſon, why Women are leſs reſpected here than in any Nation in Europe; ſo that, he ſays, no Man will undervalue himſelf ſo far as to bow to any Woman of what Quality ſoever. It was uſual for the Czars to ſhut up their Daughters and Siſters in Monaſteries, or at leaſt in the Palace; and they were allowed to marry no Prince but thoſe of their own Religion, becauſe they reckon'd all others Pagans, and their Children to be Baſtards; nor were they allowed to marry even the greateſt Subjects, becauſe the Czar look'd upon 'em all as Slaves.

The Czar did not ſuffer his Wife and Children to eat with him, nor allow any body to ſee his Wife, Siſters or Daughters; and if any of them were ſick, the Windows were all ſhut when the Phyſician was ſent for; nor was he allowed to feel their Puiſe, but thro' a Veil of fine Silk.

The preſent Czar has quite reformed the Conduct of the Court as to thoſe things, and done very much towards reforming the Country, tho' not without a great deal of Diſcontent among his Barbarous Subjects, who ſeem to be fond of their old Savage Cuſtoms.

Dr. Fletcher gives a more advantageous Character of the People in general, and ſays, that among the Nobility there are many Perſons of Excellent Parts, Courage, and Diſcretion; and among the Common People there are ſome endowed with thoſe good Qualities. And he and others own, that many of thoſe things they are charged with proceeded from their Want of Education, and from the Oppreſſion of their Great Men. The Muſcovites are for moſt part ſtrong, well built, tho' not tall, of a healthy Conſtitution, and live long. They are frugal in Houſe-keeping, and their Furniture commonly very mean. Moſt of their Houſes are poor Wooden Huts, but their Merchants and Lords have of late built Houſes of Stone after the Modern Way. The Common People live moſtly on Roots and Herbs, and ſtinking Salt-Fiſh, which they account a great Dainty. Their Beef is good, but their Mutton indifferent. The greater part of the Year is ſpent in Faſts, when they live chiefly on Fiſh and Pulſe. Their ordinary Drink is a ſort of ſmall Mead, and they prefer Metheglin to any Wine. The better ſort hang their Rooms with Mats, and have ſome Pewter Veſſels, but the reſt make uſe of Wooden, or coarſe Earthen Ware. In the Country the whole Family, Poultry and Cattle lodge in the ſame Room. 'Tis the Cuſtom of all People here, of what Quality ſoever, to take their Afternoon's Nap, and to make uſe of Hot Baths and Stoves; and 'tis ordinary among the Common People to go out from thoſe Stoves, and wallow naked in the Snow, without receiving any Harm.

Their RELIGION

IS that of the Greek Church, tho' their Language has no Affinity with the Greek, but comes ſo near the Slavonic, that he who is Maſter of the one, underſtands the other. They alledge, that they were converted by the Apoſtle St. Andrew; and in Honour of him they have an Order of Knighthood called that of St. Andrew's Croſs. Their Monks are all of the Order of St. Baſil, and their Sermons are St. Chryſoſtom's Homilies tranſlated into their own Language. They were formerly ſubject to the Patriarchs of Conſtantinople, but ſince 1588 they have had a Patriarch of their own, for which they make an annual Preſent of 500 Crowns to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who with his Clergy make a pretty good Profit, by ſending hither ſome Conſecrated Toys and Reliques. Invocation of Saints is a chief Part of their Worſhip, and every Houſe has the Picture of ſome Saint, whom they worſhip by the Light of a Wax Candle. The Pictures of St. Nicholas and the Virgin are over their Church-Porches and their City-Gates, to which they bow as they paſs by, as they likewiſe do to all Croſſes. They go thrice to Church on Sundays and Holidays, and attend the Service ſtanding, for they have no Seats. The Women muſt ſtand in the Porch, becauſe they are reckon'd impure. Their Service conſiſts in reading ſome Chapters or Pſalms, ſome of Chryſoſtom's Homilies, and Athanaſius's Creed. They ſing Hymns, and beat their Foreheads againſt the Ground when they ſay their Goſpody, or Lord God have Mercy on me. They have fifteen ſolemn Feſtivals; and beſides their ſtated Faſts, as Wedneſdays, Fridays, and the Eves of Holidays, they have four ſevere Lents in the Year, during which the uſe of Butter, Milk, and Eggs is forbid, except in the firſt Week of their Great Lent, when they riot exceſſively, and afterwards eat Pulſe, Garlick, and Onions. They muſt abſtain from their Wives on pain of a Year's Excommunication. Their Penance conſiſts, 1. In abſtaining from Strong Liquors; 2. From the Marriage Bed; 3. In ſaying the Goſpody, and knocking their Heads againſt the Floor; 4. To ſtand in the Church-Porch during Worſhip; 5. In waſhing with Holy Water, the ſelling of which is the Prieſt's Perquiſites.

The Week after Eaſter they abandon themſelves to commit the maddeſt and fooliſheſt things imaginable. All Buſineſs is at a ſtand, the Shops are ſhut, but Publick Houſes and Stews kept open. The Prieſts have a large Share in thoſe Debaucheries, and go about with a Young Man carrying a Crucifix before them. The Bells toll Day and Night, which, they fancy, gives Eaſe to the Souls of their deceaſed Friends.

They reckon Baptiſm abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation, perform it in the Church, and have two Godfathers, who perform that Office as long as they live to all Children whatever. The Children are exorcis'd by the Prieſts before they enter the Church, for they believe all Children are poſſeſſed by the Devil. They conſecrate the Water firſt, then the Father and Godfathers renounce the Devil and all his Works, and at naming the Devil ſpit on the Ground. The Prieſts hang a Croſs of Gold, Silver, or Lead about the Child's Neck, which it muſt wear till Death, otherwiſe they cannot have Chriſtian Burial. The Prieſt aſſigns a Saint to the Child, whom he muſt ever after reverence as his Patron. They dip the Child three times in the Water, put ſome Salt in his Mouth, make the Sign of the Croſs on his Forehead, Hands, Breaſt, and Back, with Conſecrated Oyl, and put a clean Shirt on him, ſaying, Thou art clean, and as clear of Original Sin as this Shirt. They plunge Proſelytes over Head and Ears in the Water, and rebaptize all other Chriſtians that embrace their Communion. The Parents conceal the Names given to their Children in Baptiſm, and give them others; becauſe they fancy, that if Magicians or Sorcerers knew their true Names, they would make uſe of them to their Ruine.

They have ſuch a Veneration for Images, that when a Muſcovite enters a Room he takes no notice of the Company, till he looks about to ſee whether there be an Image, and if he ſees one, bows to it three times, makes the Sign of the Croſs, and then ſalutes the Company; but if any one ſecretly worſhip an Image erected at the Charge of another, he is, upon Proof of it, obliged to pay the Owner a Part of the Charge for erecting the Image, as a Puniſhment for deſigning to ſhare in its Favour, which is only due to the Proprietor. And when any Man is excommunicated, the Image of his Saint is turned out of the Church, till he be reſtored to Communion. And when People of another Religion lodge with a Muſcovite, he removes the Images out of the Room, thinking the Image would reſent being lodged with Pagans, for ſuch they eſteem People of all other Religions. They ridicule Tranſubſtantiation, communicate in Both Kinds with Leaven'd Bread and Wine mixed with Water, take both together in a Spoon, and ſleep after it, to prevent Occaſion of Sinning. Children communicate in One Kind only till ſeven Years of Age, and then communicate in Both, becauſe at that Age they fancy they begin to ſin. They forbid Extreme Unction.

If a Stranger enters their Churches, they think them polluted, and purify them with ſtrange Ceremonies. A Monkey belonging to an Engliſh Ambaſſador having entered a Church at Moſcow, and tore an Image of St. Nicholas, the Beaſt was by Order of the Patriarch carry'd through the Streets, and afterwards put to Death as an old Heretic.

Their Courtſhip and Marriage are very fantaſtical. The Man is not allowed to ſee the Woman, but his Relations view her naked, and tell him what they obſerve. When they are to be married, the Bridegroom goes to the Bride's Houſe with his Company, a Prieſt leading the Van on Horſeback. A piece of Taffeta is held betwixt the Bride and Bridegroom, that they may not ſee one another. The Wedding-Apparel of thoſe of Note is very expenſive. When they go to Church, they are placed under a Canopy of Taffeta, and make their Offerings. The Prieſt holds Images over their Heads, then takes the Man by the Right and the Woman by the Left Hand, and asks them three times if they be willing to be married. When both anſwer, Yes, the whole Company join Hands, and ſing the 128th Pſalm, the Prieſts ſinging one Verſe, and the Company the next by turns, and dance all the while. Then the Prieſt puts a Garland of Rue on their Heads, bids them multiply and increaſe, and drinks a Glaſs of Wine to them. Then the Bridegroom throws down the Glaſs; the Bride and He tread upon it, and ſay, May they thus be trod to pieces, that ſow Diviſion betwixt us. The Women throw Flax and Hemp-Seed at them, and wiſh them Proſperity. The Bride is conducted home in a Sledge by an Old Woman, who entertains her with ſmutty Converſation. When the Marriage-Feaſt is over, the Bride and Bridegroom go to Bed. The Company uſe Charms to promote the Conſummation, and an old Servant ſtands at the Door till the Bridegroom tells him the Buſineſs is done. Then the Muſick plays, and they commonly ſpend three Days in Merriment. 'Tis common for the Men to get drunk on thoſe Occaſions, and for their Wives to improve the Opportunity to lewd Purpoſes. At other times the Women are generally kept within Doors, and ſeverely uſed, which the Husbands excuſe, by alledging that they are Drunkards, Unchaſte, and have lewd Tongues. Both Sexes are luſtful, and think nothing to be Adultery but the Marrying of one another's Wife or Huſband; and in their lewd Rencounters the Woman puts off the Croſs from her Neck, and covers the Images, leſt they ſhould inform againſt them. Fourth Marriages are puniſhed by Death. Divorces are frequent upon very ſlight Occaſions; Barrenneſs is reckoned a good one, and Women divorced on that account are ſent to Monaſteries. They admit none to Orders till they be married.

The Patriarch muſt reſide conſtantly at Muſcow, determines all Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, wears a long Black Robe, and has a Croſs carry'd before him. He is next in Dignity to the Czar, who leads his Horſe at Proceſſion on Palm-Sunday. They have four Metropolitans and ſeven Biſhops, who muſt not reſide in their Dioceſes, leſt they ſhould excite Rebellion. Their Prieſts are called Papas, and are reckoned ſufficiently qualified if they can Read, Write, and Sing. They have a Cap put on their Heads at Conſecration, and muſt always wear it: 'Tis reckon'd ſo Sacred, that they muſt not be touched while they have it on; ſo that when the Laity quarrel with them, they ſnatch off the Prieſt's Cap, and then think they may drub him ſafely. The Biſhops live upon Tithes; the Prieſts have nothing except what People pleaſe to give them; yet have a competent Livelihood by what they get at Baptiſms, Marriages, Burials, Prayers for the Dead, for thoſe who undertake Journeys, and by bleſſing of Houſes, and the People who walk the Streets with the Sign of the Croſs. When a Muſcovite dies, the Widow ſends for his Kindred and Friends, who ask him, Why he died? Whether he wanted any thing? If his Wife was not young, handſome, and chaſte enough? Then they waſh and dreſs the Corpſe, put a new Pair of thin Shoes on his Feet. The Prieſt purifies him with Holy Water and Incenſe, and prays for his Soul. When he is carried to the Grave, the Prieſt goes before with the Image of the Saint that was his Patron. Four Virgins neareſt akin to the Deceaſed follow the Prieſt with mournful Lamentations. The Corpſe is ſurrounded by other Prieſts, who burn Incenſe to keep off Evil Spirits. When they come to the Grave, the Coffin is uncover'd; the Widow renews the former Queſtions to the Deceaſed; the Friends take their Leave, by kiſſing the Corpſe in the Coffin. The Prieſt prays for his Soul, puts a Paſs betwixt his Fingers ſigned by the Patriarch, Metropolitan, or Confeſſor, to certify St. Peter that he was a good Chriſtian of the Greek Church, and abſolved from his Sins. Then the Coffin is put into the Grave, and the Relations waſh down their Sorrow with good Liquor. Prayers are made for the Deceaſed forty Days, when they think that their Sins are expiated.

Their Churches are round and vaulted that they may remember Heaven, each of them has a Tower with a Tripple Croſs at top, and the Bells are hung on Engines near the Church. Each of them has an Image over the Door. None muſt make Water in the Church-yard; if a Dog by chance get into a Church, it muſt be ſwept, and purify'd with Incenſe.

Their

Their TRADE.

THEIR Product for Commerce has been accounted for in the Geography of the Country, and lies for moſt part in rich Furs, Hemp, and Flax, Honey, Wax, Linnen, Corn, Caviar, Sturgeon, and Ruſſia Leather. Their Trade of Import conſiſts chiefly in Cloth of Gold and Silver, Engliſh Cloth, Silk, Stuffs, Tapeſtry, Pearls, precious Stones, Tin, Lead, and Pewter; Spices, Wine, Brandy, and other ſtrong Liquors. The importing of Tobacco was prohibited formerly under ſevere Penalties, but the preſent Czar allows the Engliſh and Dutch to Import it. Their Trade is chiefly by Barter, for they are not allow'd to buy Foreign Goods with Money, nor to export Coin.

POLAND

HAS Courland, Livonia, and part of Muſcovy on the North; part of Hungary, Tranſilvania, Moldavia, and Little Tartary on the South; Germany on the Weſt, and part of Muſcovy on the Eaſt. The greateſt Extent from Tranſilvania on the South, to Livonia on the North, is 480 Miles; and from Germany on the Weſt, to Muſcovy on the Eaſt, 780. But 'tis not of equal Extent either Way, being indented by other Dominions. It lies betwixt Lat. 48. and 56. 20. and betwixt Long. Eaſt from London 16 and 34. It is ſituated betwixt the 8th and 12th Northern Climates, ſo that the longeſt Day in the South part is about 16 Hours and a Quarter, and in the North parts about 18 Hours.

This Country was anciently a part of Sarmatia Europea, and inhabited by People of different Names, as the Carini, Burgundi, Vandali, &c. Authors are not agreed in the Reaſon and Antiquity of the preſent Name; ſome derive it from Pole, which in the Slavonic ſignifies a Champaign Country: Some from Polineza, a little Town on the Viſtula, and others from Polucki, which ſignifies the Poſterity of Lechus, one of their Kings. Cromerus ſays the Name is not old, for in 880, it was called Weoucdland, which ſeems to be derived from the Winidi, or Venedi, part of its ancient Inhabitants. Their Language is the Slavonic, from whence 'tis concluded, that they are the Poſterity of the ancient Slavi, which ſignifies Fame or Glory, and hence they ſtill retain the Word in their Compound Names, as Staniſlavus, Wenceſlavus.

The AIR and SOIL

DIFFER according to the Climate. 'Tis ſometimes ſo very cold, that the Rain freezes before it falls; and in Winter, Coaches and Carts paſs over the Rivers and Lakes upon the Ice for 5 or 6 Months. This is not ſo much imputed to its Situation, as to the Neighbourhood of the vaſt Provinces of Muſcovy, from whence the cold Winds blow.

The Soil is moſt part Champaign and open, but towards Hungary Mountainous and Woody. There's only one Great Mountain in the Middle of Leſſer Poland, named Mons Calvus: What other Hills are here, may rather be called riſing Grounds. The Eaſtern Parts abound with Woods, Foreſts, Lakes, Marſhes and Rivers, which form a very delightful Proſpect into the open Country.

Their PRODUCT.

THE Country produces almoſt every where all kind of Fruit, Corn, and Herbs. They abound with Flax and Hemp, and in many Places have Grapes pleaſant enough to the Taſte, but their Wine is generally ſharp. Here's ſtore of Honey and Wax, and in the Mountains on the Frontiers of Hungary, there are Mines of Silver, Copper, Iron and Lead, and other Minerals. They have Quickſilver at Tuſtan, in Red Ruſſia, Vitriol in the Palatinate of Cracow, and Salt Mines there, as at Bochnia and Veliſca, in Leſſer Poland, which are the chief Riches of that Country, and bring moſt Money into the Exchequer. The Salt is generally bluiſh, but ſome of it white and tranſparent like Chryſtal. It has a brackiſh Taſte when new dug, but grows ſweeter and brittle when expoſed to the Air. They have alſo ſome Veins of Sal Gemmæ.

Their BEASTS are,

1. HORSES, which are very good and numerous, ſo that their Cavalry is well mounted. In the Ukrain, they have a Sort of Wild Horſes, which the Nobility eat as great Dainties.

2. Numerous Herds of Black Cattle, for which they have excellent Paſture.

3. Owrs, a ſort of Wild Black Cattle, bigger, ſtronger, and ſwifter than the Tame. The Bulls of this Sort have ſhort black Beards, Buſhes of Hair upon their Forehead, and very wide large Horns.

4. Bubalus jubati, or a ſort of Buffaloes. Their Horns and Shape are like thoſe of our Oxen. They have Manes like Horſes, and Beards on their lower Jaws. Their Tongues are hard and rough as a File. They have Bunches on their Backs, and their Hair ſmells like Muſk. They are incredibly ſtrong, and their Fleſh, when Pouder'd, is much eſteemed by the Nobility, who hunt them.

5. Elks, about the Size of a large Horſe, ſhap'd like a Stag, but is broader, and has longer Legs, and large Cloven Feet. Their Hoofs are eſteemed a ſpecifick againſt the Falling-ſickneſs, to which this Creature is very ſubject.

6. Sheep in great plenty, and in the Deſarts, about the Nieper, there are wild ones ſhaped like Goats, but have ſhorter Legs, and their Horns grow ſtrait up. They are very ſwift and leap high.

7. Roſſomakas, a voracious unſerviceable Beaſt. The Body and Tail reſemble thoſe of a Wolf, and the Face that of a Cat. It feeds on Carrion, eats till its Belly ſwells to the utmoſt, then ſqueezes it ſelf betwixt 2 Trees till it vomit. Then it returns to its Prey, and devours and diſgorges ſucceſſively till all is conſumed. Their Woods abound with Bears, Wolves, Boars, Deer, Foxes, wild Aſſes, Hares, Conies, and Squirrels.

8. That by the Latins called Lupus Cervarius, a ſort of Wolf, reſembling a Hart. Its Belly and Legs are ſpotted, and the Skins make the beſt Furs in Poland. Here are alſo Quails, with green Legs, but they are reckoned unwholſome, and occaſion the Cramp.

Puffendorf ſays of Poland in general, that 'tis Populous, and ſo full of Towns and Villages, that ſome compute the King and Nobles have 90000 in Poſſeſſion, the Biſhops and Canons 100550, the reſt of the Clergy with the Monks and Nuns 60950, which in all makes 251500; but he will not be anſwerable for the exactneſs of the Account.

This Country is divided into the Kingdom of Poland, and Dutchy of Lithuania, which was united to it in 1560. The Kingdom of Poland contains Great and Little Poland, Red Ruſſia, and Poliſh Pruſſia. The Dutchy of Lithuania is divided into Lithuania Proper, White Ruſſia, Samogitia, Poliſh Livonia and Courland. Theſe again are divided into Provinces, which are ſub-divided into Governments, call'd Palatinates.

I. GREAT POLAND

HAS part of Germany on the Weſt, Pomerania and Royal Pruſſia on the North, Little Poland on the South, and the Dutchy of Warſaw on the Eaſt. Its Extent from South-Eaſt to North-Weſt is 165 Miles, and the like where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. It is in general a Champaign Country, has pleaſant Rivers, Lakes and Ponds, and ſo well furniſh'd with Fiſh and Fowl of all Sorts, as alſo with Corn and Cattle. 'Twas diſtinguiſh'd by the Name of Great, becauſe their King Lechus choſe the City of Gneſna here for the Place of his Reſidence. 'Tis divided into three Provinces, of Poland Proper, Cujavia, and Mazovia.

I. POLAND PROPER, which is divided into the 5 following Palatinates.

I. That of POSNAN, or POSNANIA, of which King Auguſtus made Staniſlaus, afterward his Rival, Palatine. The Capital is of the ſame Name, on the River Worta, Lat. 52 ½. Long. 17¼. 'Tis famous for Trade, and its Univerſity. The Jeſuits have a fine College and Monaſtery. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Papiſts, but here are many Jews who have greater Privileges than the Citizens. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Gneſna, is ſtrong, defended by a good Caſtle, a double Wall, and deep Ditch. The Suburbs are encompaſſed by a Moraſs, and a deep Lake, but incommoded ſometimes by the overflowing of the River. In 1704, the Saxons laid Siege to it, but were ſoon obliged to raiſe it by the approach of the Swedes. In 1716, the Swedes attack'd the Saxons here, contrary to a Suſpenſion of Arms, and made them Priſoners of War in the Caſtle. The People are as well Apparrel'd here as in any Part of Poland; and their Chief Magiſtrate is dignify'd with the Title of General of Great Poland. Other Places of Note are,

1. Koſcien, about 33 Miles South-Weſt from Poſnen. It lies among Marſhes, and is defended with a broad deep Ditch, and a double Wall.

2. Miedzyrecze, on the Frontiers of Sileſia, 60 Miles South-Weſt from Poſnan. 'Tis defended by an impregnable Caſtle.

3. Slupeza, upon the Worta, 30 Miles South-Eaſt from Poſen, with ſtrong Fortifications. Moſt of the Buildings in this Country, except publick ones, are of Timber.

4. Liſſa, 33 Miles North-Weſt from Poſnania Town, was plundered and burnt by the Muſcovites in 1707; ſo that of 3000 Houſes, ſcarce 17 were left, becauſe the Inhabitants adhered to Staniſlaus. 'Tis noted alſo for a Victory obtained in the Neighbourhood by the Swedes over the Saxons in 1702, and afterwards in 1706; when the Saxons had rais'd Contributions of this Town and Frawenſtad, as part of Staniſlaus's Patrimony.

5. Frawenſtad, or Frauſtad, on the Frontiers of Sileſia, about 10 Miles South-Weſt from Liſſa, remarkable for a Victory obtained in the Neighbourhood over the Saxons by the Swedes in 1706, which proved fatal to King Auguſtus. In 1716, it was taken and plundered by the Malecontents, who cut off the Saxon Garriſon.

II. The Palatinate of KALISCH. It lies Eaſt of Poſnan. The Capital is of the ſame Name: Is in Lat. 52. Long. 18. on the Eaſt ſide of the River Proſne, about 40 Miles South-Eaſt from Poſnan. 'Tis very ancient, being mentioned by Ptolemy, and is Fortify'd by a ſtrong Wall. Its Caſtle was deſtroy'd by the Teutonic Knights. The moſt remarkable Thing here, is, a ſtately College of Jeſuits. 'Tis noted for a great Victory obtained in the Neighbourhood over the Swedes by King Auguſtus in 1706, after which he concluded a Peace with the King of Sweden, and renounced the Crown of Poland to Staniſlaus, King Auguſtus's own Country of Saxony being then over-run by the Swedes, and no other Way left him to relieve it. The other remarkable Towns are,

1. Gneſna or Gneſen. 25 Miles Eaſt from Poſnan, Lat. 52 ½. Long. 16. 20. 'Twas built by King Lechus, and formerly the Metropolis of all Poland, but now only of Great Poland. 'Twas burnt in 1613, and decays daily. 'Tis remarkable for being the Seat of the Cardinal Primate, and the See of an Archbiſhop, who is the Pope's Legate born, firſt

Senator and Regent, during an Inter-regnum. In the Cathedral there's a vaſt Treaſury of Gold, Silver, and curious enamel'd Veſſels, left to it by Sigiſmund III. other Kings, and ſome Archbiſhops. The Tomb of St. Adelbert, one of them, is covered with Silver; and Archbiſhop Firley increas'd its Treaſure, by leaving them many coſtly Veſſels and Veſtments, particularly his own Mitre, valued at 23000 Pounds Sterling. The Gates of Corinthian Braſs, curiouſly wrought, belong'd formerly to a Greek Monaſtery in the Taurica Cherſoneſus; and were brought hither by King Boleſlaus the Second. There are ſeveral other Towns in this Palatinate, built of Timber, among whom is Naklo ſituate among Marſhes, and defended by a ſtrong Caſtle. This Palatinate has 5 Senators.

III. The Palatinate of SIRADIA, lies South from Kaliſch, and Eaſt from Sileſia. The Capital is of the ſame Name, on the River Worta, Lat. 51. 40. Long. 18¼. about 22 Miles South-Eaſt from Kaliſch. 'Tis defended by a ſtrong Brick Wall and Caſtle. The Houſes are mean, low, and built of Wood. The Town and Territories were formerly a Dutchy, and the Appanage of the King's ſecond Son. Other Towns here are,

1. Petrikow, on a River about 55 Miles South-Eaſt from Sirad. 'Tis neat, ſtands among Marſhes, has a ruinous Palace belonging to the King, was the Seat of a Poliſh Dyet once a Year, and is ſtill ſo of a Sovereign Court for determining Differences 'twixt the Nobility and Appeals from inferiour Courts. 'Twas almoſt deſtroy'd by Fire in 1640.

2. Bielun or Widlim, about 22 Miles South from Sirad. 'Tis built of Brick, ſuffered much by the Swedes in 1656, but is ſince repair'd. Here are ſeveral other Towns not worth deſcribing. The Senators of this Palatinate are Five.

IV. The Palatinate of LENCICIA, or LANSHAT, lies Eaſt from Kaliſch and Sirad. The Capital is of the ſame Name, lies Lat. 52¼. near Long. 19. about 48 Miles South-Eaſt from Gneſna, and the like North-Eaſt from Kaliſch. 'Tis defended by a Caſtle built on a Rock, a Ditch, and a Brick Wall. 'Tis the Seat of one of the Little Dyets, and has a great Annual Fair. Other Places of Note are,

1. Piontkum, Piotrick, 10 Miles Weſt from the Capital, lies among Marſhes upon the River Bſure. 'Tis noted for a fine Monaſtery, and good Beer, which is carried over all the Kingdom.

2. Uniejovia, on the Worta, noted for a famous Caſtle.

3. Viaſdun, noted for its Strength and beautiful Caſtle, 30 Miles Eaſt from Lencitia.

V. The Palatinate of RAVA, lies Eaſt from Lencicia. The Capital and River, on which it ſtands, are of the ſame Name. 'Tis in Lat. 52. Long. 20. about 45 Miles South-Eaſt from Lencicia. Moſt of the Houſes are of Wood, but 'tis pretty Populous, and defended by a ſtrong Caſtle, where Priſoners of Quality, and part of the Treaſures of the Crown are kept. The Jeſuits have a famous College here. Other Places of Note are,

1. Lowitz, on the River Bſure, about 28 Miles North-Weſt from Rava. 'Tis populous, has many great Fairs much frequented by Merchants, a beautiful Church, and a Caſtle, and Palace, which is the ordinary Reſidence of the Archbiſhop of Gneſna.

2. Volboria, a populous Town where the Biſhop of Cujavia has a Palace.

3. Sochaczowa, about 18 Miles from Rava, defended by Palliſadoes and a ſtrong Caſtle on a Rock.

4. Goſtynen, on the River Bſure, about 28 Miles North-Weſt from Raua. It lies among Marſhes, and is noted for the Impriſonment and Death of Demetrius Zuski, the Czar of Muſcovy. This Palatinate has Four Senators.

II. The Second Province is CUJAVIA, which has Royal Pruſſia on the North, Kaliſck on the Weſt, Lencicia on the South, and Dobrin on the Eaſt. 'Tis divided into Two Palatinates.

I. That of BREZESTY, on the South ſide, ſo named from a Town that lies among Fens, Lat. 52.40. Long. 19. 10. about 25 Miles South from Thorn, and 25 Weſt from Plocsko. 'Tis built of Brick and Wood, defended by a ſtrong Wall and a deep Ditch, and is the Seat of a Palatine. Other Places of Note are,

1. Uladiſlaw, the Capital, on the River Weyſſel, Lat. 52. 50. Long. 19. 20. 6 Miles North-Eaſt from Brezeſty, and 20 South-Eaſt from Thorn. 'Tis the See of the Biſhop of this Province and of Pomerania, Suffragan of Gneſna. The Cathedral is old faſhioned, but rich in Plate, Ornaments, and Relicks. The Biſhop's Palace is ſtately, the Houſes generally of Brick, and the Caſtle pretty well Fortify'd. The Soil about the Town is Marſhy, but the Neighbouring Country fruitful in Corn, and ſends great Quantities to Dantzick.

2. Cauſwick, on the North ſide of the Lake Goplo, 30 Miles Weſt from Brezeſty. 'Tis next to Gneſna for Antiquity, and noted for a Brick Caſtle in the middle of a Lake, where Duke Popiel XI. of Poland was devoured by Rats as a juſt Puniſhment from Heaven for poiſoning his Relations at a Banquet.

3. Radziew, or Rodſchowa, 28 Miles North-Weſt from the Capital, on a great Lake. The Houſes are moſt of Timber, but the Town is noted for the Dyets of this Palatinate, and of Inouladiſlaw. This Palatinate has Five Senators.

II. The Second Palatinate is INOULADISLAW, North-Weſt from Brezeſty. 'Tis divided into Three Territories. The chief Town is Inowlocz, 28 Miles Weſt from Uladiſlaw. 'Tis ſmall, but defended by a ſtrong Caſtle. Here is no other Town of Note, except Bydgoſt, on the River Bard, by which Goods are brought up to it from the Weyſſel. 'Tis noted for a Trade in Salmon.

DOBRIN, is by ſome made a diſtinct Palatinate, and by others a Territory belonging to that of Brezeſty. It lies on the Eaſt of the Weyſſel, abounds with Fruit and Fiſh of all ſorts. Dobrin the Capital lies on the other ſide of the Weyſſel over againſt Uladiſlaw. The Houſes are of Timber. It had formerly a ſtrong Caſtle, which was demoliſhed by the Teutonic Knights. This Palatinate having been the Occaſion of many Quarrels betwixt them and Poland. The only other Town of Note here, is Gorzno, which is very ſtrong both by Nature and Art. This Palatinate has Three Senators.

III. The Province of MASSOVIA, or Dutchy of WARSAW, lies South from Ducal Pruſſia, and Eaſt from Cujavia. It had Dukes of its own till 1526, when it was ſubdued by Caſimir the Great. 'Tis 110 Miles from South to North, and 120 from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Tis ſaid to contain 40000 Nobles, 15000 of whom met at the Election of Sigiſmund III. 'Tis divided into the following Palatinates.

I. That of MASSOVIA, or WARSAW, which is the South Part of the Province, and very fruitful in Corn. The Capital is Warſaw, on the Weſt ſide of the Weyſſel, Lat. 52. 12. Long. 21. 'Tis a large, handſome, populous and trading City, defended by a double Wall, and a Ditch. The Kings of Poland keep their Court uſually here in a noble, large, ſquare Palace, built by Sigiſmund III. and beautified by his Succeſſors. The chief Church is that of St. John Baptiſt, a very fine Structure. The Caſtle and Arſenal are noble Buildings, and the Market-place ſtately. Here's a Wooden Bridge of excellent Workmanſhip over the River; and beyond it the King's Palace call'd Viaſdow, where the General Diet meets. 'Tis ſurrounded with fine Gardens and Groves, and in the Suburb of Cracow, which lies near it, there's a ſmall Chapel, erected as a Trophy of Victory over the Muſcovites, and for a Sepulchre for the Czar Demetrius Zusky, who with his two Brothers were taken Priſoners, and died in the Caſtle of Goſnin. About half a League from this City, near the Village of Wola, there is a Plain, where the Nobles meet and encamp in Tents, when they elect the King. Goods are brought to this City by the neighbouring Rivers, and ſent from hence to Dantzic. The King of Sweden took Poſſeſſion of this City in 1704, and Garriſon'd the Caſtle in 1705, when he demanded a Weekly Contribution of 2400 Florins for their Subſiſtence; but the next Year King Auguſtus recovered the Town and Caſtle, made the Garriſon Priſoners of War, and took ſeveral of Staniſlaus's Adherents. The Town paid the King 50000 Rixdollars to be exempted from Plunder. In 1705 the Swedes defeated the Saxons and Lithuanians near this City, when General Patkul, who commanded the Saxons, was taken Priſoner. Next Year Staniſlaus, Rival to King Auguſtus, was ſolemnly Crown'd here with his Queen. In 1707 the Muſcovites plundered the Palaces and Gardens of the King and Nobility here, and ſent the Statues and other things to Moſcow. Next Year here was a raging Plague. In 1712 King Auguſtus returned hither and held a General Dyet, who re-acknowledged his Title. In 1715, he ordered this City to be fortify'd with Intrenchments, to prevent any Surpriſe by the Swedes and their Confederates.

Other Places of Note in this Palatinate are,

1. Czersko, or Czeſtokow, which ſome make the Head of another Palatinate of the ſame Name. It lies on the Weſt ſide of the Weyſſel, 30 Miles South-Eaſt from Warſaw, and is a Fortreſs wherein that rich Treaſure call'd the Virgin's is kept; and the Nobility ſend their beſt Effects hither in a time of Invaſion. Charles Guſtavus of Sweden beſieged it in vain. It has always a Garriſon of 200 Prieſts, who are reinforced by Troops in caſe of need.

2. Wiſſegrod, which lies in a Plain 48 Miles North-Weſt from Warſaw, and is defended by a ſtrong Caſtle.

3. Ciekanow, noted for a ſtrong Caſtle in the middle of a Moraſs, about 55 Miles North-Eaſt from Warſaw.

4. Lumſa, a handſome City on the River Narow, 100 Miles North-Eaſt from Warſaw.

5. Pultovia, Pultowa, or Pultowsko, on the ſame River, 27 Miles North-Eaſt from Warſaw, the Reſidence of the Biſhop of Plosko. The Town is Wall'd, well built, the Publick Edifices ſtately, and the Caſtle ſtrong. This Palatinate has Eight Senators.

II. The Second Palatinate is that of PLOCZKO, on the Weſt ſide of the Country. The Capital of the ſame Name lies on a high Bank near the Eaſt ſide of the Weyſſel, Lat. 52. 40. Long. 19. 40. about 60 Miles North-Weſt from Warſaw. 'Tis a Biſhop's See; the Cathedral, the other Churches, and Religious Houſes are well endowed, eſpecially that of the Benedictines in the Suburbs, where they keep St. Sigiſmund's Head in a Gold Shrine. The Town is defended by a Caſtle, is very populous, has a good Trade, and the neighbouring Country is fruitful and pleaſant. This Palatinate has Five Senators.

III. The Third Palatinate is that of POLACHIA, or BIELK, on the Eaſt ſide of the Country. 'Twas united to Poland in 1569. The Capital is Bielk, on the River Biela, Lat. 52. 40. Long. 23. 40. 120 Miles North-Eaſt from Warſaw. 'Tis reckoned a Place of Strength, tho' the Fortifications and Caſtle be only of Timber. There are three other Towns in this Palatinate, where they coin Money and keep the King's Treaſure. They have Two Senators.

II. LITTLE POLAND

HAS Great Poland on the North, the Carpathian or Crapac Mountains, which divide it from Hungary, on the South, Part of Germany on the Weſt, Red Ruſſia and Poleſia on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 220 Miles from South-Weſt to North-Eaſt, and 180 where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Twas formerly over-run with Foreſts, and haunted by Robbers led by two Noblemen, whom it coſt a great deal of Blood to ſuppreſs. 'Tis divided into the three Palatinates of Cracow, Sendomir, and Lublin; they make up the Dioceſe of Cracow, which comprehends 1018 Churches, 11 of them Collegiate.

I. That of CRACOW, which borders on Germany and Hungary. The Capital of the ſame Name is in Lat. 50. 3. Long. 19. 38. 150 Miles South-Weſt from Warſaw. 'Tis thought to be Ptolemy's Corodunum, lies on a Rocky Bank upon the Weyſſel, is the largeſt and beſt built City in Poland; the Houſes are of Free-ſtone, four or five Stories high, and covered with Boards cut like Tiles. The City is very populous, and much frequented by Foreign Merchants. 'Tis divided into four Parts:

1. Cracow, or the Ancient City, encompaſſed with a Ditch and Wall, flank'd with round Brick Towers. In this ſtands the Caſtle or Palace, a Mile in Compaſs, built on a high Rock, and has a noble Proſpect over City and Country. 'Twas rebuilt by King Sigiſmund the Elder, who added the Gallery on the North ſide, from which there's one of the beſt Views in Europe. The Buildings are of Stone, very noble, in Form of a ſquare Court, with Galleries ſupported by Marble Pillars. The King's Apartments are adorned with curious Paintings and Statues. The Cathedral is within the Caſtle, but neither large nor of good Architecture. 'Tis the Sepulchre of the Kings, and the Place of their Coronation. The Reliques of St. Staniſlaus, formerly Biſhop and Patron of the Nation, are kept here. This Prelate being murdered by Boleſlaus the Bold, the Kings go on foot in Proceſſion to his Shrine, with all the Nobles, the Day before the Coronation, to expiate the Crime. Several of the Kings have offered many Veſſels of Silver and Gold at that Tomb; and Sigiſmund I. built a Silver Altar over it with Golden Crucifixes, and gave many rich Veſtments embroidered with Jewels to the Prieſts who ſerve at it, ſo that the Cathedral is very remarkble for its Chapter and Treaſury. It was made an Archbiſhoprick at firſt when they received Popery; but upon a Controverſy with the Pope, about receiving the Pall, the See was degraded into a Biſhoprick. The Biſhops have ſtill the Title of Archbiſhop, but ſcarce any other Remains of their ancient Honour than a rich Pall adorned with Jewels, and being Chancellors of the Univerſity, which contains 11 Colleges, where all ſorts of Learning are taught.

2. The Second Part of the City is named Caſimiria, and joined to the other by a Wooden Bridge over the River.

The Third is named Stradonia, and the Fourth Cleporia. The Streets are broad and ſtrait, but ill paved. The Publick Buildings are magnificent, and the Market-Place one of the largeſt in Europe. Here ſtands the Church of St. Mary, encompaſſed with four Rows of very fine Buildings. There are 50 other Churches in the Caſtle, City and Suburbs, and the Jeſuits and Dominicans have noble well-built Monaſteries. Here are 14 Grammar-Schools, in ſome of which they teach Univerſity Learning. The Reformation had early Footing here, becauſe ſome of the Students being murdered, and the Univerſity not having Juſtice done 'em, abundance of the Scholars left it, and went into Germany, from whence they returned and ſpread Luther's Principles all over the Nation. The Caſtellan of this City takes Place of the Palatine, and of all other Lay-Senators in the Nation, becauſe a former Palatine of this Place deſerted King Boleſlaus in the Muſcovite War. The Swedes took this City in 1655, but the Poles retook it in 1657. In 1702 the Swedes defeated the Poles near this City, entered the Town, and made them pay 60000 Dollars; but in 1705 the Poles retook it.

Dr. Connor gives the following Account of the Salt-Mines near this City. They are about 300 Geometrical Paces deep, and have ſo many Alleys and Paſſages that one can ſcarce go over them in a Week's time. They are generally ſo cold as is ſcarce to be endured; and the Winds are ſometimes ſo fierce that nothing can withſtand them. Their yearly Revenue is about 400000 French Livres, which is divided betwixt the King and Queen, and the Officers of State. They were diſcovered in 1548. The Salt is of four ſorts; one extreme hard, like Chryſtal; another ſofter, but clearer; a third white, but brittle; theſe three are all brackiſh, and the fourth ſomething freſher. On one ſide of the Mines there is a Stream of Salt Water, and on the other one of Freſh; and in ſome Places none can work, becauſe the Candle ſets the Vapours on fire.

Other Towns of Note here are,

1. Zator, about 28 Miles South-Weſt from Cracow. It has a ſtrong Caſtle, and gives Name to a Dutchy.

2. Severel, which alſo gives Name to a Dutchy, and is noted for a ſtrong Caſtle, and Mines of Silver and Lead in the Neighbourhood.

There is a famous Monaſtery without the Walls, where they pretend to have a Picture of the Virgin drawn by St. Luke: This brings ſuch a vaſt Quantity of Pilgrims, and rich Preſents of Plate, Jewels, and Veſtments to the Place, that 'tis reckoned the Loretto of Poland. The Monks are Maſters of a large Territory, and maintain a Garriſon of 300 Men, who are better clad and paid than any others of the Republick.

7. Slacovea, or Slankow, about 30 Miles North-Weſt from Cracow, gives Name to a Dutchy, and is noted for Silver Mines.

8. Ilkuſik, 20 Miles Weſt from Cracow. 'Tis defended by a Brick-Wall, noted for Mines of Silver and Lead, and the beſt Bread and Beer in Poland.

9. Wielicz, about 10 Miles Eaſt from Cracow. This, and another Town in the Neighbourhood, called Bochna, are noted for Quarries of excellent Rock-Salt, diſcovered in 1252. The Mines are below the Town, make one of the beſt Branches of the Revenue, and employ 1000 Men, and many Horſes; ſuch of them as work under Ground grow blind by the Sharpneſs of the Salt. Here are alſo ſeveral Salt Springs, the Water of which is boiled into Salt. (Our Philoſophical Tranſactions, N°. LXI. p. 1099. call them Salt Gem-Mines.) Here are three ſorts of Salt, one coarſe and black, another finer and whiter, and the third very white and clear, like Chryſtal. The Black Salt is cut out into great Pieces of three Poliſh Ells long, and one thick. The Inhabitants of Cracow have them at eight Florins a piece; whereas others muſt pay from 50 to 70. They lay the great Pieces before their Doors, that the Cattle may lick them. Theſe Pieces are ground by Mills and other Engines. Here are alſo Mines of Salt-Petre, Vitriol, Braſs, Gold, and Quarries of Marble.

In this Country there's a ſort of Manna, which they gather in May and June, ſweep it off the Graſs with Sieves, together with the Dew, and make ſeveral Diſhes of it. This Palatinate has ſeven Senators.

II. The Palatinate of SANDOMIR, or SANDOMITZ, lies Eaſt and North-Eaſt from that of Cracow. The Capital of the ſame Name is on the Weſt ſide of the Weiſſel, Lat. 50. 35. Long. 21. 28. 90 Miles North-Eaſt from Cracow. 'Tis pleaſant, defended by a ſtrong Caſtle, Walls and Out-works, built by Caſimir the Great, who died here of a Surfeit by eating too much of their Fruit, which is reckoned the beſt and faireſt in Poland. The moſt remarkable Structure in the Town is the Dominican Monaſtery. The chief Court of Judicature for the Palatinate is kept here. In 1704 King Auguſtus diſmantled it, becauſe not able to keep it. In 1715 a remarkable Battle happened near this City, betwixt the Saxons under Count Fleming, and the Poliſh Confederates, who were defeated, tho' advantagiouſly intrenched on the Banks of the Viſtula, which the Saxons paſs'd at the Front of their Camp. This Battle brought on a Submiſſion by the Confederates to King Auguſtus.

6. Rozentin, another Town belonging to the Biſhop of Cracow, 28 Miles North-Weſt from Sendomir. 'Tis beautiful, well fortified, and lies near the Foot of Mons Calvus, reckoned the higheſt in Poland, and noted for the famous Abbey of the Holy Croſs at the Top.

It was formerly populous, and had a conſiderable Academy, which was ſuppreſſed by publick Edict about 1660, to prevent the ſpreading of thoſe Opinions. Monſieur du Pleſs, in his Geographie Nouvelle, ſays, this Town was ruined in 1688.

12. Wiſlicz, on the River Nida, 44 Miles Weſt from Sendomir, is ſituate on a Rock. Moſt of the Houſes are of Timber, but the Cathedral of hewn Stone, with beautiful Cloiſters for the Canons. 14. Zawichoſt, on the Weiſſel, 15 Miles North from Sendomir, the Seat alſo of a Caſtellan, defended by a Caſtle and double Wall.

This Palatinate has nine Senators.

III. The Palatinate of LUBLIN, lies North-Eaſt from that of Sendomir, out of which it was taken. The Territory of Lucovia joins to it, and is ſaid to contain 2000 Gentlemens Houſes. Lublin the Capital is in Lat. 51. 10. Long. 22. 10. 60 Miles North-Eaſt from Sendomir, and 80 South-Eaſt from Warſaw, at the Foot of a Hill near the River Uſtricza. 'Tis pleaſant and well built, but not large, and defended by Moraſſes, a Caſtle and Walls. It has a conſiderable Trade, and is frequented by Merchants of ſeveral Nations, eſpecially during their Fairs, of which they have four in a Year that laſt a Month each. The Suburbs are inhabited by Jews. St. Michael's Church, St. Bridget's Monaſtery, and ſeveral others here, are noble Structures. The Town is alſo the Seat of one of the Supreme Courts of Judicature in Poland, from whence there's no Appeal but to the Dyet. In 1707, the Great Council here voted the Throne of Poland vacant.

III. RED RUSSIA,

ANCIENTLY named Roxalania, from the Roxallans its Inhabitants. 'Tis divided into the three Provinces of Red Ruſſia Proper, Volhinia, and Podolia, each of which have their Subdiviſions: they make together a very large Country, about 530 Miles from Weſt to Eaſt, and 230 from South to North; but a great Part of the Ukrain belongs now to Muſcovy. 'Twas called Red Ruſſia, becauſe it abounds with Red Clay, and was formerly poſſeſſed by the Ruſſians: and ſome called it Black, becauſe of the Black Soil in the Woods. 'Tis alſo called Little Ruſſia, Ruſſia, to diſtinguiſh it from Great Ruſſia, or Muſcovy. 'Tis in general fruitful, but not much cultivated, becauſe of the Invaſions of the Turks and Tartars. 'Twas formerly ſubject to its own Princes, who were formidable to their Neighbours till 1341, that Caſimir the Great ſubdued and annexed it to Poland.

The firſt Province, RED RUSSIA PROPER, has the Palatinate of Cracow on the Weſt, Volhinia and Podolia on the Eaſt, Poleſia on the North, and Part of Hungary and Tranſilvania on the South. It abounds with Corn, Honey, Beaſts, and Freſh-water Fiſh of moſt ſorts; and on the Banks of the River San there are found Trees as hard and black as Ebony. The Vulgar think they have lain there ſince the Flood; but 'tis probable they have fallen through Age, or been waſhed down by Floods. This Province is divided into the following Palatinates:

I. The Palatinate of RUSSIA, or LEMBERG, the South Part of the Country, Eaſt from Cracow, and North from Hungary. The Capital is Lemberg, Leopold, or Lunow. 'Twas founded by Prince Leo in 1289, lies in Lat. 49. 46. Long. 23. 52. 120 Miles South South-Eaſt from Cracow, the like South-Eaſt from Warſaw, and about 80 North-Eaſt from the Borders of Hungary. It ſtands on the River Peltew, among Hills; 'tis pretty large, well built, has fair Churches richly adorned, and is ſtrong, being defended by a Caſtle within the Walls, and by another upon a high Mountain without. It has a good Trade, which is chiefly managed by foreign Merchants who reſide here. It is an Archbiſhop's See, and has an Academy ſupplied by Profeſſors from that of Cracow, and Learned Men are very favourably entertained by the City. The Town is not only provided with Fiſh for its own Conſumption, from the numerous Ponds belonging to it, and from the neighbouring Rivers, but ſalts great Quantities, and tranſports them over Poland. The Coſſacks beſieged it in vain with 120000 Men; the Turks took it in 1672, but reſtored it by Treaty. 'Tis obſerved, that the Archbiſhop of this Town calls himſelf both a Temporal and a Spiritual Lord. The Armenians who live here have an Archbiſhop, who owns the Pope's Authority; and the Greeks in this City have a Biſhop, who depends on the Patriarch of Conſtantinople. In 1695 there was a bloody Engagement under the Walls of this Town, betwixt 3000 Poles and 70000 Tartars, headed by their Sultan, who were defeated and many of them cut off in their Retreat by the Coſſacks, who made themſelves Maſters of the Paſſes through which they were to retire. In 1704 this Town was ſtormed by Charles XII. of Sweden, who uſed the Inhabitants, but particularly the Jews, with great Cruelty, obliged the Town to pay 300000 Crowns to prevent being plundered, notwithſtanding which he ruin'd the Town, and burſt in pieces 140 Cannon, which he could not carry off. The Jeſuits were the chief Promoters of this Cruelty, becauſe the Town was zealous for King Auguſtus. In 1707 the Confederates held a great Council here, wherein they renewed the Confederacy of Sendomir, after Auguſtus had renounced. In 1716 it was ſurpriſed by the Confederates againſt King Auguſtus, who impoſed very hard Terms upon the Crown General and the Archbiſhop of the Place, but a few Days after was retaken by King Auguſtus's Saxon Troops, and the Confederate Garriſon made Priſoners of War. The Saxons evacuated the ſame again upon a Suſpenſion of Arms with the Confederates.

Other Towns in this Diſtrict are,

1. Grodeck, about 50 Miles South-Weſt from Lemberg. 'Tis ſurrounded with Bogs, and defended by a Caſtle and Palliſadoes.

2. Javarow, or Javeriſvia, 35 Miles Weſt from Lemberg, famed for a Natural Bath good againſt ſtubborn Diſtempers, of which Sixtus Leo, a noted Poliſh Phyſician, writ a Treatiſe. The Court often reſides here.

3. Zolkiew, the Seat of the famous King John Sobieski. 'Tis defended by a Caſtle, has many pleaſant Gardens, and a Church built of divers ſorts of Marble.

4. Premiſlaw, upon the River San, 80 Miles South-Weſt from Lemberg. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, defended by a Caſtle on a Hill, and is a pleaſant, populous, and trading City. The Ruſſians have alſo a Biſhop here, and the Jeſuits a College. The King has a Park in the Neighbourhood, with Wild Beaſts of all ſorts, and the adjacent Country has many Caſtles for its Defence againſt the Turks and Tartars.

5. Jaroſlaw, on the River San, 70 Miles Weſt from Lemberg. 'Tis defended by a Caſtle, and noted for its Ladyday Fair, the moſt famous in Poland. Merchants coming then hither with Goods from Perſia, Conſtantinople, Venice, Muſcovy and Holland. There's uſually brought hither at that time above 400000 Black Cattle, and 200000 Horſes. The Jeſuits have a College here, and without the Town there's a ſtately Nunnery of modern Architecture.

6. Lencut, or Lanſut, 85 Miles Weſt from Lemberg. 'Tis noted for a ſtrong Caſtle as a Defence againſt the Tartars, and for ſeveral magnificent Churches.

7. Reſovia, remarkable for a ſtrong Caſtle and annual Fair, and a Linnen Manufactory managed by the Poſterity of the Germans whom Caſimir the Great took Priſoners, and ſettled here to carry on that Trade. It ſtands on the River Wiſtoch, 6 Miles South-Weſt from the former.

The South-Eaſt Part of Red Ruſſia is call'd POCUTIA, or the Diſtrict of HALICKZ. It has the Mountains of Tranſilvania on the South and Weſt, and Moldavia on the Eaſt, and gives Riſe to the River Nieſter, which divides it into two Parts. The chief Towns here are,

1. Halicz, on the Nieſter, about 58 Miles South-Eaſt from Lemberg. It was formerly the Metropolis of the Ruſſian Kingdom, is a large Town betwixt the Conflux of the Nieſter and Prut, but the Houſes are of Wood. 'Tis defended by a Caſtle. The Inhabitants are Booriſh, and more inclined to Husbandry than Trade.

2. Coloni, near the River Prut, 88 Miles South-Eaſt from Lemberg. 'Tis much frequented on account of its fine Salt, with which it furniſhes moſt of the Country, there being many Springs here whoſe Waters are boiled up into Salt.

3. Croſna, it ſtands on the River Wiſtock, 84 Miles South-Weſt from Lemberg. 'Tis the Staple of Hungary, whoſe Wines and other Merchandize are brought hither, and diſpoſed of at their Fairs, which are more frequented than thoſe of their Neighbours.

4. Snyatin, about 85 Miles South-Eaſt from Lemberg, near the Frontiers of Moldavia, and is by ſome reckoned the Capital of Pocutia.

Here are ſeveral other Places of Strength, to defend the Country againſt the Incurſions of the Tartars. The Palatinate of Lemberg has nine Senators.

II. The Palatinate of BELCZ. It lies Eaſt from the North Part of Red Ruſſia Proper, and is divided into ſeveral Territories. Belcz the Capital is on the River Bug, about 35 Miles North-Weſt from Lemberg. 'Tis defended by Marſhes, and the Houſes are of Timber.

The only other Place of Note here is Zamoſc, about 48 Miles North-Weſt from Belcz. 'Tis erected into a Principality, was built by Zamoſky, Great Chancellor of Poland, and is ſituated in a pleaſant Plain upon a Lake near the River Veſne. It has an Univerſity, and was in vain beſieged by the Coſſacks in 1651. In 1703 it was taken by the Swedes, after being twice repulſed, and they found a great Booty here, the neighbouring Country having ſent their Effects hither as a Place of Security. 'Twas afterward the chief Hold of the Poliſh Confederates, who were drove out here by the Saxons in 1715. This Palatinate has no Palatine or Senators.

III. The Palatinate of CHELM, lies North from Belcz, and Eaſt from Lublin. Chelm the Capital is in Lat. 57. 6. Long. 23. 5. about 85 Miles North-Weſt from Lemberg. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, a ſmall City, defended by a Caſtle of Timber, and has been often deſtroyed by Turks and Tartars. This Palatinate has three Senators.

The Second Province of Red Ruſſia is VOLHINIA, which lies Eaſt from the Palatinate of Chelm and Belcz, and is divided into the Upper and Lower Palatinates, which together are about 470 Miles from South-Eaſt to North-Weſt, and about 110 where broadeſt.

I. The UPPER VOLHINIA, called alſo the Palatinate of LUCKO, has Chelm and Belcz on the Weſt. The Capital is Lucko, on the River Ster, Lat. 50. 48. Long. 25. 6. 83 Miles North-Eaſt from Lemberg. The City is large, and has a greater number of Proteſtants, Greeks, and Jews, than Papiſts. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Gneſna. The Trade is chiefly managed by Jews and Armenians. Other Towns of Note are,

1. Krzeminieck, 40 Miles South-Eaſt from Lucko. It ſtands on a Hill, is the Capital of its Diſtrict, and defended by a Caſtle on a Rock. It has been frequently plundered by the Tartars.

2. Oſtrog, or Oſtrozeck, about 118 Miles Eaſt from Lucko, has the Title of a Dutchy, and had formerly Dukes of its own, to whom a great part of the Country was ſubject.

3. Olyka and Zaſlaw, in this Palatinate, bear alſo the Title of Dutchies.

II. The LOWER VOLHINIA, or Palatinate of KIOW, lies Eaſt from Upper Volhinia, and is a very large Country. 'Twas anciently a Part of the Ukrain, the Country of the Coſſacks. It was almoſt ruined by the Muſcovites and a Plague in 1708, and again in 1712, the Czar thinking then to force the Coſſacks to accept his Offers of Lands in his Country. The Poles have only a few Towns left here, as,

1. Bialacerkiew, about 64 Miles South-Weſt from Kiow, with Zerkaſſe and Czernobel, upon the River Uſs.

Kiow the Capital, with its Palatinate, being in the Hands of the Muſcovites, is deſcribed in its proper Place. We ſhall add here, that under the adjacent Mountains there are divers Grotto's, where a great number of Humane Bodies are preſerved entire, tho' buried many Years ago; among whom are two Princes in the Habits they uſed to wear: The Ruſſian Monks ſhew them to Travellers; and 'tis obſerved that they are not ſo hard and black as the Egyptian Mummies. The Place where they are preſerved is dry and ſandy.

Having mentioned this to be the Country of the Coſſacks, 'tis proper here to give an Account of them.

The COSSACKS.

SOME derive the Name from Coſa, which ſignifies a Goat, becauſe they are nimble; in the Sclavonic it ſignifies a Scythe, which is their uſual Weapon; and in the Ruſſian it ſignifies a Freebooter, or Plunderer, which agrees very well with the Temper of the People. They are thought to have come from the Iſlands, or Cataracts near the Mouth of the Boryſthenes, or Nieper, and therefore were called Zaporienſes, from the Word Porowis, which ſignifies Cataracts and Rocks. Their chief Habitation was betwixt the Rivers Nieſter and Nieper, but they extended themſelves a great way Eaſt of the latter. Their Origin is reckon'd to be from a Company of Rovers aſſembled together from Red Ruſſia, Podolia and Volhinia, to practiſe Piracy in the Black Sea. Their firſt conſiderable Appearance, as an united Body, was in 1548, in the Reign of Sigiſmund I. of Poland, when they called themſelves Voluntiers, aſſembled for Defence of their Country againſt the Turks and Tartars, whom they frequently intercepted at the Paſſes of the Nieper, as returning with their Prey. At firſt they did not exceed 6000 under Euſtachius Doſcovicius, their General, but were quickly joined by Multitudes to ſhare in their Booty; ſo that they became formidable to all their Neighbours, and not only committed Piracies on the Black Sea, but made Deſcents upon Natolia, and ravaged the Country as far as the Walls of Conſtantinople. What Booty they did not immediately conſume, they laid up in one of the Iſlands in the Mouth of the Boryſthenes, which was their Magazine, and there they generally rendezvous'd every Spring to go upon their Expeditions. Stephen Bathori, King of Poland, who begun his Reign in 1576, conſidering of what uſe they might be to defend his Country againſt the Turks and Tartars, treated with them, formed them into a Regular Body, and made uſe of them as Infantry. He gave them the Town and Territories of Trehimorow, in the Palatinate of Kiow, upon the Boryſthenes, which Town they made their Magazine, and the Reſidence of their Governour General, whom they choſe, and gave him Power to name his inferiour Officers. Stephen Bathori joined to the Coſſacks 20000 Horſe, whom he maintained out of his own Revenue. By this means the Country betwixt the Nieſter and Nieper was repeopled with Towns and Colonies, which was a great Advantage to the Crown of Poland; but the Coſſacks becoming ſenſible of their own Strength

Strength and Uſefulneſs to the Poles, reſolved to throw off their Dependance on that Crown. They rebelled firſt in 1587, under their General John Podkowa, but he was taken, and beheaded in 1596. They continued peaceable under Sigiſmund III. for a while, but rebelled again when forbid to commit Piracies on the Turks, and had ſome Advantage over the Poles, but were at laſt defeated, and forced to deliver up their General, who was beheaded. We hear little more of them till 1637, when they rebelled again on the following Occaſion. Their Numbers being mightily increaſed by Poliſh Boors, who came to enjoy a Share in their Privileges and Booty, the Poliſh Lords who had Eſtates in the Ukrain, adviſed the King to abridge the Liberties of the Coſſacks, and to build Forts on the Boryſthenes to curb them. The Coſſacks took Arms ſeveral times to oppoſe this, but being defeated, they retired, and fortified themſelves on the River Stareza, beyond the Boryſthenes. The Poles having loſt abundance of Men in endeavouring to ſuppreſs them; thought fit to promiſe them their antient Privileges, and to reſtore their Militia of 6000 Men under a General appointed by the King. Upon this the Coſſacks returned, and laid down their Arms, but, contrary to Treaty, were oppreſſed by the Poles, who among other things took their Churches from them, becauſe they were of the Greek Communion. Thus it continued till the Tartars over-ran a great Part of the Ukrain, when King Uladiſlaus IV. thought fit to reſtore the Coſſacks to their Privileges, and appointed Theodore Chmielinski to be their General. But this General and the Coſſacks being again oppreſſed by the Poles, they raiſed 200000 Men, who ravaged the Country, and did what Miſchief they could to the Poliſh Nobility, who complaining of it to the King, he rebuked them for breaking their Faith to the Coſſacks. King John Caſimir did alſo favour thoſe People underhand, and deſigned to make uſe of them for the Conqueſt of Crim Tartary, at which the Poliſh Nobility being diſſatisfied, they raiſed two Armies againſt the Coſſacks, who defeated them. The Poles in Revenge ſurpriſed the City of Kiow, while General Chmielinski was celebrating the Nuptials of his Son with the Prince of Wallachia's Daughter, plundered the Town, and took the Grecian Patriarch Priſoner. Tho' the King diſowned this Action, Chmielinski called in the Crim Tartar with 100000 Horſe to invade the Poles. The King marched againſt him in Perſon, and routed him with a much inferiour Army; yet Chmielinski gathering up the Remains of his Troops, did ſo haraſs the Country, that the King was obliged to make a new Agreement with him in 1649. The Nobility were diſcontented, and ſaid, the King had granted him too much, which Chmielinski being aware of, he made an Alliance with the Grand Seignior and the Prince of Moldavia, and put himſelf under the Protection of the Turks. This occaſioned a new War in 1651, when the Coſſacks and their Confederates took Smolensko and Wilna in Lithuania, ravaged the Country, and committed great Barbatities. The Muſcovites being in Confederacy with them, got Poſſeſſion of the Provinces of Smolensko and Severia, and the greateſt Part of the Palatinate of Kiow, which were confirmed to them by the Treaty of Oliva in 1666. After this, part of the Coſſacks ſubmitted to the Muſcovites, others to the Turks and Tartars, and ſome continued ſubject to the Poles, who are therefore called Loyal Coſſacks. By an Agreement betwixt the Poles and the Sultan in 1677, the Poliſh Ukrain and the Coſſacks there were made ſubject to the Turks, with Liberty to chuſe their own General or Prince, dependant on the Grand Seignior. But 'twas reſtored to the Poles by the Treaty of Carlowitz in 1699.

The Country is very fruitful in Corn, but the People having no Conveniency to export it, leave much of their Land uncultivated. They have abundance of Salt-Petre, and are dextrous at making Gunpowder, with both which they furniſh other Nations. They have many Mines of Arſenic, which gives a poiſonous Quality to their Water, and is thought to occaſion that Diſtemper called the Plica, which affects both themſelves and their Horſes. Thoſe who are ſeiſed with it loſe the uſe of their Limbs, and have great Pains in their Nerves, which continue generally for a Year; after that they fall into an exceſſive Sweat, which glews their Hair together, and gives it a nauſeous Smell; and if they cut their Hair, the Humour falls in their Eyes and makes them blind. The Manes of their infected Horſes are alſo glewed together, and if cut off, they either die, run mad, or fall blind and lame. Some are born with this Diſtemper, and in that caſe it decreaſes by degrees. Dr. Connor ſays, that it is ſometimes cured by Medecines that are uſed for Venereal Diſtempers. In Summer they have ſometimes ſuch prodigious numbers of Flies and Graſs-hoppers, that they form a Cloud of ſeveral Leagues in Length and Breadth, darken the Air, and eat up the Corn in a few Hours. They abound with Wild Horſes, which they ſell in the Markets, and think them better Food than Beef or Veal. Here is a Beaſt called Bobac, which reſembles a Guinea-Pig. They dig Holes in the Ground, which they enter in October, and don't come out till April. They have ſeparate Apartments for their Proviſions, Lodgings, and their Dead. They live together by eight or nine Herds in thoſe Caves; and when they go out for Proviſions, they ſet a Centinel, who makes a Noiſe when he ſees any body, and then they run to their Holes. They are eaſily tamed, and very diverting. Here's another Beaſt call'd Sommaky, which reſembles a Goat, but has a beautiful Fur that looks like Satten, and white, ſmooth, ſhining Horns.

The Coſſacks are generally of the Greek Church. Their Metropolitan lives at Kiow, and is ſubject to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople. Moſt of their Gentry are Papiſts, and ſome of them Proteſtants. 'Tis common here for the Maids to court the young Men, and go to their Father's Houſes, where they make no ſcruple to reveal their Paſſion, and will ſcarce admit of a Denial, but ſtay till their Importunity prevails. The Clergy will not allow the young Women in this Caſe to be treated rudely, and the Parents muſt not turn them out, for that is reckoned ſuch a Diſgrace, that all the young Women's Kindred wou'd reſent it.

The Coſſacks live chiefly by Fiſhing, Hunting, and Plunder, ſpend what they get very freely with their Companions, and take little Care for the time to come. When they go upon Naval Expeditions, they rendezvous on the Iſlands in the Boriſthenes, chuſe their General, and for moſt part ſet out about the Beginning of June, and return about the firſt of Auguſt. Their Boats are about 60 Foot long, 12 deep, and 12 wide. They are built very light, without Decks, have a Stern at each End, and 12 or 15 Oars on a Side. They encompaſs them round with a Border of Reeds as big as a Barrel, and faſten them to the Boats with Ropes. This prevents their ſinking even tho' they happen to leak. They have a ſorry Maſt and Sail, which they don't uſe but in fair Weather. They have about 60 Men in a Boat, with 5 or 6 Falconets, and each Man has 2 Firelocks. They wait for a dark Night that they may paſs by the Turkiſh Galleys which lie at Oczacow, near the Mouth of the Boriſthenes to intercept them. They are only about two Foot and an half above Water, ſo that they are not eaſily perceiv'd at Night, which is the chief time for ſurprizing and boarding Ships; and when they take any, they ſink them as ſoon as they have unloaded the Goods, becauſe they are of no uſe to them. When they ſee any of the Turkiſh Gallies by Day, they row from them among the Reeds and Rocks whither they can't be purſued. When the Turks have notice of their being abroad, they diſpatch Couriers to all the Places on the Black-Sea, that the People may be on their Guard; but the Coſſacks are generally too nimble for them. They ſeldom uſe Horſe in War, but are excellent Soldiers on Foot, capable of all manner of Fatigue, and very obedient to their Commanders. They are dextrous at their Fire Arms, and make uſe of Scythes ſet longways upon Poles, and are very skilful in uſing them. When they march in the Plains and Deſarts of the Poles and Tartars, they make moving Intrenchments of their Baggage Waggons; and there are Inſtances, that 1000 of them thus intrenched have repulſed 5 or 6000 Tartars on Horſeback.

The chief Centre of their Retreats is Czyrkaſſy near the Nieper, Lat. 49. 48. Long. 31. 32. 'Twas burnt by the Poles in 1636, but ſince repaired. Their other Towns are Kryło, about 50 Miles further down the River, and Cremierezo, the loweſt Town on that River; the Country below it being deſart. The Coſſacks are chiefly ſupply'd with Fiſh by Sumar, which they call the holy River. It falls into the Weſt ſide of the Nieper, about 15 Miles above Czyrkaſſy, where in the Spring they catch Sturgeons and Herrings. By this River they are alſo ſupplied with Honey, Wax, Timber, &c. from the Neighbouring Countries. In 1635, the Poles built a Fort named Kudack, Lat. 49. 6. Long. 34. 20. to be a Curb upon the Coſſacks, it lying near the firſt of their Cataracts in the Nieper. There are 13 Rows of them which croſs the River, and make the Navigation of it to the Black Sea impracticable to any others but the Coſſacks. Some of theſe Rocks are under Water, and ſome above, and ſo near to one another, that they ſtop the Courſe of the River; ſo that when 'tis low, they form Cataracts of 15 Foot high, but when the Snow melts, they are all cover'd with Water except the 7th Row. Near the loweſt Cataract, the River is not above 150 Paces broad, and here the Tartars commonly paſs it. Below that Place lies the Iſle Tomahouka, where the Coſſacks commonly rendezvous, but their Principal Retreat is below Czertomelick, about 72 Miles from the Mouth of the River, upon an Iſland ſurrounded with a vaſt number of ſmall ones, all of them covered with large Reeds and Canes, which hide the Paſſages between the Iſlands, and make a Labyrinth known only to the Coſſacks; and here they lay up their Money and Ordnance.

The Turks have ſeveral times attempted this Place with their Gallies, but to their great Loſs; for they were ſo entangled among thoſe Iſlands, that they could not get out, but fell a Prey to the Coſſacks. The River is 3 Miles broad here, and the Coſſacks and Tartars paſs it with flat bottom'd Boats, at the Stern of which they faſten croſs Poles, to which they tie the Heads of their Horſes, which ſwim over after them. The Houſes and Forts of the Coſſacks are generally made of Wood and Earth, which they reckon better againſt Cannon than Brick, but they are ſoon ſet on Fire. Their Language is a Dialect of the Poliſh, but ſmoother, and full of Diminutives, which make it agreeable to the Ear.

The Third Province of Red Ruſſia is PODOLIA, divided into Upper and Lower. It lies Eaſt from Red Ruſſia Proper, South from Upper Volhinia, and North from Moldavia, being ſeparated from it by the River Nieſter. 'Tis 340 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and about 110 where broadeſt from South to North.

UPPER PODOLIA is the Weſt Part of the Country, fruitful, tho' Mountainous in ſome Parts, and abounds with Honey. The Valleys are well Water'd by Rivers, but both Podolia's are liable to the Incurſions of the Turks, Tartars, and Coſſacks. Caminiec the Capital, lies on the River Smotrick, Lat. 48. 50. Long. 25. 52. about 100 Miles from Lemberg, and 10 North from the River Nieſter. It has held out many Attacks by the Turks and Tartars, was much damaged by Fire in 1669, and taken by the Turks in 1672. In 1694, the Poles defeated 40000 Turks and Tartars in the Neighbourhood as they were coming to put Relief into the Place, took 4000 Waggons, with their Money, Proviſions, and rich Merchandize, and afterward ravaged Budziack Tartary. In 1698 there was a ſharp Action betwixt the Poles and Tartars near this Place; the Tartars had the Advantage at firſt, but at laſt were routed with the Loſs of about 20000 Men. The Town was reſtor'd with the adjacent Country, and the Ukrain to the Poles, by the Treaty of Carlowitz in 1699, when the Dyet reſolv'd that this Town and Podolia ſhould be free from Taxes for 10 Years. 'Tis populous, well built, and the See of two Biſhops, one a Papiſt, and the other an Armenian. The Greeks of Podolia pleaded to be reſtored to their Churches here, but were denied. 'Tis encompaſſed with high Rocks, fortified with good Walls, and defended by a ſtrong Caſtle; ſo that 'tis reckoned the Key of Poland, and its beſt Fortreſs on this ſide. Other Places of Note here, are,

1. Trambowla, about 35 Miles North-Weſt from Caminiec; 'tis defended by a ſtrong Caſtle upon a neighbouring Mountain.

2. Latyczow, or Lutezow, about 70 Miles North-Eaſt from Caminiec. 'Tis well fortified, has a ſtrong Caſtle, and Warlike Inhabitants.

3. Bar, a ſtrong Town on the River Kious, 72 Miles North-Eaſt from Caminiec. 'Tis ſurrounded with Lakes, and defended by a Caſtle on a Rock.

4. Czortikow, a fortified Town with a ſtrong Caſtle.

5. Chinielnick, on the River Bug, 90 Miles North-Eaſt from Caminiec. It lies among Marſhes, and is defended by a Caſtle and Palliſadoes.

6. Muedziboſz, a Town ſituated among Marſhes. 'Tis defended by a Caſtle, and has no Avenue but by Wooden Bridges. This Palatinate has 4 Senators.

LOWER PODOLIA lies East from the Upper. In the Deſarts here, there's a Lake whoſe Waters are condens'd into Salt by the Heat of the Sun. The Capital is Braclaw, on the River Bog, Lat. 48. 56. Long. 28. 25. about 110 Miles East from Caminiec. It was taken by the Turks in 1672, but reſtor'd by Treaty in 1699. Other Places of Note are,

1. Winnicza, on the ſame River, 40 Miles North-Weſt from Braclaw. It was taken by the Coſſacks in 1560. 'Tis noted for a Court of Juſtice, and a College of Jeſuits.

2. Cazarne, a fortified Town on the Borders of Tartary Oczacow, near the River Nieſter. This Palatinate has only 2 Senators.

IV. PRUSSIA.

THE Fourth Diviſion of Poland is Pruſſia Royal, and Ducal. In general it has the Baltick Sea, and part of Samogitia on the North, Pomerania on the Weſt, Great Poland on the South, and Lithuania on the Eaſt. The Country is about 230 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and about 110 where broadeſt, from South to North. Authors are divided about the Origin of the Name, but it came moſt probably from the Boruſſi, its ancient Inhabitants, which is ſtrengthened by the Affinity of their Language with that of Ruſſia, of which it is a Dialect.

This Country is very fruitful, being water'd with 2037 Rivers and Lakes, as the Monks have reckon'd, which ſupply the Inhabitants with plenty of Fiſh. It abounds with Cattle, wild Beaſts, and Fruit of all Sorts. The Climate is temperate, conſidering its Northerly Situation, betwixt Lat. 53. and 55. and it has a very conſiderable Trade by Dantzic, Conningsberg, &c. ſo that the Inhabitants are richer than in any other Province of Poland. A great deal of Glaſs is made in this Country of the Aſhes of Wood and Pebbles.

It was famous among the Ancients, becauſe of the Amber found on its Coaſt, from whence it was tranſported all over Europe. The Learned are much divided about the Nature and Riſe of Amber; ſome alledge it to be the Gum of a Tree, or to proceed from Roſin or Turpentine that drops from the Fir. Athanaſius Kircher thought it was a Bituminous Subſtance, which roſe from the bottom of the Sea, and was congeal'd by the Water, but no ſuch Bitumen has ever been obſerv'd in thoſe Seas: Beſides, Veins of Amber being found in Places far diſtant from the Sea, prove this to be a Miſtake. Mr. Hartman in his Treatiſe de Succino Pruſſiaco, gives this Account of it; Since it can neither be melted, nor is malleable, it can't be Metal, and being too ſolid to come under the Species of Sulphur or Bitumen, he ranks it among precious Stones. He thinks it to be Petreolum coagulated; while it is liquid, he calls it Petreolum; when thicker and clammy, Naphtha; when thicker, Bitumen; but when it becomes hard or Stony, he calls it Amber. 'Tis of ſeveral Colours, as White, Yellow, Red, and Black, and the laſt he calls Jet. When our Men broke the Rocks near Tangier, to form the Mole, they often found Amber in the Clefts of the Stones. The Marquiſs de Bonac, Envoy from France to the King of Sweden, gave an Account to the Royal Academy of Sciences at Paris, that in ſome Places near Dantzic, he ſaw yellow Mineral Amber of the ſame Sort with that found on the Coaſt. The Academy obſerv'd, that the Inſects ſometimes found inclos'd in it, are all of the Terreſtial Kind, as Bees, Ants, &c. from whence they inferr'd, that it probably diſtils from Rocks, like Petreolum, and intangles thoſe Inſects when liquid; ſo that what Amber is found on the Coaſt, is probably broke off from the Rocks by the Waves, or runs from Veins into the Sea where it is congeal'd. Lake Habus, in this Country, which has a Communication with the Sea, affords Amber, which the People take up with Hoſe-Nets, faſten'd to long Poles, when the Tide flows, and ſometimes catch Pieces as big as one's Fiſt. Some ſay, that it floats on the Sea like Oil on the Coaſts of Pomerania, where the People take it up, and after it is expoſed to the Air, it grows hard like Coral. 'Tis reckoned good againſt Bleeding at the Noſe, Agues, Falling-Sickneſs, Dropſies, the Stone, Cholick, Weakneſs of the Stomach, and Yellow-Jaundice.

ROYAL or POLISH PRUSSIA, is the Weſtern Part, about 130 Miles long from Eaſt to Weſt, and 110 where broadeſt from South to North. It has Pomerania on the Weſt, Ducal Pruſſia on the Eaſt; and is divided into Three Palatinates.

I. The Palatinate of POMERELLIA or POLISH POMERANIA, which has Brandenburg Pomerania on the Weſt, and the River Weyſſel on the Eaſt. The Capital is Dantzick, Lat. 54. 22. Long. 19. about 145 Miles North-Weſt from Warſaw. It lies on a Branch of the Weyſſel, about 4 Miles above where it falls into the Sea; is one of the chief Hans-Towns, and greateſt trading Cities in Europe. It was but a Village till 1295, when King Premiſlaus erected it into a City. This City has ſuffered many Revolutions. About the Year 1100, the Danes had it, then the Poles. In 1345 the Teutonic Knights were Maſters of it, who Wall'd it in 1343, and their Maſter Conrad Wallenrodt built the chief Part of the City, call'd De Rechte Stadt in 1390. In 1434, Caſimir III. King of Poland, regain'd it, and granted great Privileges to the Citizens; who afterwards, in Defence of the Augsburg Confeſſion, ſided with Maximilian of Auſtria againſt the Poles, which provok'd King Stephen Bathori to beſiege them in 1577, and likewiſe to proſcribe them; but he was oblig'd to raiſe the Siege, and by the Mediation of other Princes, they were reſtor'd to their Religion and Liberties in 1579; and in 1632, the City was made a Member of the State, and allowed a Voice in electing the King. In 1656, they vigorouſly repulſed the Swedes, and adhered to the Intereſt of King John Caſimir, which retriv'd his Affairs when almoſt deſperate, and the Swedes in Poſſeſſion of moſt of the Kingdom. This City is divided into Three Parts, viz. The Voor-Stadt or Fore City, the Alt-Stadt or Old City, the Rechte-Stadt or the Emperor's City; all encompaſſed with a high Wall, ſo broad, that Coaches eaſily go round upon it. The Fortifications are of a vaſt Extent, but being commanded by two Hills on the South-Weſt. They can't well hold out a Siege. 'Tis Water'd by the Rivers Motlave and the Radaun, on which there are ſeveral Mills: One on the Radaun yields the State 4320 Pounds Sterling per Annum, beſides the Profit it brings the Proprietors. The Houſes are part of Stone, and part of Brick, and generally Six or Seven Stories high. St. Mary's Church is a very ſtately Fabric, has 48 Altars, and 3722 Windows. The Front coſt 24000 Rixdollars. The Town-houſe, is magnificent, and has a very high Spire. The Arſenal, Exchange, the Place of St. Dominic, and the Jeſuit's College are noble Structures. There are 20 Pariſhes in the City and Suburbs; one half of the latter belongs to the Crown, and the other to the City. They have Three Magazines, well provided with Stores and Ammunition for War. Here are many Granaries of Seven and Nine Stories high, with Funnels to let the Corn down from one Story to another, which ſaves a great deal of Labour and Charge. They are encompaſſed with Water, ſo that Ships lie cloſe to them to take in their Lading, and no Houſes are ſuffered to be near them, which prevents the Danger of Fire. The chief Trade of the Place is in Corn from Poland; and 'tis computed, that they export 730000 Tons of Wheat one Year with another. The Citizens have the Privilege of buying up Corn as ſoon as it enters the Harbour; ſo that 'tis the Granary for Holland and other Northern Countries. The Harbour is not deep, ſo that large Ships can ſcarce come up to the City. They have no Men of War, but abundance of Merchant Men of 3 or 400 Tons, and 30 or 40 Guns apiece. They have conſtantly 200 Soldiers in Pay, can eaſily maintain 12000, and have ſometimes had an Army of 60000 Men. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Germans, and they are reckon'd above 200000 in all. The Scots were allow'd to be Freemen of the Town, and had greater Privileges than other Forreigners, in conſideration of the great Service they did the City under the Conduct of one of the Family of Douglas againſt the Poles in a Siege. One of the Suburbs is named Scotland, and is moſtly inhabited by Scots. The Arms of that Nation was alſo ſet up over the Gate, from whence they ſallied upon the Poles, and continu'd there till lately, that the Gate was rebuilt. Tho' the Town be under the Protection of Poland, yet 'tis govern'd by their own Magiſtrates in form of a Republick. They have four Proconſuls or Burgo-Maſters, out of whom the King names a Burgrave, to repreſent him in the Senate, and ſign Sentences of Death. The Senators are choſen, but continue for Life, and four of them are Calviniſts. There are 100 Burghers choſen, to inſpect the Conduct of the Senate, and join with them in chuſing the Miniſters. The Magiſtrates determine all Criminal Cauſes, without Appeal, and all Civil Cauſes not exceeding 1000 Livres; and if any one appeal to the Tribunal of Poland, he muſt lay down 100 Guilders in the Town-Houſe, which prevents the Frequency of ſuch Appeals. The hundred Burghers join with the Senate in impoſing Taxes, repreſent the Grievances of the People, and maintain their Privileges. When the King comes hither, he is only allowed to bring a few Guards, and is treated by the City for three Days. They have a Secretary always at Court, to take Care of their Intereſts, and the Right of Coinage. Their Money has the King's Effigies on one ſide, and the Arms of the Town on the other.

Here is a College with Profeſſors in all Faculties, but they don't give the Degree of Doctor. The Juriſdiction of this City is above 40 Miles in Circumference. They ſend two Deputies to the Dyet of Poland. The Eſtabliſhed Religion has been Lutheraniſm ſince 1525. The Calviniſts are numerous, and are allow'd the Freedom of their Worſhip; and ſome Anabaptiſts and Papiſts have the ſame Privilege. One Half of the Cuſtoms of the Harbour belong to the King. 'Tis the chief Staple of Poland for Import and Export. Of late Years the Czar of Muſcovy has been troubleſome to this City, and forced them, by his Troops that came to aſſiſt King Auguſtus, to pay him conſiderable Sums. Philip Cluverius, the greateſt Geographer of his Time, was born here.

In 1697 this City declared for King Auguſtus, tho' the Prince of Conti his Rival was in their Harbour, and own'd as King by the Grand Mareſchal of Lithuania. In 1698 King Auguſtus was received here with great Solemnity; next Year they gave him four Ton of Gold, inſtead of Quarters for 3000 Men, which he demanded. At the ſame time Lewis XIV. of France ſold their Ships which his Cruiſers had taken; and in 1701 they were obliged to pay him 400000 Livres, and to beg his Pardon for oppoſing the Prince of Conti. In 1703 the King of Sweden forced them to pay 400000 Florins, to renounce King Auguſtus, to pay him the Revenues due to that King, and a conſiderable Sum beſides. That ſame Year they put themſelves under the King of Pruſſia's Protection, and agreed to pay his Troops which they received for a Garriſon. In 1705 the Swedes exacted 50000 Crowns more of them, and made them deliver up the Equipage left there by King Auguſtus. In 1707 they were forced to own King Staniſlaus, for which the Muſcovites block'd up the Town and plunder'd their Territories. In 1708 they were obliged to pay the French King 40000 Rixdollars for the Loſs ſuſtained by the Prince of Conti, and the Abbot de Polignac at Oliva in their Neighbourhood. In 1709 the Plague ſwept off above 40000 of the Inhabitants, and they were obliged again to own King Auguſtus, who demanded a great Sum, and threatened to attack them if they refuſed; but they prevented it, by laying the adjoining Country under Water. In 1714 they paid the Czar 100000 Rixdollars, on his Promiſe to make no farther Demands; yet in 1717 he made freſh Demands both of Money and Ships; but by the Mediation of the King of Pruſſia, &c. he contented himſelf with 140000 Dollars, and promiſed to quit their Territories; notwithſtanding which he quartered Troops upon them in 1718, ſo that this City has ſuffered extremely by the Northern War. The Money here and throughout Poland is Rixdollars of 90 Groſſes, each Groſs being 18 Deniers. They alſo reckon by Florins, at 30 Groſſes. Here is alſo a Coin called a Timph, of about 8 d. Value.

Other Places of Note in this Palatinate are,

1. Oliva, a little North-Weſt from Dantzick, noted for a famous Benedictine Abbey, where a Peace was concluded in 1660, betwixt the Emperor, the King of Poland, and the Elector of Brandenburg, on one ſide, and the King of Sweden on the other, by which Livonia was quitted to Sweden, Smolensko, Severia and Kiovia to the Muſcovites. It was alſo the chief Rendezvouz of the Prince of Conti's Party, when he rivalled King Auguſtus in 1697; but the Saxon General Brand with 2000 Horſe ſurpriſed them here, killed ſome, and took 100, among whom were one of the Prince's chief Officers, and 40 of his Domeſticks, who had retired to a Monaſtery for Protection: They alſo cut to pieces the French Abbot (now Cardinal) Polignac's Coach and Equipage, he himſelf narrowly eſcaping on board Du Bart's Squadron, where he found the Prince just ready to come on Shoar, which if he had, he must have also been taken.

2. Munde, or Weyſſelmunde, a ſtrong Fortreſs on the Mouth of that Branch of the Weyſſel, which runs by the Town, and defends the Harbour.

3. Dirſhow upon the Weyſſel, 20 Miles South from Dantzick, formerly a Place of Strength, and a Monument of the Magnificence of the Teutonic Knights, but now diſmantled.

4. Pautzko, on a Gulph of the ſame Name, about 18 Miles North-Weſt from Dantzic. It has a ſtrong Caſtle, which has been ſeveral times beſieged and taken by the Swedes, and retaken by the Poles.

II. The Palatinate of CULM lies on the Eaſt ſide of the Weyſſel. The Capital of the ſame Name is about 60 Miles South from Dantzick, on the Eaſt ſide of the River.. 'Tis an ancient and famous Town, is large but ill peopled, being much decayed ſince it fell to the Poles. It was built and well fortify'd by the Teutonick Knights in 1223, and was one of their chief Fortreſſes againſt the Heathen Pruſſians. The Maſter of the Order preſcrib'd ſuch excellent Laws for its Government, that they are ſtill much reſpected all over Pruſſia. A Specimen of them was publiſhed by Lambecius from an ancient Manuſcript in the Emperor's Library. The Town is pleaſantly ſituate on a Hill, and it has ſtill the Name of a Hans-Town, but has loſt its Trade ſince the Swediſh Wars. It was the See of a Biſhop, which is now remov'd to Colmenſee, about 12 Miles South-Eaſt from it. Near this Place there is a Fountain, from whence there iſſues conſtantly a mighty ſulphureous Steam, yet the Water is never hot.

Other Places of Note here are,

1. Thorn, about 15 Miles South from Culm. 'Tis a Hans-Town, divided by the Weyſſel, and was built by the Teutonic Knights at the ſame time with Culm, about a Mile farther Weſt than the Town now ſtands. It was a Garriſon to curb the Pagans. Cluverius ſays, it was a famous Mart long before Dantzic. In 1454 both Old and New Thorn revolted from the Knights, becauſe of their arbitrary Government, and were allowed great Privileges from the Poles. The Name is derived from the German Word Thor, which ſignifies a Gate, becauſe it was one of the Keys of the Knights Dominions. Hence the Arms of the Town are a Caſtle, and Gate half open. 'Tis the neateſt and beſt built Town in Pruſſia. The Streets are much broader, and the Houſes more ſtately than at Dantzic. It owes much of its Beauty to Burgomaſter Strobaud, who died in 1609: He built and endowed the Univerſity, and founded the Town-Hall, which, next to the Stadt-Houſe of Amſterdam, is reckoned the ſtatelieſt in Europe. He alſo built an Hoſpital, and founded a Library, where two of Cicero's Epiſtles are preſerved upon Tables of Wax. Here is a Bridge of Timber over the Weyſſel; and at the Old Town there's the Ruins of a ſtrong Caſtle. 'Twas formerly an Imperial City, and enjoys many of its ancient Privileges, tho' under the Protection of Poland. The famous Aſtronomer and Mathematician Nicolaus Copernicus was born here in 1473, and died here in 1543. In 1645 a Conference was held here by Order of the King of Poland, betwixt the Lutherans, Calviniſts and Papiſts, but without Succeſs. An Account of it was printed at Warſaw in 1646, and animadverted upon by George Calixtus. This Town was taken after a long Siege by the Swedes in 1655, and was retaken by the Poles in 1658, after a Siege of ſix Months. The Swedes retook it afterwards, and the Poles regained it by Surprize in 1665. Its Fortifications were very conſiderable, but diſmantled by Charles XII. of Sweden, who took it in 1703, when, after an obſtinate Reſiſtance, it was forced to ſurrender at Diſcretion, their Town-Houſe and others being burnt, to the Value of 200000 Florins, beſides a great Loſs in Merchandize, and a conſiderable Sum extorted from them by the Swedes.

2. Graudentz, a pleaſant and ſtrong Town, 36 Miles Weſt from Thorn, at the Conflux of the Oſſa and Weyſſel. It was taken, plundered, and diſmantled by the Swedes in 1703, and afterwards garriſon'd by the Poliſh Confederates, who were drove out of it by the Muſcovites in 1707.

3. Strasburg, on the River Debrentz, 28 Miles Eaſt from Culm, frequently taken and retaken by the Swedes and Poles in the laſt Century.

4. Chouza, about two Leagues North-Weſt from Culm, on the other ſide the River. It was the moſt flouriſhing Town in Pruſſia under the Teutonic Knights, but has nothing remarkable now except a fine Church and ſome ſtately Ruins.

5. Ghnief, a little Town with a ſtrong Caſtle, where King John Sobieski kept his Treaſures.

The Territory of Michalovia in this Country is a ſtrait Neck of Land between the Rivers Brodna and Debrentz, and was the Occaſion of bloody Wars betwixt the Poles and Teutonic Knights. This Palatinate has four Senators.

III. The Palatinate of MARIENBURG lies on the Eaſt ſide of the Weyſſel, North from that of Thorn. The Capital of the ſame Name is near a Branch of the Weyſſel, Lat. 54. Long. 19. 25. about 28 Miles South-Eaſt from Dantzic. It had the Name from an Image of the Virgin found there when the Fortifications were erected. The Caſtle was built in 1281 by the Teutonick Knights, was reckoned impregnable, and the Town the Capital of their Dominions. It has a magnificent Church dedicated to the Virgin. 'Twas taken by the Poles in 1460, and by the Swedes in 1626. 'Twas burnt by the Germans in 1655, taken afterwards by the Swedes, and reſtored to the Poles in 1660, by the Treaty of Oliva. The new Caſtle is not comparable to the old one, and the Town is but meanly built and poor. The Prince of Conti's Party garriſon'd the Place in 1697, but were ſoon obliged to quit it. 'Twas ſeized in 1703 by the King of Sweden. The neighbouring Iſland of the ſame Name, formed by the River, belongs to it, and is very fruitful; but the Dykes to preſerve it from Inundations are expenſive. The beſt Mead in all Pruſſia is here.

Elbing, in this Palatinate, lies about 25 Miles farther North-Eaſt, on a River of the ſame Name, and near the moſt Eaſterly Branch of the Weyſſel, which falls into the Friſh-Haff, a Bay of the Baltick, and is Capital of a ſmall Province called Hockerland. 'Twas built in 1239 by the Lubeckers, who obtained from the Teutonic Knights the ſame Privileges granted to Lubeck by the Emperor Frederick II. Their great Trade made it in a ſmall time one of the moſt conſiderable Towns on the Baltick; but being oppreſſed by the Knights, they revolted to the Poles, with Dantzic and Thorn, in 1454, and demoliſhed the Caſtle. It continued under the Poles till 1525, that it ſubmitted to Albert Marquis of Brandenburg, the firſt Duke of Pruſſia, who founded their Univerſity in 1542. When Stephen, King of Poland beſieged Dantzic in 1577, he made Elbing the Staple of Trade, at the ſame time the Engliſh made it the Staple for their Cloth, but have ſince removed it to Dantzic. The Town is ſtrong, regularly fortified, and the Merchants have their Warehouſes in the Suburbs. It was taken by the Swedes in 1629, reſtored in 1636, ſubmitted afterwards in 1655 to Charles Guſtavus King of Sweden, and was reſtored to the Poles by the Peace of Oliva. In 1698 'twas inveſted by the late Elector of Brandenburg, becauſe by Treaty it was to be put into his Hands as Security for 400000 Dollars due to him for aſſiſting the Poles againſt the Swedes. The Poles being then in a Civil War on King Auguſtus's coming to their Crown, could give them no Aſſiſtance; ſo that the Town admitted a Brandenburg Garriſon till 1700, that the Poles gave the Elector the Jewels of their Crown as a Pledge for his Money, upon which he withdrew his Troops. In 1703 Charles XII. of Sweden demanded 300000 Crowns of them, forced the Magiſtrates to lay a Bridge of Boats for his Troops to march over againſt the Pruſſians, who appeared for Defence of this City; and the King himſelf being admitted into the Town, he diſarm'd the Garriſon and Burghers, quartered 2000 Soldiers upon them, made Stables of their Shops and Parlours, and demanded 100000 Rixdollars more of them to ſave the Town from being deſtroy'd. The Magiſtrates repreſented to him, that they admitted him upon his Word of Honour, had never given him any Provocation, and expected Protection from him, ſince he was of their own Religion, otherwiſe they would have admitted the Pruſſians who promis'd to defend the Town. But all was in vain; they were obliged to pay the Money, or ſuffer the Town to be deſtroyed. In 1710 the Muſcovites took the Town by Aſſault, made the Swediſh Garriſon Priſoners of War, and found in the Place 185 Cannon, 12 Mortars of Iron, and 128 Hand-Mortars of Braſs, with proportionable Ammunition. 'Tis populous, pleaſantly ſituated, divided into the Old and New Town, well built and clean, has a good Trade, and with Thorn and Dantzic is a Repoſitory for the Archives and Treaſures of Royal Pruſſia. Its Diſtrict lies on the Baltick, is level, fruitful, and well peopled. The Boors have as good Houſes and Cloaths almoſt as the Gentry of Courland.

IV. WARMIA, WARMELAND, or ERMELAND, by ſome reckoned the fourth Palatinate of Poliſh Pruſſia, joins to that of Marienburg, and lies North-Eaſt from Elbing. 'Tis a Biſhoprick, the People are exempted from the Royal Juriſdiction, and governed by the Laws of Pruſſia under their Biſhop, who is a Prince of the Empire, and has his Seat at Heilsberg on the River Alier, North-Eaſt from Elbing. His Cathedral is at Frawenburg on the Friſch-Haff, about 10 Miles North-Eaſt from Elbing, where the famous Copernicus was a Canon. Braunsberg, a populous Town, noted for an Univerſity, lies near the Bay of Friſch-Haff, about 25 Miles North-Eaſt of Elbing. It has been mortgaged for many Years to the Elector of Brandenburg.

The Palatinate of Marienburg has only two Senators.

DUCAL, or BRANDENBURG-PRUSSIA; was ſo called to diſtinguiſh it from Poliſh Pruſſia, when Albert Marquis of Brandenburg, Great Maſter of the Teutonic Order, after a War with Poland, made Peace in 1525, on condition that he ſhould be created Hereditary Duke of that Part which he then poſſeſſed, and hold it as a Vaſſal to the Crown of Poland. Thus it continued till 1657, that George William Elector of Brandenburg, and his Son Frederick-William obtained by Treaty the full Sovereignty of the Country, which was confirmed to them and their Heirs at Koningsberg, Octob. 18th, 1663, on condition that upon Failure of their Heirs it ſhould return to the Poles, and become a Fief of their Crown, which is ſcarce ever like to happen, for the Family is numerous; and Frederick, Son to Frederick William the Great, was with unuſual Solemnity proclaimed King of Pruſſia the 17th of December 1700, in Contempt of Pope Clement the Eleventh's Oppoſition; ſo that it ceaſes to be Ducal, and is now the Kingdom of Pruſſia. It has Poliſh Pruſſia on the Weſt, Lithuania on the Eaſt, Samogitia on the North, and the Palatinate of Warſaw on the South. 'Tis about 150 Miles from North to South where longeſt, and about 120 from Eaſt to Weſt where broadeſt; ſo that it is much larger than Poliſh Pruſſia, but not ſo fruitful, nor conſiderable for Trade and Towns. 'Tis divided into the three following Circles.

I. The Circle of SMAZLAND. The Capital of this Circle, and of the whole Kingdom is Koninsberg, at the Mouth of the River Pregel, where it falls into the Friſch-Haff, Lat. 54. 40. Long. 21. about 90 Miles North-Eaſt from Dantzic, and 60 from Elbing. 'Twas built by the Teutonic Knights in 1255. 'Tis a Hans-Town, large, well built, and divided into three Parts by the River. That called the Old Town was built in 1260 by the Teutonic Knights, and has a large ſumptuous Palace, built by George Frederick Marquis of Brandenburg. Here's a famous Library, from which Chemnitius had Materials for his Examination of the Council of Trent. In 1707 the King of Pruſſia effected a Reconciliation betwixt the Calviniſts and Lutherans here, and the Town ſuffered much in 1709 by a Plague. The ſecond Town lies in an Iſland, and is called Knipheff, from one of the Knights that joined it to the other. Here ſtands the Cathedral, and the Univerſity founded by Duke Albert of Brandenburg in 1544, which has bred many Learned Men. The third Town is called Lebenicht, and was added by the Great Maſter Berthold of Auſtria. 'Tis defended by a ſtrong Caſtle that commands the Harbour, which is very convenient, and makes it a Place of good Trade. Their chief Commerce is in Yellow Amber found on the Coaſt, Oak, Fir, Honey and Wax.

Other Places of Note here are,

1. Memel, Lat. 55. 38. Long. 21. 35. and about 70 Miles North-Eaſt from Koningsberg. It lies at the Mouth of the Curiſch-Haff, or Bay of Courland, and has a good Harbour defended by a ſtrong Citadel. 'Twas built by the Teutonic Knights in 1328, ſuffered much by War and Fire, being almoſt quite burnt down in 1545 and 1648. 'Tis ſeated among Lakes, which make it naturally ſtrong, and the Bulwark of that Part of the Country. A bloody Action fell out near this Place in 1698, betwixt the Families of Sapieha and Oginski, when the latter was defeated.

2. Pilaw,

2. Pilaw, on the Friſch-Haff, about 20 Miles Weſt from Koningsberg, noted for Sturgeon-Fiſhing, and defended by two Fortreſſes on the Mouth of the Pregel, where Priſoners of State are kept. 'Twas taken by the Swedes in 1625, but reſtored to the Elector of Brandenburg by the Treaty of Oliva in 1660.

II. The Second Circle is that of NATANGIE, 11 Leagues South from Koningsberg. The Capital is Brandenburg, a ſmall Town on the South ſide of the River Pregel, near its Mouth.

III. The Third Circle is HOCKERLAND, South from Elbing. The Capital is Hollant on the River Elbing, about 10 Miles South-Eaſt from the Town of that Name. 'Tis a barren Diſtrict, and has only a few other little Towns.

Their HISTORY.

AUTHORS are not agreed about the Origin of the firſt Inhabitants, but ſay, they were an independent State, united with the Slavi, and had many Wars with their Neighbours, but were at laſt conquer'd by the Poles; to ſhake off whoſe Yoke the Duke of Maſſovia, their Ally, invited the Knights of the Teutonic Order to their Aſſiſtance in 1300. Theſe Knights were ſo ſucceſsful, that in leſs than 60 Years they expelled the Heathen Pruſſians, ſettled German Colonies in their ſtead, and carried their Arms likewiſe into Ruſſia and Lithuania. Puffed up with Succeſs, they built Towns and Caſtles, were very troubleſome to their Neighbours, and behaved with ſo much Tyranny, Lewdneſs and Treachery to their Subjects, that they made a general Revolt againſt them, and put themſelves under the Protection of the Poles in 1454, ſo that the Knights had loſt all but Ducal Pruſſia, when Albert Elector of Brandenburg, their Grand Maſter, was made Hereditary Duke, as before mentioned.

Their RELIGION.

CHRISTIANITY is ſaid to have been introduced here about the End of the Tenth Century, but violently oppoſed by the Majority, till Boleſlaus King of Poland conquered them, deſtroyed their Idols, and obliged them to feign a Submiſſion. But when the Poliſh Troops withdrew, they returned to their Paganiſm, till the Arrival of the Teutonic Knights, who forced Chriſtianity upon them. Afterwards the Waldenſes, Wickliffites and Huſſites prevailed mightily here; and at laſt Albert, the Marquis of Brandenburg abovementioned, embraced Lutheraniſm, prevailed with the remaining Knights to do the like, and to marry, which made Lutheraniſm the Eſtabliſhment. Frederick-William, Grandfather to the preſent King of Pruſſia, being a Calviniſt himſelf, encouraged it in this Country, where it is promoted by the Univerſity of Koningsberg.

Their LANGUAGE

WAS much the ſame with that of the Poles, with a Mixture of German, and their Manners partake likewiſe of both Countries. The Apparel of their Gentry is like that of Germany and Holland, tho' not altogether ſo Gay. The Boors wear long and ſtrait Coats of coarſe Wool or Leather; but the Richer ſort wear coarſe Engliſh Cloth. The Towns and Houſes upon the Weyſſel are well built; but in the remoter Parts of the Country they have poor Hovels made of Stakes interwoven with Rods, covered with Earth or Fern, and ſleep on Straw.

The Great Dutchy of LITHUANIA, or the Second General Diviſion of POLAND.

IT has Greater Poland and Pruſſia on the Weſt, Part of Muſcovy on the Eaſt, Livonia and Part of Muſcovy on the North. The greateſt Extent from the Frontiers of Muſcovy on the South Eaſt, to the Extremity of Courland on the North-Weſt, is about 510 Miles; and the greateſt Breadth from Pruſſia on the Weſt, to the Borders of Muſcovy on the Eaſt, is about 400: But 'tis pretty much indented, ſo that neither Length nor Breadth are equal in all Parts. It was called Lithuania from Littuo, one of their ancient Princes, as moſt think; and is divided into Five Parts, viz. Lithuania Proper, White or Little Ruſſia, Samogitia, Poliſh Livonia, and Courland; each of which have their Sub-Diviſions.

Their CLIMATE and SOIL.

THE Country in general abounds with Woods, Lakes, and Ponds, ſo that it is not near ſo fruitful as Poland; yet they have ſtore of Wax, Honey, and Mead. The Air is generally thick and foggy, becauſe of their Woods and Lakes. Here's one Foreſt ſaid to be a 100 Miles long; and tho' the Country be in ſome Places fruitful, the extreme Cold frequently ſpoils their Harveſt. Sigiſmund I. burnt down many of their Woods, and other Kings have done the like, which makes the Country much better than formerly. Their Cattle of all Sorts are ſmall, becauſe of the Cold. Beſides thoſe in common with us, they have Elks, wild Horſes, wild Aſſes, Buffaloes, and Uris, and abound with Black Cattel, Sheep, Ermins, Sables, and all manner of Furs. This Country ſuffer'd much in 1701, &c. by a ſort of Civil War betwixt the Families of Oginski and Sapieha.

We begin with PROPER LITHUANIA. It lies Eaſt from Pruſſia, and is divided into the Palatinates of Wilna, and Troki.

I. WILNA has that of Troki on the Weſt, Samogitia on the North, and Braſlaw on the Eaſt. The Name is derived from its Capital Vilna, Vilda, or Wilna, Lat. 54. 40. Long. 25 ½. at the Conflux of the Vilia and Wilia, about 180 Miles Eaſt from Coningsberg, 230 North-Eaſt from Warſaw, and 80 from Grodno. It is Capital of the Dutchy, large and populous, was Founded by Duke Godamin in 1305. It has a good Trade, managed chiefly by Foreigners, for the Natives are poor, lazy, and luxurious, and abſolute Slaves to their Nobles. Their Houſes are ſo ſmoaky, and they eat ſo much Garlick and Onions, that half of them are blind before they grow old. They are much given to Drink, and Quarrels; and if they murder a Stranger, pay only 16 Dollars, but if a Lithuanian, the Corpſe is preſerv'd till the Murderer be found, becauſe they can't condemn him till they ſhew him the Corpſe of the Deceaſed. The Streets are dirty and ſwarm with Beggars, for they have no Hoſpital here, tho' they need one as much as any Place in Europe. Moſt of the Houſes are of Wood, except thoſe of ſome Foreign Merchants, the great Dukes Palace, the Churches, and the Muſcovite Companies Ware-Houſe. 'Tis the Seat of the chief Court of Judicature for Lithuania, which ſits here and at Minsk Yearly by turns. Here are two Caſtles, an old one upon a Hill, which is ruinous, but the other is a beautiful modern Structure, and there's a well furniſh'd Armory in the Duke's Palace. The Cathedral ſtands in the Lower Caſtle, where St. Caſimir lies in a large Silver Tomb. Here's alſo a great Bell which requires 24 Men to ring it. They have an Univerſity Founded in 1579, with Profeſſors of Divinity, Law, Philoſophy, and Philology. The Town is noted for making very good Guns and other Inſtruments of War. It was taken and plundered by the Muſcovites in 1655, but retaken by the Poles. About two Miles from hence the King has a Timber Palace, with a Park, Orchard, and Gardens. The Greeks have a Biſhop here, who depends on the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and the Popiſh Biſhop is Suffragan of Gneſna. In 1702 there was a ſharp Action here betwixt the Lithuanians and the Swedes, whom they ſurpriz'd, but were afterwards repulſed by them.

Oſmiano lies about 25 Miles South-Eaſt from Wilna, is a large Town, Capital of its Diſtrict, which is conſiderable. This Palatinate has three Senators.

Braſlaw, which Sanſon and others make a diſtinct Palatinate, is by Hartnock, the moſt Learned of the Poliſh Geographers, made part of Wilna. The chief Town is Braſlaw, above 110 Miles South Eaſt from Riga, and 80 North-Eaſt from Vilna, near a great Lake; is defended by a Caſtle on a Rock, and has a large Juriſdiction. Wilkomirz, 80 Miles South-Weſt from Breſlaw, on the River Swenta, is fortified, has an ancient Caſtle, a Court for trying the Cauſes of the Gentry, and a large Juriſdiction, with ſeveral conſiderable Towns that belong to the King, the Nobles and the Biſhops.

II. The Palatinate of TROKI, lies Weſt from that of Wilna. 'Tis nam'd from its Capital, which lies about 22 Miles South-Weſt from Wilna, upon the River Braſala, that falls into the Wilna. It was founded in 1321, by Duke Godimin, who made it his Seat, and is defended by a ſtrong Caſtle, upon an Iſland in a neighbouring Lake. The Muſcovites took it in 1655, and cruelly maſſacred the Inhabitants, but it was retaken by the Poles. Other Places here are,

1. Grodno, which lies alſo in this Palatinate, Lat. 53. 38. Long. 24. 24. 60 Miles South-Weſt from Troki, and 160 North-Eaſt from Warſaw, near the River Niemen. It has the Statelieſt Wooden Bridge over the River that is to be ſeen in Poland, is defended by a Strong Caſtle, built on a Rock, and noted for the meeting of the General Dyet of Poland here every third Year. It was taken and deſtroy'd by the Muſcovites in 1655, but was ſince rebuilt; has a good Trade, and a College of Jeſuits. Charles XII. of Sweden, narrowly miſſed being ſurprized here by the Czar in 1708.

2. Lida, about 50 Miles North-Eaſt from Grodno. 'Tis Capital of a Diſtrict, has a Court of Juſtice, and a pretty good Caſtle.

3. Couna or Kowno, on the Borders of Samogitia, near the Conflux of the Niemen and Wilna, 35 Miles South-Eaſt from Troki, is defended by a ſtrong Caſtle on a Rock, and capable of being made impregnable by its Situation; 'tis well built, and has ſeveral fine Monaſteries, and was much frequented by German Merchants. This Palatinate has two Senators.

The Second general Diviſion is LITTLE WHITE RUSSIA, which has part of Muſcovy on the North and Eaſt, Vilna, Troki, Bielk, and Lublin on the Weſt, and Volhinia on the South; is about 280 Miles where furtheſt extended from South to North, and about 380 where longeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Tis divided into the Six following Palatinates.

I. NOVOGRODEC, ſo named from its Capital, about 65 Miles South from Wilna, Lat. 53. 35. Long. 25. 32. 'Twas the Appanage of the ſecond Sons of the Duke of Lithuania, and called Litawiski; 'tis one of the beſt Cities in Lithuania, tho' not fortified. 'Tis built of Timber, lies in a Plain, and is, by Turns with Minski, the Seat of the Dyet for the Dutchy.

Other Towns of Note here are,

1. Slonian, about 40 Miles South-Weſt from Novogrodec; it was formerly Capital of a Dutchy, is defended by a Caſtle and regular Fortifications.

2. Wolkowiska, about 60 Miles South-Weſt from Novogrodec, a large Town, the Seat of a Court of Juſtice for the Gentry.

3. Lucowitcz, 50 Miles South-Eaſt from Novogrodec, noted for a noble Palace or Caſtle, well fortified.

4. Sluczk, 85 Miles South-Eaſt from Novogrodec, Capital of a Dutchy of the ſame Name. 'Tis one of the largeſt Cities in this Country, has a Palace and Cathedral built of Stone, was the Seat of its own Princes, Tributaries to the Crown, and now poſſeſſed by the Family of Radzivil. 'Tis alſo noted for Three Victories obtain'd in the Neighbourhood againſt the Tartars, by the Duke of Oſtrog, in Sigiſmund the Firſt's Reign.

5. Rozan, or Rozanna, a well built Town, with fair Streets, 55 Miles South-Weſt from Novogrodec.

6. Neſwicz or Neſwitz, Capital of a Dutchy, about 50 Miles South-Eaſt from Novogrodec, it has ſome noble publick Edifices. This Palatinate has Two Senators.

II. The Palatinate of BRESSICI or BRIESCIA, alias POLESIA, South from Novogrodec. 'Tis 230 Miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 80 South and North, overgrown with Woods, and full of Lakes and Ponds. The Capital Breſſici, is 110 Miles Eaſt from Warſaw, Lat. 52. 2. Long. 23. 35. on the River Bug, over which it has a Bridge. 'Tis large, the Houſes are of Timber, and defended by a Caſtle of the ſame on a Rock. Here the Jews have their chief Academy; their Students reſort to it from moſt Parts in Europe, and take Degrees. Here's a Palace of modern Architecture, with pleaſant Gardens. Other Towns are,

1. Pinsk

1. Pinsk or Pinsko, 85 Miles East from Breſſici, on a River that falls into the Przypiecz. Moſt of the Inhabitants are of the Greek Church. They have a Biſhop here, are very induſtrious, and travel into Germany and Muſcovy for Trade. The Town has ſuffer'd much by the Ravages of the Coſſacks.

2. Biala, 25 Miles South-Weſt from Breſſici, noted for a Palace belonging to Prince Radzivil, now a Gymnaſium. This Palatinate has Two Senators.

III. The Palatinate of MINSKI or MINSKO, lies East from Novogrodec and Breſſici, and Weſt from Miſlaw. 'Tis 250 Miles from North-Weſt to South-Eaſt, and 90 where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. Minski, the Capital is Lat. 54. 5. Long. 27. 35. 100 Miles South-Eaſt from Wilna, and 90 North-Eaſt from Novogrodec, on the Rivet Swisloctz, in the middle of a Moraſſe, defended by a deep Ditch, a double Wall, a ſtrong Caſtle, and other Fortifications. Formerly the Dyet was kept here, alternately with Wilna and Novogrodec. Other Towns are,

1. Brodzicow, on the River Bereczina, 75 Miles South-Eaſt from Minski. 'Tis defended by a ſtrong Caſtle and Garriſon, but moſt of the Town was ruined by the Muſcovites in 1655.

2. Boriſſow or Brodina, 50 Miles South-Eaſt from Minski on the ſame River. 'Tis regularly fortified with deep Ditches, a double Palliſado, and has a Moraſſe on one Side.

3. Koidanow, a Town and Caſtle, 25 Miles South-Weſt from Minski.

4. Radoskowicz, 15 Miles North from Minski, it has a ſtrong Caſtle, and is noted for a Muſter of above 100000 Men at once, by Sigiſmund Auguſtus.

5. Rohaczow, a large Town, Capital of its Territory, 130 Miles South-Eaſt from Minski, at the Conflux of the Odnitz and Nieper.

6. Rzeczyca, Capital of its Territory, on the Nieper, about 50 Miles South-Eaſt from Rohaczow. This Palatinate has Two Senators. Some aſcribe theſe Two laſt Territors to Mſciſlaw.

IV. The Palatinate of MSCISLAW, or MISLAW, lies Eaſt from Minski, on the Frontiers of Muſcovy. The Capital Mſciſlaw is in Lat. 54. 5. Long. 32. 40. 30 Miles South from Smolensko. 'Tis a ſmall Town on the River Soſa, but ſtrongly Garriſon'd againſt the Muſcovites, who received a great Defeat near it in 1514. They took it in 1660, and maſſacred all the Inhabitants. The Town and Country were formerly a Dutchy, ſubject to a Son of Poland. The Diſtrict is in ſome Parts full of Wood, but overflowed with Water on the Borders of Muſcovy. Other Parts are fruitful, and abound with Cattle and Fowl of all ſorts. The Nieper runs thro' this Country. Other Places are,

1. Mohilow, on the Weſt ſide of the Nieper, about 62 Miles South-Weſt from Mſciſlaw. It ſtands on a Hill, is large, well built, and one of the ſtrongeſt Towns in Lithuania. 'Tis noted for a Trade in Furs with the Muſcovites, and a fine College of Jeſuits. 'Twas taken by the Muſcovites in 1654, and retaken by the Poles in 1656. 'Tis remarkable for a great Battle in 1708 betwixt the Muſcovites and Swedes in the Neighbourhood at a Place called Hollowiſczin, wherein both ſides pretended to the Victory, and ſuſtained great Loſs. The Czar and the King of Sweden were both preſent in Perſon, and animated their Men: It appeared at laſt that the Czar had the Victory, having taken near 3000 Priſoners, with the Cannon, Ammunition, and 7000 Waggons from the Swedes.

Here are ſeveral other Towns with Caſtles on the Nieper, for Defence of the Country. This Palatinate has two Senators.

V. The Palatinate of WITEPSK, North from Mſciſlaw. Witepsk, the Capital, is near the Conflux of the Wiesba and Duina, by which Goods are conveyed to Riga. It is in Lat. 55. 22. Long. 31. 80 Miles North-Weſt from Smolensko. 'Tis very ſtrong, defended by two large Caſtles, and has always a numerous Garriſon, but was frequently taken and retaken in the Muſcovite Wars. It had formerly a Duke of its own.

Other Places are,

1. Orska, or Orſa, a large Town 55 Miles South-Eaſt from Witepsk, and 55 Weſt from Smolensko, defended by the Nieper on the one ſide, Palliſadoes on the other, and a ſtrong Caſtle built of Stone.

2. There are ſeveral other Towns and Caſtles for the Defence of the Country, not deſcribed. This Palatinate has two Senators.

VI. The Palatinate of POLOCZK, or POLOCZKO, lies North-Weſt from that of Witepsk, and has Part of Muſcovy on the North and Eaſt. The Capital Poloczk, on the Conflux of the Poleza and Duina, Lat. 55. ½. Long. 29. 5. about 100 Miles South-Eaſt from Braſlaw. It was formerly conſiderable, and Capital of a Dutchy ſubject to its own Prince, but was taken, and the Inhabitants carry'd off by the Muſcovites in 1562. The Poles recovered it in 1579, have ſince rebuilt and fortified it, ſo that it is one of the Bulwarks of the Country againſt the Muſcovites, who beſieged it in vain. It has two Caſtles and a Jeſuits College. There's no other Town of Note here but Drieſna, which is pretty well fortified, and lies upon the ſame River, 26 Miles North-Weſt from Poloczk.

The Third General Diviſion of Lithuania is SAMOGITIA, which lies North from Pruſſia and the Palatinate of Troki, South from Courland, and Weſt from Braſlaw. Its greateſt Extent from the Baltic on the Weſt to Braſlaw on the Eaſt, is about 190 Miles, but it is much contracted at both Extremities; and the greateſt Breadth from South to North is about 90. The Soil is Marſhy, and abounds with Rivers and Lakes, which overflow much of the Land at certain Seaſons. The Name ſignifies Marſhy in the Language of the Country. Some Parts of it are Mountainous and full of Woods, where there are a great numbers of Bees which yield ſtore of good Honey and Wax. Tho' their Arable Soil be very ſtiff, they are ſo ſuperſtitious as to uſe none but wooden Plough-Shares. One of their Staroſts having introduced Plough-Shares of Iron, and the Harveſt not proving ſo good as uſual, becauſe of the Coldneſs of the Seaſon, they aſcribed it to thoſe Shares, and would never uſe them ſince. Their Horſes are ſmall but ſwift, and capable of much Fatigue. This Country was given by a Duke of Lithuania to the Teutonic Knights; but when they were ſuppreſſed in 1595, it fell to the Crown of Poland. It has ſuffered much by the Wars betwixt the Swedes and Muſcovites. The Houſes of the Boors are of Wood, low, and built long ways near Lakes or Rivers. They have a Hearth in the middle, and but one Room for themſelves and Cattle, and their Furniture is very mean. The Country is divided into the three following Captainſhips.

I. The firſt is that of ROZIEN, ſo named from its Capital, Lat. 55. 10. Long. 24. 12. about 108 Miles North-Eaſt from Koninsberg in Pruſſia. It lies on the River Dubis, is but ſmall and ill built. The Aſſemblies of the Province are kept here, and on that Account is by ſome reckon'd the Capital of Samogitia.

II. The Captainſhip of MIDNICK, or MEDNIKI. The chief Town is of the ſame Name, about 25 Miles North-Weſt from Rozien. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Gneſna, for which ſome reckon it the Metropolis of the Country. 'Tis better built than Rozien, and ſtands nearth e Head of the River Wirwitz.

III. The Captainſhip of PONIEWISS, ſo called from a Town of that Name in the North-Eaſt part of the Country; but the chief Town here is Birze, about 80 Miles North-Eaſt from Rozien, on a River near the Frontiers of Courland, and bears the Title of a Dukedom. Samogitia has three Senators.

The Fourth Diviſion of Lithuania is that called POLISH LIVONIA, which is a very inconſiderable Part of that Country, and has no Place of Note in Poſſeſſion of the Poles but Duneburg, a ſtrong Town on the North ſide of the Duina, 60 Miles Eaſt from Birze, and 28 North from Braſlaw. Yet this Country has three Senators.

The Fifth Diviſion of Lithuania is the Dutchy of COURLAND. It lies North from Samogitia, and South from Livonia, the Gulph of which it has on the North, and the Baltic on the Weſt. Its greateſt Extent from South-Eaſt to North-Weſt is about 210 Miles, but very narrow in the Eaſtern Parts. Its greateſt Breadth from South to North in the Weſt Parts is about 60 Miles. 'Tis a plain fruitful Country, and well inhabited, but liable to be haraſs'd when there's War betwixt the Poles and Swedes. They dry their Corn with Wood in the Straw, and then threſh it, which makes the Dutch value it more than the Corn of Poland, becauſe it keeps better. Their chief Commodities are Flax, Hemp, Honey, Linſeed, Tar, Maſts, Timber of all ſorts, Pot-Aſhes, Goat-Skins, &c. They have Plenty of Black Cattle and Horſes. Moſt of their Commodities are exported from Riga. Some Authors ſay, there was formerly a great Herring-Fiſhery on their Coaſts, till 1313, after which the Herring removed to the Coaſt of Denmark and Norway, and then to thoſe of Great Britain. This Country was formerly tributary to Sweden, afterwards ſubject to the Livonian Knights, and then to the Teutonic. Lutheraniſm was introduced here in 1561, when Ketler, Maſter of the Livonian Order, turned Proteſtant. The People in general are Lutherans, but ſome few are Calviniſts, and others Papiſts. Ketler abovementioned was made Hereditary Duke of Courland in 1558, by Sigiſmund-Auguſtus, King of Poland, on condition of quitting Riga and Livonia, and holding the Dutchy in Fee of that Crown. His Succeſſors have poſſeſſed it ever ſince, and their Dutcheſſes have been Calviniſts ever ſince 1645. They are allowed a Church at Mittaw, where the Calviniſts of Livonia and Proteſtant Merchants at Riga come to worſhip. The Greeks are alſo tolerated, and ſome Jews that come from Lithuania and Poland. The Country is divided into the Government of Goldingen and Semigallia, and each of theſe into two Captainſhips.

GOLDINGEN is the Weſt part of the Country, the firſt Captainſhip, and named from its chief Town, Lat. 56. 42. Long. 22. 22. about 68 Miles North-Weſt from Mittaw. 'Twas formerly one of the Hans-Towns, and lies on the River Metaw which falls into the Baltic. It is of little Note at preſent but for its large Juriſdiction.

Other Places of Note here are,

1. Windaw or Kieſe. 'Tis reckoned a City, Capital of a Palatinate, and lies upon the Coaſt near the Mouth of the River Metaw, 32 Miles North-Weſt from Goldingen. It has a Caſtle, formerly the Reſidence of the Livonian Knights, and the Place where they held their Aſſemblies, which made it populous, but it is now much decayed, and is only ſupported by its Trade in Pitch, Tar, Wax, &c. exported from it. It has uſually a Garriſon of the Poles, but under Command of the Duke.

2. Libau, where the Duke's Ships are built, and has the greateſt Trade of any of his Towns. It lies on the Coaſt, about 30 Miles South-Weſt from Goldingen.

3. Angermund, at the Mouth of the River Anger near the Coaſt, about 30 Miles North-Weſt from Goldingen.

4. Piltyn, on the River Anger, about 15 Miles North-Weſt from Goldingen. 'Tis a Palatinate, whoſe Gentry being Proteſtants, put themſelves under the King of Poland's Protection; but on his endeavouring to force a Popiſh Biſhop upon them, they ſubmitted to the Duke of Courland, and are the richeſt Gentry in his Dominions.

The ſecond Captainſhip is Tuckum, ſo called from its chief Town, about 35 Miles Eaſt from Goldingen. There are ſeveral Towns belonging to it, of which we have no Deſcription.

SEMIGALLIA is the Eaſt Part of the Country, and divided into the Captainſhips of Mittaw and Selburg. Mittaw is the Capital of the former, and of the whole Dutchy. It lies Lat. 56. 30. Long. 24. 3. upon the River Muzſa, about 30 Miles South from Riga, and 68 South-Eaſt from Goldingen. 'Tis the uſual Reſidence of the Dukes, who have a very fine Caſtle here on the River All, which might be made navigable, but thoſe of Riga choak up its Mouth. The Caſtle is fortified with two Baſtions, encompaſſed by Marſhes, and has a ſtrong Garriſon. The Town is large, contains about 12000 Inhabitants, and is well fortified. It was ſeveral times taken by the Swedes, but recovered. Bauske, about 18 Miles South-Eaſt from Mittaw upon the ſame River, is another ſtrong Town and Caſtle, with a numerous Garriſon. 'Twas taken by the King of Sweden in 1701, with the King of Poland's Magazines, valu'd at 300000 Crowns; and he demanded 60000 from the Dutchy, beſides vaſt Quantities of Proviſions. In 1705 the Czar ſurpriz'd this Town by Stratagem, and forced the Garriſon in the Caſtle, which conſiſted of 900 Swedes, to ſurrender, he having a little before obtain'd a Victory over the Swedes near Mubrenhoff, in this Dutchy. 'Twas a very bloody Action, wherein both Parties pretended to the Advantage, but the Czar's taking Mittaw afterwards, confirm'd that he had it. The Swedes again poſſeſſed themſelves of this Place, but quitted it with the whole Dutchy in 1709, after levying great Sums from the Inhabitants.

Selburg, the chief Town of the other Captainry, lies near the Duina, about 45 Miles Eaſt from Mittaw. The other Towns in this Captainry are not worth deſcribing.

Their HISTORY.

BARON Blomberg, the late Duke of Courland's Miniſter writes, that the Pagan Inhabitants were not totally ſubdued by the Teutonic Knights till 1488, tho' Popery had been planted among them long before. James, one of the Succeſſors of Ketler, the firſt Hereditary Duke, begun to make a conſiderable Figure about 1639, was much given to building of Ships, and had 30 or 40 well-rigg'd, half of them Men of War, from 30 to 80 Guns apiece; ſo that Charles Guſtavus of Sweden us'd to ſay, my Couſin the Duke of Courland has too much for a Prince, and too little for a King. He afterwards, contrary to the Neutrality agreed on, ſurpriz'd and ſeiſed this Duke and his Family, rifled his Treaſury, ruined his Country, and diſperſed his Fleet. It was this Duke's Ships which firſt diſcover'd the River Senegal in Guinea, and the Iſle of Tobago, where he built a Fort, and was at vaſt Charge to cultivate the Iſland, which he enjoyed many Years without Interruption, till one Lumpſon, a Zealander, getting Poſſeſſion of a Corner of it, was ſuffered to plant there, on paying a Yearly Tribute to the Duke, during whoſe Impriſonment he ſeiſed the whole and planted it with Dutch. Upon this Duke James apply'd himſelf to our King Charles II. for Aſſiſtance, ſubmitted the Iſland to his Protection, and took a Grant of it from the Crown of England, by which the Duke and his Succeſſors, excluſive of his Subjects, had full Liberty of Trade in any Rivers or Havens belonging to King Charles on the Coaſt of Guinea, &c. Upon this King Charles wrote to the States General for Juſtice againſt Lumpſon, without Succeſs. But at laſt the Engliſh gain'd Poſſeſſion of it after it had been taken by the French, who made a great Slaughter of the Dutch, and forced them to abandon it.

When a new King of Poland is Elected, the Duke is obliged to ſend an Envoy for Inveſtiture; and when obtained, the Envoy is permitted to ſit opon the Throne on the King's Left Hand, to cover his Head, and has great Civilities paid him. The Duke has all the Regalia allowed to Sovereign Princes in Germany, has Place in the Dyet there above the Duke of Mecklemburg, coins Money in his own Name, and has Sovereign Juriſdiction; but in ſome extraordinary Caſes the Nobility may appeal to the Court of Poland. His Revenue is chiefly raiſed from his Great Domain. He has a pretty Court with all Officers of State as other Princes, and with his Nobility is able to raiſe about 18000 Men. He ſummons a Dyet of the States as often as Occaſion requires, upon which they elect Deputies, and ſend them to the Dyet with Inſtructions.

Having in the Deſcription of the Countries ſubject to the Crown of Poland, given a ſhort Account of the Hiſtory and Manners of the Inhabitants, we come next to give the like Account in general of the Hiſtory and Cuſtoms of the Poles and Lithuanians.

The HISTORY of the POLES.

THERE is no Certainty as to their ancient Hiſtory before the Year 550, when Lechus with his Followers, but from what Parts is not poſitively ſaid, took Poſſeſſion here, while the ancient Inhabitants were drove out, and his Succeſſors, who continued till 830, extended their Limits over what is now called Greater and Leſſer Poland. When his Race failed they choſe twelve Weywods or Captains of War, who governed for ſome time, and made good Laws; but they falling into Parties the People choſe one Cracus, a Man of great Intereſt and Prudence, who governed well, and built the City of Cracow; but his Children being unfortunate, the Weywods reſum'd the Government till 760, that a Goldſmith called Premiſlaus, or Leſcus the Firſt, was elected, for having by Stratagem defeated the Hungarians and Moravians that invaded the Country. He dying without Iſſue, the People appointed a Horſe-Race, and declar'd, that he who won it ſhould have the Crown. One of the Candidates having ſtrew'd the Ground with Iron Hooks, the Horſes of all the other Candidates were lam'd by them, ſo that he knowing the Ground, and avoiding the Hooks, won the Race; but the Fraud being diſcovered, he was killed on the Spot, and a poor Fellow called Leſcus, who had run on Foot, and came next the Impoſtor, was choſen King. He fell in the Wars with Charlemain, and was ſucceeded by his Son Leſcus III. who made Peace with that Emperor, and became his Vaſſal. His Grandſon Popiel II. having by the Perſwaſion of his Lady murdered his Uncles and other Relations, was, as the Story goes, together with his Family, eat up by Rats that came from the Corpſes of his murder'd Uncles. This happening about 820, the Poles elected one Piaſtus a Wheelright, from whom his Poſterity were called Piaſti. The Crown continued in his Family till 1386, that it fell upon that of Uladiſlaus Jagello, whoſe Poſterity were called Jagellans. That Line failing about 1574, the Elective Kings begun again in the Duke of Anjou, Brother to Charles IX. of France, who in five Months after retired privately to France upon the Death of his Brother, whom he ſucceeded. After this the Poles being divided, part of them choſe Maximilian of Auſtria, and others Stephen Bathori, Prince of Tranſilvania, who carry'd it againſt his Rival, and performed many Great Actions. After his Death, in 1586, there was another double Election; Sigiſmund III. Son to John III. of Sweden, being choſe by one Party, and Maximilian of Auſtria choſe again by the other; but he was defeated, and obliged by Sigiſmund to reſign; who ſucceeding alſo to the Crown of Sweden, was dethroned by the Swedes for attempting to re-introduce Popery. This occaſioned a War betwixt Sweden and Poland with various Succeſs. A War alſo happened betwixt the Muſcovites and Poles, wherein Sigiſmund deſign'd the Conqueſt of Muſcovy, but miſcarry'd; he was at laſt reduced to great Straits by Guſtavus Adolphus King of Sweden, and died in 1632. His Son Uladiſlaus IV. ſucceeded, and was very fortunate both in War and Treaties. He died in 1637, and was ſucceeded by his Brother John Caſimir, who had been bred a Monk, marry'd his Brother's Widow, and was ſo unfortunate, that he reſign'd in 1668, and retir'd to an Abbey, where he dy'd. His Succeſſor Michael Coributh, Duke of Weiſſnowiski, being Tyrannical, was involv'd both in a Civil and Foreign War. The Turks took Caminiec from him. He died in 1673, and was ſucceeded by the famous John Sobieski, whoſe Succeſs againſt the Turks in many Battles, and his raiſing the Siege of Vienna, advanced his Fame to the higheſt Pitch. He dy'd in 1696, and was ſucceeded by the preſent King Auguſtus, Elector of Saxony, who turned Papiſt that he might be capable of enjoying that Crown. This occaſion'd a Civil War, for Lewis XIV. of France ſet up againſt him the Prince of Conti, who was elected by Cardinal Radziouski, and the Zealots that ſuſpected the Truth of King Auguſtus's Converſion; but he being ſupported by the Emperor, King William of Great Britain, and the other Allies, who knew the Danger of having a Frenchman King of Poland while they were at War with France, the Prince of Conti was forced to quit his Pretenſions, and King Auguſtus was eſtabliſhed: But he having attacked and taken Dunamund in Poſſeſſion of the Swedes, that formerly belonged to Poland, the King of Sweden made War upon him, and being join'd by the diſaffected Poles, drove King Auguſtus out of Poland, invaded Saxony, made Staniſlaus, a Poliſh Nobleman, King of Poland, and forced Auguſtus to renounce; but the King of Sweden being afterwards defeated by the Czar of Muſcovy, and forced to fly into Turkey, King Auguſtus, by the help of the Czar his Ally, recovered the Throne.

The ELECTION of the KING.

WHEN the Throne is vacant by Death, Depoſition, or Reſignation, the Archbiſhop of Gneſna, as Inter-Rex, takes the Government, ſummons a General Convocation to meet at Warſaw with himſelf and the Senators. The Provinces ſend their Deputies, and this Dyet ſits about a Fortnight to regulate the Affair of the Election; after which the Deputies return home, acquaint their Conſtituents with what they have done, and the Gentry conſult of what is fit to be propoſed at the Dyet for Election. In the mean time all Addreſſes by Foreign Miniſters are made to the Senate, who take upon them the Title of Serene. When the Time of the Election comes, they aſſemble in a Plain, half a League from Warſaw, where the Senators meet in a great Hall made up of Boards, and the Deputies in the open Field. After Prayers for Direction in their Choice, they appoint a Court of Juſtice during the Inter-regnum, and all the Senators and Deputies take an Oath before the Primate on their Knees, to maintain Union among themſelves; to own none for King but he who is lawfully and unanimouſly Elected; to vote for none till all the Grievances of former Reigns be conſidered and Redreſs promiſed, and to preſerve the Privileges of the Republick. They annul all former Decrees and Statutes againſt their Liberties, and ſwear the Generals to remove the Forces from the Place of the Dyet, which muſt not ſit above ſix Weeks.

Then they give Audience to the Ambaſſadors of the Candidates, or Competitors, who muſt be very liberal in their Preſents to the Senators and Deputies, as well as in keeping open Tables; nor muſt they forget the other Gentry, who come in great Numbers, tho' they have no Votes, but frequently threaten the Dyet, if they don't elect the Perſon whom they propoſe; ſo that it ſeldom coſts a Candidate leſs than ſome Hundred Thouſand Pounds Sterling.

After Audience to the Ambaſſadors, the Dyet proceeds to Elect. The Primate, before they Name the King, asks three times, Whether all the Grievances be redreſſed? And if the Anſwer be Affirmative, he declares the King Elect; the Marſhals of the Crown and Great Dutchy do the like, then Te Deum is ſung.

Next they exhibit to the Ambaſſador of the King Elect the Pacta Conventa, or Terms of Government, who ſwears, and ſigns them in his Maſter's Name. They conſiſt of Twenty ſtanding Articles, the chief of which are, 1. That the King ſhall appoint no Succeſſor, but preſerve the Freedom of Election. 2. That the Coinage and Profit of it ſhall belong to the Republic. 3. That he ſhall not declare War, levy Men, bring in Foreign Troops, or ſuffer any to go out, without Conſent of the Dyet. 4. That all Field-Officers of the Army be Natives. 5. Thoſe of the Guards the like, their Colonel a Poliſh Nobleman, and that all of them ſwear Subjection to the Grand Marſhal. 6. That no Man ſhall have more Places than the Law allows, and that vacant Poſts be conferred in ſix Weeks time on a well-qualify'd Poliſh Gentleman. 7. That the Number of Troops and Method of Diſcipline be regulated by Conſent of the Council. 8. That he ſhall not marry without Conſent of the Senate, who are to aſſign him his Retinue. 9. That he build no Fleet without Conſent of the Senate and Gentry. 10. That he ſhall not diminiſh, but rather increaſe his Treaſury in the Caſtle of Cracow, nor borrow Money without Conſent of the Dyet. 11. That he always adminiſter Juſtice by the Advice of his Senators. 12. That he ſhall have no more Revenue than his Predeceſſors. 13. That no Stranger be introduced into his Councils, nor any Office or Dignity given them. 14. That he ſhall not diminiſh any of the Offices in the Court or Republick. 15. That he ſhall defend and maintain all the Liberties, Immunities and Privileges granted by former Kings to the Poles and Lithuanians, and the Provinces depending on thoſe two Nations.

They add to theſe as they ſee Occaſion. The King Elect muſt ſwear to them when he comes; then the Chancellor preſents him with the Decree of his Election ſigned by all the Senators. At the Coronation, which is performed at Cracow, he kiſſes the Archbiſhop's Hand, kneels, lays his Hand on the Goſpel, and ſwears to them again, and alſo that he will maintain the Catholick Faith, govern according to Law, ſee ſpeedy Juſtice done to every one without Partiality; and laſtly, that if it happen (which God forbid) that he violate his Oath, or any part of it, that the Subjects ſhall be totally diſcharged from their Obedience and Oath of Fealty. Then receiving the Benediction of the Primate and other Biſhops, his upper Garment is taken off, and the Primate anoints his Right Hand up to the Elbow, and his Shoulder, with Conſecrated Oil, ſaying, I anoint thee King in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. The Marſhals of the Kingdom and Dutchy put on his Ornaments. He goes to Church attended by the Officers of State, and the Standard-Bearer walking before him, hears Maſs on his Throne, and then comes to the Altar, where the Archbiſhop puts a drawn Sword into his Right Hand, ſaying, Receive this Sword, and cordially protect and defend the Holy Church againſt all Unbelievers. Then the Sword-Bearer puts it up into the Scabbard, and returns it to the Archbiſhop, who girds it to the King's Side. Then his Majeſty draws it, waves it three times over his Head, to ſignify that he will defend the Church and Trinity. Next the King kneels, and the Archbiſhop puts the Crown on his Head, the Biſhops of Cracow and Cujavia ſupporting it with their Hands. After ſome Prayers the Archbiſhop puts the Scepter into the King's Right Hand, and the Globe into his Left. Then the Primate and the two Archbiſhops carry the King to the Throne, where the Archbiſhop places him, ſaying, Sit and maintain the Place given you by God. The King returns to the Altar, and Te Deum being ſung, his Majeſty kiſſes the Archbiſhop's Hand, offers him Gold, confeſſes, receives the Sacrament and the Biſhop's Benediction; then the Court-Marſhal crys ſeveral times Vivat Rex. Next Day the King goes in great Pomp to the Town-Houſe; the Senators carry the Regalia before him, the Great Treaſurer throws Medals of Gold and Silver among the People, and the King being placed on his Throne receives the Homage and Oaths of the Dyet, &c. on their Knees, and the Primate lays down his Authority as Inter-Rex.

The KING'S TITLES are,

KING of Poland, Great Duke of Lithuania, Duke of Ruſſia, Pruſſia, Maſſovia, Samogitia, Kiovia, Volhinia, Podolia, Podlachia, Livonia, Smolenſko, Severia, and Czernichovia.

The KING's REVENUES.

HE is allowed a Penſion of above 140000 l. per Annum, which, with the Patrimony of the Crown in Lands, &c. and what he gets for naming Perſons to Poſts Civil and Military, enables him to keep a very handſome Court. He has alſo the Impoſts on Merchandize, and the Jews Part of the Cuſtoms of Dantzic, and the Revenues of the Salt-Mines. He has the ſame Officers of the Houſhold as other Kings, is allowed Poliſh, German and Hungarian Guards, and the Queen has uſually a Penſion of 30000 l. Sterling per Annum.

He can't name any of his Children to Poſts of Profit or Honour, nor purchaſe Land for them without the unanimous Conſent of the Dyet.

The SENATE

CONSISTS of 17 Eccleſiaſticks, of whom the Primate is Chief, and about 130 Laymen, named by the King, and continue for Life: They are Palatines and Caſtellans, and take an Oath to preſerve the Liberties of the Republick, by vertue of which they controul the King when he invades their Privileges. The Archbiſhop of Gneſna, who is Primate, has very great Power, can reverſe whatever is done in any of the Biſhops Courts, and 'tis Death to draw a Sword in his Preſence. He has a golden Croſs carry'd before him when he goes to the Dyet, or viſits the King, which he may do at pleaſure, and when he ſits his Chaplain holds it behind his Chair. His Marſhal, who is a Senator, carries a Staff before his Coach, and ſalutes none with it but the King. Ambaſſadors pay him Viſits, but he returns none; and he has always Drums beating and Trumpets ſounding when at Dinner.

Notwithſtanding theſe Limitations, the King, ſays Thuanus, has Power to pardon Fines and Capital Puniſhments, and upon Invaſions or Rebellions to ſummon the Nobility in Arms under his Standard. He can liſt mercenary Troops, create Officers of the Militia, disband Armies, and puniſh thoſe who tranſgreſs their Duty. He appoints the Magiſtrates of Towns, makes Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Palatines, Caſtellans, Marſhals, Chancellors and Treaſurers, who are all Senators. He alſo appoints the Governors of Towns, Judges and Magiſtrates in the Provinces, Secretaries, Maſters of Requeſts, and all ſuperiour and inferiour Officers of the Court. He can ennoble Plebeians who ſignalize themſelves in Peace or War, and grant the Uſufruit of Royal Caſtles, Towns and Villages to ſuch as deſerve well of himſelf or the Republick. He diſpoſes of the Eſtates of thoſe who are proſcrib'd, or die without Heirs. All the Laws, Leagues, Negociations and Embaſſys muſt be in his Name, and paſs under his Seal, as do all Letters Patents, &c.

The DYET.

IT conſiſts of the King, Senators, and Deputies from Provinces and Towns, which make 178 for Poland and Lithuania, and 70 for Pruſſia. The King is obliged to call one every third Year, and it meets twice at Warſaw and once at Grodno by turns, for the Conveniency of the Lithuanians, who made it one of the Articles of the Union. The King ſends Circular Letters, with the Propoſals of what is to be treated in the Dyet, ſix Weeks before they meet. Upon this the little Dyets of all the Gentry of each Palatinate meet, reſolve upon what is to be done about the King's Propoſals, and chuſe Deputies to carry their Reſolutions to the great Dyet. The Deciſions here, as well as in the General Dyet, muſt be carried by unanimous Conſent, which frequently occaſions the Breaking-up both of the Particular and General Dyets without doing any Buſineſs; ſo that neither the King nor the Country is well ſerved by them, for the Negative of any one Deputy puts a Stop to the whole Proceedings. Yet the Poles value themſelves upon this Privilege of their Deputies, which they compare to the Authority of the Tribuni Plebis among the Romans. But ſometimes it coſts the diſſenting Deputies their Lives, for the reſt are apt to hew them in pieces, if they have not the good Luck to make a ſpeedy Eſcape. During the Dyet the King is obliged to increaſe his Guards, to prevent being inſulted by the Deputies, who make ſo bad a uſe of their Liberty as ſometimes to threaten his Perſon, and call him a Tyrant to his Face, as ſome of them did the brave King John Sobieski. Hauteville ſays, the Poles ſpend more Time in Drinking and Feaſting, than in Debating Matters of State, which they never think on till they begin to want Money and Wine; and they can ſcarce on any occaſion be prevail'd upon to ſit above ſix Weeks, for by that time their Proviſions are generally ſpent, by the great Trains of Attendants and Guards the Deputies bring with them.

The Dyet is made up of two Houſes, the Upper of the Senators, and the Lower of the Deputies, who bring up Bills to the other to be debated. The Senators are alſo Judges in Criminal Affairs, without whoſe Conſent the King can neither turn out nor otherwiſe puniſh a Nobleman, even for High Treaſon. Five Days before the End of the Dyet the Senators and Deputies meet together in the Upper Houſe, to conclude what is reſolved on. 'Tis obſerved in general, that no Aſſembly in Europe is more ſubject to Factions and Bribery; and theſe Diſorders are generally encouraged by the neighbouring Powers, but chiefly by the Auſtrian and French Factions. The miſerable Slavery of their Neighbours the Turks and Muſcovites, makes the Poles fond of their Conſtitution, becauſe they think it preſerves their Liberty. One thing which makes them ſubject to Factions is, that their Gentry are much addicted to travel, and eaſily corrupted by the Bribes and Careſſes of Foreign Courts to favour their Intereſts. Beſides, they are unſteddy in their Maxims about chuſing their Kings; for ſometimes they were againſt chuſing any of their own Nobility, leſt it ſhould make their Families too powerful and endanger their Liberties. At other times they were againſt chuſing any neighbouring powerful or abſolute Prince for the ſame Reaſon. The Maxims they moſt adhere to are, 1. That the Candidate be Rich, then he is the more capable to bribe handſomely; 2. That he have the Reputation of a good Soldier; and, 3. that he either be a Papiſt, or declare he will be one before he accept the Crown.

Their LAWS.

THEY have none in Writing older than the Time of Caſimir the Great, about 1447. Before that time they were governed by the Cuſtoms of their Anceſtors; but he brought in the Magdeburg Laws, now call'd the Conſtitutions of Poland. Yet Lithuania, Volhinia and Pruſſia have ſtill their own Municipal Laws.

Their PERSONS.

THE Poles are generally of a fair Complexion, their Hair of a pale Yellow, their Stature commonly above the middle Size, and they are for moſt part ſtrong and long liv'd, but inclinable to be groſs; ſo that the Women of Quality make it their chief Study to be lean and thin. They never make uſe of Paint or Waſhes, nor indeed have they any Occaſion.

Their NOBILITY.

SELDEN, in his Titles of Honour, ſays, their Weywods are like our Lord Lieutenants, and their Caſtellans like our Deputy Lieutenants, and have their Offices only for Life. The Office and Title are reckon'd a thouſand Years old. The Secular States are in their Laws named Comites, Barones, Principes Nobiles & Milites; but Cromerus ſays, theſe different Titles import no Diſtinction of Honour, for all their Nobility or Gentry are equal in Power as ſuch; ſo that there is no Inequality among them, but what proceeds from Publick Employments.

Dr. Connor ſays, a Gentleman and Nobleman is the ſame thing, and his Coat of Arms is granted by the Republick, but they muſt always have a Land Eſtate. They are capable of being elected King, of purchaſing Lands any where in the Country, are Sovereign Princes in their own Eſtate, and have Power of Life and Death over their Tenants, who are perfect Slaves, and dare not leave their Maſters Lands, unleſs he violate their Wives or Daughters, ſo that they are many times glad when their Landlords give them that Plea. If a Gentleman kill one of his own Slaves he pays only fifteen Livres; and if he kill another's, he is only obliged to furniſh another, or as much Money as will buy one, and to maintain the Family of him that is killed. If one Gentleman kills another, he can't be apprehended till convicted by a Court of Juſtice, nor executed without the King's Conſent; ſo that they frequently eſcape. No Soldiers can be quarter'd upon the Gentry; and if any Officer do it, he is either ſentenced to die, or declared infamous by the Dyet. The Houſes of the Nobility are Sanctuaries for Delinquents, who may be arreſted there, but not taken from thence without the Gentleman's Leave; nor can the King lodge at any of their Houſes without previous Liberty. The Product of the Gentry's Lands may be exported without paying Cuſtom, and his Certificate upon Oath exempts the Purchaſer from paying it. The Nobility have alſo the Right of Preemption, and are reckoned equal by Birth; ſo that they don't value Titles of Honour, nor have they any but what is given by Foreign Powers, for which the Perſons are rather deſpiſed than eſteemed by the reſt. Neither the King nor the Republick create any with the Title of Prince, which is only given to the Sons of the Royal Family; though they have five or ſix of their chief Families who have the Title of Princes of the Empire. But when their Gentry travel into France or Germany, they aſſume the Title of Counts and Barons, that they may have the eaſier Acceſs to Perſons of Quality. They never had any Order of Knighthood, except that of the Immaculate Conception, erected by Sigiſmund III. with ſome Privileges above the reſt of the Gentry, who ſo much deſpiſed it, that the Order came to Nothing. King Auguſtus in 1705 created that called the Order of the White Eagle, in remembrance of his happily meeting the Dyet in Lithuania, when the Swedes and Staniſlaus thought to have intercepted him. The Badge is a White Eagle crown'd with Diamonds, and the Motto Pro Fide, Lege & Rege. He conferred it on ſeveral Lords; but the Senators are diſtinguiſh'd by wearing a Golden Croſs with the Badge and Motto in the Middle of it.

Many of the Gentry have ſuch large Territories, that they can raiſe and maintain from 5 to 10000 Men apiece; which makes them ſo proud, that they will ſubmit to the Deciſion of no Tribunal, but determine their Quarrels by the Sword, and make War upon one another. They have grown to this Heighth ſince the Time of Boleſlaus the Chaſte in 1226; for till that time, ſays Cromerus, they were little better than Slaves, obliged to keep the King's Dogs, and to ſerve him at their own Charge in War: But that Prince having allowed extraordinary Priviledges to the Clergy, the Gentry took the opportunity of Civil and Foreign Wars to obtain the like, and have taken care ever ſince to have them confirmed and enlarged at the Elections of their Kings.

Nobility may be acquired here, but it muſt be propoſed by the King, approved by all the particular Dyets, and confirmed by the great ones. A Jew's turning Chriſtian, or any Man's ſignalizing himſelf in the the Wars, is a good Plea for being made Noble; and thoſe who are choſen Magiſtrates in Cracow or Vilna are with their Poſterity reckoned Noble. This Honour is forfeited here, 1. By heinous Crimes; and 'tis reckoned a very great one for any Nobleman to ſuffer one who is not ſo, to make uſe of his Coat of Arms. 2. By exerciſing Trade or Merchandize. 3. By bearing Office in any City that is not privileged. Sometimes they quit the Title through Poverty, but their Poſterity is reſtor'd when in better Circumſtances. Some of the Nobility are Hereditary Sovereigns of Cities, without any Dependance on the King; and the Poor Gentry have their Votes in the Dyet as well as the Richeſt. They engroſs all Preferments; ſo that no Foreigner, however noble or deſerving, can riſe higher than a Major General, which is much the ſame with our Brigadier. The Common People can have no Poſſeſſions, unleſs a few Houſes in a City, or a ſmall piece of Land about a League from it. But the Citizens of Cracow, Leopol, Dantzic and Vilna are exempted from this Badge of Slavery; and in Pruſſia not only the Nobility, but all the other Inhabitants have greater Liberties, and are exempted from Cuſtoms by the Magna Charta of Culm.

The Rich Gentry love to make a Shew, and are exceſſive in their Apparel. Their preſent Faſhion is a Veſt down to the middle of their Leg, a long Robe lin'd with Fur, girded about with a Saſh, Furr'd Caps, little Boots with Iron Heels, and a Sabre by their Side. When they Ride they have a ſhort Cloak furr'd within and without. The better ſort have rich Furs from Muſcovy which coſt above a thouſand Crowns, are worn by them at Dyets, and deſcend from Father to Son. The poorer Gentry wear the Furs of Tigers, Leopards and Panthers. Some of them imitate the French Faſhion. It is uſual with the richer Nobility to have fifty Suits of coſtly Apparel, and to have their Servants as well clad almoſt as themſelves. They are luxurious, though not very nice in Eating and Drinking. Their Diet is generally freſh Meat, Fowl and Fiſh; and they drink the ſtrongeſt of Rheniſh, French, Spaniſh, Italian and Hungarian Wines, Brandy, Aquavitæ and other Spirits. They conſume a great deal of Spices in their Sauces, &c. ſo that ſome of the Nobility ſpend great Sums annually in that Commodity; and their uſual Breakfaſt is Beer boil'd with Yolks of Eggs, Sugar, and Ginger. Thoſe of greateſt Note have Horſe and Foot-Guards, Centinels Day and Night at their Gates, and make an extraordinary Figure when they come to the Dyet. They bring great numbers of the Carcaſſes of Elks with them, which they hang at their Gates till they ſtink, then dreſs and eat them as a great Curioſity, to be met with no where but at the Tables of the chief Nobles. Such of them as are Senators think themſelves above a German Prince, and they affect ſo much Grandeur in their Equipage as obliges Foreign Ambaſſadors to make a great Figure at the Court and Dyets, to prevent their being deſpiſed.

When they invite one another, the Gueſts muſt bring their Spoons, Knives, &c. with them, and Linnen too if they would be cleanly; for they have no Napkins but a broad Piece of ſtarch'd Linnen ſew'd round the Table-Cloth, that their Servants mayn't ſteal it. The Ladies carry Napkins with them, and put up as much Sweetmeats and dry'd Fruits as they pleaſe. The Maſters reach Meat from the Table to their Servants, who eat it as they ſtand by their Chairs; and the Maſter of the Feaſt is reckoned a Niggard if he don't make his Gueſts drunk.

Their Houſes are generally low, for they ſeldom lie above Stairs. They are for moſt part of Wood, but ſome of Brick and Stone. The Kitchen on one ſide the Court, the Stable on another, the Dwelling-Houſe on the third, and the Gate in the Front. The richer ſort have Hangings of Tapeſtry or Arras, and Beds with Taffeta Curtains, but ſeldom any Accommodation to lodge Strangers.

The PEASANTS

ARE born Slaves, have no Notion of Liberty, but ſatisfy themſelves without it, becauſe they uſually have Plenty of Meat and Drink, and four or five Diſhes at a time of Roots, &c. Peaſe, and ruſty Bacon, which they are very fond of. They are obliged to work three or four Days in the Week for their Maſters without Diet or Wages. The reſt of the time they work for themſelves, not excepting Sundays, which makes them very brutiſh and ignorant. They have no Property, nor can they ever be made free, and are ſold by their Maſters as Appurtenances to the Eſtate; unleſs they get free by getting into a Convent and turning Prieſts, or that their Maſters debauch their Wives and Daughters, as already mentioned. When the Landlord lets any Ground to a Peaſant, he obliges the reſt to build him a Houſe, to give him a Cow, Hens, and Geeſe, and as much Rye as will keep him a Year. If a Peaſant be able to ſend his Son to the Univerſity, he muſt firſt buy Leave of his Landlord, and while they work for him they have rigid Taskmaſters, who force them by Blows to do what's required of them: Yet their Maſters commonly boaſt of their Clemency, and ſay, though their Power over them be abſolute, they don't uſe them any worſe than Horſes and Dogs are in other Chriſtian Countries. Dr. Connor ſays, he asked ſome of the Nobility, Why they treated the poor Wretches thus? And they anſwered, That formerly all the Boors revolted from their Landlords, and conſpired to deſtroy them, in order to ſet up a Commonwealth of their own; and plundered ſo many, that the reſt were obliged to call in the Help of Foreigners to quell the Boors, and brought them to ſuch Extremities, that ever ſince they have been contented to live like Slaves. They willingly fight for their Landlords, and adore them ſo much that few of them think themſelves injured or diſgraced even when they raviſh their Wives and Daughters.

In Winter they wear a Sheep's Skin with the Wool inwards, and in Summer a cloſe-body'd Coat of a coarſe Stuff, and a dirty Colour, with ſorry Caps. They wear the Rinds of Trees wrapped about their Legs like Boots, and uſe the thicker Bark for Soles. They cut their Hair cloſe like Monks, and ſhave all their Faces but their Whiskers; and when abroad, carry a Poll-Ax in their Hands, and a Sabre by their Side, hung by a Strap of Leather, to which there is faſtened a Handkerchief, a Knife and Sheath, and a ſmall Stone to whet their Knives. The Lithuanian Boors are ſtill more miſerable, and are commonly robb'd of any thing valuable by the Gentry, againſt whom they can have no Juſtice. Their Moveables are only a little Earthen and Wooden Ware, a hard Bed, and wretched Coverlid, and in many Places nothing but Straw. The Children go naked till four or five Years of Age, lie upon Boards by the Fire, and are allowed no Beds Beds till they marry. 'Tis uſual for their Children to ſlide naked upon the Ice in Winter, which, with their Mothers waſhing them in cold Water when dirty, makes them very hardy; but in Pruſſia and Courland they live tolerably well, eſpecially where under Proteſtant Maſters.

After all this Account of the Tyranny of the Poliſh Nobility, the Doctor, and other Authors ſay, that they are very affable and courteous to Strangers, whom they ſupply Gratis with what they want; and as they love to be reſpected themſelves, repay it to others with great Civility, and are generally open-hearted, brave, well made, and more ſprightly than moſt others in Europe, which he aſcribes to the great Privileges they enjoy, their living on good Diet, drinking ſtrong Wines, and other ſpirituous Liquors, and their frequent Exerciſe in Hunting, Leaping, Vaulting, and other Manly Sports, which with their lying generally hard, makes them capable of the Fatigues of War. He ſays, they have generally a very mean Opinion of their Clergy, except it be the great Ones, who command Reſpect by their Power and Riches.

He ſays the Poliſh Ladies are generall modeſt, very ſubmiſſive to their Husbands, ask them upon the Knee for every Thing they want, call them their Benefactors, and don't diſpoſe of any Money without their Leave. Thoſe of chief Note ſeldom go to Church, or to Viſit, without their Coach and Six, a great Number of Servants, and particularly an old Gentleman for their Uſher, and an old Woman for their Governante, and He and She Dwarfs to bear up their Trains, and abundance of Flambeaux about their Coach, if at Night. Their Habits come nearer to the Men's than in other Countries; and they wear Silk Caps Furr'd like the Men's: But in King John Sobieski's Time, whoſe Queen was a French-woman, they fell pretty much into the French Dreſs.

Their MARRIAGES and FUNERALS.

THE Gentry are very expenſive in their Weddings, and feaſt generally for three Days. On the ſecond all the Gueſts make Preſents to the Bride, which is generally the beſt Part of her Portion; and when a Lady marries any of her Waiting Maids, it coſts her her almoſt as much as the Marriage of one of her Daughters.

The Boor's Daughters don't marry till 24 or 30 Years of Age, and that they have wrought ſeveral Baskets full of Cloaths of different Sorts, which the Bride diſtributes among the Bridegroom's Friends at the Wedding. Thoſe who make up the Match, enquire more into the Houſewifery and Manners of the Perſon, than after the Stock of Corn and Cattle, which is the uſual Portion; and the ſame is obſerv'd with reſpect to the Men. Godfathers and Godmothers are reckoned equal with the Parents; and the ſame Rules of Conſanguinity are obſerv'd in their Marriages. The Peaſant's Daughters are ſo reſerved, that they will draw a Knife at any Man who offers to kiſs them, unleſs in fair Courtſhip; and the Mothers are ſo watchful, that they tie Bells to their Daughter's Cloaths before and behind; for 'tis reckon'd ſo great a Diſgrace, if the Bride's Tokens of Virginity don't appear to the Gueſts, that the Mother is ſure to be affronted, and all the Utenſils of the Houſe broke, eſpecially among the Poliſh Coſſacks. The Bridegroom is in that Caſe at liberty to turn off his Bride, and if he does not, he is commonly ridicul'd. Yet theſe Precautions are not always ſucceſsful.

Their BURIALS.

THOSE of Quality are made with ſuch Pomp and Magnificence, that they look more like Triumphs than Interments. The Corpſe is carried in a Herſe or Chariot with ſix Horſes, all covered in Black. Over the Coffin, there's a large black Velvet Pall, with a Croſs of red Sattin in the Middle, and ſix long black Silk Toſſels, ſupported by 6 of the Deceaſed's Domeſtics in cloſe Mourning. Several Prieſts, Monks, and others, march before the Herſe with Wax Torches. Immediately before the Herſe come three Men on Horſeback, carrying the Deceaſed's Arms, and when the Funeral Service is over, they enter the Church on Horſeback, ride furiouſly up to the Coffin, and break the Arms of the Deceaſed upon it, after which the Body is Interr'd. Then there's a Feaſt where the Lay Gueſts drink to exceſs, and force the Clergy to do the like. When Women of Quality mourn, they wear coarſe black Stuff, and their Linnen is not much better than Canvaſs; it being their Rule, that the greater the Quality, the Mourning muſt be the Coarſer.

When the King dies, he is laid on a Bed of State, and attended by a certain Number of Eccleſiaſtical and Temporal Senators. The Expence of the Funeral is defray'd by them out of the Revenue. A deceaſed Queen has the ſame Honours paid her, and all the Senators muſt appear in black at the next Dyet for Election.

Their INNS

ARE only long Stables, built up with Boards, and covered with Straw, without Furniture, only Windows. There are Chambers at one End, but ſo annoy'd with Vermin and Stink, that Strangers chuſe rather to lodge in the Stable among the Horſes, or in the Common Room, which is the only Place where they have a Fire; but if it be on a Holiday, they can expect no Reſt, for the Boors ſpend the whole Day and Night in Drinking, Singing and Dancing; and there's always an intolerable Smell of rotten Cabbage, which the Poles ſalt and pickle for part of their Winter Proviſion. The ordinary Drink here is Beer or Mead; but other Proviſions Travellers muſt carry along with them. Their Bridges are as bad as their Inns, and very ſeldom repair'd, which makes Travelling dangerous, eſpecially to Strangers; only there's this Conveniency, that the Country being for moſt part Champaign, a Poſt-Calaſh and two Horſes will rid a great deal of Ground in a Day, and in the Winter Seaſon, Travellers have generally a furr'd Sack to put their Feet in.

Their MILITARY STRENGTH.

BOTERUS ſays, the Poles can raiſe above 100000 Horſe, and the Lithuanians 70000; ſo that their main Strength lies in their Cavalry, which conſiſts chiefly of the Gentry and their Servants, who at leaſt are equal

equal to their Maſters in Number. Their Infantry is for moſt part made up of Foreigners, and ſometimes exceeds 30000; for their own Peaſants are ſo diſpirited by Slavery, that they are not fit for Soldiers. The main of their Foot was formerly made up of Coſſacks, but now they hire Germans and others. The ſtanding Army in Poland is 36000, and that of Lithuania 12000, and each of them have a chief and inferior General; ſo that the Lithuanians act only as Auxiliaries; and not being under the ſame Command, nor very well affected to the Poles, their beſt concerted Deſigns frequently miſcarry for want of Unanimity and Expedition. The Generals have Batoons like the Mareſchals of France, and for Badge of Command, a great Lance adorn'd at the End with a great Ball of rich Stuff, ſet off with Feathers and Knots of Ribbons. The King's Badge has a Plume of Hern's or Eagle's Feathers, and when he commands in Perſon, his Badge only is carried aloft. The great Generals are accountable only to the great Dyets of their Country, and the King not having Power to prefer Men according to Merit, he is often obliged to conſer the Poſt upon ſome rich Nobleman who has no Experience, and the Commiſſion being once granted, it can't be recall'd without Conſent of the Dyet. The Subalterns ſeldom come to the Place of Rendezvous till ſome Weeks after the Time appointed, and frequently leave the Army a Month before the Campain is ended. Their Armies are alſo badly paid, which, with want of Diſcipline, makes them frequently mutiny and plunder the Country, nor is there ſufficient Care taken for Magazines of Proviſions and Ammunition. They are as ill ſerv'd for Intelligence, having ſeldom any Spies but a few Coſſacks; but theſe Diſorders were much redreſs'd by their late King John Sobieski, and their Diſcipline, and Way of Fighting, is ſomewhat further improv'd by their preſent King Auguſtus.

The Huſſars are their Gens d'Arms; and for Equipage and Shew the fineſt Cavalry in Europe. They are compoſed of handſome Men, who have the beſt Horſes in the Kingdom, with led Horſes richly Capariſon'd, fine embroidered Saddles and Houſings, with Fringes of Gold and Silver, and a rich Sword fix'd to the Left-ſide of the Saddle under the Rider's Thigh. They are armed Cap-a-Pee, have Gauntlets of Mail, and over their Amour wear a looſe Coat made of Leopard's or Tyger's Skins. They have large Lances pointed with Iron, and adorned with Streamers of Taffaty; but theſe Weapons are ſo heavy, that they muſt be carried in a Boot fix'd to the Saddle. Each of them has two Servants, arm'd with Head-pieces and Lances, are clad with Coats of white Wolves Skins, and behind their Backs have a Wing made of Eagle's Feathers. Theſe Huſſars have alſo Piſtols, but are all Exempts, and do no Duty but in a Time of Battle, when they generally carry all before them, unleſs ſuch Enemies as know them, open their Ranks, and encompaſs them; for they are ſo heavy, that they can't eaſily wheel about; and if their Horſes be kill'd, the Huſſar can't raiſe himſelf, becauſe of the Weight of his Armour. The King, Princes of the Blood, Generals, Miniſters of State, Senators and Biſhops, have Companies of thoſe Huſſars to attend them, and generally call them Towariches, which ſignifies Comrades.

The Second Sort of Gens d'Arms, is thoſe call'd Pancernes, inferior to the Huſſars, but ſuperior to the other Cavalry. They have Coats of Mail, and Iron Caps cover'd with Net-work of the ſame, which hangs down to their Shoulders, and covering half their Faces, their great Whiskers make them look like Satyrs. They are armed with Falchions and Muskets, and as well Mounted as Huſſars, but not ſo richly equipp'd; and inſtead of a Trumpet, have a crooked Inſtrument of Copper, ſuppoſed to be the Lituus of the Ancients, which makes a ſhrill and ſavage Noiſe.

That which they call the Foreign Army is under a regular Diſcipline, and arm'd like thoſe of Germany and France; only the Dragoons are ill Mounted, and both they and the Foot ill Clad. The Infantry has long Battle-Axes, which ſerve as Reſts to their Muskets, and are excellent for covering and defending the Foot againſt Horſe. Foreigners of all Nations may be employ'd in this Army, which indeed is the Safety of the Nation; the reſt being for little more than Ornament. The Poles uſe nothing now of the old Sarmatian Arms but Bows and Arrows, and their Bucklers are almoſt quite out of uſe; yet ſome ſtill uſe them, and lay out 300 Gold Ducats upon one. King John Sobieski had one of beaten Gold fix'd to his Saddle at the Siege of Vienna, with the Repreſentation of his Battle at Kochim upon it in Baſſo Relievo. The Poliſh Scymiters are longer and heavier than thoſe of the Turks, but don't cut ſo well.

Their RELIGION.

THEY receiv'd that of the Church of Rome in 964, but thoſe of Red Ruſſia embraced the Doctrine of the Greek Church, which many of them ſtill follow. Others of the Greek Church ſubmit to that of Rome, and are call'd Uniti, but have their Worſhip in the Greek. They have alſo Armenians, who comply with the Church of Rome, but have their Worſhip in their own Language.

Wickliff's Doctrine began early to take Place here, but was much oppos'd by the Popiſh Prieſts. Luther's Doctrine made afterwards a conſiderable Progreſs, and the King is obliged by his Coronation-Oath, to tolerate it in Poliſh Pruſſia.

The Calviniſts had alſo a conſiderable Footing, and many Churches in this Kingdom, being protected by Prince Radzeville, who was of their Opinion; and a happy Union was agreed upon at the Synod of Sendomir in 1571, betwixt the Proteſtants of the Augsburg, Helvetic and Bohemian, or Waldenſian Confeſſions, through Greater and Leſſer Poland, Lithuania, and Samogitia; and the Calviniſt Confeſſion, which is very ſtrong againſt the Anti-Trinitarians, was agreed on at Czenger, and publiſh'd at Dobrezin the ſame Year, as may be ſeen by the Harmony of Confeſſions, publiſhed at Geneva in 1612. But the increaſe of Arrians, Tritheiſts, Photinians, Ebionites, Neſtorians, Socinians, &c. did, together with the Bigotry and Fury of the Popiſh Clergy, very much obſtruct the Progreſs of the Reformation. King John Caſimir, who began his Reign in 1648, made an Edict againſt the Socinians; and King John Sobieski made a ſeverer Edict, and drove them quite out of the Kingdom, for publiſhing a Book intituled Tormentum Trinitatem Thono deturbans.

The Generality of the Papiſts here are very great Bigots, and their Intereſt is ſtrengthened by the Preſidency of their Biſhops in their Little and Grand Dyets. The inferiour Clergy have alſo a Place in all Courts of Judicature; and the Great Secretary of the Kingdom is alſo a Churchman. The Regular Clergy, or Monks, are more eſteemed than the Secular; and Mendicant Fryers have the Privilege to enter the privateſt Room of any Houſe, without knocking at the Door. The Secular Clergy are generally rich, but openly debauched, and are neither rebuked for it by their Superiors nor the People. The Inferior Clergy ſeldom attend their Office in the Church, but give poor Scholars Twopence a Day to officiate for them; nor do the Biſhops correct the Inferior Clergy for their Misbehaviours. The Common People may be drunk without Rebuke on their Faſt-Days, provided they abſtain from Fleſh, &c. and are ſuch Bigots, that when the Pope gave them a Diſpenſation to eat Butter and Cheeſe on their Faſts in Cardinal Radziouſky's Time, they called the Pope a Heretic. The People at the Elevation of the Hoſt knock their Heads againſt the Pavement or Benches with ſuch Violence, as is heard at a conſiderable Diſtance. Their Churches are finely adorned, and the Prieſts affect rich Veſtments. The Jeſuits at Leopol, when they ſay Maſs, have a Cope ſo thick embroider'd with Pearls and Jewels, that 'tis a Burthen to thoſe who bear it.

Their LEARNING.

THEIR chief Study at the Univerſities of Cracow and Vilna is to ſpeak Latin, which is ſo much affected thro' the Nation, that they have Schoolmaſters to teach it in almoſt every noted Village; and the Jeſuits have Colleges in every Town of Note for the ſame end; ſo that the Common People and Servants ſpeak it readily in many Places, and acquire it with the greater Eaſe, becauſe the Latin Syntax is much the ſame with that of their own Language, which is a Dialect of the Slavonic. But notwithſtanding this, their Univerſity Men are Strangers to polite Learning, and their Clergy ſtudy little elſe but the School-Divinity, mix'd with Ariſtotle's Logics and Metaphyſics, but are abſolute Strangers to the Oriental Languages, the Scriptures, Church-Hiſtory, and Practical Divinity; ſo that they give an implicit Faith to the Authority of the Church.

Dr. Connor ſays, they have few Phyſicians of Note, but Foreigners. Their own Phyſicians ſcarce know how to apply common Medicines. They pretend to cure the Venereal Diſeaſe by ſweating or bathing in a hot Decoction of Herbs, but never uſe Salivations. Moſt of their Diſtempers proceed from Drunkenneſs. Monſieur de Beauplan ſays, the Poliſh Coſſacks uſe no other Medicine againſt the Feaver but Gunpowder or Aſhes mix'd with Aquavitæ, which they drink off, go to Bed, and riſe next Morning in Health.

Their TRADE.

THE Weſtern Parts of the Kingdom produce much Corn of all ſorts, which they export from Dantzic; as alſo Honey, Wax, Amber, Hides, Tann'd Leather, Furs, Oak, Wainſcot, Maſts, Planks, Deals, Pitch, Tallow, Salt-Petre, Salt, Hops, Hemp, Flax, Pruſſia Wool, Beer, Pot-Aſhes, Opium, Vitriol, Lapis Lazuli, Vermilion, Braſs, Lead, Iron, Copper, Glaſs and Earthen Ware, Oxen, Sheep, Hogs, &c.

Their Trade of Import is chiefly in Silk, Worſted, Engliſh Cloth, Tapeſtry, Jewels, Sables, Salt-Fiſh, Tin, Steel, Iron Ware, Martens, Wine, Brandy, and Spirits of all ſorts, and Spices, of which they conſume great Quantities. Their Trade might be much greater, but the Gentry muſt not follow it on pain of forfeiting their Honour, and the Commons are lazy and poor, ſo that moſt of the Commerce is carried on by Foreigners. Beſides, they have no Ports but on the Baltick, of which Dantzic is the chief, but not ſufficient to improve the Trade of ſo large a Country.

Their Chief RIVERS are,

1. THE Viſtula, or Weyſſel. It riſes near the Carpathian Mountains, on the Frontiers of Hungary, and falls into the Baltick near Dantzic, after a Courſe of about 320 Miles in a direct Line, but much more with the Windings and Turnings included. This River, with others that fall into it, is of great Conveniency for tranſporting their Commodities from one Town and Province to another, and at laſt to Dantzic, as may be ſeen by the Map. 'Twas anciently reckoned the Boundary betwixt Germany and Sarmatia.

2. The Worta, which riſes near Cromlow in the Palatinate of Cracow, about 30 Miles North-Weſt from that City, runs thro' the Weſt of Poland, and falls into the Oder.

3. The Bug, which riſes in Red Ruſſia, near the Carpathian Mountains, waters Lemberg and ſeveral other Towns, and falls into the Weyſſel, North from Warſaw, after a Courſe of above 200 Miles.

4. The Neiſter, which riſes alſo near the Capathian Mountains in Red Ruſſia, divides Poland from Moldavia, and runs about 420 Miles South-Eaſt into the Black Sea. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the Tyras of the Ancients. 'Tis Navigable, and abounds with Fiſh.

5. The Bog, which riſes in Podolia, and runs alſo South-Eaſt into the Black Sea, after a Courſe of about 280 Miles.

6. The Nieper, anciently the Boryſthenes, which riſes in Muſcovy, about Lat. 56. 40. and after a Courſe of 520 Miles, beſides Turnings and Windings, falls into the Black Sea.

7. The Niemen, ſuppoſed to be the Chronus of the Ancients, riſes in the Palatinate of Novogrodec, and after a Courſe of about 200 Miles, beſides Turnings and Windings, falls into the Curiſh-Haff, a Bay of the Baltick.

8. The Duina riſes in the Palatinate of Witepsk, runs about 310 Miles North-Weſt, and falls into the Gulph of Livonia at Riga.

There are many Lakes in Poland and Lithuania that abound with Fiſh, but we have no Account of any that have a peculiar Quality, except one called Briales, which in April and May dyes the Skins of thoſe that waſh in it of a ſwarthy Colour.

GERMANY

HAS the Seven United Provinces, the Auſtrian Netherlands, and Part of France on the Weſt; Poland, Part of Hungary, Sclavonia, and Croatia on the Eaſt; Part of the German Ocean, of Denmark, and of the Baltic Sea on the North; Swiſſerland, and Part of Italy on the South. It lies betwixt Lat 45 ½. and 55. and betwixt Long. 6. and 18. but is not equally extended either in Length or Breadth, being frequently indented with other Dominions, as may be ſeen by the Map. Its Situation is betwixt the Seventh and Eleventh Northern Climates; ſo that the longeſt Day in the moſt Northerly Parts is about 17 Hours, 15 Minutes; and in moſt Southerly Parts about 15 Hours and an half.

Cluverius, in his Germania Antiqua, brings many Arguments to prove that modern Germany is not a Third part ſo large as that which was anciently ſo called; for it extended from the North Sea to the Alps one way, and from the German Ocean to the Black Sea the other. He proves, that it was much larger than all the other Parts called Celtica, which included not only the Germans, but the Britons, Gauls, Spaniards, Illyrians, and the Theutiſci, from whence came the modern Name of Theutch, or Dutch. Some derive this Name from Twiſto, the ancient German Idol mentioned by Tacitus, who, as the Old Germans fancied, ſprung from the Earth, and with his Son Man founded their Nation. Cluverius thinks they derived the Name from Theut, by which they meant God, becauſe of the Affinity it has with the Word Θεὸϛ, the Name by which the Egyptians (from whom the Celtæ deſcended) called their Idol Mercury. He takes notice, that ΘΕΟϹ was the common Name which all Nations gave to the Creator, but pronounced it differently according to their Idioms; ſome Θεὸϛ others Ζεὺϛ and Δεὺϛ, from whence the Latin, Deus: And the ancient German having learned by Tradition, that Adam (in theirs and the Egyptian Language called Man) was formed from the Earth, they confounded him with the Creator, and hence called their God Mannus. Cluverius is at a loſs about the Origin of the Word Celta, but thinks it to have had the ſame Signification after the Diſperſion at Babel, that the Name of Aſchenaz Noah's Grandſon had, before it, and that he and his Poſterity peopled Illyricum, Germany, Gaul, Spain, and the Britiſh Iſlands, the Inhabitants of all theſe being anciently called Celto-Scythæ, and having the ſame Language, tho' in different Idioms. Others, as Verſtegan, derive the Celtæ from the Greek Word Κίλητες, Light-Horſemen; but he might with as much or more Reaſon have derived it from Κνλλη a Branch, or Κνλεν a Dart; becauſe Darts made of Branches of Trees were their common Weapons; for it appears by Cæſar's Account of the Germans, that their Horſemen frequently alighted and fought on Foot, becauſe their Horſes were not managed for War.

As to the modern Name, ſome derive it from the old Gaulic Words Ger and Man, which ſignifies a Man of War; and Cluverius ſays, that this Name was firſt given them by the Gauls who lived on the French Side of the Rhine. They that would know more of their Antiquities and Subdiviſions, may conſult that Learned Author's Germania Antiqua; only 'tis thought fit to give the Reader this Caution, that the Subdiviſions of the Inhabitants of Germany, as the Marcomanni, Harudes, Catti, &c. are not to be underſtood as if they were different Nations, but only that they inhabited different Provinces, as thoſe called Palatines, Bavarians, Weſtphalians, Brandenburghers, &c. do now. Its greateſt Extent from South to North, is about 560 Miles, and 510 from Weſt to Eaſt.

It follows of courſe, that the Air of this large Country muſt differ according to the Climates; but in general 'tis more cold than hot, and ſo healthful, that the People are long liv'd, and ſeldom troubled with univerſal Diſtempers. The Soil is very fruitful, particularly towards the South, and in the Neighbourhood of the Rhine, the Danube and the Elb, where they make very good Bread and Beer. Here are alſo ſeveral ſorts of Wine in many Places, but that on the Rhine is the moſt famous. This Country abounds alſo with Wild and Tame Beaſts and Fowls of all ſorts, and particularly breeds great numbers of very good Horſes. Here are alſo many Woods and Foreſts, Fountains of Mineral Water, and ſeveral Mines of Silver, Tin, Lead and Iron, for the Particulars of all which, we refer to the ſeveral Countries.

The Empire of Germany is divided into Ten Circles. This Diviſion was begun by the Emperor Maximilian I. in 1500, and it was confirmed by the Emperor Charles V. in the Dyet of Nuremberg in 1522, when the Matricula or Repartition of the States and Cities, and of the Horſe, Foot and Money, each Member of the Circles are to furniſh for Defence of the Empire, was agreed upon; the Original of which is kept in the Archbiſhop of Mentz's Chancery.

We chuſe to follow this Diviſion in our Deſcription of Germany; but ſince the Matricula itſelf does not rank the Circles according to their Precedency, and puts that of Auſtria firſt, becauſe it contains great Part of the Emperor's Hereditary Dominions, and Vienna the Seat of his Reſidence, we chuſe rather to follow the Order of the Circles as they lie in the Map, beginning at the North ſide of the Empire, and going on with our Deſcription from Weſt to Eaſt.

I. The Circle of WESTPHALIA.

SOME derive the Name from Weiſſenpholen, a White Horſe, the Arms of their ancient Dukes; but others more probably from Weſtfield, the Country of the Weſt Saxons, as Eaſtfield was of the Eaſt-Saxons. The South Parts are fruitful, and the North abound with Paſtures, Cattle, and particularly Horſes and Hogs. It has the German Sea on the North, part of the Electorate of Treves and Dominions of Heſſe on the South, the Netherlands on the Weſt, the Dutchies of Bremen, Verden, the Dominions of the Houſe of Brunſwick and of the Landgrave of Heſſe on the Eaſt. The greateſt Extent from South to North is about 215 Miles, and from Weſt to Eaſt 145. The Elector Palatine, as Duke of Juliers, and the King of Pruſſia as Duke of Cleves, are alternately Condirectors of this Circle with the Biſhop of Munſter. The ſeveral Dominions it is divided into, are as follow.

I. The County of EMEDEN, alias EAST-FRIEZLAND. It has the German Sea on the North, the Province of Groningen, with a Bay, &c. betwixt them on the Weſt, the Dutchy of Bremen and Oldenburg on the Eaſt, and the Biſhoprick of Munſter on the South. The greateſt Length from South to North is about 45 Miles, and from Eaſt to Weſt about 40. The ancient Inhabitants were reckoned the Chauci Minores, or a Part of the Friſii; the Moderns are a Mixture of Germans and Netherlanders. 'Twas made a Branch of the Empire in 840; and erected into a County about 1441 by the Emperor Frederick IV. in favour of Ulric Sirſene, one of the chief Men here, becauſe of his great Services, and it continues in his Poſterity. Count Ezard II. embraced the Augſburg Confeſſion about 1440; but the Citizens of Embden being Calviniſts, and their Count Rudolph differing with them for that Reaſon, they diſpoſſeſſed him in 1595, and put themſelves under the Protection of the Dutch, who aſſiſted them. Our King James I. made Peace betwixt Count Enno and them in 1606, ſince which time they have been governed by their own Magiſtrates, but with a Dependence on the States General. Count Enno Ludowic II. married Henrica, Daughter to Henry Frederic, Prince of Orange, in 1641, ſince which they have been made Princes of the Empire, and are Calviniſts.

The chief Places here are,

1. Embden, the Capital, near the Mouth of the River Ems, on the North ſide, Lat. 53. 25. Long. 7. 22. 25 Miles North-Eaſt from Groningen, and 45 North-Weſt from Oldenburg. 'Tis rich, large and populous, has a double Ditch, with regular Bulwarks on the Land-ſide, and the other is defended by a ſtrong Wall and the River. The Harbour is large and convenient, and made ſafe by the Iſland Neſſa, which lies over againſt it. They have Artificial Canals, which bring large Veſſels into the Heart of the Town, and Sluices by which they can lay the neighbouring Country under Water, and make the City inacceſſible. The Houſes are generally neat and high, and the Town-Hall magnificent. The Count or Prince reſides in the Caſtle, which the Citizens won't allow him to fortify, nor has he any Juriſdiction here. When he writes to them he calls them loving Friends, and they write themſelves his humble Servants. They are much given to Commerce, are brave Soldiers, zealous Aſſertors of their Liberty, make good Proviſion for their Poor, and allow Liberty of Worſhip to all but Papiſts. 'Twas formerly the Staple for Engliſh Cloth.

2. Norden, upon a Bay, 18 Miles North from Embden. The Town is pleaſant, well built, but not fortify'd, and their Harbour not fit for great Ships. 'Tis remarkable for a great Defeat of the Normans, of whom 10000 were killed in the Neighbourhood. 'Twas formerly the Burial Place of the Counts; but the great Church and part of the Town being burnt in 1531, their Monuments were removed to Embden, where they have been buried ſince.

3. Eſens, upon the North Coaſt, 18 Miles Eaſt from Norden, near a River of the ſame Name: It has a ſtrong Caſtle, formerly the Reſidence of their Barons, who had long Wars with the Counts of Embden, about Superiority, but the Quarrel was ended in 1581 by the Count's marrying the Heireſs. Part of this Town was burnt by thoſe of Bremen in 1540.

4. Aurick, about 15 Miles North-Eaſt from Embden. 'Tis Capital of its Diſtrict called Auricker land, which is rough, woody and barren, but abounds with Veniſon and other Game. 'Tis encompaſſed by a Wall, and has a ſtrong Caſtle belonging to the Prince. It has ſeven great Fairs every Year for Cattle, and is the Seat of the Courts of Judicature for the County; the Preſident and three of the Aſſeſſors being always Noblemen, the other ſix Civilians, and the Chancellor a Doctor of Laws. Out of Term-time they hear Cauſes in the Prince's Palace.

5. Jevern, about 18 Miles North-Eaſt from Aurick. It gives Title to a conſiderable Baron, whoſe Lordſhip is about 40 Miles round, and abounds with fine Seats of the Nobility and Gentry. Theſe Barons pretended formerly to be Sovereign Princes, but are now ſubject to the Count of Oldenburg. The Town is defended by a ſtrong Caſtle, and has a good Trade by a Canal, or ſmall River from the Sea.

6. Witmund, about 5 Miles Eaſt from Eſens, formerly a Town of good Trade, and Capital of a large Barony, which held of the Count.

7. Leer, on the Ems, a large Market-Town of good Trade.

8. Fredeberg, 30 Miles North-Eaſt from Embden. It formerly belonged to the Citizens of Brunſwic.

There are many other large Villages or Towns here, as neat and populous as thoſe in Holland, which we can't inſiſt upon, but refer the Curious to the Learned Ubbo Emius their Countryman's Chorographical and Hiſtorical Account of this Principality, publiſhed at Leyden in 1616.

II. The County of OLDENBURG. It lies South-Eaſt from Embden, and has a Bay of the Sea, and the Mouth of the Weſer, on the North and Eaſt. 'Tis narrow in the South-Eaſt Parts, and, taking in Delmenhorſt, is about 50 Miles from North-Weſt to South-Eaſt, and 30 where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Tis generally barren, and full of Heaths and Marſhes, which feed their ſmall Cattle; but their Horſes are reckoned the beſt in Germany. The People are for moſt part poor, and have mean Cottages of Clay and Turf; ſo that were it not for the Barony of Jevern in Embden, and ſome Lands elſewhere, their Counts would not have been able to ſuſtain the Rank of a Prince of the Empire, tho' they were reckoned among the Eldeſt. They failed in 1676, and were ſucceeded by the King of Denmark, who is of the ſame Family,

mily, and agreed with the Duke of Holſtein, a Branch of it, for his Pretenſions.

The only Place of Note is Oldenburg, the Capital, on the River Hund, Lat. 53.9. Long. 8.30. 45 Miles South East from Embden, and 25 Weſt from Bremen. 'Tis well fortified with Walls and Ditches, and has a round, ſtately and magnificent Caſtle, the Reſidence of their former Counts; but the other Houſes are mean. Barges come up from the Weſer as far as the Bridge, and bring a pretty good Trade; and at the Mouth of the Hund there is a Cuſtom-Houſe, where Ships pay Toll to the King of Denmark, to whom alſo belongs,

III. DELMENHORST, the South Part of this Country, which is by ſome reckoned a diſtinct County ſince 1247, that it fell to the Brother of Count Friſhaw Otko, who built a Palace on the River Delma, which gave Riſe to the Town of Delmenhorſt, that lies about 18 Miles South-Eaſt from Oldenburg. 'Twas afterwards fortified, grew conſiderable, was taken by the Biſhop of Munſter in 1482, but retaken by the Count in 1547. Here was a noble Monaſtery, converted at the Reformation into a Church, an Hoſpital, and Free-School. Here are other ſmall Towns which don't merit a Deſcription.

IV. The County of DIEPHOLT, South from Oldenburg and Weſt from Hoye. 'Tis about 30 Miles from South to North, and 15 from Eaſt to Weſt. It had Lords of its own, whoſe Race failing, it came to the Dukes of Lunenburg, and is now ſubject to King George of Great Britain, as Elector of Brunſwic. The Capital of the ſame Name lies on the Lake Demmer, about 28 Miles South-Eaſt from Oldenburg, 32 North-Eaſt from Oſnabrug, and about 30 South-Weſt from Hoye. It was almoſt ruined in the Civil Wars of Germany, but is ſince rebuilt, and defended by a Fort. In this Country there is a Hill called Hulſemberg, i. e. the Mountain of Help, becauſe (ſays the Brunſwic Chronicle) Charlemain pray'd here for Aſſiſtance againſt the Saxons and their Idols, and having obtained Victory, he built a Chapel on the top of it, which being much frequented, occaſioned the building of the neighbouring Village called St. Hulp, to which an annual Fair was granted, where the Monks uſed to ſell Indulgences; but that Cuſtom was aboliſhed at the Reformation.

V. The County of HOYE lies Eaſt of Diepholt, is about 30 Miles from South to North, and 20 from Eaſt to Weſt. It had formerly Counts of its own, of an ancient Saxon Family much reſpected in the Empire: The laſt of them dying in 1582, it was divided betwixt the Families of Brunſwic and Heſſe; and the laſt gave their Share, which was Uht and Freudenburg, to the Counts of Bentheim, ſo that moſt of it belongs to King George of Great Britain. The Capital of the ſame Name is ſmall, but well fortify'd, and has one of the ſtrongeſt Caſtles in Weſtphalia. It lies near the River Weſer, 30 Miles North Eaſt from Diepholt. Here is no other conſiderable Place, but Nyenburg on the Eaſt ſide of the Weſer, 12 Miles South-Eaſt from Hoye. 'Tis well fortified, and held out diverſe Sieges during the Wars of Germany.

VI. The County of BENTHEM has the United Provinces on the Weſt, and the Biſhoprick of Munſter on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 30 Miles South-Eaſt and North-Weſt, and 15 broad. 'Tis Woody for the moſt part, except on the River Aa, where there are pleaſant and fruitful Valleys. Bentheim, the Capital, and ancient Seats of their Counts, about 10 Miles from Oldenſael, is the only Place of Note. Count Arnold brought in the Augsburg Confeſſion in 1564; but Count William-Henry, who turned Papiſt in 1668, perſecuted his Proteſtant Subjects till the States of the United Provinces interpoſed.

VII. The County of STEINFORT is South-Eaſt from Bentheim, about 15 Miles long, and 10 broad. 'Tis encompaſſed with the Biſhoprick of Munſter, and for moſt part Woody. Its Counts ſucceeded by Marriage to the County of Bentheim. The chief Place is Burch-Steinfort, on the Aa, about 10 Miles South-Eaſt from Bentheim; a Gymnaſium, or College for the Languages and Liberal Arts was founded here by Count Arnold, mentioned in the County of Bentheim.

VIII. The Biſhoprick of MUNSTER has Embden and Oldenburg on the North, the County of Mark and Dutchy of Weſtphalia on the South, the County of Bentheim and United Provinces on the Weſt; the Biſhoprick of Oſnabrug, the County of Ravensberg and Biſhoprick of Paderborn on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 80 Miles from South to North, and 70 from Weſt to Eaſt where broadeſt. 'Tis one of the largeſt and moſt conſiderable in Germany, and divided into the Upper, which is the South Part, and the Lower, which is the North, and contains Thirteen Baliwicks or Diſtricts, of which Nine belong to the Upper, and Four to the Lower. 'Tis in ſome Parts barren and ill-inhabited, in others fruitful and populous. The People are Laborious and Warlike; their chief Commerce is in Hogs and Weſtphalia Hams. They are ſubject to their Biſhop, who by his Office is a Prince of the Empire, and able upon occaſion to maintain 15000 Men. They generally affected a Neutrality in caſe of War among their Neighbours, and paid the States General, who uſually have a great Sway in the Choice of a Biſhop, 12000 Crowns per Annum for their Protection. But their Biſhop Bernard van Galen, being fitter for a General than a Churchman, joined with the French and Engliſh againſt the Dutch in 1672, and was ſo formidable and cunning, that he made himſelf to be courted by the greateſt Potentates, and changed Sides as he ſaw it moſt for his Intereſt. He fomented Diviſions among his Neighbours, that he might have Penſions from each, and died in 1678, about the time when Peace was made betwixt France, Spain, and the Dutch; upon which his Neighbours and Subjects ſaid pleaſantly, that it was time for him to quit the Stage, when People grew weary of War and deſirous of Peace. The chief Places here are,

1. Munſter the Capital, on the Banks of the River Aa, Lat 52. 5. and near Long. 7. 25 Miles Eaſt from the County of Zutphen, and 40 South-Weſt from Oſnabrug. It had its Name from a Monaſtery founded by Charlemain, who made it a Biſhoprick in 758; ſo that 'tis reckoned the Metropolis of Weſtphalia, tho' the Biſhop be Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Cologne. It ſtands pleaſantly in a large Plain, and is divided by the River Aa, which falls into the Ems about 10 Miles lower. The Fiſhery of the Aa belongs to the Biſhop, whoſe Revenues in 1661 were 300000 Crowns per Annum, but much abated ſince, the Dioceſe being impoveriſh'd by the Wars of Bernard van Galen, their Biſhop, who took the Town then, ſince which it has loſt its Privileges of an Imperial City and Hans Town. 'Tis large, well fortified by Nature and Art, and has a ſtrong Caſtle. The Houſes are generally fair, and well built of Stone, there being a good Quarry at Tanberg, about 8 Miles from it. The Cathedral is a ſtately Fabrick, and the Dean and Chapter chuſe the Biſhop. Here are five Collegiate Churches, and a College of Jeſuits, well frequented. This City is remarkable for the bloody Tragedy acted in it by Enthuſiaſtical Anabaptiſts in 1533, under the Conduct of John Buckholt a Taylor, born at Leyden, and therefore called John of Leyden. His Faction grew ſo ſtrong, that the Magiſtrates were forced to tolerate them. Then pretending to Revelations, he ſent his Emiſſaries about Streets, commanding all the People to repent and be baptized on pain of Damnation. At laſt they ſeiſed the Magazine and Town-Hall, turned out the Magiſtrates, uſurped the Government, and invited all of their Perſuaſion from the neighbouring Countries, to join them; which they did, and drove out the other Inhabitants. John aſſumed the Title of King, made one of his Concubines Queen, and cut off her Head becauſe ſhe ſhewed her Diſlike at ſome of his frantick Tricks. In 1534 the Biſhop beſieged the Town in vain; but next Year being aſſiſted by the Landgrave of Heſſe and the Troops of Cologne, the City was taken by Surprize, the Mock King, with his Favourites Rothman and Knipperdoling, ſent about in Deriſion to neighbouring Courts, and next Year executed, John's Fleſh tore off with burning Pincers, and his Bones hung in a Cage upon the top of a Steeple. This City is alſo famous for the Peace concluded here in 1648, betwixt the Swedes, the Emperor and Empire, which put an End to a War of 30 Years, occaſioned by the Houſe of Auſtria's Tyranny and Perſecution; but this Treaty eſtabliſhed the Liberties of the Empire, and the free Exerciſe of the Proteſtant Religion in it.

2. Meppen, at the Conflux of the Haſe and Ems, about 40 Miles North from Munſter. 'Tis Capital of the Lower Biſhoprick, and well fortified. 'Twas taken by the Dutch in 1587, being reckoned the Key of Eaſt-Friſland, but retaken from them. The Swedes poſſeſſed, fortified and ſold it to Charles Ludowick, Count Palatine of the Rhine, for 60000 Crowns, but it now belongs to the Biſhop of Munſter.

3. Kloppenburg, 30 Miles North-Eaſt from Meppen, a ſtrong Town; 'twas taken and regularly fortified by the Swedes in 1635, but ſoon after ſurrendered to the Imperialiſts.

4. Haſe-Lunen, 10 Miles Eaſt from Meppen, a Fort which with Meppen and Kloppenburg belonged to the Counts of Tecklenburg, who made them over to the Biſhop.

5. Vecht, a ſmall City, 13 Miles South-Eaſt from Kloppenburg, ſubject formerly to its own Lords, and Capital of a Diſtrict of 15 Pariſhes, each containing 10 or 12 Villages, and in the whole about 31 Gentlemens Seats. The Town is noted for a Defeat given by the Inhabitants to the Duke of Lunenburg and Count of Hoye, who in 1394 invaded the Biſhoprick of Oſnabrug, and carry'd off much People and Booty, but were ſurprized, and the Priſoners and Booty reſcued by thoſe of Vecht.

6. Warenberg, or Varenberg, on the Ems, 15 Miles South from Munſter, ſaid to have been built by Varus a Roman Captain, who was killed in a Sedition at Paderborn in Auguſtus's Time.

7. Stromberg, South from Waremburg, Capital of a Burgraviate, for which the Biſhop of Munſter obtained a Vote in the Dyet in 1653.

8. Koesfelt, a ſmall fortified Hans-Town on the River Borkel, 20 Miles Weſt from Munſter, and the uſual Reſidence of the Biſhop.

9. Borckloe or Borchen, on a River of the ſame Name, 35 Miles South-Weſt from Munſter, Capital of a Barony belonging to the Counts of Stirum.

10. Tilligt on the Ems, 10 Miles South-Eaſt from Munſter, noted for a Convention of the States in 1532 to oppoſe the Growth of Lutheraniſm.

11. Rheyne, a ſmall neat City on the Ems, 18 Miles North of Munſter.

Wiſhauſen, a Bailiwick belonging to this Biſhoprick, was quitted to the Biſhop by the Swedes, at the Treaty of Nimeguen, on condition of his paying 100000 Crowns, which not being performed, the King of Sweden threaten'd to ſeize it in 1698, upon which the Biſhop paid the Money, rather than it ſhould fall into the Hands of Proteſtants.

IX. The County of LINGEN lies betwixt the Biſhoprick of Munſter and Oſnabrug, is 15 Miles long and 10 broad. The chief Town of the ſame Name, 10 Miles South from Meppen, is the only Place of Note; It is ſtrong, and came to William Prince of Orange in 1560, by his Lady the Heireſs. 'Tis a pleaſant fruitful Country, and the Inhabitants Calviniſts. Upon the Death of King William of Great Britain it fell to the King of Pruſſia.

X. The County of TECKIENBURG lies Eaſt from Lingen, Weſt from Oſnabrug, is about 30 Miles long, and 10 broad. The Capital of the ſame Name, 10 Miles Weſt from Oſnabrug, is the only Place of Note, and has a ſtrong Caſtle. Its ancient Counts had large Dominions, now parcelled out to others. This County fell to the Count of Bentem in 1560.

XI. The Biſhoprick of Oſnabrug has part of the Biſhoprick of Munſter on the North, Ravensberg on the South, the two laſt mentioned Counties on the Weſt, Hoye and Minden on the Eaſt. 'Tis 40 Miles from South to North, and 25 from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Tis one of the fruitfulleſt Parts of Weſtphalia. The People are induſtrious, breed abundance of Cattle, particularly Hogs, which make the beſt Weſtphalia Bacon. They have alſo a good Manufacture of Linnen. The Biſhoprick was founded by Charlemain, after he ſubdued Witikind the Saxon, about 776. He exempted the Biſhop from all Homage and Service, except going on an Embaſſy at the Emperor's Charge for a Match betwixt the Imperial Families of the Eaſt and Weſt. The Biſhop has had little more than the Name as to Church Affairs ſince 1634, that the Reformation was introduced here; for the Lutherans don't allow the Exerciſe of Epiſcopal Juriſdiction, and the Papiſts are not ſtrong enough to obtain it. Since the Treaty of Weſtphalia, 'tis to be enjoyed alternately by a Proteſtant and a Papiſt, and the Proteſtant is always a Son of the Family of Brunſwick.

wick. King George of Great-Britain's Father, was Biſhop before he was Duke of Hanover, and now his Majeſty's Brother, Prince Erneſt, is Biſhop upon the Death of the laſt, who was a Son of the Houſe of Lorrain. When the Biſhop is a Papiſt, he is Suffragan to the Elector of Cologne. The Places of Note are,

1. Oſnabrug, the Capital, Lat. 52. 17. Long. 8½. 20 Miles North-Eaſt from Munſter, 40 Weſt from Munden, and 70 from Hanover. Some ſay 'twas founded by Julius Caſar; the Name comes from a Bridge over the Haſe or Oſe. 'Tis a Hans Town, but ſubject to the Biſhop as a Count of the Empire, who has above 20000 Crowns per Annum. Charlemain founded the Biſhoprick, erected a School here for Latin and Greek, which is now a Gymnaſium, with 3 or 4 Profeſſors of ſeveral Faculties. 'Tis a neat City, and divided into the old and new Town by the River. 'Tis pretty ſtrong, and fortified by Walls and Ditches, but commanded by a Hill within half Cannon Shot, upon which there's an Abby of Men of Quality. Here are ſeveral noble, publick Buildings, one of them the Cathedral, poſſeſſed by the Papiſts. There's a Provoſt, a Dean, and 25 Canons, 18 of them Papiſts, 4 of the Canonries go to ſupport the Jeſuits College, and 3 are enjoyed by Lutherans: The Popiſh Canons are capable of being elected Biſhop, but the other not. The Papiſts have the Dominican Church in the old City, and the Collegiate Church of St. John in the New. The Proteſtants have the great Parochial Church of St. Mary in the old City, and a Voice in chuſing the Magiſtrates of both Towns. The Biſhops Caſtle and Pallace of Petersburg is well fortified, and a great Defence to the Town. This Place is noted for a Treaty in 1648, when the Affairs of the German Proteſtants were ſettled.

2. Five Miles Eaſt lie the Ruins of an old Church and Caſtle, nam'd Beelem, ſuppoſed to have been erected by Wittikind, upon his Converſion.

3. About 4 Miles North-Eaſt lies the Monaſtery of Rulle or Rolde, on the Bank of a Lake, ſo deep, that it could never yet be fathom'd.

4. Iburg, 8 Miles South, has a Commodious Caſtle, formerly the Reſidence of the Biſhop; 'twas taken by Philip the Great of Brunſwick in 1553.

5. Quakenbrug, a neat ſmall Town on the River Oſe, 25 Miles North from Oſnabrug.

XII. The Principality of MINDEN, lies betwixt Oſnabrug and Schaumburg, is 25 Miles South and North, and 20 Eaſt and Weſt. The South Parts abound with Corn, and export much, but the North is full of Woods and Hills, and has plenty of Game. The Places of Note are,

1. Minden, the Capital, a large and rich Hans Town, on the Weſt ſide of the Weſer, Lat. 52. 18. Long. 9½. 50 Miles Eaſt from Oſnabrug, and 40 Weſt from Hanover. 'Twas made a Biſhoprick by Charlemain, and continued ſo till 1638, that 'twas ſeculariz'd by the Treaty of Munſter, and given to the Elector of Brandenburg. The Cathedral is a noble Structure, but dark, and ſaid to have been King Wittikind's Palace, who turned it to a Church upon his Converſion. The Town is neat, and well fortified; 'twas taken by the Imperialiſts during the Civil Wars of Germany in 1628, and by the Duke of Brunſwick in 1634. Here's no other Place of Note but Petershagen, on the ſame River, 5 Miles lower, with a good Caſtle, formerly the Reſidence of the Biſhop, and now the Chancery for the Principality.

XIII. The County of RAVENSBERG, South from Oſnabrug, and Minden, North-Weſt from Lippe, and North from Rheda. 'Tis 38 Miles South and North, and 40 Eaſt and Weſt. The Name is from a Town and ſtrong Fort on a Hill, near the River Heſſel, 20 Miles South-Eaſt from Oſnabrug. The Country is for moſt part Rocky and Mountainous, and belongs to the King of Pruſſia, who is Count of it. Other Places of Note are,

1. Bilevelt, a ſtrong Hans Town, Lat. 52. Long. 8. 50. 10 Miles South-Eaſt from Ravensberg, at the bottom of a great Hill, and defended by the impregnable Fort of Ravenberg. It made a brave Defence againſt the French, who play'd hard upon it from a neighbouring Hill with Grenadoes and Fire-balls; but the Burghers covered their Houſes with Webbs of Linnen (their chief Manufacture) dipped in Milk, which prevented their doing much damage.

2. Hervorden, Herwerden, or Herfurt, a Hans Town, in a pleaſant Country, on the Conflux of the Aa and Weſer, 15 Miles Eaſt from Ravenſberg. 'Tis noted for a noble Nunnery, founded in 832. It embraced the Reformation above 100 Years ago, and the Abbeſſe, and all the Nuns are Calviniſts. The late Abbeſſe was the learned Princeſs Elizabeth of the Palatine Family, Siſter to King George of Great Britain's Mother, and the Miracle of her Sex, as appears by her Letters to Des Cartes, printed in his Works. On a little Hill without the City, there's another Nunnery founded by this, and ſerves it as a Nurſery.

3. Engeren or Angrivaria, thought to have been the Capital of the Angrivari. 'Twas the Reſidence of King Wittikind, who founded the Collegiate Church of St. Dennis, and was buried here. The Town being deſtroy'd by War, and now only a poor Village, the Collegiates removed to Herfurt, where they ſtill ſhew the Reliques of their Anceſtors. The Town gives Title of Duke to the Elector of Cologne.

4. Ulotowe, on the Weſer, 30 Miles Eaſt from Ravensberg, and 20 South-Eaſt of Hervorden, Capital of an ancient Barony, with a Caſtle formerly Count Waldeck's. The Town lies conveniently for Trade, the River there being capable of large Veſſels.

XIV. The County of Schaumberg, Eaſt from Minden on the other ſide the Weſer, and Weſt from Hanover. 'Tis 30 Miles South and North, and 20 Eaſt and Weſt, abounds with Corn, Hay, Quarries of Free Stone and Chalk. Here are alſo Coal-Mines, and Salt-Pits, and there were Copper Mines which yielded ſome Gold and Silver, but are now decay'd. The Woods afford the Inhabitants Timber and Game, and they are plentifully ſupplied with Fiſh by their Rivers, and the Steinburder Lake, which is 5 Miles long, and 2 broad, yields Perch, &c. ſo that they have Fiſh enough for Conſumption and Export. They had Lords of their own from 1032 to 1459, when the Male Iſſue failing, the Country was divided betwixt the King of Denmark, Duke of Holſtein, and the Landgrave of Heſſe; and part of it to the Family of Lippe, but moſt of it belongs now to the King of Great Britain.

Places of Note are,

1. Schaumburg, the Reſidence of their old Counts, being a Caſtle on a high Hill, in the middle of the Country, 12 Miles Eaſt from Minden, and 20 Weſt from Hanover.

5. Oldendorf, a ſtrong little Town on the Weſer, 3 Miles South from Schaumberg. It held out againſt the Imperialiſts in 1633, but was taken by them in 1639. There's a Cuſtom-houſe here, where Ships pay Toll to the Counts of Lippe.

6. Saxenhagen, a Town with a ſtrong Fort, 17 Miles North from Schaumberg.

XV. RHEDA County, South from Ravensberg, about 15 Miles long, and 5 broad, with a Town of the ſame Name, but of ſmall Note.

XVI. LIPPE County, Eaſt from Rheda, and South from Schaumberg, 40 Miles long, and 10 broad, ſubject to a Count of that Name, who derives his Pedigree, ſay the German Heralds, from Marius the Roman, who defended the Capitol againſt the Gauls. He has Ritberg County, and other Places in the Neighbourhood, which make his Dominions more conſiderable than they appear in the Maps; the Houſe is divided into the Branches of Diethmold, Bracken, and Buckemberg, and has matched with great Families. Places of Note,

1. Diethmell or Diethmold, ſuppoſed to be the ancient Teuto-Burgum, where the Idol Teuto or Dith was worſhipped; it lies 15 Miles South-Eaſt from Hervorden, and 20 from Ravensberg; is the Seat of the oldeſt Branch of the Houſe of Lippe, and ſubſiſts by the Court. Tis remarkable for a great Victory of Charlemain over the Saxons.

2. Lippe or Lipſtadt, on the River Lippe, 30 Miles South-Eaſt from Munſter, Lat. 51. 42. Long. 8. 40. 'Twas built in 1150, held out againſt the Archbiſhop of Cologne in 1447, is well fortified, and repuls'd the French in 1674. 'Twas the Seat of the Counts, but now ſubject to the King of Pruſſia. The Town is large, but ill Peopled, and ſubſiſts chiefly by preparing Timber for Veſſels, uſed on the Rhine, with which the River communicates. It ſuffered much by Fire in 1718.

3. Horn, an old Town near Diethmold, had Counts of its own, but now ſubject to the Count of Lippe. Varus and his Roman Legion were defeated near this Place, ſays Cluverius, and not at Paderborn or Duysburg.

4. Lemgow, 5 Miles North from Dietmelle, a rich and neat Hans Town, in a fruitful Country on the Pega, which falls into the Weſer. The Citizens are ingenious and induſtrious. 'Tis now ſubject to the King of Pruſſia. The People are Lutherans, and have a Gymnaſium, and Printing-Houſe.

5 Ufflen, or Salzufflen, in the Road betwixt Lemgow and Hervorden, noted for a Salt Spring, and a Manufacture of ſtrong Cloth.

6. Pyrmont, Capital of a County, formerly ſubject to its own Lords, now to the Count of Lippe. It lies near Lugde, and 8 Miles Weſt from Hamelen in the Dutchy of Brunſwick. 'Tis noted for a ſtrong Fort, and its Mineral Waters.

7. Ritberg, a large Town and Caſtle on the Ems, North-Eaſt from Lipſtadt, Capital of a County that had its own Lords, but now ſubject to the Count of Lippe, and pays ſome acknowledgement to the Biſhop of Paderborn.

XVII. PADERBORN Biſhoprick, South and Eaſt from the County of Lippe, 40 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and in ſome Places 30, South and North. It abounds ſo much with Cattle, that Drovers come hither from the neighbouring Nations to buy at their Fairs. They have alſo plenty of Deer and other Game, rich Salt-ſprings, and ſome Iron Mines. 'Tis ſo populous, that here are 24 Market Towns, 54 Pariſhes, 16 Monaſteries, and 20 Gentlemen's Seats. Places of Note are,

1. Paderborn, on the River Pader, a Hans Town, large, fine, and populous. It is in Lat. 51. 45. Long. 9. 10. 50 Miles South-Eaſt from Munſter, and 20 Eaſt from Lippe. The Biſhoprick was founded by Charlemain in 777. 'Tis ſaid, that his Army being in want of Water, and a Spring being diſcovered by one of the Stakes of his Pavilion as they drove it into the Ground, he ordered the Church to be built over that Spring, and the converted Saxons to be baptized there. Several Mills are built on the Stream that flow from it. The Biſhop is Suffragan of Mentz; the Chapter conſiſts of 24 Canons, who are obliged to ſtudy in ſome French or Italian Univerſity. The Biſhop's Palace is a fine Structure, and the Cathedral one of the beſt in Germany. The adjacent Caſtle of Nienhuys was built by one of their Biſhops in 1590, and he founded their Univerſity in 1592. In Luther's time, the Citizens began to embrace the Reformation; but their Biſhop executed 16 of them on that Account, and obliged the reſt to abjure. It has loſt its Privileges as an Imperial Town, ſince 1604, that it was ſubjected by their Biſhop.

2. Lippeſpring or Lippesburg, 4 Miles North from Paderborn, has its Name from the River Lippe, that riſes there in ſo large a Stream, that it drives 3 or 4 Miles before it leaves the Town, which is ſubject to the Dean and Chapter of Paderborn, who have a Caſtle here. It lies on the Edge of a large deſart Heath, much infeſted by Robbers. 'Tis probable, that Charlemain encamp'd here; and that from hence the Popiſh Legendaries forged the pretended Miracle of Paderborn.

3. Warburg, a Hans Town on the Dymel, 20 Miles South Eaſt from Paderborn, formerly ſubject to Counts of its own, but now to the Biſhop. It lies in a fruitful Soil, and ſubſiſts chiefly by brewing ſtrong, well taſted Beer, and by the Product of the neighbouring Mines of Iron and Lead.

4. Lugde, Lude or Levi, 25 Miles North-Eaſt of Paderborn. It belongs properly to the County of Pyrmont, but now to the Biſhop. 'Tis noted for an Encampment of Charlemain in 787, and for its Medicinal Fountain, ſuppoſed to be called the Holy-Well, which is reckoned a Catholicon, and much frequented; 'tis that which commonly goes by the Name of Pyrmont Waters.

5. Brackel,

5. Brackel, on the Brug, 18 Miles East from Paderborn, once an Imperial Town, now subject to the Bishop.

6. Herfel, founded by Charlemain, in the 8th Century, when he called an Assembly of the States thither. It had a fine Castle which was burnt by the Hessians in 1637.

7. Bureu, 5 Miles South from Paderborn, once subject to its own Lords, now to the Bishop. The Swedes burnt it in 1636, but 'tis since rebuilt.

8. Sultzot, 8 Miles South-West from Paderborn; its Salt-pits yield the Bishop a considerable Revenue.

The Philosophical Transactions of our English Royal Society for December and January 1665, tell us of a Spring in this Bishoprick, called Bolderburn, which disappears twice in 24 Hours, but returns with such Violence, that it drives 3 Mills not far from its Source. Morery says, it lies near Oldenberg in Teutburg Forest. There's another called Metborn, 2 Miles from Paderborn, which has a treble Spring, two of which, tho' not above a Foot and $\frac{1}{2}$ distant, differ so much, that the one is clear, bluish, and lukewarm, has a mixture of Sal-Armoniac, Ochra, Iron, Vitriol, Allum, Sulphur, Nitre, and Orpiment, and is good against Epilepsies, Distempers of the Spleen, and Worms. The other is cold as Ice, turbid, whitish, stronger in Taste, heavier, and mix'd with Orpiment, Salt, Nitre, Iron, and Sal-Armoniac. Birds that drink of it, die of Convulsions, and have their Lungs shrivel'd up; but common Salt given them after it, hinders their sudden Death, and Vinegar saves them, though in a Week after they are sure of the Pipp. A small Quantity of it mixed with common Water, kills Worms in People, and brings them away in great Numbers, but makes the Patient very sick. The Third is lower than the other, about 20 Paces distant, greenish Clear, has a pleasant mix'd Taste of Sower and Sweet, and is of a middle Weight betwixt the other two. The Gentleman who sent this Account to the Society, supposes it to be a Fountain of common Water mix'd with the other two, because having mix'd some common Water with theirs, he found it, when settled, to be of the same Colour and Taste with this second Spring.

XVIII. Corby or Corvey Abbacy, is in the North-East part of this Bishoprick on the Weser. Its Jurisdiction is 16 Miles long and 8 broad. Corby Town lies on the Weser, 27 Miles East from Paderborn, and with its District is subject to the Abbot of Corby, who is a Prince of the Empire. Some say it was founded by St. Adelard, Abbot of Corby in France, in 822; others ascribe it to the Emperor Lewis I. who founded their University. Their first Rector sent Missionaries to convert the Isle of Rugen, which was given to this Abby by the Emperor Lotharius, as appears by his Diploma, sign'd at Aix la Chapelle, May 20th, 844. Several of their Abbots and noted Writers are buried here, and among others, Wittikind, the famous Saxon Historian. Hoxter or Huxer, on the Weser, 25 Miles North from Paderborn, belongs to the Abby. 'Tis a fair trading Town, and several German Nobles have Houses here to improve their Estates by Trade. It suffered much by the Civil Wars, when 1500 Citizens fell in one Siege, but has recovered since. It has three fair Parish Churches, and is a free Town under the Protection of the Dukes of Brunswick.

XIX. The Dutchy of Westphalia has the Bishopricks of Munster and Paderborn on the North, Wetteravia on the South, the County of Marck on the West, and that of Waldeck on the East; is 55 Miles from South to North, and 40 from East to West, but unequal in Length and Breadth. It gives the Title of Duke to the Elector of Cologne, and is subject to him, tho' he is not reckoned among the States of this Circle in the Matricula of the Empire. It retains the Title of Dutchy, because King Wittekind and his Successors, Dukes of Saxony and Westphalia, had their Residence here. This Country has many Woods and much Venison; but towards Lipstadt 'tis pleasant, and abounds with Corn and Pasturage. In some Places there are Mines of Lead, Copper and Silver, but so full of Water that they turn to little Account.

Places of Note are,

1. Arenberg, or Arnsberg, on the Roer, Lat. 51. 28. Long. 8. 40. 35 Miles South-East from Munster, and North-West of Paderborn, and 50 North-East of Cologn. 'Tis a neat pleasant City, and the Residence of the Elector, when he comes to this Country. 'Tis defended by a strong Castle, where the Governour dwells. It had Counts of its own, the last of whom sold it to the See of Cologne in 1368, that Archbishop and the Bishop of Munster having enlarged their Dominions in Westphalia, upon the Proscription of Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony.

2. Stadsberg, a small City on the Dimel, dismantled by the Swedes in 1645.

3. Werle lies pleasantly betwixt the Roer and the Lippe, 18 Miles South West from Arnsberg. 'Tis fortified with Walls, &c. and is the Residence of the Elector's Judge-Official for Westphalia.

4. Gesick, on the Frontiers of Paderborn, 20 Miles North-East from Arnsberg. 'Tis a fortified Town, came to the See of Cologne in 1502, was afterwards taken by the Dutch, and then by the Hessians in 1636, but restored by the Treaty of Westphalia.

XX. Recklinhausen, a County belonging also to the See of Cologne. It lies West from the Dutchy of Westphalia, East from the Dutchy of Cleve, and North from the County of Marck. 'Tis 20 Miles from East to West, and 12 where broadest from South to North. Places of Note are,

1. Recklinhausen the Capital. It is in Lat. 51. 35. Long. 7. 28. forty Miles North-East from Cologne. 'Tis a strong Town, was taken by the ctor of Cologne from the Duke of Cleve in 1343. Here is a Nunnery, whose Prioress hath Power of Life and Death in her Jurisdiction. She only is obliged to vow Chastity, but the Nuns are allowed to marry after a certain Number of Years.

2. Dorstein, 10 Miles farther West. 'Tis a strong Town, was taken and fortified by the Landgrave of Hesse in 1639, but surrendered on honourable Terms to the Elector's Troops in 1641.

Mulheim, which some reckon part of the Dutchy of Westphalia, belongs also to the See of Cologne, from which it lies about 6 Miles North-West on the Bank of the Rhine, and is encompassed by the Dutchy of Berg. 'Tis a fair large Town, and pretends to be the ancient Colonia Ubiorum, because of the great Number of Roman Coins and other Antiquities found in its Neighbourhood; but as this Pretence has no Ground from History, it seems only to have been a Roman Garrison. The Citizens attempted to fortify and make it an Imperial Town in the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century, but were opposed by the Emperor and the Elector, who sent Troops and demolished their Fortifications. The Attempt was renewed at the Beginning of the Civil Wars in Germany; but being then also opposed by the Elector, they continue dependent on him.

XXI. The Dutchy of Cleve lies West from the County of Recklinhausen, East and North from the Dutchy of Guelderland, and South from the County of Zutphen. 'Tis 40 Miles from East to West, and 30 where broadest from South to North; is reckoned one of the oldest Principalities in Germany, being given by Charles Martel, or, as some say, by Pepin King of France, about 759, to Ælius Gracilis, or Gralius, who assisted him in his War against the Germans. His Posterity acquired the County of Marck by marrying the Heiress; and one of them was created Duke of Cleve by the Emperor Sigismund III. The last Duke, John-William, dying without Issue in 1609, the Succession was claimed by the Elector of Brandenburg, the Duke of Newburg, the Duke of Deux-ponts, and the Marquis of Burgaw, who had all of them marry'd Daughters or Sisters of the said last Duke. But the Elector of Brandenburg and the Duke of Newburg were the only Claimants who defended their Title by Arms. This occasioned great Commotions in Germany, the Dutch assisting the Elector, and the Spaniards the Duke. But at last it was agreed, that the Elector of Brandenburg should for himself and his Heirs enjoy for ever the Dutchy of Cleve, and the Counties of Marck and Ravensburg; and that the Duke should in like manner have the Bishops of Juliers and Berg, and the small Territory of Ravenstein; but the latter belongs now to the Dutch. The Country is well furnished with Woods, Corn, and Pasturage, and watered by the Rhine and several other Rivers, which make it fruitful and pleasant. Places of Note here are,

1. Cleve, the Metropolis, about 10 Miles South-East from Nimeguen, Lat. 51. 48. Long. 6. 22. The Name comes from its lying for most part on the Front of a Hill. The adjacent Country is one of the finest in Germany. Cluverius thinks this Town to have been the old Colonia Ulpia Trajana, which seems to be favoured by numbers of remarkable Ruins in its Neighbourhood. Over the South Gate of the Town there is a Monument of Eumenius Rhetor, who is said to have taught Oratory here; and under it an Inscription, alledging, that he lived in this Place in the time of Julius Cæsar, who founded the Castle, of Augustus, who made it a Garrison, of Ulpius Trajanus, who made it a Colony, and of Ælius Adrianus, who made it a City. But Antiquaries differ in this; for Lipsius denies Eumenius Rhetor to have been here, and Pighius strongly asserts it. The City is now small, but well peopled, has several fine Houses belonging to Persons of Quality, but those of the ordinary Burghers are mean. The Castle is of no great Strength, but pleasantly seated on the top of a Hill; and from that called the Swan Tower, an ancient Gothic Structure, there's a noble Prospect of the neeghbouring Country and of the Rhine, which lies about three Miles North of it. There are stately Apartments in the Castle, which was the Palace of their ancient Dukes, and is still the Residence of the King of Prussia when he comes hither. 'Tis large, but irregular, and its Strength chiefly consisted in two old square Donjons. It has a great Hall, at the end of which there is an Alcove, to which they go up by 20 Steps the whole Breadth of the Hall, and have a noble View of many Cities and Villages farther than the Eye can reach. The Town chiefly subsists by the Residence of the King of Prussia's Deputies, who govern the Country, and by the meeting of the States, who assemble in the Castle. The Magistrates of the City and Governors of the Country are Calvinists, and have a large handsome Church, besides the Chapel of the Castle: But the Publick Churches here, and in most Parts of the Dutchy are possessed by the Papists, by virtue of an Agreement with the Duke of Newburg and Juliers, who was thereupon obliged to allow the Protestants a Liberty in his Dominions. The River Hel, which runs by the Foot of the Castle, falls into the Rhine, and carries small Vessels from thence to the Town. On the West side of the City are Prince Maurice's Parks, with many pleasant Ponds, Waterworks, Grottoes, &c. Above them lies the high Hill of Sternberg, from whence one may see Utrecht, tho' 51 Miles distant, with near 40 other Cities and Great Towns. Here are 12 Walks cut through the Woods, and at the End of each Walk the Prospect of a fair City. On the East side stands the Prince's House in a Wood, where, among other Rarities, there's a noble Collection of old Roman Urns, and divers Monuments of Antiquity, with several Inscriptions.

2. Emmerick, 4 Miles North-East from Cleve, on the East Bank of the Rhine. 'Tis a very ancient City, one of the Hans Towns, and has a pretty good Trade. It was formerly possessed by the Dutch, but the Emperor prevailed on them to resign it to the Duke of Cleve in 1600, on condition that the Spaniards should restore Rhinberg to the Elector of Cologn; but the Spaniards not performing it, the Dutch repossessed themselves, and fortified this, with several other Towns in the Dutchy, as a Frontier against the Spaniards. They afterwards restored them to the late Elector of Brandenburg, the King of Prussia's Grandfather. It was taken by the French in 1672, but restored in 1674. Here is always a small Garrison, but the Fortifications are neglected of late, tho' formerly very considerable. Over against it there is a large Island in the Rhine, on the Corner of which, next to the Town, there was a Fort, which, with the Cannon of the Place, commanded the River. The Town lies pleasantly. The Governour and Magistrates, and many of the Burghers are Calvinists, and have a Church here, but the rest are possessed by the Papists, according to the former Agreement; and the Jesuits have a College here.

2. Rees, 8 Miles higher on the same side the Rhine, a large fortified Town, taken and restored by the French as Emmeric. It had a Fort on he other side of the Rhine. The Protestants have a Church here, where they have preserved an excellent Sculpture in gilt Wood, containing the History of our Saviour's Life.

4. Santen, 12 Miles South East from Cleve, not far from the Rhine; a Place of such Antiquity, that some ascribe the Founding of it to Francus, one of Hector's Sons, who, they say, called it Troja Francorum; others others say, 'twas built by the Sicambri, and that 'twas called Santen, or Saints, because the Theban Legion suffered here. All alike fabulous. Pighius will have it to be the Ulpia Trajana; but Cluverius has more Arguments to prove it to be the Vetera Castra of Tacitus, where Julius Cæsar resided for some time. 'Tis still a large Town, but much decay'd. Here's a large Church, with a great Bell, and many fine Altars of curious Workmanship, abundance of Reliques, and, if we believe the Priests, a MS. of St. Paul's Writing.

4. Calcar, on the River Men, betwixt Santen and Cleve. 'Twas built as a Fortress, in case of any sudden Invasion from Cologne or Guelderland. It grew populous and rich by their Trade in Linnen, Malt, and Beer. D. Adolph I. built a vast Granary here for Corn to be made into Malt. It has a strong Castle, a fine Market-place, and a stately Town-House. St. Nicholas Church, and the Dominican Monastery, are fine Structures. The Latter has a good Library. In the Road betwixt the Town and Santen, stands Marienboom, a rich Monastery, with a Latin Inscription on the Wall next the Road, testifying their Gratitude to the late Elector of Brandenburg, Frederick William, for accepting their great Collection of MSS. in 1650, instead of turning them out, and secularizing their Revenues.

5. Wesel, called Nether Wesel, to distinguish it from Upper Wesel, in the Electorate of Treves. It lies on the East side of the Rhine, 18 Miles South-East from Cleve; is the largest and best built Town of the Dutchy, populous and well seated for Trade. 'Tis a Hans Town, and reckoned one of the Imperial Towns of Westphalia; but one of the Dukes freed them from the Monthly Contributions paid by other Imperial Towns. It grew rich by the Concourse of Merchants who fled hither from the Persecution in the Spanish Netherlands, and was Garrison'd by the Dutch, but was taken and plundered by the French in 1672, when they also exacted great Contributions from the Inhabitants. 'Twas restored in 1674. They are governed by their own Laws, but submit to the King of Prussia as their Sovereign. The Town and its two Suburbs are well fortify'd after the modern Way, with Bastions, Half Moons, and Ditches; and in the middle of the Curtains there are Galleries which run into the Ditch, and have separate Places for the Men and Women, in case of a Siege. Here's a small Harbour for Vessels that Trade on the Rhine, and several Churches and Monasteries. The Porch of the Great Church is remarkable for the Birth of Peregrine Berty, afterwards Earl of Lindsey. His Mother, the Lady Catharine, Dutchess Dowager of Suffolk, and Mr. Berty her Husband, being forced to fly beyond Sea during the Persecution by Queen Mary, and were reduced to such Straights here, because they were not known, that they could not get any better Accommodation. Here's a noble Hospital, richly endowed for aged and decrepit People.

6. Burick, a fortified Town, over against Wesel, about a Mile from the Rhine.

7. Orsoy, another fortified Town, 6 Miles further up the Rhine on the same Side. 'Twas taken by the French in 1672, and the Garrison and Inhabitants barbarously used by the French King's Orders, for offering to hold out against his Army.

8. Dinslaken, near the Rhine, 7 Miles South-East from Wesel, thought by some German Writers, to be the ancient Locus Martis. 'Twas taken by the Dutch in 1627, and never recovered its Lustre since.

9. Duisburg, on the Borders of the Dutchy of Berg, about 30 Miles North-East from Cleve, and 15 from Wesel. Some, but without ground, will have it to be the ancient Teutoburgum, and its Wood to be the Saltus Teutoburgensis, where Varus and his Legions were slain. They have had a long Controversy with the Princes of Cleve, about being an Imperial Town, but are still subject to the King of Prussia. 'Tis small, well fortify'd, and populous. They had formerly annual Fairs, which are now removed to Frankfort. Here's an University with several fair Churches and Monasteries. The French took it in 1672, under the Mareschal de Turenne, but restored it in 1674.

10. Gennep, at the Mouth of the Nierse, overagainst Guelder, anciently a large populous City, and strongly fortified. It lies well for Trade, but being frequently attacked, lost its Commerce. The Dutch took it in 1641, because it lies in the Road betwixt Nimeguen and Venlo. The French took it in 1672, demolished its Fortifications, and restored it in 1674. The River abounds with delicate Eels; and there's a strong Fort at a small distance from the Town.

11. Goch, on the same River, a little above it, is also a fortified Town.

12. Ravenstein Barony, a small Tract of Land, betwixt Guelderland and Brabant; it has for some Ages belonged to the Duke of Cleve, takes Name from the Castle of Ravenstein, on the Maese, about 4 Miles below Grave, and is now under the Dutch.

XXII. The County of MARCK, reckoned the largest in Westphalia, and thought to have its Name from being the ancient Boundary betwixt Germany and Gallia Belgica. It lies South-East from Cleve, North from the Dutchy of Berg, and West from that of Westphalia; is 47 Miles East and West, and 43 South and North; divided into 15 Bailliwicks, and subject to the King of Prussia. Places of Note are,

1. Hamm, Lat. 51 ½. Long. 8. 25 Miles South from Munster. 'Tis a poor Hans Town on the Lippe, Capital of the County, and subsists chiefly by Travellers betwixt Germany and the Netherlands. 'Twas taken by the French in 1673, but restored to the Elector of Brandenburg in 1674. The adjacent Country abounds with Corn, Hemp, and Flax.

2. Unna, another small Hans Town, 9 Mile South of Hamm, formerly a Place of good Trade, and reckoned one of the richest in Low Germany, before the Wars betwixt the Houses of Brandenburg and Newburg about the Succession of the Duke of Cleves.

3. Altena, an ancient City, the Residence and Title of its Counts, till one of them subdued the City of Marck in 1053, when it was a considerable Town; now an old ruinous Place near Hamm, and has nothing remarkable but a Castle.

4. Werden, on the Banks of the Roer, a neat City, 10 Miles N.E. from Dusseldorp. 'Twas built in 1317, and noted for the Monastery of St. Ludger, the Abbot of which founded it. Their chief Trade is in feeding Swine, of which great Numbers are brought hither annually from other Parts of Westphalia, and vast numbers of Hams are exported hence. The River supplies them with plenty of Eels, and other Fish; and the adjacent Fields with Corn. The Abby was secularized by the Treaty of Munster, in favour of the Elector of Brandenburg.

5. Soest, on the River Arse, 13 Miles East from Hamm, a large, fair, imperial City. It is defended by a double Wall, with 30 Watch Towers, and a large deep Ditch. 'Tis divided into 10 Parishes, but has many more Churches and Chapels. The Citizens have a Privilege to hunt and kill Venison in any of the Neighbouring Countries; and a Court of Judicature, from whence there's no Appeal but to the Chamber of Spires. 'Twas formerly subject to the Archbishop of Cologne; who oppressing them, they put themselves under the Protection of other Princes, and are now under the King of Prussia; but the Collegiate Church of St. Patrochus is still under the Archbishop's Jurisdiction.

6. Dortmund, on the River Empser, 15 Miles South-West of Hamm, formerly Capital of the County; and had Lords of its own, who sold it to the Inhabitants. Upon this they took the Title of an Imperial City, which the Elector of Brandenburg disputes. 'Tis a Hans Town; and though but small, is rich and populous.

XXIII. The Dutchy of BERGS, so named from its Mountainous Soil, lies on the East side of the Rhine, opposite to the Electorate of Cologne, has the County of Marck on the North, and the Dutchy of Westphalia on the East, is 50 Miles long on the Banks of the Rhine, and 25 where broadest. It had formerly Lords of its own, was made a Dutchy in 1389, came to the House of Cleve, and then to that of Newburg, now Elector Palatine, as mentioned in Cleve. Places of Note are,

1. Dusseldorp, the Capital and Residence of the Elector; it lies on the East side of the Rhine, about 15 Miles below Cologne. The publick Buildings towards the River make a fine Appearance, and particularly the Palace, which is a noble and stately Fabrick. The Town is named from the small River Dussel, that falls here into the Rhine, which formerly came close to the Walls, but is now further remov'd. 'Twas anciently an Imperial City, and of good Trade. Here are three weekly Markets for Corn, which is exported hence in great Quantities. The Town is large, and defended by a Citadel, separated from it by a smal Harbour form'd by the Rhine; on the other Parts 'tis fortified with fine Bastions and Cavaliers. In the Collegiate Church there are several Monuments of their ancient Dukes; the finest is that of William, the last of the Family. Here was formerly a small University, which the Jesuits in vain endeavoured to restore; but they have a College, and a good Seminary for poor Scholars.

2. Gerisheim, a noble Village, not far from the Town, comparable to several Cities in the Empire.

3. Bensburg, a strong Fort and Monastery, of the Order of the Holy Cross built in 1298, and was the first of its kind in the Empire.

4. Solingen, a small City on the River Wipper, 15 Miles South-East from Dusseldorp, noted for good Cutlers Ware.

5. Wipperford, 15 Miles farther South-East on the same River, formerly a considerable City, but now much reduced, having suffered much by the Normans in 881.

6. Essen, 15 Miles North-East from Dusseldorp, on the Borders of Marck. 'Tis an imperial Town, and is famous for a noble and rich Nunnery, founded about 877. The Abbess is a Princess of the Empire, and the greatest part of the Town, with several large neighbouring Mannors is subject to her. None are admitted here but the Daughters of Noblemen, who are allowed to marry at Pleasure. The Revenues were settled at first for the Abbess, 52 Nuns, and 20 Canons, but their Numbers are since retrench'd. There are good Fire Arms made in the Town, and the adjacent Country abounds with Wheat and Coal.

XXIV. The City of COLOGNE, is by the Matricula reckoned in the Circle of Westphalia; but we refer the Description of it, and some other Places reckoned also to Westphalia, to the Description of the Electorate of Colen, to which they are subject, though that Electorate belongs to the Circle of the Lower Rhine.

XXV. The Dutchy of JULIERS, has that of Guelder on the North, part of the Electorate of Treves and Cologne on the South and East, part of Guelder, the Bishoprick of Liege and Dutchy of Limbourg, on the West. 'Tis about 70 Miles long, but much contracted at both Ends, and the greatest Breadth from East to West, is about 30. This Dutchy, with those of Cleve, Berg, &c. was formerly subject to one Family; which being extinguished in 1609, it came to the Family of Newburg, as before mentioned in the Account of Cleve. This Country abounds with Corn, Hay, Wood, and all the other Necessaries for Life. 'Tis noted for a good Breed of Horses, and store of Dyers Woad, of which they export great Quantities. This Dutchy suffered much by the Ravages of the French in 1690.

Places of Note are,

1. Juliers, the Capital, near Lat. 51. Long. 6. 43. about 25 Miles West from Cologne. Some ascribe the Name and Foundation to Julius Cæsar, or Julia Agrippina, who founded Cologne; the Truth of which is doubted, because the first mention we have of it is in Antonine's Itinerary, and Theodosius's Tables. The Germans call it Gulick, from the Latin Name Juliacum. It lies on the River Roer, is small, but well fortify'd and neat: The Houses of Brick, and the Streets broad and regular. Here's a large Citadel, which contains the Duke's Palace, with a spacious Piazza. 'Tis as strong as the best Engineers of Germany cou'd make it, and was 30 Years in building. Prince Maurice took it in 1610. The Spaniards retook it in 1622, but restored it to the Duke of Newburg by the Pyrenean Treaty. There's a Carthusian Monastery in the Suburb, nobly endowed by their Dukes.

2. Duren, on the same River, 9 Miles further South. Cluverius takes it to be the ancient Marcodurum, alias Marcomagum. It pretends to the same Founder and Antiquity with Cologne. It was an imperial City, but subdued by the Duke of Juliers in 1407. Charles V. took it by Storm, put the Garrison to the Sword, and burnt it in 1543; but it was rebuilt, and restored to the Duke. The Streets are neat, uniform, and watered in the middle by Streams. St. Martin's Church is the fairest Structure, where they pretend to have the Head of St. Anne, Mother to the Virgin, which formerly brought many Pilgrims hither.

3. Aken, Aix la Chapelle, (Lat. Aquisgranum) 20 Miles South-West from Juliers, 28 East from Maſtricht, and 48 South-West from Cologne, Lat. 50. 45. Long. 6 ½. The Latin Name is derived by ſome from the old German Idol Apollo Grannus; but more rationally by others from Serenius Granus, Lieutenant General of Gallia Belgica under the Emperor Adrian. Granus having diſcovered the hot Springs here Anno Chriſti 53, adorned them like the Roman Baths, and built a Palace for himſelf, and Lodgings for his Retinue near them. That called Turris Grani at the End of the Town-Houſe, is ſuppoſed to be Part of his Palace; but the Architecture does not look ſo ancient. Charlemain's pragmatick Sanction makes Granus Brother to Nero and Agrippa; and the Chronicle of Utrecht ſays, he was baniſhed hither by Nero. Attila the Hun having deſtroyed this City, it lay in Ruins till the time of Charlemain, who hunting in the neighbouring Woods, his Horſe accidentally ſtruck his Hoof into one of the Hot Springs, which the Emperor obſerving, and finding by the Ruins of ſeveral great Buildings, that this muſt have been Aquis Granum, he ordered the Baths to be ſearched out and rebuilt. Being much taken with the pleaſant Situation of the Place, he ordered the City alſo to be rebuilt, founded the Collegiate Church of St. Mary, endowed it nobly in 804, and at times built all that part of the City which is encloſed by the old Wall. The Town and the Emperor's Palace was burnt by the Normans in 882, and after it was rebuilt it ſuffered much by other Fires in 1146, 1172, 1224, 1236, and particularly in 1656, when 20 Churches and Chapels, and 5000 Houſes were burnt, but ſoon after rebuilt. The French call it Aix la Chapelle, from a Chapel in the Great Church, where there are Multitudes of Reliques. 'Twas noted for ſeveral Councils in the time of Charlemain and Lewis the Pious, about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, Reformation of Manners, Regulating Monaſteries, and againſt ſuch as had ſeiſed the Patrimonies of the Church. This City ſuffered much during the Civil Wars of Germany, when moſt of the Citizens were Proteſtants; but the Marquis de Spinola took the Town, and re-eſtabliſhed Popery, ſo that the Proteſtants have not ſince been allowed any Place of Worſhip, but go to Church in that Part of Limburg which is ſubject to the Dutch, about two Miles from the City.

The Emperors were formerly Crowned here, and tho' now Crowned elſewhere, proteſt that it ſhall be without Prejudice to the Privileges of this City. Charlemain having been a Canon of the Cathedral, and ordered his Succeſſors to be ſo, they take an Oath as ſuch when Crowned; at which time the Magiſtrates ſend Charlemain's Sword, Shoulder-Belt and Goſpel in Golden Letters to the Elector of Mentz, who gives Security for reſtoring them when the Coronation is over.

Dr. Blondel, a Phyſician here, wrote a Deſcription of the City and Baths in Latin, which was printed at Maeſtricht in 1683. He ſays, it recovered its Loſſes thro' the abovementioned Fires, by the Bounty of ſeveral Emperors, and the great Concourſe of People to its Baths. Frederick I. built the Outer Walls, Towers and Ditches in 1172. The Circuit of the whole City is a League and a half, and the inner Town three Quarters. The inner Wall has 10 Gates, and the outer 11. The Town-Houſe is a noble Structure of Freeſtone, was built in 1533, and is adorned with the Statues of all the Emperors ſince Charlemain. The firſt and ſecond Stories are divided into ſeveral Apartments; the uppermoſt is one Hall, 162 Foot long and 60 broad, where the Emperors, who received their Iron Crown here, uſed to treat the Electors and other Princes. Here are ſeveral Pieces of Painting by Amiſſaga, highly valued, among which are that of the Reſurrection, and that of Charlemain's giving the City their Charter. In the Market-Place before the Town-Houſe, there is a ſtately Fountain, noted for its Largeneſs and Workmanſhip, by the fam'd Artiſt Gerard Coris. It has four Springs, which run from above into a large Copper Ciſtern, 30 Foot in Diameter, and weighing 12000 Pounds. Round the Edges there's a Latin Inſcription, importing the Diſcovery of the Hot Fountain by Granus, as above, and the Renewing of the Baths by Charlemain, who appointed this City to be the Seat of the Empire on this ſide the Alps; that the Cold Fountain did formerly run into the Baths; and that the Senate adorned it with this Ciſtern in 1620. From this Ciſtern the Water runs into a Stone Ciſtern below, and from thence is conveyed thro' the City. On the Top of the Fountain there is a large Braſs Statue of Charlemain in Armour, richly gilt, with his Face towards Germany.

The Cathedral is a large old-faſhioned Gothick Structure. The Steeple at the Weſt End is adorned with ſeveral Pyramids, and on the Top there is a large Globe and Croſs. From this Tower runs a Gallery, ſupported by a long Arch, to the Cupola, near the middle of the Church. The Inſide is beautify'd with a vaſt number of Pillars of Marble and Braſs, gilt Statues, Braſs Doors and Partitions, and abundance of Moſaic Work. Over the Place where Charles the Great was interred, hangs a large Crown of Silver and Braſs gilt, adorned with 16 ſmall Towers, 48 larger and 32 leſſer Statues of Silver, among which they place 48 Candleſticks, and ſometimes 450 Tapers at great Feſtivals. This was given by the Emperor Frederick I. who removed Charlemain's Body, interred part of it in a Silver Coffin under the Altar in the Choir, and the other near the Wall of the old Structure, with the ſame Tomb of White Marble it had before, with the Figure of Proſerpina upon it, ſuppoſed to be taken from the Tomb of Julius Cæſar. Here is alſo the Monument of the Emperor Otho I. in Black Marble. Among other Reliques ſhewed to Pilgrims, there's a Gown ſaid to be worn by the Virgin Mary at our Saviour's Birth, made of Wool like that of the Cocoa-Tree, a coarſe Linnen Cloth, with which its pretended our Saviour was girt when crucified, a Piece of the Cord he was bound with, ſome of the Blood of St. Stephen the Protomartyr, richly enchaſed in Gold and Precious Stones, upon which the Emperors are ſworn at their Inauguration; the Picture of the Virgin with our Saviour in her Arms, embоſſed upon a Jaſpis two Inches broad, ſaid to be found in Charlemain's Tent, and to be made by St. Luke; a noble Manuſcript Copy of the Goſpels, richly covered with gilt Silver, ſaid alſo to be found there; Charlemain's Sword, worn by the Emperors at their Coronation, in dubbing Knights, and conferring other Honours. In the Eaſt End of the Cathedral our Saviour is repreſented ſitting in Majeſty upon a Throne, clad in a long Robe; round the Throne are the four Animals mentioned in Ezechiel's Viſion; and over our Saviour's Head a Circle of Golden Stars. Underneath is the Symbol of the Croſs, which appeared to Conſtantine when he defeated Maxentius. And near this is a Repreſentation of the twenty four Elders mentioned in the Revelations, riſing from their Seats, laying aſide their Crowns, and falling down before the Throne. The Windows about it are curiouſly gilt, and the Pavement of chequer'd Marble artfully wrought. Over the chief Altar there is a Cheſt of Silver and Gold of antique Workmanſhip, and curiouſly engraved: Here they keep the four chief Reliques they ſhew Pilgrims at their Jubilee, which is once in ſeven Years. At the Entrance of the Choir there is a Pulpit covered with Plates of Gold and Silver and adorned with Precious Stones. This was given them by the Emperor Henry II. in 1014, and from hence the Subdeacon ſings the Goſpel Solemn Times. The Altar of the Choir is covered with Plates of Gold repreſenting our Saviour's Paſſion: 'Tis ſaid they were found in Charlemain's Sepulchre. In the upper Part of the Church, againſt the Prince's Altar, betwixt two Pillars, there is a Throne of White Marble, placed there by Charlemain; the Emperors uſed to ſit in it when choſen.

The Hot Baths here, which bring great numbers of Strangers from all Parts, are deſcribed by Dr. Brown and Dr. Blondel thus. There are three within the inner Walls, viz. the Emperor's, the Little Bath, and St. Quirinus's. The firſt is that which Charlemain took ſo much Delight in, that he would often invite his Sons and his Nobles to bathe there with him; but 'tis now divided into leſſer Partitions. The Little Bath joins to it, and the Springs of both riſe ſo hot, that they let them cool twelve Hours before they uſe them. They are Nitro-Salſo-Sulphureous; and Dr. Brown ſays, he ſaw Pieces of Brimſtone an Inch thick, Salt-Petre, and other petrified Subſtances taken out of them. Thoſe in the New Town are Sulphuro-Salſo-Nitrous, not ſo hot and clear as the former, and their Smell is ſomewhat offenſive. Near the Baths in the Old Town there is a Fountain of warm Water, much reſorted to in Summer Mornings, and drank for Chronical Diſeaſes. Near thoſe Hot Springs lie many Cold ones, by which their Heat might be tempered, and with a little Charge may be made the moſt delightful Baths in the World. Theſe Baths are good againſt Convulſions, Palſies of all ſorts, Numbneſs, Tremblings, Gout, Sciatica, Hardneſs or Contractions of the Nerves, Swellings, Diſtempers of the Bowels, Stomach, Spleen, inveterate Head-Achs, Vertigoes, Tingling of the Ears, Nephritical Diſtempers, moiſt and cold Affections of the Womb, Stoppage or Flux of the Menſes, Barrenneſs, Abortion, Scabs of all ſorts, and Dregs of bad Mercury made uſe of in Venereal Diſtempers; but they are not proper for thoſe who have that Diſeaſe upon them.

About a Furlong from the South Gate lies the Village of Borcet, where there are a great many Hot Springs, reckoned Salſo-Aluminous, on both ſides of a ſmall Rivulet. Theſe Hot Springs are by Pipes and Conduits conveyed into 14 Houſes, and diſtributed into 28 Baths. They are much hotter than thoſe in the Town, and cool'd 18 Hours before they can be uſed. They are for moſt part 5 or 6 Yards ſquare. There is one called the Poor Man's Bath in the open Air, and a Spring ſo hot, that the People ſcald Pigs, boil Eggs with it, and 'tis obſerv'd that they harden the Yolks, but not the Whites of the Eggs. Theſe Baths are not ſo ſtrong as thoſe in the City, and by Conſequence better for Weak People. Perſons of all Ages bath in them for Diverſion without any Danger. They are good againſt the ſame Diſtempers as the other, and particularly againſt Defluxions of the Head and Breaſt, moiſt and ſqueamiſh Stomachs, Dropſies, ſoft Swellings, Diſeaſes of the Womb, &c. and may be drank as well as thoſe of the City. The Fountains are ſo copious in both Places, that they are capable of filling ſeveral times in a Day above 50 Baths of 50 or 70 Tun apiece; and moſt of them, but thoſe for the Poor, are ſo contriv'd, that the old Water is drawn off by Conduits under Ground, and the Baths cleanſed from all Impurities. From the Baths in both Places it is computed, that 6000 Tuns of Water flow in a Day, which carry as many Pounds of Salt.

Theſe Waters being drank, are good againſt hot Diſtempers of the Liver, Spleen, Reins and Bowels, Obſtructions of the Meſentery, Pancreas, Liver, Spleen and Reins, the Yellow Jaundice, Cachexy, Dropſie, inveterate ſtubborn Feavers, new Tertians and Quartans, the Whites in Women, bleeding at the Noſe, and Flux of the Menſes; they kill Worms of all ſorts, help Conception, dry over-moiſt Parts, purge the Urinary Veſſels, cure Stranguries, diſſolve and expell the Gravel, help in Melancholy, recover loſt Appetite, quench immoderate Thirſt, cure the Scurvy and Gout, Rheumatiſms and other Diſtempers proceeding from too much Serum in the Blood. They are good againſt the moſt inveterate Cholicks, Aſthmas, Scyrrhous Swellings, Scrophulous Diſtempers, Impoſthumes of the Meſentery, Diarrheas, Ulcers of the Mouth, and Diſtempers of the Gums and Teeth.

This City is a large beautiful Imperial Town, governed by a Mayor put in by the Duke of Juliers, under whoſe Protection it is, ad Vitam aut Culpam, 2 Burgomaſters, 14 Eſchevins, and 120 Counſellors. The Mayor has the Precedence of the Eſchevins, who officiate as Judges during Life. The Burgomaſters are choſen by the Majority of the Companies, of which there are 15, and continue two Years. The Counſellors are choſen in like manner. The City lies in a Valley ſurrounded with Mountains and Woods, and the Air is very wholſome. They have 20 publick Fountains of good clear Water, beſides many private ones. The Streams that run thro' the Town keep it very clean, and drive ſeveral Mills. Here are 10 Hot Mineral Fountains, and ſome Cold ones without St. James's Gate, beſides ſeveral in the adjoining Fields. The adjacent Country abounds with Corn, Fruit, and Paſturage. The neighbouring Woods and Quarries furniſh them with Materials for Fire and Building. They have alſo rich Coal-Mines, and are well ſupplyed with Neceſſaries by the Neighbourhood of the Rhine and Maeſe. The Territories of this City are large, and contain near 200 Villages, incloſed on all ſides with Mountains. That of Borcet, or Porcet, in the Neighbourhood, had its Name from Wild Hogs that formerly abounded in the adjacent Woods. It is well built, has four Churches and a Nunnery of Bernardines, whoſe Abbeſs is a Princeſs of the Empire; but there lies an Appeal from her Court to the Eſchevins of the City.

There are alſo in the Neighbourhood, Mines of Lead, Vitriol, Sulphur, and Calmey, or Lapis Calaminaris. With the laſt they make Braſs thus: They put 100 Pounds of it to 18 Pounds of Swediſh Copper, ſome broken Pieces of Braſs, and a good Quantity of the Droſs of Copper and Calmey; melt them in Crucibles in a hot Furnace, let the Droſs boil over, and pour the Metal into Frames of Stone bordered with Bars of Iron, where they run into large Plates of Braſs.

This

This City is alſo noted for a Peace concluded here in in 1668, betwixt France and Spain.

Munſter-Eyffel on the River Erft, 25 Miles South-Eaſt from Juliers, is Capital of its Territory.

The Abbey of St. Cornelis Munſter, lies on the River Denſe, about 6 Miles South-Eaſt from Aix la Chapelle, and is by the Matricula reckon'd one of the States of the Weſtphalian Circle.

There are ſeveral other Market-Towns in this Dutchy, of which we have no Deſcription.

XXVI. The Biſhoprick of LIEGE has part of Brabant and Guelderland on the North, Part of Luxemburg on the South, Part of the Spaniſh Netherlands on the Weſt, and Limburg, &c. on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 70 Miles South-Weſt and North-Eaſt, but of a very unequal Breadth, the broadeſt Place being about 35 Miles. Some derive the Name from Legio, becauſe a Roman Legion was defeated near this Place, and others from a ſmall River of the ſame Name, which falls into the Maeſe near the Town. This Country abounds with Brimſtone and Vitriol, dug out of Mines like Coal-Pits from 15 to 20 Fathom deep.. The way of preparing the Vitriol is exhibited in our Royal Tranſactions of 1665, N°. II. Here are alſo Mines of Lead and Iron, and Quarries of Marble.

Places of Note here are,

1. Liege, alias Luyck, (Lat. Leodium, Leodicum, and Legia.) 'Tis the Capital of the Country, lies 15 Miles South-Weſt from Maeſtricht upon the Maeſe, and 30 Miles North-Eaſt from Namur, Lat. 50. 40. Long. 5. 45. The Biſhoprick is ſaid to have been founded by St. Hubert, a Prince of Aquitain, about 713; but ſome make it much older. The Biſhop is Suffragan of Cologne, and has the Title of Prince of the City and Country of Liege, Marquis of Franchimont, Count of Loos and Haſbaye, &c. He likewiſe aſſumes the Title of Duke of Bouillon, and forms Pretenſions on that Dutchy. La Forreſt thinks, the Town was founded by Ambiorix, King of the Eburones, after he had defeated the Roman Legion abovementioned, and Walled by St. Hubert, Biſhop of Maeſtricht. It was ruined by the Normans in 881. Henry I. Duke of Brabant, took it in 1212, and expoſed it to Plunder for ſix Days. Here have been many bloody Quarrels about the Election of their Biſhops, and betwixt them and the Magiſtrates about the Sovereignty of the Town, which they plead to be independent. In 1409, John Duke of Burgundy killed 36000 Ligeois for making War upon their Biſhop; and Charles the Bold chaſtiſed them ſo ſeverely on the like Account, that the Town hates the Burgundians ever ſince. Of late Years they have generally choſen the Elector of Cologn for Biſhop.

The City is beautiful, about four Miles in Circumference, lies in ſuch a pleaſant and fruitful Vale, and abounds ſo with Clergy, that 'tis called Their Paradiſe. Within the Walls there are ſeveral Valleys, Hills, and Iſlands formed by the Maeſe, which runs thro' it in two Streams. Moſt of the Streets are ſpacious and well built, and have a Stream in the middle with many fine Bridges over them. Moſt of the beſt Houſes have a Fountain or two of cool Spring Water. In the City and Suburbs there are above 100 Churches, 8 of which are Collegiate; ſo that it has this Character given it by Travellers, That for fair Churches, Convents, and other Religious Foundations, no City in Germany or France can compare with it. The Cathedral is a very ſtately Structure of Red Stone, with much fine Carving, and was dedicated to St. Hubert by Lambert Biſhop of Maeſtricht, who being murdered by the Townſmen, his Corpſe was buried here. The Chapter is compoſed of 60 Canons, all of noble Extraction, or have the Degree of Doctors. They have 12 others named Canonici Mediocres, and 12 more called Minores; and among them is moſt of the Power and Wealth of the Country. The Engliſh Jeſuits have a College here well ſeated on the top of a Hill, and near it there is an Engliſh Nunnery. In St. William's Convent, without the City, lies Sir John Mandeville our Engliſh Traveller, whoſe Works are more eſteemed abroad than at home. He choſe this as a Place of Retreat to end his Days in. By his Grave are kept his Saddle, Spurs, and Knife that he uſed in his Travels; and on his Tomb there is an Inſcription in Old French, requeſting thoſe who paſs by it to pray for him. Here is an Univerſity, once ſo famous, that the Sons of 21 Kings, 24 Dukes, and 29 Counts, beſides many other Perſons of Quality, are ſaid to have been Students here at once. The Biſhop's Palace is a very noble Structure, with ſeveral Courts, one of them with fine Piazza's, and larger than our Royal Exchange. Dr. Northleigh, in his Deſcription of the Spaniſh Netherlands, ſays, they have a Key of a Quarter of a Mile long upon the Maeſe. They have a Bridge of ſix Arches, every one twice as large as thoſe of London Bridge, and ſo high that Veſſels eaſily paſs under them. He adds, they are not much inferiour to the famous Arch of Rialto at Venice. The Bridge riſes high in the middle, and is ſo broad, that 5 or 6 Waggons may paſs upon it abreaſt. There is a Battery of Cannon mounted upon it. The Form of the City is Triangular, and they have a ſtrong Citadel on a ſteep Hill. One of the greateſt Curioſities here is, the Variety of Dials invented by the famous Mathematician Linus, in the pleaſant Garden of the Engliſh Jeſuits. One of them in the middle of the Garden exceeds all the reſt by its ſeveral Ways of ſhewing the Hour, 1. By a Wine-Glaſs, in the middle of which there is perpendicular Gnomon, which directs to the Figures on the Outſide. 2. By a Looking-glaſs, in which one ſees a little Star, cauſed by the Penetration of the Sun-Beams, that points at the Hour; 3. A round Glaſs full of Wine, and ſmall Braſs Bars that ſurround it, from which the Sun-Beams are reflected, as from a Burning-Glaſs, to the Point of Time; ſo that by counting the number of the Bars from the firſt to the Point where the Heat centers, a blind Man may by his Fingers find the Hour of the Day. 4. Reflections on a Globe of Conſtellations for a Night-Dial. 5. By the Elevation of the Pole-Star, and the Light of the Sun trajected .6. By the receding of the Gnomon till it caſt no Shadow, the Reverſe of ordinary Dials. The Convent of St. James is a noble Fabrick, has ſeveral beautiful Monuments, and abundance of Reliques; but we may judge of them by one, which they pretend to be a Shirt of one of the Children that was ſlain by Herod's Command. They have alſo an Antipendium, which they pretend to be made of the embroidered Cloak which King Charles I. wore upon the Scaffold; and this they keep among the Reliques of their Martyrs. There are two or three handſome Squares near the City, and abundance of Armourers that were encouraged to ſettle here, becauſe of the neighbouring Coal-Mines. The City is well ſupplied with Veniſon and excellent Mutton from the Foreſt of Ardenne, and with a tolerable ſort of Wine from the neighbouring Vineyards. The City was taken by the French in 1675, and next Year they deſtroyed the Caſtle. The French King obliged the Biſhop in 1619 to demoliſh the Citadel on the ſide next the Country. It ſoon after declared for the Confederates againſt the French, who beſieged it in 1691, took the Chartreuſe, and bomb'd the Town, but were obliged to break up on the Approach of the Confederates; but in 1707 it was betrayed to them by Order of its Sovereign the Elector of Colen. In 1702 it was taken by the Duke of Marlborough, and the French retired into the Citadel, after burning the Suburbs; upon which the Citadel was ſtormed, and the Garriſon threw down their Arms and begged Quarter. The Confederates found great Plunder here, and particularly 1,500,000 Florins in Money and Bills. Soon after the French took the Chartreuſe. The Duke allowed the Citizens an honourable Capitulation. The French retook the Town in 1705, but were obliged to quit it before they attacked the Citadel, upon the Duke of Marlborough's Approach. In 1713 the Dutch were allowed by the Treaty of Utrecht to Garriſon it with the Conſent of the Biſhop, but have ſince evacuated the ſame according to the Treaty of Baden in 1715. This City is noted for a Council held here by Pope Innocent II. in 1131, when he Crowned the Emperor Lotharius II. Their Chapter, according to their Annals, conſiſted then of the Sons of 9 Kings, 14 Dukes, 29 Counts, and 8 Barons.

The chief Manufactures here are Woollen Stuffs, Fire Arms, Iron Ware, and good Beer. 'Tis an Imperial Town, but under the Protection of the Biſhop. The Citizens are formed into 32 Companies of Freemen, among whom the Goldſmith's is preferred.

The Three States of this Dioceſe are compoſed of the Clergy, Gentry and Commons. No Tax can be raiſed, or any thing of Weight tranſacted without their Conſent. The Dioceſe was much larger formerly than now; yet it ſtill contains, or pretends a Right to 52 Baronies, 18 Wall'd Towns, and 400 well-peopled Villages.

2. Huy, or Hoy, about 15 Miles South-Weſt from Liege, ſuppoſed to have been anciently the Potent City called Beneſactum, but loſt its Juriſdiction when ruined by the Barbarians. 'Tis Capital of the Condroz, is a fair Town in a pleaſant Valley, on the ſmall River Huy, that falls into the Maeſe, over which there is a fine Stone Bridge that joins the two Parts of the Town. It had formerly Counts of its own, the laſt of whom reſigned it to the See of Liege. 'Tis well fortified, has four Churches, and a ſtrong Caſtle on a neighbouring Hill. Moſt of the Inhabitants are employed in the Iron Mines in the Neighbourhood. The French took and diſmantled it in 1675. The Biſhop of Liege reſortified it. The French in 1688 put a Garriſon into it by Force, quitted it afterwards, and took it again in 1693. The Confederates retook it in 1694. The French took it again, and the Duke of Marlborough recovered it in 1703. The French took it again in 1705, but 'twas retaken by the Duke of Marlborough the ſame Year. By the Treaty of Utrecht the States were to Garriſon the ſame, with the Conſent of its Biſhop; but they afterwards evacuated it in 1715, purſuant to the Treaty of Baden.

3. Dinant, an ancient Town on the Eaſt ſide of the Maeſe, 15 Miles South from Namur, and 38 South-Weſt from Liege. 'Tis defended by a ſtrong Caſtle on a ſteep Rock, and has a Bridge over the Maeſe. The Inhabitants live chiefly by Manufactures of Iron, Braſs, and Black Marble. The French diſmantled it in 1554, after which it was more regularly fortified. The French retook it in 1675, but reſtored it by the Treaty of Reſwyck.

4. Valkenburg, or Faquemont, 10 Miles Eaſt from Maeſtricht, and 25 North Eaſt from Liege, upon whoſe Biſhop it formerly depended, though it ſtands properly in the Dutchy of Limburg. It is a neat Town, belongs now to the Dutch, was taken by the French in 1672, who made it very ſtrong; but the Dutch retook it ſoon after, and demoliſhed its Fortifications.

5. Franchimont, or Frankenberg, 8 Miles South-Weſt from Limburg, anciently a large and populous Town, and its Inhabitants reckoned the beſt Soldiers in the Dioceſe. It was ruined by Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, is now only a Village with a ſtrong Caſtle, and gives Title of Marquis to the Biſhop of Liege.

6. Walcourt, on the ſmall River Heure, Capital of the Country belonging to the Biſhop of Liege, betwixt the Sambre and Maeſe, and noted for an Advantage obtained over the French by the Confederates here, ſoon after our Revolution.

7. Tongres, or Tongren, (Lat. Atuatuca Tungrorum, and Tungrorum Oppidum) the ancienteſt Town in theſe Parts, 10 Miles Weſt from Maeſtricht, and 10 North from Liege. 'Twas very conſiderable, and had a large Juriſdiction in the time of the Romans, as appears by Cæſar, Tacitus, &c. There was a pav'd Road of 200 Miles betwixt it and Paris, ſome Parts of which are ſtill to be ſeen; and many Roman Coins and other Antiquities have been found in and about this City: One of them, a remarkable Image, is kept in the Great Church, ſuppoſed to be that of Hercules, who had a Temple here. The Ruins of the old Caſtle, and the old Wall of Biſhop Maternus's Chapel, are ſo antique, that the Citizens pretend they were built 1100 Years before Chriſt. Dr. Northleigh ſays, he obſerved in the Moulding the Images of Sol, Venus, and Jupiter. About half a Mile from the Town there's a Chalybeat Fountain which tinges the Earth and Stones with an Iron Ruſt. Some take it to be that deſcribed by Pliny in his Nat. Hiſt. Lib. 3. Cap. 2. but moſt Antiquaries think it to be the Spaw, which then might be included in the Juriſdiction of this City. Maternus, ſaid to be St. Peter's Diſciple, who converted this Country, is ſuppoſed to have founded the Biſhoprick here, which was firſt tranſported to Maeſtricht, and then to Liege. They ſay it had 100 Churches when deſtroyed by Attila, but has little now of its ancient Luſtre. Their old Church is a handſome Gothic Structure, and has a Dean and 22 Canons. The Jeſuits have a Church here which the French demoliſhed, but is ſince rebuilt. The French took this Town in 1672, and quitted it next Year. They ſurprized it again in 1703, with a Garriſon of 500 Confederates, but abandon'd it in 1705, upon the Duke of Marlborough's Approach.

8. Bouillon, (Lat. Bullonium) on the River Semois, is by ſome reckoned in this Biſhoprick, and by others in the County of Luxemburg. It lies 55 Miles South-Weſt from Liege, and 40 Weſt from Luxemburg. 'Tis famous for the Birth of that great Prince, Godfrey of Bouillon, who mortgaged mortgaged the Town and Dutchy to the Bishop of Liege, to carry on the holy War in 1096. He succeeded so well, that in 3 Years he drove the Turks out of the holy Land, and was made King of Jerusalem, but refused to be Crowned there, saying, He would never wear a Crown of Gold where his Saviour had worn one of Thorns. His Successors endeavoured to make the Bishop of Liege restore it for Money he owed them, but in vain; William, Count of Marck, enjoy'd it by Treaty in 1484; but Charles V. took and restored it to the Bishop. The Mareschal de la Marck seiz'd it in 1552, and the Heiress Charlotte brought it by Marriage to Henry de la Tour d'Auvergne, Viscount of Turenne, so well known by the Name of the Mareschal de Bouillon. She dying without Issue, his Son Maurice, by his Second Wife Elizabeth of Nassau, exchanged it and Sedan with Lewis XIII. of France for the Dutchies of Albret, Chateau, Thierry, and the County of Evreux; so that the Bishop, and the Family of Sedan, have only the empty Title. The Town is strong, pleasantly situated, and defended by a good Castle. The Dukes of this Family were formerly zealous Protestants.

9. Spa, (Lat. Spadanus Vicus) 20 Miles South-East from Liege, 25 South-West from Aix la Chapelle, and about 10 South-West from Limburg. 'Tis a neat Village, in a Valley of the Forest of Ardenne, encompassed with Hills; and on the North it has steep high Mountains. 'Tis chiefly remarkable for its Mineral Waters, which are so much frequented, that this Place has always been allowed a Neutrality in time of War, and the Water is transported in Bottles all over Europe. Dr. Brown, Dr. Northleigh, and others give the following Account of these Fountains. The 4 chief are Geronster, Saviniere, Tonnelet, and Pohunt. The first is in the middle of a thick Wood, a Mile and a half South from the Village. 'Tis the strongest of all, has a Pavilion over it, supported by 4 Stone Pillars, and a green Place clear'd in the Wood about it, with a House for the Patients to warm themselves in cold Weather. It smells strong of Brimstone, causes some to vomit, and passes chiefly by Urine as the rest do. When mixed with Nut Galls, it strikes a Purple, more inclining to Red than our Tunbridge Waters. The Sediment in the Fountain is of a light Blew, but of a dark dirty Red every where else. There's a large Spring in the Wood much like it, but neglected. 2. Saviniere, is a Mile and a half East from Spa, and has a sort of Tower built over it. The Waters are not so strong as the former, but very good against the Stone and Gravel. 3. Tonnelet, lies in a Meadow near the Town, but having no Shades about it, 'tis not so pleasant as the former: 'Tis more nitrous, and causes such a Chilness in the Mouth and Stomach, that few can drink it. 4. Pohunt, lies in the middle of the Town, and most of the Water sent abroad is taken up here, unless there be Orders to the contrary. Dr. Brown says his Host had 30000 empty Bottles ready to fill with this Water, at the proper times, which are the hottest and driest Season in Summer, and the hardest Frost in Winter; at which times the Water is strongest, sparkling and Brisk. 'Tis sometimes called the Fountain of St. Remachus, from a Bishop of Liege, who beautified it with handsom Stone Work. Over its Mouth there's this Inscription: Sanitate Sacrum, i. e. Consecrated to Health; and the following Distich, with an Account of its Virtues.

Obstructum reserat durum terit, humida siccat,
Debile fortificat; si tamen arte bibas.

That is,

It opens Obstructions, dissolves hard Swellings, dries up too much Moisture, and strengthens weak Parts, if drunk by the Advice of Physicians.

Its Waters taste of Vitriol, and if mix'd with Galls, Oak Leaves, Balaustium, &c. it turns Black. Those in the Woods are of a sharper Taste and quicker Operation than our English Chalybeat Waters. Mr. Boyle found by Experiments, that they weigh 2 Grains and 3 Ounces more than Tunbridge, and 4 more than the Islington Waters; yet both less than common Water by several Grains; but an Allowance ought to be given for what they evaporate while bringing hither. They are clearer on the Place than the English Chalybeats, and Dr. Northleigh says, 'tis worth Observation, that tho' by the exactest Scrutiny of Glasses, no visible difference has been hitherto found betwixt the Contexture and the minute Parts of common and Mineral Water; yet by Chymical Precipitations, ordinary Solutions, and sometimes by subsiding, considerable Separations of a different Substance, are made without much difficulty. These Waters are much colder than those commonly mix'd with Rhenish Wine upon the Rhine and Moselle, which generally pass by the Name of Spa Water, and make a strong Ebullition with the Wine; whereas the true Spa, even tho' mixed with Sugar, occasions no such Ebullition, and is always bottled up on the Place in little wicker Flasks, but the other in Stone Bottles. Near the great Well in the Town, there's a Lesser, arched over, and the Water is stronger than the other. There are several Springs both in the Town and Wood near the Chalybeat ones, but have nothing either of their Taste or Virtue. Since an Earthquake here in 1692, 'tis observed, that the Waters are much better, which is supposed to be occasioned by opening a freer Course to the Springs through the Minerals.

10. Horn, a small Town and Castle on the Maese, Capital of its County, which formerly had Lords of its own. It lies overagainst Ruremond in Guelderland.

11. Maseick, a little Town within a quarter of a League of the Maese, about 20 Miles North from Maestricht, and of Importance, because of the Passage there over the River.

12. Loos, Lotz, or Borckloen, a rich little Town, betwixt Tongeren and St. Truyden, Capital of its County, and had formerly Counts of its own, but is now united to the See of Liege, and has a Collegiate Church.

13. St. Truyden, Truysen, or Troen, 20 Miles West from Maestricht. Some take it to have been the Seat of the ancient Centrones, mentioned by Cæsar. Others derive the Name from St. Trudo, martyr'd here in the 7th Century. It has a Monastery of Benedictines, consecrated to his Memory. The Town is defended by a good Wall; one half of it is subject to the Bishop, and the other to the Abbot of the Benedictines.

14. Bilsen, a small Town 7 Miles North-West from Maestricht, destroyed by Fire in 1636, but now well rebuilt, and noted for the Nunnery of Munster Bilsen in its Neighbourhood, which is richly endowed for young Ladies of Quality, who are allowed to marry at Discretion. Among other Rarities here, they shew an Unicorn's Horn near 7 Foot long.

15. Hasselt, a well built and populous Town on the River Demer, 16 Miles North-West from Maestricht, where the Bishop of Liege has a noble Palace in which he sometimes resides. 'Tis noted for the Birth of Hasselius and Titelmannus two eminent Writers, and the rich Cistertian Nunnery of Herkenrod, about 2 Miles North-West from it.

16. Couvin, in the Forest of Lagne, a small City purchased by the See of Liege from the Count of Anhalt. It lies 12 Miles South-West from Charleroy.

17. Verviers, a large well built Town on the same River with Franchimont.

18. The Abbey of Stablo, is one of the States of this Circle, and lies betwixt the Dutchies of Luxemburg and Juliers, and according to some in Luxemburg. 'Tis about 35 Miles South-East from Liege, and 20 South from Limburg. It consists only of the Town of Stablo, and some Villages, which yield the Abbot about 12000 Crowns per Annum.

II. The Circle of LOWER SAXONY.

HAS the German Ocean, part of Denmark and the Baltick on the North, the Circle of Westphalia on the West, that of Upper Saxony on the East, and that of the Lower Rhine and Franconia on the South. 'Tis 190 Miles South and North, and 250 South and West, where longest, but indented on the East side by the Circle of Upper Saxony. The King of Great Britain being now Duke of Bremen, and the King of Prussia as Duke of Magdeburg, are alternately Directors of this Circle, with the Eldest of the Dukes of Brunswick and Lunemburg. The Air of this Country in general is very cold in Winter, but the Soil for most part fruitful in Corn. The People in general are tall, well built, strong, Lovers of good Cheer, and pretty much addicted to Drink. They are in general Lutherans, and there's no Popish Bishoprick neither in this nor Upper Saxony, but that of Hildesheim. The Learned differ about the Origin of the Name of Saxons: Some derive it from the Latin Word Saxum, because Upper Saxony, especially towards Bohemia, abounds with Rocks: Others from the Hardiness of the People; but since they were possessed of the Country long before Rome was built, this Latin Origin is doubtful: Others derive them from the Sasones or Sacæ, a People of Asia: Others from Askenaz, supposed to be the Leader of the Asiatic Colony into Germany: Some derive it from a short Sword and Dagger, which was their peculiar Weapon, and by them called Seax. This they support by the ancient Arms of Saxony, which were 2 cross Hangers or Daggers, but the Elector of Saxony bears those Arms as Hereditary Marshal of the Empire; so that upon the whole, the Name is so ancient, that there's no certainty of its Origin.

The Dominions contained in it are,

I. The Dutchy of HOLSTEIN, which has part of Denmark and of the Baltick on the North, the River Elb on the South and West, the Dutchy of Mecklemburg and the Gulph of Lubec on the East. 'Tis about 85 Miles from South West to North-East, where it runs out in a Point, and the greatest Breadth from East to West is about 90. The Country in general is fruitful, and well seated for Trade. It abounds with Corn, Orchards, black Cattle and Hogs. 'Tis subject to Inundations, and suffered by 'em in 1717. The Inhabitants are for most part strong, couragious and faithful; so that Holstein Glaube, or the Faithful Holsteiner, is a Proverb in those Parts. Some derive the Name from the German Word Holt, i. e. a Forest.

'Tis divided into Holstein Proper, Wagria, Stormar, and Ditmarsh. Holstein Proper is divided into East and West; the former of which belongs to the Duke, and the Second to the King of Denmark.

The chief Places in Holstein Proper are,

1. Kiel, a Town of good Trade, on a Bay of the Baltick, Lat. 54. 22. Long. 10. 22. 45 Miles North of Hamburg, and 17 East from Rensburg. It has a good Harbour, well frequented, is populous, wealthy, and the Place where the States meet. The Town and Harbour are defended by a Castle on a neighbouring Hill. 'Tis divided into New and Old. The new Town is large and pleasant, the Streets being planted with rows of Trees. The old Town lies on a Peninsula, joined to the Continent, where 'tis fortified by deep Ditches, and has fine Walks of Trees on the Harbour. The Duke has a stately Palace here, and established an University in 1669. Here was a Franciscan Monastery, turned to an Hospital at the Reformation. The Town is enriched by its Fairs for Cattle, &c.

2. Rensburg, 17 Miles further West, is the Capital of West Holstein, a small but well built Town, and reckoned the strongest in the Country. It has good Ramparts, and is defended by Morasses on one Side. Here is also a neat Castle.

3. Wilster, a neat Town on a River of the same Name, which falls into the Elbe, about 5 Miles below it. This Town is about 6 Miles North from Gluckstat.

4. Itzehoa, about 4 Miles East from Wilster, 28 North-West from Hamburg, and 35 South-West from Kiel. 'Tis a small Town defended by a Castle, lies at the Foot of a Mountain, and has some Trade by the River Stoer, which fall into the Elbe about 7 Miles lower.

The Province of DITMARSH has the German Sea on the West, and Holstein Proper on the South and East. Some call it Teutsmarsh, from the ancient Teutones, part of whom dwelt here. 'Twas subdued in 1559 by the King of Denmark and the Duke of Holstein, who divided it betwixt them. The King having the North, and the Duke the South Part. 'Tis a fruitful, well watered, and populous Province.

Places of Note are,

1. Meldorp, the Capital, and a Place of good Trade, 25 Miles South West from Rensburg, and 15 Miles North-West from Itzehoa. The Courts of Justice sit here. They have a large ancient Church, with a neat Altar, and fine Paintings.

2. Hayde, a large but poor City, on the Borders of a large Sandy Desart, which runs thro' the middle of the Province, 10 Miles North from Meldorp.

3. Lunden,

3. Lundſen on the Eyder, about 3 Miles Eaſt from Tonning, is a large Town, the moſt Northerly of the Province, belongs to the Duke, and has a good Trade by exporting Beer, which is fam'd in this Country.

The Province of WAGRIA, or WAGERLAND, lies in the Eaſt Part of the Country, has the Baltic on the North and Eaſt, and Holſtein Proper on the Weſt. It was named from the Wagri, its old Inhabitants. The greateſt Part of it belongs to the Duke of Holſtein, and the chief Places are,

1. Oldeſloe on the River Trave, 15 Miles Weſt from Lubeck, and 22 North-Eaſt from Hamburg. 'Tis a fair little Town, and formerly a very flouriſhing Place, but ſuffered ſo much by Wars betwixt the neighbouring Princes, who contended for the Province, that 'tis much decay'd.

2. Segeberg, 8 Miles North from Oldeſloe, upon the ſame River. It had its Name from the Caſtle built on a neighbouring Hill by the Emperor Lotharius about 1134, to check the Sclavonians.

3. Travendael, within a Mile of Segeberg upon the ſame River, noted for ſeveral Treaties betwixt the King of Denmark and the Duke of Holſtein in 1700, &c. for adjuſting the Duke's Rights.

4. Ploen, 12 Miles North-Eaſt from Segeberg, and 12 South-Eaſt from Kiel, on the Front of a Hill on the Banks of the Lake Ploen, which almoſt ſurrounds it, and the Lake is encompaſſed with Wood. 'Tis a Place of great Antiquity, gives Title to a Branch of the Family of Holſtein, is very ſtrong by the neighbouring Marſh and Lake, and defended by a good Caſtle, the Seat of the Prince.

5. Oldenburg, 20 Miles North-Eaſt from Ploen. 'Tis an ancient Town on the River Brockaw, was formerly very conſiderable, and reckoned the Metropolis of the Wagri and Venedi, two Warlike People who poſſeſſed moſt of Mecklemburg. 'Twas the See of a Biſhop founded, ſome ſay, by Charlemain, others, by Otho the Great, which was tranſported to Lubec in 1162. 'Tis decay'd in its Trade and Populouſneſs ſince Queen Margaret of Denmark ſtopped up its Harbour; and it has alſo ſuffered much by Fire.

The Province of STORMAR is the South Part of the Dutchy of Holſtein, has its Name from the numerous Moraſſes on the Banks of the Stoer. The Soil in the main is rich, and improv'd like Holland, with Banks and Dykes to keep out the Sea, which ſometimes overflows the Low Grounds. The Inhabitants have a good Trade for their Product by the Neighbourhood of Hamburg and Lubeck. Moſt of this Province, except Tritow and ſome ſmall Places on the Eaſt, belong to the King of Denmark. Places of Note are,

1. Altena on the Elbe, 2 or 3 Miles Weſt from Hamburg, from whence the Calviniſts come here to Church. 'Tis likewiſe a ſort of Aſylum for Bankrupts from that City. 'Tis a ſmall Town, and had very good Buildings till lately deſtroyed by the Swedes, who in 1713 burnt here 2000 Houſes with ſeveral fine Magazines and the Popiſh Church; but they ſpared the Lutheran and Calviniſt Churches, with about 80 Houſes that lay neareſt to Hamburg. The Swedes demanded 200000 Rixdollars to ſave the Town, and the Inhabitants offered 50000, which, they ſaid, was as much as they were able to pay, but the Swedes would not accept it. The Reaſons pretended by the Swedes were, that the Magazines with Bread and Beer, &c. were preparing there for the Muſcovites and Saxons. 'Tis noted for a Treaty betwixt the late King of Denmark and the Duke of Holſtein-Gottorp, in 1689.

2. Gluckſtadt on the Elbe, about 27 Miles North-Weſt from Hamburg, and upon the ſame ſide of the River. 'Tis well fortified, has fine Walks of Trees on the Ramparts, and the Danes have uſually 2000 Foot in Garriſon. Chriſtian IV. of Denmark fortified it ſo well in 1620, that it held out a Siege of two Years againſt the Emperor Ferdinand II. and obliged him to riſe from before it. Chriſtian V. of Denmark endowed it with great Privileges, by which 'tis grown conſiderable; and 'tis reckoned ſo ſtrong, that it cannot be taken unleſs block'd up and attacked by a Fleet. Here are ſeveral Canals, one of which divides the Town into two Parts, and is croſſed by another at the End of the Market-Place, which is very magnificent. At one Corner of it ſtands the Great Church, where the Calviniſts and Papiſts are each allowed a Chapel. The Harbour is large and deep, and defended by a Tower built at the End of the Canal, which runs from the Town into it, well mounted with Cannon, which command the River.

3. Kremp, or Krempen, about 5 Miles North-Eaſt from Gluckſtadt, on a ſmall River of the ſame Name. 'Tis ſo ſtrong, that 'tis reckoned one of the Keys of Denmark. It held out 13 Months Siege during the Civil Wars of Germany, againſt Count Wallenſteyn the Emperor's General, but at laſt ſubmitted on honourable Terms.

4. Pinnenburg, about 10 Miles North-Weſt from Hamburg. 'Tis Capital of its County, which fell to the Crown of Denmark by the Death of its laſt Earl in 1640.

5. Bredenberg, or Breitenberg, 11 Miles North-Eaſt from Gluckſtadt, and 5 Eaſt from Itzehoa, one of the faireſt little Towns belonging to the King of Denmark, the ancient Seat of the noble Family of Rentzow, and remarkable for the brave Oppoſition it made to Count Wallenſteyn in the German Civil Wars, when he took it by Storm, and put the Garriſon to the Sword.

6. Tritow, 17 Miles North-Eaſt from Hamburg, and 10 South from Oldenhoe. 'Tis a large Town, with a Bailiwick of the ſame Name, which belongs to the Duke.

The HISTORY of HOLSTEIN.

'TWAS formerly a Part of the Cherſoneſus Cimbrica, and called by the Latins Holſatia. It was once poſſeſſed by the Sclavi, who were outed by the Dukes, and had German Colonies planted in their ſtead. The Family of Holſtein is ſo ancient, that moſt German Authors derive it from Wittekind the Great. Adolph I. Earl of Schawenburg, had Part of Holſtein given him, and erected into an Earldom by the Emperor Lotharius, about 1133. His Son Adolph II. ſubdued the whole Country, but Adolph III. was expelled by Canute the King of Denmark. It came at laſt to be divided betwixt the two Sons of Count Gerard I. about 1310. 'Twas invaded by the Swedes, but they were expelled in 1381. Gerard's Line failed in 1459, when the laſt Duke of it made Chriſtian I. of Denmark his Succeſſor, as being deſcended of the Houſe by a Daughter. This Chriſtian was choſen King of Sweden, and got Holſtein erected into a Dutchy by the Emperor Frederick III. His Son John was choſen King of Norway and Sweden, and died in 1521. Chriſtian II. his Succeſſor was dethroned, died in Priſon, and was ſucceeded by Frederick I. Son to Chriſtian I. of Denmark, who eſtabliſhed the Augsburg Confeſſion in his Dominions in 1523. From him the Royal Family of Denmark and that of Holſtein Gottorp are deſcended. His ſecond Son Adolph ſucceeded to Holſtein, and was made Knight of the Garter by Queen Elizabeth in 1560. He conquered Ditmarſh, and obliged the Hamburgers to do him Homage in 1586. Adolph his Son ſucceeded, marry'd a Daughter of Frederick II. of Denmark, and died in 1616. His Son Frederick was famous for his Learning, and the Embaſſy he ſent to Perſia through Muſcovy in 1633. He died in 1659, and was ſucceeded by his Son Chriſtian Albert, who was expelled by his Brother-in-Law the King of Denmark, but reſtored by the Mediation of neighbouring Princes, eſpecially of the Emperor and King William of Great Britain in 1689. He died in 1694, and was ſucceeded by his Son Frederick, who married Hedwig Sophia, Daughter to King Charles XI. of Sweden, was killed at a Battle in Poland in 1702, and ſucceeded by his Son Charles-Frederick the preſent Duke. The King of Denmark invaded it again in 1700, but the Differences betwixt him and the Duke were adjuſted by the Mediation of neighbouring Potentates. Having afterwards repoſſeſſed himſelf of it, becauſe the Duke Adminiſtrator took part with the Swedes, the latter under Count Steinbok drove the Danes out, but were obliged to quit it again to the Northern Allies.

The other Branches of this Family are thoſe of Sonderburg, Ploen, Nortburg, Glucksburg, Beck, Wiſenburg, Frantzhagen, and Sileſia.

II. HAMBURGH formerly belonged to Holſtein, but is now an Imperial City, govern'd by its own Magiſtrate; ſome derive the Name from the Idol, Jupiter Ammon, worſhipped here, till deſtroy'd by Charles the Great. Others, from Hama, a Saxon Champion: Some, from its being a Mart for Hams; and others, from Ham an ancient Foreſt in the Neighbourhood. Some Antiquaries ſay it was a conſiderable Town in the Time of Albion, the General of the Albingi, that it was enlarg'd in 789, by Otho, to whom Charlemain gave the Neighbouring Country, but was ruin'd by the Vandals, and ſoon after rebuilt by that Emperor. Lewis the Pious enlarg'd and made it an Archbiſhoprick about 833, but the See was tranſlated to Bremen, in 1227. Waldemar II. of Denmark, took and gave it to Albert Count of Orlemund, who ſold it back to the Citizens 7 Years after, for 150000 Marks: Adolphus IV. of Holſtein, confirm'd their Liberties, and when that Dutchy fell to the Crown of Denmark, the Hamburgers promis'd to continue their Friendſhip, ſo long as the Daniſh Kings continu'd their Privileges: Chriſtian I. agreed to this, without demanding any Homage, but his Succeſſors frequently endeavour'd to ſubdue the Town. The Dukes of Holſtein pretended to Sovereignty of this City, but the Controverſy was ended by their paying Homage and ſwearing Fealty to the Duke, and King of Denmark, with a Salvo for the Rights of the Emperor and Empire, and their own Liberties. By this they loſt their Vote in the German Dyet, till 1510, when the Emperor Maximilian declar'd it a Free and Imperial City, in a Dyet at Augsburg, where he ſummon'd the Duke to make good, or renounce, His Pretenſions: Since that Time they have been inveſted with a Sovereign Power within their own Juriſdiction, like other Imperial Cities. By a Grant of Frederic I. confirm'd by Ferdinand II. they are exempted from paying Tolls on the Elbe, betwixt the City and the Ocean, for which they are oblig'd to clear the River of Pirates, as they have often done; yet the Kings of Denmark have ſince compell'd them ſeveral Times to pay at his Caſtle of Gluckſtat, which commands the Road: In 1645 they paid him 120000 Crowns to buy off his Demands; in 1679 they paid 220000, and in 1686 the Danes beſieg'd it, but were bought off by a Sum. The continual Jealouſies betwixt Sweden and Denmark, are their chief Security; for when the Danes attack their Ships from Gluckſtat, the Swedes protect them from Stade, on the other Side the River.

The King of Denmark came before it with an Army in 1697, and demanded the ſame Homage which they had formerly engaged themſelves to pay to the Duke of Holſtein in 1611: The Citizens refus'd it, and being aſſiſted by the Dukes of Zell and Hanover, and encourag'd by the Emperor, the King of Denmark was obliged to deſiſt. In 1698 he forbad them to ſubmit to the Imperial Commiſſion, for determining Differences among themſelves, but they would not obey him. The ſame Year he rais'd, by his Emiſſaries, ſuch Commotions in the City, that the Mob uſurp'd the Government, and manag'd all by Tumults; upon which the Emperor ſent his Mandate to the Directors of the Circle, who march'd before it with their Troops; but the mutinous Burghers were ſo obſtinate, that they put themſelves in a Poſture of Defence: Upon which the Directors ſent Propoſals to the Deputies of the City, threatning, that if they did not ſubmit, they would reduce them by Force. This brought on a Conference, wherein the Mutineers inſiſted upon the Security of ſome of their fiery Lutheran Clergy, particularly one Krumholtz, a great Enemy to the Calviniſts, and the chief Incendiary; but the Directors inſiſting on the contrary, and threatning to attack the Town next Day, the Majority admitted 2000 Foot and 300 Horſe, of the Troops of the Circle, with ſeveral Pieces of Cannon, who ſeized Krumholtz and ſome of the other Mutineers. The King of Denmark, at the ſame time, was in Motion with his Troops, claim'd the Town as his own by Hereditary Right, and forbad them to ſubmit to the Imperial Commiſſion, on Pain of his Diſpleaſure: but by the Intervention of the Miniſters of the Emperor, Great Britain, Holland, and the Princes of the Circle, the Affair was adjuſted, and the Inhabitants oblig'd to pay 200000 Crowns for the Charge of the Troops of the Circle. The Citizens continuing tumultuous, Part of the Troops and the Imperial Commiſſaries continu'd in the City till October 1710; which being very burthenſome to the City, the Britiſh Miniſter did, by Queen Anne's Order, deliver a Memorial to the Commiſſaries, deſiring that the Affair might be determin'd. They anſwer'd, that one half of the Troops ſhould march out by the middle of November, and the reſt as ſoon as the new Regulations for the Militia of the City, &c. ſhould be approv'd. In the mean Time Krumholtz, the chief Incendiary, was ſentenced to be degraded, and to be a Priſoner for Life at Rizbuttel, a Fort belonging to Hamburgh, at the Mouth of the Elbe; and others of the Mutineers were alſo puniſh'd. In 1712, the King of Denmark came before the Place with his Troops, but agreed to take 246000 Rixdollars, for his Pretenſions, being told by the Britiſh Miniſter, that Queen Anne would not ſuffer the City to be oppreſſed.

This City lies Lat. 53. 40. Long. 10. 15. 40 Miles South-Weſt from Lubeck, and 70 North-Eaſt from Bremen. It is one of the richeſt, and has long been the greateſt Mart in Germany; their Haven being crowded with Ships, and their Exchange with Merchants. 'Tis naturally ſtrong, a great Part of it lying upon Iſlands. 'Tis well fortify'd, after the modern Way, with ſtrong Ramparts and Outworks, but not fac'd with Stone. It conſiſts of the old and new Town, ſeparated by a Wall, which is well fortify'd: From the Top of the Towers and Walls there's a pleaſant Proſpect every Way: It has only four great Gates, but ſeveral leſſer ones: The Tide runs in Canals thro' moſt of the chief Streets; the Bridges on which, and thoſe that joyn the Iſlands, are almoſt as many in Number as thoſe at Amſterdam; the Tide runs 4 Leagues above the City, which makes 22 German Leagues from the Mouth of the River, ſo that the Elbe, in this Reſpect, exceeds all the Rivers in Europe, and the Thames comes next to it. The Town is frequently damag'd by Spring Tides; and many Houſes and Families have been ruin'd by Tempeſts, which drive the Sea up into their Channels: They ſuffer'd much this Way in 1651, and in 1717. The Streets are generally crooked, but otherwiſe out-ſtrip all Germany for high and ſtately Houſes, moſt of them built of Brick, many of 'em have fine Frontiſpieces and large Halls. The Senate-Houſe is a noble Structure adorn'd with the Statues of the Nine Worthies: Their Exchange is alſo fine, but much ſhort of ours in London. 'Tis noted for its fair Churches and lofty Steeples cover'd with Copper; their chief is St. Peter's, which was their Cathedral: They have ſtill a Sort of Dean and Chapter, from whoſe Court there lies no Appeal, but to the Imperial Chamber: Many of the Earls of Schawenburg and Holſtein are bury'd here, and their Names, after thoſe of Charles the Great, and Lewis the Pious, are writ in a fair Catalogue, with their other Benefactors, and hung up in the Body of the Church. St. Catharine's Church has a ſtately Front, and on the Top of the Steeple a Crown richly gilt; the Pulpit is of white Marble curiouſly carved and adorn'd with Figures and other Ornaments of Gold; the Organ is reckon'd one of the beſt in Europe, and plays above 6000 Notes: The Church of St. Nicholas has a Steeple ſupported by large gilt Globes. The Steeple of St. Michael's is 400 Foot high: They have many other fine Churches, and in each of them they keep a Regiſter of the Poor and Diſtreſs'd, who have a Weekly Allowance of Money, and an Annual one for Cloaths and Fewel. Their Hoſpitals are, 1. That call'd the Oldeſt, where 114 Poor, old, blind, and dumb People, are maintain'd. 2. That of St. George, where there's a great Number of Poor, with Servants and a Miniſter to attend them, and it ſerves for a Pariſh-Church to ſuch as dwell in the Suburbs, and neighbouring Villages. 3. St. Job's, for the Maintenance and Care of poor People that have the French Diſeaſe. 4. That of the Orphans, where Abundance of poor Citizens Children are bred up with Nurſes to look after 'em, and a School with five Maſters to teach Reading, Writing, and Accompts; the Annual Revenue is 210000 Crowns; ſometimes they have 310 Infants abroad at nurſe, who are taken into the Houſe as ſoon as able to dreſs themſelves: Such Boys as are capable are put out and maintain'd at the Univerſity, the reſt are put out to Trades, and the Girls, after they can read, ſpin, knit, &c. are ſent to Service. 5. The Peſt-Houſe, where thoſe who have the Plague, or other infectious Diſtempers, are taken care of; the Skill and Diligence of their Surgeons, Phyſicians, &c. is ſuch, that People of the beſt Rank come hither for Cure, but pay for it to the Houſe. 6. A large and ſumptuous Hoſpital, where is a Phyſician and Surgeon, with neceſſary Medicines, for poor Strangers and Travellers that fall ſick. 7. Another large one, for maim'd, ancient, and decay'd Mariners, and the poor Widows and Orphans of ſuch as have loſt their Parents or Husbands at Sea. Beſides theſe, they have many leſſer Hoſpitals for certain Numbers of poor Widowers, Widows, and Orphans, &c. and great Numbers of Free-Schools, where the Children of poor Burghers have their Education, Books, and Cloaths, till fit for the Univerſity, or Trades. They have alſo a Workhouſe for ſuch as want Employment, and for obliging ſturdy Vagrants, or looſe Perſons, to work, on pain of Correction. The Motto over the Door of the Workhouſe, is, Labore nutrior, I am maintain'd by my Labour; and that over the Houſe of Correction, Labore plector, I am puniſh'd by Labour.

For ſpeedy Reparation of Loſs by Fire, they have formed Societies, on certain Conditions, and any Man being at Liberty to enter into all thoſe Societies, the Sufferers frequently get more than their Damages.

By Means of the Elbe, they ſupply moſt of the Empire with foreign Commodities, which makes their Harbour frequented by Ships from the moſt conſiderable Parts of the known World. One of the chief Branches of their Trade is with England, and 'tis ſuppoſed they vend annually 100000 Pounds-worth of our Woollen Manufacture: On this Account they allow our Hamburgh-Company greater Privileges than other Strangers; ſo that all Suits, wherein they are immediately concerned, are tried before the Engliſh Reſident, in a ſtately Hall built by the Company: They are alſo allowed the free Exerciſe of their Worſhip, but others, who are not Lutherans, muſt go to Attena. Their chief Home-Commodity is Beer, which employs vaſt Numbers of People, is reckon'd the beſt in Germany, exported to many Places, and particularly to Lubeck and Frankfort, on the Main, where 'tis ſold dearer than the beſt Rheniſh. The City is well ſupply'd with Sea and freſh-Water Fiſh; and they have Fruit, Herbs, Roots, &c. in great Plenty, from their Gardens without the Walls.

Their Government is by 4 Burgomaſters, and 20 Skepens, or Aldermen: They us'd formerly to be Civilians, but now are choſen out of the Merchants and Tradeſmen: They have alſo 12 Common-Council Men, or Senators, whom they call Oberalten, or chief Elders, who, with the Burgomaſters, are choſen for Life, and take Care of Publick Affairs; but in extraordinary Caſes they call 60 more grave Citizens, named Burgeralten, or the Elders of the City, and if they can't determine the Matter, 'tis referr'd to a general Meeting of the Freemen; but in Caſe of inteſtine Broils, which they can't compoſe among themſelves, the Emperor and Empire ſends the Troops of the neighbouring Circle, to ſuppreſs the Seditious, as they did ſome Years ago. When a Citizen dies, he muſt leave the 10th of his Eſtate to the City; and Foreigners not naturalized, muſt pay a certain Sum annually, for Liberty to trade.

Their uſual Way of Reckoning here, is, by what they call Stivers, Lubs, 48 of which make their Dollar, or 4 s. 6 d. Sterling.

Their Territory is a ſmall Part of Stormar, that lies next to the City; it has ſeveral conſiderable Villages and Noblemen's Seats; they have likewiſe many little Iſlands in the Elbe, formerly ſubject to neighbouring Princes; they have alſo the ſtrong Caſtle of Ritzenbuttel, about 50 Miles below the Town, on a Point of Land betwixt the Mouths of the Elbe and Weſer; below this, to the North-Weſt, on an Iſland of the ſame Point, they have a conſiderable Fortreſs, called New-werk, with a convenient Harbour for Merchant-men. The Cuſtom Houſe of Tollen-Spikker, belongs to them, where all Paſſengers pay Toll for themſelves, and what they carry. There are other places of leſs Note equally ſubject to this City and Lubeck; their Harbour is ſo commodious, and the River ſo deep, that large Merchant-Ships come up to the Walls, but thoſe of an extraordinary Size anchor at the new Mills 4 Miles below the Town, where they unload in ſmaller Veſſels. This City is able to arm 15000 Men, and has a conſtant Garriſon of 1800. Albertus Krantzius, the famous German Hiſtorian, and Peter Lambecius, who wrote the Antiquites of this City, were born here.

III. LUBECK is alſo in the Boundaries of Holſtein, and by ſome reckon'd to the Dutchy of Mecklemburg, but being now an Imperial City, 'tis numbred among the States of this Circle. It lies 90 Miles North-Eaſt from Hamburg, and 38 Eaſt from Oldeſlo, Lat. 54. and Long. 11. 'Tis an ancient Town; the Foundation of it is claimed by the Poles to one of their Kings, who conquered this Part of the Country; but the Germans aſcribe it to a King of the Vandals in 1040. It has been under ſeveral Maſters, as the Saxons, Danes, and Holſteiners; but the Emperor Frederick II. reſtored it its Privileges in 1209, and it has enjoyed them ever ſince. The Biſhoprick of Oldenburg in Wagerland was tranſlated hither in 1163, and has been for moſt part poſſeſſed by a Son of Holſtein ſince 1596, who is called Duke of Utin, the Place of his Reſidence, about 16 Miles from hence. The Chapter reſides in the Town, and his Revenue is about 10000 Crowns per Annum; but the Biſhoprick being in a manner ſecularized, the Chapter has only a Shadow of Election, eſpecially ſince the Reformation, which was introduced in 1561. In 1705 there was a great Controverſy about the Succeſſion to this Biſhoprick betwixt the King of Denmark, who would have advanced his Brother Prince Charles, and the Duke of Holſtein, who was for advancing a Brother of his; but 'twas at laſt concluded in favour of the Prince of Holſtein, according to an Agreement made with the Chapter in 1647. It made a brave Defence againſt the Danes in 1500 and 1519; and before the time of Guſtavus Erickſon, King of Sweden, it held the Balance betwixt the two Northern Crowns, and was famous for its Commerce, of which Hamburg and Wiſmar have now a great Part. 'Tis chiefly noted for the College of the Hans Towns, which meet here once in three Years. 'Tis proper here to give an Account of them. They begun a League for mutual Defence and carrying on their Commerce in 1164. They conſiſted of betwixt 70 and 80 in ſeveral Countries. The firſt where they eſtabliſhed their Factories were London, Bruges, Norwerg, and Novogorod; and the chief of them included in the firſt League beſides them, were Antwerp, Dort, Amſterdam, Rotterdam, Oſtend, Dunkirk, Calais, Roan, St. Malo, Bourdeaux, Bayonne, Marſeilles, Barcelona, Seville, Cadiz, Lisbon, Leghorn, Meſſina, and Naples, beſides others of leſs Note. In 1428 they ſet out 250 Ships of War againſt Erick X. of Denmark; but France, Spain, Denmark, Sweden and England, &c. having broke off the Towns of their Dependance from the League, thoſe of the Empire continued in it, ſince which Lubeck has been the chief, and keeps their common Stock raiſed by Contributions, with their Records and Alliances. The other chief Towns of the preſent League are Colen, Brunſwick, Dantzick, Hamburg, Roſtoc, Wiſmar, Lunenburg, Stetin, Gryphswald, Weſel, Oſnabrug, Dortmund, Paderborn, Northauſen, Ruremond, Bremen, Magdeburg, Hilderſheim, Goſlar, Minden, Emmeric, Coln, Thorn, Coningsberg, Riga; beſides others of leſs Note. The Power of calling the Aſſemblies is in Lubec, Colen, Brunſwick and Dantzick, who give Notice of it to the reſt.

No City in the North of Germany is equal to this for Beauty, Uniformity of Buildings, and pleaſant Gardens and Groves. The Streets are generally ſtraight, and ſeveral of them adorned with Rows of Lime-Trees on each ſide. Moſt of it being burnt in 1238, the Senate made an Order, that none ſhould be built of Timber, or covered with Thatch; ſo that they are now built with Brick, many of them adorned with Sculpture, and they are generally high and covered with Tiles. They have about 20 Churches well built, with high Steeples and Spires. The Cathedral dedicated to St. Mary is of as good Architecture as moſt in Germany. Here is a publick Conduit, from whence Water is conveyed in Pipes to every private Houſe, which Example has ſince been followed by London and other great Cities. The Town is large, and well fortified by Baſtions, Faus-Brayes, and a deep and large Ditch; but they have no Counterſcarp or Halfmoon, but one at the Gate of Hamburg. The Haven is defended by Ramparts, and capable of great Ships which come up the Trave about 10 Engliſh Miles from the Sea, which advances their Trade ſo much, that this Town and Hamburg are reckoned to employ 600 Ships of their own continually. Their chief Home Commodity is Beer, which is very much valued, much of it tranſported, and is uſed medicinally for Wounds and Bruiſes. Their Government is by 12 Burgomaſters and 16 Senators, whoſe Office is for Life. The former are either Doctors of the Law, or grave Citizens, and the latter are half Lawyers, half Gentlemen. Their Territory is about 60 Miles in Compaſs, and contains ſome ſmall Towns. They keep a Garriſon of 7 or 800 Men, and take Place in the Diet alternately with Worms. 'Tis remarkable for a Treaty concluded in 1629 betwixt the Emperor and the King of Denmark.

IV. The Dutchy of SAX-LAWENBURG has Holſtein on the Weſt, Lubeck on the North, Mecklenburg on the Eaſt, and Lunenburg on the South. Moſt of it lies North of the Elbe, but it has a ſmall Tract of Land Eaſt of Lunenburg, and the Diſtrict of Hadelen, the North part of the Dutchy of Bremen, on the South of that River. It was anciently Part of the Dutchy of Saxony, and poſſeſſed by a Branch of that Family, ly, from 1260 to 1689. The laſt of them died without Iſſue, upon which it was claimed by the Elector of Saxony, the Prince of Anhalt, and the laſt Duke of Lunenburg-Zell; but the latter taking Poſſeſſion, the Elector of Saxony quitted his Pretenſions in 1697, and the Duke of Wolfenbuttel had 20000 Crowns for his; ſo that it now belongs to King George of Great Britain, as Heir to the Duke of Zell. In 1716 the Emperor granted King George another Voice in the Dyet for this Dutchy. That Part North of the Elbe is 32 Miles South and North, and 26 where broadeſt in the South Parts; but it contracts gradually towards the North.

Lawenburg, the Capital, which gave it Name, lies at the Conflux of the Stekenitz and Elbe, in the South-Eaſt Corner of the Dutchy, 30 Miles South-Eaſt of Hamburg, and 18 North-Eaſt of Lunenburg. It was built by Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony, and from him called Lionburg; but being much damaged by War, Bernard Prince of Anhalt rebuilt and enlarged it. The Town is ſmall, but populous, has a good Trade, and is defended by a ſtrong Caſtle on a neighbouring Hill, over againſt the ſtrong Fortreſs of Artemberg on the other ſide the Elve, in the Dutchy of Lunenburg.

Other Places of Note are,

1. Mollen, 14 Miles farther North, noted for the Quarrels about it betwixt the Dukes of this Country and the City of Lubeck.

2. Wittenberg, a pretty neat Town with a Caſtle near the Elbe, Weſt from Lawenburg.

3. Ratzeburg, on a great Lake of the ſame Name, 15 Miles North from Lawenburg. Henry the Lion made it a Biſhoprick, Suffragan of Bremen; but it was Seculariz'd by the Treaty of Munſter, the Biſhoprick given to the Duke of Mecklenburg-Swerin, and the Town and Caſtle to the Duke of Lawenburg. 'Twas ſeiſed and fortified by the Duke of Lunenburg in 1689, beſieged in September 1693, by the Danes; but upon an Agreement next Month both the Lunenburghers and Danes quitted the Town, and 'twas diſmantled, but reſtored in 1700 to the Duke, who refortified it, ſo that 'tis now a very ſtrong Place. In 1701 the Duke of Mecklenburg-Swerin gave this Biſhoprick to the Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, after a long Diſpute. 'Tis Capital of a ſmall Principality of the ſame Name, and was the Burial-Place of the Dukes. The Town lies on an Iſland in the Lake, is joined to the Land by a Bridge, and defended by a Fort on the Land ſide.

This Country is much of the ſame Nature with Holſtein, and is well ſupplied with Wood and Water. It embraced Lutheraniſm in 1566.

V. The Dutchy of MECKLENBURG has Holſtein and Lawenburg on the Weſt, Pomerania on the Eaſt, the Baltick on the North, the Dutchy of Lunenburg and part of the Marquiſate of Brandenburg on the South. 'Tis 120 Miles Eaſt and Weſt where longeſt, and 30 South and North where broadeſt. The Name comes from Mecklenburg, a ſmall Village near Wiſmar, but formerly a large Merchant-Town, as the Name ſignifies, and the Ruines are to be ſeen for ſeveral Miles round, it having been the Seat of the Vandal Princes. This Country has more of Profit than Pleaſure, abounds with Corn, Fruit, Fiſh and Fowl, but having many large Lakes, the Air is unhealthful in Summer, and cold in Winter. The Lakes abound ſo with Fiſh, that at the Marriage of one of their Dukes, 5000 freſh Breams, taken out of the Lake of Swerin, were ſerved up at Table. They are well ſupplied with other Fiſh by the Baltick, the Elbe, and many ſmall Rivers. This Dutchy was ſequeſter'd into the Hands of the Directors of the Circle in 1699. The ſame Year the Dyet ordered, that the Duke ſhould lay no more Conſtraints upon his Subjects; that the Money he had levied on them by Military Execution, &c. ſhould be carried into the Publick Treaſury; that he ſhould reſtore things to their former State, aboliſh all Innovations, and give Security to obſerve this Sentence, on condition that his Subjects ſhould preſent him 35394 Rixdollars to maintain the Fortreſs of Domitz. The Difference between the Dukes of Mecklemburg-Guſtraw and Strelitz was adjuſted in 1701 by a Treaty betwixt them both at Hamburg, and ratified by the Emperor; purſuant to which the Dutchy of Guſtraw was to remain entire to the Duke of Swerin, who granted to the Duke of Strelitz the Biſhoprick of Ratzeburg ſeculariz'd, the Diſtrict of Stargard, and 40000 Crowns per Annum from the Tolls, the Sovereignty of the Lands that fell to his Share, and the Right of a Seat and Voice in the Dyet of the Empire. In 1708 a Treaty was renewed betwixt the Duke of Mecklemburg-Swerin and the King of Pruſſia, according to former Treaties of 1441 and 1693, by which the two Families were to ſucceed one another in caſe of Failure of Male Iſſue; upon which the King of Pruſſia inſerted the Title and Arms of Mecklemburg amongſt his own. In 1709 the Nobility of this Dutchy fearing that their Duke, now ſupported by his Alliance with the King of Pruſſia, would totally ſuppreſs their Liberties, which he had already very conſiderably incroach'd upon, obtained a Commiſſion from the Emperor, call'd Protectorium & Conſervatorium, directed to the Elector of Hanover, the King of Sweden, and the Duke of Wolfembuttle, as Directors of the Circle of Lower Saxony, whereby they were impowered to preſerve the Nobility's Rights, and protect them againſt all Incroachments. The Duke and the King of Pruſſia remonſtrated againſt it, and at the ſame time the Nobility publiſhed their Reaſons for it, with an Account of their Oppreſſions. The Duke came to a ſort of Submiſſion, and promiſed to ſend away a Regiment of Pruſſian Dragoons, which was ſent to aſſiſt him. The Duke continues however to oppreſs his Nobility, which has forced moſt of them to quit his Country. The Directors of the Circle received freſh Orders in 1718 to put the Imperial Mandate in Execution againſt him, but upon the Death of Charles XII. of Sweden, on whom he relied, he is like to come to an amicable Accommodation with his Subjects. This Prince put away his Wife ſome Years ago for her Infidelity, and, tho' ſhe be not divorced, married the Dutcheſs of Courland, Niece to the Czar, in 1716, kept Muſcovite Troops in his Country, and terribly oppreſs'd his Subjects, who had formerly ſuffered very much in the War of the North, and particularly by the Swedes; but the Troops of the Circle reduced him to Reaſon in 1719.

Some fabulous Antiquaries derive their Dukes from one of Alexander the Great's Companions, who, they ſay, was the firſt Duke of the Heruli in theſe Parts, and founded the Town of Mecklemburg 300 Years before Chriſt. The Heruli drove out the Angli and Varini, the ancient Inhabitants. The Atlas Hiſtorique ſays, there is nothing of their Genealogy certain till the time of Udo King of the Heruli, from whom comes the preſent Line. They were called Kings of the Heruli Obotrites till 1450, that the Duke of Saxony and Marquis of Brandenburg forced them to lay it aſide and take that of Duke. Some of them were great Princes, and Albert II. was choſen King of Sweden, but obliged to renounce by Margaret of Denmark, who took him Priſoner. The Branches of the Vandals and Stargard were united in that of Mecklemburg about 1429. Lutheraniſm was introduced here by Duke John Albert in 1547. He gave the Revenues of the Abbeys to the Univerſities of Roſtock. Since then they have been divided into the Branches of Guſtrow, Swerin, Strelitz, that of Guſtrow was extinguiſhed in 1688, which occaſioned Differences about the Succeſſion betwixt the Deſcendants of the Line of Strelitz.

The Places of Note are,

1. Wiſmar, 35 Miles Eaſt of Lubeck, on a Bay of the Baltick, Lat. 54. near Long. 12. ſuppoſed to be built out of the Ruins of Mecklenburg, about 1250. Henry of Mecklenburg called Hieroſolymitanus, from his great Exploits in the Holy Land, modelled its Government in 1266 after that of Lubeck, ſo that it ſoon became one of the chief Hans Towns, the Harbour for their Men of War, and was ſtrongly fortified. 'Twas taken by the Imperialiſts in 1629 during the Civil Wars, but retaken by the Duke of Mecklenburg and the Swedes in 1632, and given to the latter by the Treaty of Munſter. Chriſtian V. of Denmark took it afterwards, and reſtored it by Treaty in 1679, but it was left in the Hands of the Danes till the Arrears due by the Swedes were paid. In 1690 the Magazines being blown up by Lightning, moſt of the new City was deſtroy'd, with one of the Gates, the Arſenal, and many other Churches and Houſes were damaged, 30 People were killed, and 200 wounded. In 1711 it was beſieged by the Danes, and ſurrender'd to the Allies in 1716, who found in it 300 Cannon, a vaſt Quantity of Bombs, Grenadoes and Ammunition. Next Year its Fortifications were demoliſhed. The Harbour is reckoned the beſt in Germany. The Town lies among Fens, is well fortified, and has a ſtrong Citadel with five regular Baſtions.

2. Roſtock, an ancient City, walled by Burevinus, King of the Heruli, about 1160, and modelled by the Laws of Lubeck, as appears by its Charter dated in 1218. It lies 35 Miles North-Eaſt from Wiſmar, upon a Bay of the Baltick, is a Hans Town, and divided into the Old, New, and Middle City, conſiſting of 14 Streets, and many thouſands of ſtately Houſes. They value themſelves on ſeven times ſeven remarkable things; viz. 7 Doors in St. Mary's Church; 7 large Streets that center in the great Market; 7 Gates; 7 Bridges over the River Warna; 7 Towers on the Town Hall; 7 Great Bells belonging to the Town Cocks, which chime at certain Hours; and 7 vaſt Lime-Trees in their common Garden. Their chief Commodity is Beer, which they export in great Quantities. They have 250 privileged Brewers, who brew as many thouſand Tuns per Annum, beſides what particular Perſons brew for their own Uſe. This Town and Dutchy was ſeiſed by the Imperialiſts in 1629, but retaken by the Swedes in 1631. Moſt of the Town was burnt in 1677, but is ſince rebuilt. The River is navigable to the Walls, but large Ships come no farther than Warnemunde, a little Town 7 Miles lower, at the Mouth of the River, where the Swedes built a Fort after the Treaty of Munſter, and demanded a Toll of all Ships, which much leſſened the Trade of the Town. The Univerſity here is one of the beſt and largeſt in Germany, was founded in 1419; and the City being at half the Charge, have the Choice of half the Profeſſors, who are 18, and their Rector Magnificus is choſe every half Year by turns out of them. He appoints their Meetings, takes Care of their Treaſury, and in great Matters is aſſiſted by a Promoter choſe out of the Eldeſt Profeſſors. The Biſhop of Swerin was by the Charter made perpetual Chancellor, and deputed one of the Eldeſt Profeſſors, as Vice-Chancellor. The Government of this City is by 24 Aldermen choſen out of the Nobility, Univerſity-Men and Merchants. Four of them are Burgomaſters, two Chamberlains, two Stewards for the River. The Chamberlains collect and pay the Publick Money. The Stewards take Care of the Haven at Warnemunde, and cleaning the River, and the Judges determine all Cauſes Civil and Criminal. Theſe 24 are called the Upper Houſe, determine all Controverſies finally, coin Money, and chuſe Officers; but on extraordinary Matters of Common Concern there is a Lower Houſe of 100 Common Council-Men, choſen out of the Trades, and are ſummoned to give their Opinion. In 1712 this Place was ſeiſed by the Swedes, on Pretence of having furniſhed their Enemies with Proviſions; and in 1715 the Duke of Mecklemburg being not ſtrong enough to defend it againſt the Danes, agreed they ſhould have a Garriſon and Magazine here, but have nothing to do with the Civil Government.

3. Swerin, on a great Lake of the ſame Name, 12 Miles South from Wiſmar, and 40 South Weſt from Roſtock. 'Tis Capital of the Principality of that Name, was fortified by Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony, in 1163, when he beſtowed it with its Territory on Guncelme, one of his Generals, whom he made Earl of Swerin. He was ſucceeded by his Son Henry, the Favourite to the Emperor Otho IV. He defeated and took Waldemar of Denmark in his own Kingdom, and brought him Priſoner to the Caſtle of Danneburg, till his Subjects redeemed him by a large Ranſom. This Town and Earldom came to Albert Duke of Mecklemberg in 1355, by marrying the Heireſs. The Biſhoprick was tranſlated from Mecklemburg to this City in 1062. Their firſt Biſhop Johannes Scotus was murdered by the Wendiſh Apoſtates in 1066. Henry the Lion built and endowed a new Cathedral, and drove the Pagan Mecklemburgers by Thouſands into a Place of the Lake, where they were baptized by Biſhop Benno, or Bruno, from whence that Part of the Lake is ſtill called the Font. The Duke of Mecklemburg has a Caſtle here, in which he impriſoned the Burgomaſters of Roſtock in 1716, and after ſix Months Impriſonment freed them, on renouncing their Privileges and Liberties upon Oath.

4. Butzow, a conſiderable Town and Fort, 21 Miles North-Eaſt from Wiſmar, was the uſual Reſidence of the Biſhops till the Biſhoprick was ſecularized by the Biſhop of Munſter, and given to the Duke of Mecklemburg-Swerin, who reſides here.

5. Guſtraw, 35 Miles South-Eaſt from Wiſmar, and 20 South from Roſtock, is a well fortified Town and Caſtle, and was the Reſidence of the Duke of Mecklemburg-Guſtraw, whoſe Line failed in 1688. In Feb. 1697, upon the Death of the Duke of Guſtraw, the Emperor adjudged the City of Guſtraw and its Dependencies to the Duke of Mecklemburg-Swerin, who reinforced the Garriſon; but the Troops of Sweden and Lower Saxony refuſed to quit the Place. The Duke however continued in the Town till April, when 3000 of the Troops of the Directors of the the Circle attacked and obliged him to ſurrender, and forced the Duke and the Imperial Miniſter to quit the Place, into which they put a Garriſon, and deſired that the Emperor wou'd name Commiſſioners to take the Adminiſtration upon them till the Succeſſion was ſettled, which was in 1701.

6. Domitz, on the Elbe, 30 Miles South from Swerin. 'Tis a ſtrong Caſtle where the Duke makes Ships pay Toll.

7. Travemund, is reckoned in this Dutchy, tho' it depends on Lubeck. It lies on the Weſt ſide of the Mouth of the Trave, 11 Miles North-Eaſt from Lubeck, and 40 Weſt from Wiſmar. 'Tis a ſmall Town, and fortify'd with 4 good Baſtions. It was ſeiz'd by the Czar in 1617, in order to ſecure Tranſports for his Troops, but he was perſwaded to quit it. There are ſeveral other Towns of leſs Note, which don't merit a Deſcription.

8. Gadebuſh, 22 Miles Weſt from Wiſmar, remarkable for a great Victory obtained near it by the Swedes over the Danes in 1712.

VI. The Dutchy of BREMEN has the River Weſer on the Weſt, the Elbe and part of Lunenburg on the Eaſt, the German Sea on the North, and part of Oldenburg and Verden on the South. The greateſt Extent from South to North is about 78 Miles, and from Eaſt to Weſt about 45. The Country is divided into, 1. The Land of Bremen, properly ſo called, which lies ſome Miles round the City. 2. Wurſterland, along the Coaſt from the Weſer to the Mouth of the Elbe. 3. Hadeland, or Hadelen, the North part of the Dutchy, on the Mouth of the Elbe, part of which belongs to Hamburg, and part to the Dutchy of Saxe-Lawenburg, where the Caſtle of Otterndorf commands moſt of the Diſtrict; ſo that thoſe of Bremen have little here, but the Village and Caſtle of Nyenhuys, on the Mouth of the Oſte. 4. Kedingerland, in which lies the City of Stade. 5. Altland, a pleaſant and fruitful Country about 14 Engliſh Miles long. Betwixt Bremen and Stade, the Country is deſart and ſandy, but the other Parts towards the Rivers are very pleaſant, and abound with Fields, Meadows, and Orchards. The People in general are as brave as any in the Empire, and formerly relied ſo much on their Valour, that they ſcorn'd to build any Strength. When it was ſubdued by Charles the Great, he is ſaid to have imployed Willibaldus, an Engliſhman, ſent over by the Archbiſhop of York, to convert them. He was their firſt Biſhop, died there in 790, and they pretend ſtill to ſhew his Tomb. The Emperor Ludovicus Pius gave this Country to Anſgarius, the firſt Archbiſhop of Bremen and Hamburg, whom he made Metropolitan of Denmark, and all the other known Countries to the North. He died in 865, and his Day is as much obſerved by the common People as that of Chriſtmas. The Biſhop of Colen controverted the Primacy of this See, and alledged it was ſubject to him, but was oppoſed in it by the Emperor. Denmark and Sweden were made Independent upon this See when Eric King of Denmark got Lunden made an Archbiſhoprick. This Country continued ſubject to its Archbiſhops till 1644, that by the Treaty of Weſtphalia, it was, together with the Biſhoprick of Verden, ſeculariz'd, and given to the Crown of Sweden, for reſtoring the Peace of the Empire, and giving up other Places they had taken during the War. They had frequent Wars with their Archbiſhop, in defence of their Liberties, and pleaded for the ſame Exemptions when made ſubject to the Swedes, who continued their Maſters till the preſent War, when the King of Denmark conquered this Country and Verden in 1712, ſold them in 1715 to our King George, to whoſe Dominions they lie contiguous, and his Family have formerly been poſſeſſed of 'em. This Country ſuffered much by Inundations in 1717.

Places of Note are,

1. Bremen, which gives Name to the Dutchy, and lies on the North ſide of the Elbe, Lat. 10. Long. 9. 10. about 50 Miles South-Weſt from Hamburg, 60 from Lunenburg, and 68 South-Eaſt from Embden. Some think it to be Ptolomy's Phabiranon. 'Tis ſo ancient, that Geographers can't agree when it was founded. The old Town is ſaid to have been Wall'd in the time of Henry the Fowler, about 1000, when he ordered other Towns in theſe Parts to be fortify'd againſt the Vandals. It had been a free City long before, as appears by the Statua Rolandina, in the Market-place, with an Inſcription in old Saxon Verſe, thus, I am a Teſtimony of the Liberty which Charles the Great and many other Emperors have granted this City, for which I adviſe you to return God thanks. The People have a Tradition, that this Roland was a Giant, Nephew to Charles the Great, and one of his Generals, who conquered much of this Country; upon which he ordered his Statue to be ſet up in the noted Towns he ſubdued, and gave them larger Privileges than others, on condition of keeping up thoſe Statues. Goldaſtus thinks, that 'tis an Appellative Name, denoting Cities on the Borders of the Empire, where Courts of Juſtice were eſtabliſhed, and that their Authority was repreſented by thoſe Gigantic Statues. The firſt great Privileges of this Town were granted by the Emperor Henry V. in 1111, as appears by their Charter, for their brave Atchievements in the Holy War by Sea and Land. That call'd St. Stephenſtadt was built long after the main Body of the Town. The Newſtadt was built not much above 100 Years ago, and with the Suburbs of St. Nicholas, which make a conſiderable Part of the City, was not Wall'd in till 1623. 'Tis a free Imperial City, and the 3d of the Hans Towns. 'Tis divided into the old and new Town by the Weſer. The new Town lies on the South ſide, and is joined to the Old by Wooden Bridges, on the largeſt of which there's an Engine that raiſes Water, and diſtributes it all over the City. The Streets of the old Town are large, and centre in the Market-place, where they have a Town-houſe of fine modern Architecture with ſpacious Rooms; in the firſt of which they have the Picture of Willibaldus, their Apoſtle, with an old Saxon Inſcription over it not now underſtood. The Front of the Houſe is very handſome, and faces the Market. The Council Chamber is very ſtately, and has the Pictures of many Emperors. Here alſo ſtands the Cathedral, an ancient Structure, dedicated to St. John, and in this is Willebald's Tomb. In the new Town are the Arſenal and the Univerſity, which was only a free School, built after the Reformation in 1552, afterwards made a Schola Illuſtris, but has ſince been ſo much endowed by the Citizens, that 'tis one of the beſt Univerſities in Germany, and has produced ſeveral great Men. This City had many ſtruggles with their former Archbiſhops for their Liberties, and bravely defended the Reformation againſt one of them, for which Charles V. ordered the Duke of Brunſwic to beſiege the Town, but he was obliged to deſiſt after a Year's continuance. When it was given to the Swedes, they pleaded their former Privileges according to the Treaty of Oſnaburg; but the Swedes beſieged it in 1666, and by the Advice of neighbouring Princes, the City agreed to a Diminution of their Privileges, and was not to enjoy its Freedom as an Imperial City till 1700. 'Tis governed by 4 Burgomaſters and 24 Common Council-Men, 1 Burgomaſter and 6 of them being appointed for each Quarter of the City. If any of thoſe die, or become uncapable, they muſt chuſe another in 24 Hours. One Elector is choſen out of each Claſs by Lot, and muſt ſwear to chuſe one of the moſt conſiderable Freemen whom they think fitteſt for the Place, are ſhut up in a Chamber, and not allowed to ſee any Man till the Election be over. The City is ſtrong by Nature, becauſe they can lay the adjacent Country under Water. The River overflows its Banks once a Year, which much improves the adjacent Fields. They have good Ramparts of Earth, a large deep Ditch, and a good Counterſcarp. Here's a Garriſon of 600 Men, Detachments of which lie without the City, and 200 of the Burghers keep guard Day and Night. The Territory of the City extends about 10 Miles round, and abounds with good Paſtures, is well ſtock'd with Cattle, which with their Naval Trade, makes the City rich and populous. There are abundance of Gardens, and pleaſant Seats about the City. The great Floods do frequently fill the River with Sand, which puts the Town to great Expence to clear it. Larger Ships come only within 6 Miles, where they unload at the Cuſtom-houſe, and the Goods are brought up in flat bottomed Veſſels. The Town is well ſupplied with Fiſh by the Sea and River; and they have every Month ſeveral Sorts in Seaſon; abundance of Salmon and Lampreys are taken within the Town, pickled or dried, and exported. They are excellent here at dreſſing Leather and Cloth, which is brought hither from other Parts for that end. Their chief Commodities are ſtrong Beer, of which they tranſport great Quantities, Corn, Minerals, Wool, Timber, Leather, and Linnens brought from Oſnaburg. The General Cuſtom in the Hans Towns of ſwearing new Comers by Bread and Salt, and making them Free on paying a Fine in good Liquor to the Company, is ſaid to have begun here. They coin a little Piece of their own, worth about a Half penny, which they call a Groat, and their Rixdollar is 4 s. 6 d. Sterling. All the Magiſtrates and moſt of the People are Calviniſts, but out of Complaiſance to the King of Sweden, the Lutherans were allowed the Cathedral, under which there's a Vault where dead Bodies keep uncorrupted above 60 Years.

2. Bremerfurd, or Bremer Verden, a ſtrong Town 30 Miles North from Bremen, where the Chancery of the Dutchy is kept. Here's a Palace where the Archbiſhop uſually reſided, and a Caſtle where the Swediſh Governour uſed to dwell and keep a ſtrong Garriſon. The chief Subſiſtance of the Town was from this and Paſſengers betwixt Bremen and Stade. 'Twas taken by the Danes, but reſtored by the Treaty of Roſchild, and afterwards by the Troops of Zell and Hanover in 1676, but reſtored in 1679.

3. Stade, the ſecond Town of the Dutchy, at the Mouth of the Zwinga, where it falls into the Elbe, 40 Miles North-Eaſt from Bremen, and 10 South-Weſt from Hamburg. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the Statio, where the Romans kept part of their Ships to guard the Elbe. 'Twas afterwards ſubject to its own Princes; and Latin Authors called the People of the Town and Diſtrict Stadenſes and Stadingi. In 1234 it revolted from the Archbiſhop of Bremen; and after a long and bloody War, wherein they engaged, ſeveral of their Neighbours were excommunicated by the Pope, and forced to ſubmit without much Advantage to the Archbiſhop: for tho' Philip Duke of Swabia, their Earl, annexed the County to the Archbiſhoprick in 1248, he kept the City, and allowed them their Privileges as an Imperial Town; and among others, to be an Aſylum for Criminals that eſcaped thither. 'Twas one of the 1ſt that entred into the Hans League, and tho' very ſtrong, was taken in one Day by the Swedes in 1645, and continued under them till 1676, that it was ſurpriz'd by the Dukes of Brunſwick, but reſtored in 1679, when moſt of it was burnt down. They pretended to a Right of Toll from every Ship that went to Hamburg, which occaſioned a Quarrel betwixt the two Cities, that was afterwards compoſed; yet the great Trade of Hamburg did ſo drain it, that they were forced to ſell their publick Stock and ſubmit to the Archbiſhop. But the Engliſh Merchants being diſobliged at Hamburg, removed hither, by which it recovered its Riches and Grandeur; and tho' the Engliſh did again ſettle at Hamburg, it has ſtill a conſiderable Trade. The Inhabitants are reckoned the moſt courteous of all this part of the Empire. Their Harbour is capable of larger Ships than Hamburg, and very commodious. 'Tis defended by a ſtrong Fort at the Mouth of the Zuinga. The Town is well fortified, the Market-Place, Town-Houſe, and Churches are very handſome, and worth a Traveller's View; and there are fine Orchards and Gardens without the Walls. The Danes took it, and made the Garriſon Priſoners of War in 1712, and ſold it with the reſt of the Country to King George of Great Britain in 1715.

4. Ottersberg, a ſmall fortified Town, 12 Miles Eaſt from Bremen. It has a ſtrong Caſtle, formerly the Reſidence of the Archbiſhop, againſt whom it joined with Bremen for many Years, but ſubmitted on Conditions in 1547. 'Twas taken twice by the Imperialiſts, and once by the Swedes, in the Civil Wars of Germany.

5. Rottenburg, a ſmall fortified Town on the Wein, 35 Miles Eaſt from Bremen. It had a Palace belonging to the Archbiſhop, is pretty populous, and a Place of Trade.

6. Boxtehude on the Eſſa, near the Elbe, 40 Miles North-Eaſt from Bremen. The adjacent Country is pleaſant, fruitful, and reckoned one of the Granaries of Hamburg. 'Tis a pretty large Town, has broad Streets, ſurrounded with a Ditch and Wall, upon which there are old ruinous Towers. 'Twas taken by the Duke of Brunſwick in 1676, but reſtored to the Swedes in 1679.

7. Carlſtadt, or Carlsburg, on the Weſer, 28 Miles North-Weſt from Bremen, near the Sea, founded by Charles X. of Sweden, taken by the Dukes of Brunſwick in 1676, and reſtored by Treaty as the reſt in 1679. In 1698 Charles XII. of Sweden granted Liberty of Conſcience, with 30 Years Exemption from Taxes to all Proteſtants that would ſettle here.

VII. The

VII. The Bishoprick or Principality of VERDEN or FERDEN, it properly belongs to the Circle of Westphalia, but being united to the Dutchy of Bremen, we chuse to describe it here. It lies South from Bremen, is 22 Miles South-West and North-East, and 18 North and South. 'Twas formerly a Bishoprick, but seculariz'd and given to the Swedes by the Treaty of Westphalia. The Town which gave its Name is on the East side of the River Aller, 20 Miles South-East from Bremen. 'Twas anciently strong, populous, and an Imperial Town, but afterwards subject to its Bishop. The See was removed hither from Baidewick or Konende about 776. 'Tis pretty large, and supplied with Goods from Bremen by the Aller. The Imperialists took it by storm in 1626, and again in 1631; since which it has never recovered its ancient State. The Swedes took it in 1634. The Duke of Brunswick seiz'd it in 1678, and restored it in 1679, for which he had the Bailiwick of Tiddinghouse betwixt the Aller and Weser. It was taken by the Danes in 1713, and purchased from them by our King George in 1715, which with the Dutchy of Bremen, may be of vast Advantage to the Trade of England, and convoy our Cloth, &c. by the adjoining Rivers through the Empire; it having been computed, that in 1713 the Value of 688737 l. of our Cloth, Gloves, Leather, Tobacco, and Sugar has been carried through those Countries to other Places of Germany. There's no other Town of Note here.

VIII. The Dutchy of LUNENBURG, has Bremen and Verden on the West, Brandenburg on the East, Holstein, Lawemburg, and part of Mecklenburg on the North, and Zell on the South, is about 60 Miles South and North, and 110 where longest from East to West, according to Molls's Map of the King's German Dominions. The Country abounds with Woods and Forests, which afford good Fir, Oak and Elm, that they sell to the Hamburghers and Dutch, all sorts of Deer, wild Swine, and other Venison. The Inhabitants are well supplied with Fish, and breed store of Pheasants. Some Parts of it have vast Heaths and Wastes, the largest of which lies West from the City of Lunenburg; yet in general, 'tis well inhabited, and abounds with Villages. The Inhabitants were reckoned to be the most rustical both in Habit and Language of any in the Empire, but are much improved both ways, the Troops as well clad as any in Germany, and the People in general are very brave. The Cherusci who contributed to the Defeat of Varus and the Roman Legions, inhabited here.

Places of Note are,

1. Lunenburg, which gives Name to the Country. It lies Lat. 53. 20. Long. 10. 40. 30 Miles South-East from Hamburg, 70 East from Bremen, and 75 North-East from Hanover. Some derive the Name from Luna the Moon, which was worshipped there by the old Pagan Inhabitants; others from the River Lina, now Elmenow, on which it stands: Some ascribe the Foundation of it to Julius Cæsar; but whatever be in that, 'tis a very ancient City, and is mentioned in the Reign of the Emperor Henry II. and afterwards as the greatest City belonging to Otho, Duke of Saxony. It was fortified by Henry the Lion, who built a Castle in 1189 on the Mountain of Calkberg which lies near it. The Annals of the Cathedral of Verden say, the Image of the Moon stood on this Mountain, was destroyed by one of the 70 Disciples as they alledge, but set up again when the Inhabitants relapsed to Idolatry, and was removed at last by Swibert, Bishop of Verden, who built St. Mary's Monastery in its Place, about 780. This Town was afterwards an Imperial City, but now subject to its own Prince, and allowed great Privileges. 'Tis about two English Miles in compass, the Streets broad, and most of the Houses well built. The Town-House is a fine Structure. Over-against it stands the Duke's Palace. Here's also a fine University, and a stately Bridge over the River, which is navigable here, and falls into the Elbe about 13 Miles below the Town. Their chief Trade is in Salt made from Springs that rise within the Walls. The Water is greenish, and has a Mixture of Lead which purifies it, and makes it preferable to that of all other Salt Springs. Their Salt-Houses are fenc'd, and constantly guarded, being the main Support of the City, a considerable Branch of their Duke's Revenue, and a constant Employment for the Poor. 'Tis the best for Colour and Taste in Germany, and much exported.

2. Bardowick, 4 Miles further down the River, formerly a strong and populous City, built, as 'tis pretended, 990 Years before Christ. It had 9 Churches, of which the Cathedral is only left. It has 8 Residentiary Canons, and a few Vicars. Over the Gate there are some barbarous Latin Verses in an old Gothic Character, which say, it was built 235 Years before Rome, and destroyed by Henry the Lyon in 1189. 'Tis supposed to have been a College of the ancient Poets, called Bards.

3. Harburg, about 28 Miles North-West from Lunenburg. It lies on the Elbe, almost over-against Hamburg, has a strong Castle, is fortified, and the strongest Frontier of the Country on this side. It has great Privileges, is populous, and enjoys a pretty good Trade, being a tolerable Harbour for Ships. It formerly gave Title to a Branch of the Family.

4. Ultzen, on the River Elmenow, 30 Miles South-West from Lunenburg. 'Twas formerly called Lawenwald, i. e. Lyon Forest. The present Name comes from a Monastery in the Neighbourhood, formerly called Old Ultzen. Most of it was burnt down in 1646, and never since wholly rebuilt, but the Streets are larger, and the Houses more splendid and regular than before. The Inhabitants pretend, that the first English Saxons went from hence to Britain, and those who returned, hung up a Tin Ship in the Market-place as a Memorial of their Success, and that it continued there till the abovementioned Fire.

5. Walstrode, near the Frontiers of Bremen, on the River Bohme, 27 Miles North-West from Zell. It was formerly a Monastery, built by Walo, a Prince of Anhalt in 986, as appears by an Inscription on his Statue in the Church. 'Tis now a considerable Town seated in a pleasant Valley, encompassed with Woods and Mountains. Its chief Trade is in Honey, Wax, Wool, and Beer.

6. Danneburg, the Capital of its County, which is the most Easterly part of the Dutchy. It lies about 50 Miles South-East from Lunenburg on the River Jetze, that falls into the Elbe, 15 Miles below the Town, which with the County, was given by its Count to Otho Duke of Brunswic in 1462, and since gave Title to a Branch of the Family.

7. Snackenburg, near the Elbe, 32 Miles South-East from Danneberg. 'Tis a large trading Town on the Conflux of the Wechte and Elbe. There are several other considerable Towns in this Dutchy, of which we have no Description.

IX. The Dutchy of ZELL lies South from Lunenburg, but as they have been a long time possessed by the same Family, our Maps have not fix'd the Boundaries betwixt them. The Rivers Aller and Weser separate them; on one Part 'tis 84 Miles East and West, and 24 South and North.

Zell, the Capital, lies in a Sandy Plain near the Conflux of the Aller and Fuse, which falls into the Weser below Verden, Lat. 52 ½. Long. 10 ½. 42 Miles South from Lunenburg, 20 North-East from Hanover, and 30 North-West from Brunswic. 'Tis an old Town, has a Charter dated in 1203, kept in the Duke's Archieves, wherein 'tis called T'selle. It consists of 3 parallel Streets, is well fortified, and has large Ramparts well mounted with Cannon. The Duke has a noble Palace here, 'Tis a square Pile moated round, and has 4 Plat-forms. In the lower Court beyond the Ditch, there's a fine riding-House, and many curious Gardens, Orchards, and Grottoes near the Palace. 'Twas built by Duke Henry in 1485, was the usual Residence of the Dukes of Lunenburg, and the chief Courts of Judicature are held here. There are no other remarkable Towns in this Dutchy, but it abounds with Villages, Woods and Forests, and the Product is the same with that of Lunenburg. Eberenburg, Goar, Brackhausen, and Ebstort, are Seats belonging to the Duke in this Dutchy, and the Duke of Zell received King William at the latter in 1698 with very great respect.

X. The Dutchy of CALEMBURG or HANOVER has that of Zell on the North, Grubben-Hagen on the South, the County of Schawenburg on the West, and the Dutchy of Brunswic and Bishoprick of Hildesheim on the East; is about 33 Miles South and North, and 18 East and West. 'Tis more fruitful than Lunenburg, has fine Meadows and Fields, breeds excellent Horses, and affords Sheep and Wool for Export, with Salt and Tobacco, enough for the Inhabitants.

Places of Note are,

1. Hanover the Capital, which lies on the River Lina, 20 Miles South-West from Zell, 32 West from Brunswic, and 35 East from Minden; was formerly called Lawenroda, from a neighbouring Castle, subject to Counts of that Title, and had its present Name in Henry the Lyon's Time, because of a Ferry here. It has been the Residence of the Court since the Reign of George Duke of Brunswic-Calemburg. The City is handsome and well built, divided into the new and old Towns by the River, which is navigable here by small Boats. Most of the Houses are of Timber, interlaid with Plaister, but there are many of Brick and Stone. The Streets are regular, broad, and well furnished with Lanthorns for the Winter Nights. 'Tis regularly fortified, and the Ravelins before the Gates well mounted with Cannon. The Elector's Palace is at one end of the City near the Ramparts. 'Tis a large Structure of free Stone, with several square Courts, and fine Stair Cases. 'Twas formerly a large Monastery, but so much beautify'd and altered, and has so many Apartments with rich Furniture, that 'tis one of the most splendid Courts of the Empire. Here's a pretty Theatre with handsome Accommodations for Persons of all Ranks; and the Court being at the Charge, no Money is taken for seeing the Plays. The House for the Opera is visited by all Travellers, the Paintings and Contrivance being reckoned the best of its kind in Europe. Here's also a Closet of Rarities, with a noble Collection of Medals, ancient and modern. The Elector's Court was very splendid, there being all the Officers of State usual in the Courts of Kings, a Troop of 150 Horse-guards, all proper Men, with good Horses, and fine Equipage, 2 Regiments of Foot Guards of 1 Battalion each, clad in Red, lined with Blue, he usually kept 6000 Horse, and 6000 Foot in time of Peace, before the Dutchies of Lunenburg and Zell fell to him. The most remarkable Churches here are, first, St. James's, in which there are 2 Crucifixes, with fine Pictures of the Apostles, and many Saints, but the Lutherans give them no Adoration. Secondly, That of the Holy Cross, much finer and neater than the other; it has a double Row of Galleries round from the Altar, and upon the first, the History of the Gospel in 53 Parts, painted by the ablest Masters. Here are four Fairs per Annum, much frequented by Foreigners, and the Town has a good Trade by a pleasant Malt Liquor called Brewhan, which they export in great Quantities.

About 2 Miles from the City, lies Herrenhausen, a pleasant Country Seat of the Electors, with delicate Gardens, noble Water-Works, Fountains with very large Basins, a Wilderness well contrived and adorn'd with Ever-greens, and fine Gravel Walks. Here are many beautiful Cascades, one of the best Orangeries in Europe, and a perfect Theatre cut out into green Seats, with dressing Rooms for the Actors, being Arbours and Summer-houses on both sides, the Whole set off with fine Statues, many of them gilt; and behind, there's an excellent Water-work. Her Royal Highness Princess Sophia, Mother to King George of Great-Britain, delighted much in this Seat and Gardens, where she fell into an Apoplexy as she was walking, of which she died June 8, 1714.

2. Calemberg, a Town with a strong Castle, 12 Miles South from Hanover, which gives Title of Duke to the Family.

3. Lavenstein, 15 Miles South-West, noted for Salt-Pits.

4. Hamelen, an ancient City, at the Mouth of the Hamel, on the Banks of the Weser, 27 Miles South-West from Hanover. 'Tis the Key of the Country on that side, and therefore the best garrisoned and fortified. Their Records give an Account of a strange Accident there, June 26, 1284. The Town being much pestered with Rats, a Stranger undertook to destroy them for a Reward, which being promised him, he play'd on a Taber and Pipe; and going to the River, the Rats followed his Musick, and were all drowned; but being denied his Reward, he left the Town in a Rage, and threatened Revenge. He returned accordingly next Year, and with the same Musick enticed most of the Children of the Town after him to the Mouth of a great Cave, on the top of the neighbouring Hill of Coppleberg, where he and they entered, but were never more heard of. In remembrance of this, the Citizens for many Years after, dated all their publick Writings from the Day they lost their Children, as is evident by many old Deeds and Records. The Streets through which the Children paſſed is ſtill called Taberſtreet, and at the Mouth of the Cave there's a Stone Monument, with an Inſcription in barbarous Latin Verſe, relating this Tragedy, and their Loſs of 130 Boys. In 1633, the Swedes gain'd a great Victory over the Imperialiſts near this Town, and that ſame Year George Duke of Brunſwick retook it. In 1703 the Elector received at his Palace here, the Emperor Charles VI. in his way to England for Spain.

His Majeſty's other Dominions in this Country are the Principality of Grubenhagen, and what ſome call the Dominions of Brunſwic-Lunenburg, which lie South from Hanover, the Biſhoprick of Hildeſheim, and thoſe of Brunſwick-Wolfembuttle. Theſe Dominions are not exactly divided in our Maps, partly becauſe they belonged to the ſame Family, and partly becauſe they are interſperſed with ſome other petty Dominions, and little Parcels belonging to the Biſhoprick of Hildeſheim, and the Duke of Wolfembuttle; but we ſhall take them as they lie in the Map, and begin with the Principality or Dutchy of Grubenhagen. It lies South from Hanover and Hildeſheim, gave Title to a Branch of the Family, and had its Name from a Wood or Foreſt belonging to a conſiderable Family, called Grube, who built a Caſtle there, 48 Miles South-Eaſt from Hanover. Moſt of the Country is overgrown with Wood, Fir and Pine, formerly a Part of the Hercynian Foreſt, now called Hartz, becauſe of the great quantity of Roſin and Pitch, diſtilled from the Trees.

In this Country are moſt of the Mines of Silver, Copper and Lead, belonging to our King, as Prince of that Country. The chief of them are Rammelsberg, Wildman, and Zellerfield. Rammelsberg is a high Mountain, near the City of Goſlar, 43 Miles South-Eaſt from Hanover. The Mines here were diſcovered by one Ramme, a Hunter, whoſe Horſe's Foot ſtruck up a Piece of Ore in 972, in the Reign of the Emperor Otho I. who employ'd ſome Franks that underſtood the Buſineſs to refine the Metal, and from them the Town of Frankenburg in the Neighbourhood had its Riſe and Name. The Miners increaſing, they found out that of Wildman, 5 Miles Weſt from the former, in 1045, and that of Zellerfield, 5 Miles South-Eaſt from Wildman, in 1070. This is the Chief of them, the Place where the Overſeer keeps his Court, and pays the Workmen every Saturday. The Principal Minerals in thoſe Mines are Silver, Litharge, Lead, and two ſorts of Copper, one melted from Ore, and the other made by Vitriol Water, in which they ſteep great Plates of Iron in Troughs made on purpoſe. There are many other Minerals here, which yield a great deal of Money, but are dangerous to the Workmen, becauſe of the nauſeous Smells. The chief of thoſe Minerals are, 1. Grey Vitriol. 2. The Ink Stone of many Colours, from which two, brayed and boiled together, they make Green Vitriol. 3. Another ſort of Vitriol which grows like Icicles, and is uſed without any further cleanſing. 4. Blue Vitriol from Copper Ore. 5. White Vitriol from Lead Ore. 6. Myſi, of the Nature and Colour of Brimſtone. 7. Brimſtone, from a peculiar ſort of Ore, from whence the Flores Sulphuris drop like Icicles.

The Mines of Wildman and Grind, 2 Miles South-Eaſt from it, Clauſthall and Zellerfield are Silver, and many of them very rich. There's above 110 named Capital Mines, ſeveral of which have many ſmaller ones belonging to them. Some of them are wrought at his Majeſty's Charge, and the reſt farmed out; ſo that they bring in a great annual Revenue, 900000 Dollars having been coin'd in one Year from that of Clauſthall, which lies 4 Miles South from Zellerfield. His Majeſty's Revenues before the Addition of the Dutchy of Zell and Lunenburg, which chiefly aroſe from thoſe Mines, and others that lie betwixt the ſaid Mines and the Mountain. Blockenberg, ſuppoſed to be Ptolomy's Melibocus, and reckoned one of the higheſt in Germany. This Part of the Country is famous for giving Birth to the great German Hero, and General, Arminius, honourably mentioned by Tacitus and other Roman Authors for his great Exploits in War.

Other Places of Note in this Dutchy are,

1. Embeck, named from the Conflux of a great many Rivulets near it, 28 Miles South-Eaſt from Hamelen, and 42 South from Hanover. 'Tis well fortified, was formerly an Imperial Town, but ſubmitted to the Duke of Brunſwic for Protection. The neighbouring Country is fruitful in Corn, and noted for Bruhan.

2. Lutterberg, formerly Capital of a Country, on the Frontiers of Anhalt, about 60 Miles South-Eaſt from Hanover.

3. Andreasberg, a ſmall Town with rich Iron Mines, 5 Miles further North.

4. Clauſthall, 8 Miles North-Weſt from Andreasberg.

5. Altena, 2 Miles South from Andreasberg.

6. Oſterod, 7 Miles South from Clauſthall, and 9 South-Weſt from Andreasberg. The three laſt are inhabited by Miners, who live ſo much under Ground, that they content themſelves with very indifferent Houſes above it. The Country abounds with Wood for working thoſe Mines.

The County of Blanckenburg and Rhinſtein, lies in the Eaſt part of this Dutchy, is 24 Miles South and North, but narrow at both Ends, and not above 9 Miles where broadeſt. 'Twas anciently called Hartſgow, i. e. the Hercynian County, but the preſent Name comes from the Towns and Forts of Blanckenburg and Rhinſtein. The former lies 7 Miles Weſt from Quedlingburg, and gives Title of Dutcheſs of Brunſwic-Blanckenburg to the preſent Empreſs's Mother. This County was formerly much larger, and included the County of Weringenrode, which lies Weſt from it, but ſtill includes its Capital Elbingerode, which lies near its Frontiers almoſt 10 Miles South-Weſt from Quedlinburg. Haſelfeld in the South part of this County, near the Frontiers of Anhalt, is alſo noted for Iron Mines. The Air of this Country is very ſharp, being ſo much expoſed to the North Winds, that the Snow lies on the Mountains till Midſummer. The Inhabitants are ſtrong and vigorous, ſo that many of them live to above 100 Years. There's little Corn here, but the Foreſts abound with Cattle and Veniſon of all ſorts. The greateſt Curioſities of Nature here, are, 1. Two high Rocks fronting one another near Blanckenburg, which repreſent 2 Monks in their Habits, as if they had been form'd by Art, and therefore are called the Monks Craggs. 2. A huge Cave, betwixt Blanckenburg and Elbingerode, called Buman's Hole, from Buman the Diſcoverer. The Mouth is ſo narrow, that one muſt creep in; ſoon after they come to a dark high Gallery, the End of which has not yet been found, though ſome of the Miners have confidently affirmed, that they have gone under Ground as far as Goſlar, which is 21 Miles. A young bold Fellow going into it alone, his Light went out, and he wandered 8 Days before he could find his Way back. At his Return his Hair was perfectly Gray, and he told many frightful Stories of Spirits, ſome of whom condemned him to be hang'd, but let him go. Others pretend alſo to have met with Spirits there but more civil ones. In this Cave are frequently found large Bones of ſtrange Creatures, which the neighbouring Gentry keep for Rarities, and among others the Skeleton of a Giant. The Country abounds with high and inacceſſible Rocks, on the tops of which there are old Forts and Caſtles, but ſcarce any of them habitable, except that of Blanckenburg. Many of them have been hewn out of intire Rocks. The moſt remarkable of thoſe ruinous Caſtles is that of Hartzburg, near Brocksburg or Blockenburg. The Inhabitants ſay, it was built by the Chauci, a Branch of the Saxons, 300 Years before Chriſt. Here they had alſo a Temple of Saturn, whom they worſhipped for Security and Plenty. The Hiſtory of this Idol was curiouſly embroidered with Needle-work in a rich Silk Coat by Mechtilda, Daughter to the Emperor Henry the Fowler, and lodged in the Cathedral of Goſlar, whence the Swedes took it during the German Wars. The Idol and Temple were deſtroyed by Order of Charlemain. A Salt Fountain was diſcovered at the Bottom of this Hill in the Time of Julius, Duke of Brunſwic, who built a ſmall Town for the Workmen, called Julius Hall, which is now grown rich and large by their Trade in Salt, Copper, Kettles, Pots, Wire, &c.

XI. GOSLAR, an Imperial Town, is by ſome placed in this Country, Lat. 52. Long. 11. 20 Miles South from Brunſwic, and 35 South-Eaſt from Hanover. It lies on the River Goſe; is governed by Magiſtrates independent on the Dutchy of Brunſwic; and beſides the ſame Privileges with the other Imperial Towns, has an exemption from Tolls in all the Markets of the Empire but three. In all Imperial Writs 'tis called nobile Membrum Imperii, and is ſuppoſed to have been built by the Emperor Henry I. who had a Palace here. The Houſes are covered with a glittering Slate, very ornamental, but in Sun-ſhine dazzles one's Eyes. Moſt of the Inhabitants ſubſiſt by digging, cleanſing and tempering Minerals. Ganderſum, or Ganderſheim, 18 Miles South-Weſt from Goſlar, a Monaſtery founded for Ladies of noble Families. It embraced the Reformation in the 16th Century.

Hohenſtein County, lies in the South-Eaſt part of the King's Dominions, has part of Grubenhagen on the Weſt, Anhalt on the North, and Thuringia on the South. 'Tis about 18 Miles South and North, and 20 where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Tis well inhabited. Northauſen, is by ſome reckoned its Capital, and by others placed in the County of Stolberg in Saxony. 'Tis an Imperial City, ſaid to have been built by the Emperor Theodoſius II. or by Merovius, King of France, about 447. 'Tis noted for ſome Dyets that have been held here, but otherwiſe not remarkable. It lies on the Eaſt ſide of this County, 30 Miles South-Eaſt from Goſlar, and 70 from Hanover.

Gotingen, with its Diſtrict, in the South-Weſt part of this Country, 45 Miles South from Hanover. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the Munitium of the Ancients. 'Tis a ſtrong Town, and was beſieged in vain by the Imperialiſts in 1641. Munden, at the Conflux of the Fulda and Weſer, 17 Miles South-Weſt from Gottingen, and 65 South from Hanover. 'Twas almoſt entirely deſtroyed by the Imperialiſts under Count Tilly in 1625.

Having thus given the Geography of his Majeſty's German Dominions, we ſhall only add, that the Extent of them from South to North is about 190 Miles, and where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt, about 160; but they are intermix'd with the Biſhoprick of Hildeſheim, and the Dominions of Brunſwic-Wolfembuttle, which both together, don't exceed 65 Miles from South to North, and 120 from Eaſt to Weſt; but both Ways they are very unequal, being indented by the Dominions of his Majeſty and others.

XII. The Biſhoprick of HILDESHEIM, has the Dutchy of Hanover on the Weſt, that of Brunſwic on the Eaſt, the Dutchy of Zell on the North, and Grubenhagen on the South; ſo that 'tis incloſed by the Dominions of the Houſe of Brunſwic, and was in their Poſſeſſion many Years; but frequent Quarrels ariſing about it, the Elector of Cologne was made Adminiſtrator by Treaty in 1653, and his Suffragan is the immediate Governour. 'Twas founded by the Emperor Lewis the Pious, about 822, is 36 Miles South and North, and 37 where longeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. The Town lies 15 Miles South-Eaſt from Hanover, and being a Hans Town is governed by its own Laws. The Biſhop is a Prince of the Empire. The Imperialiſts took it in 1632, but the Duke of Brunſwic retook it next Year. Its chief Trade is in Corn. The Houſes are old-faſhioned, but neat. The Jeſuits have a College here. In the Cathedral there are the Reliques of the old Saxon Idol Irmenſul. The Reformation was introduced in 1552, in oppoſition to the Chapter. The Magiſtrates are Lutherans, as is the greateſt part of the People and Dioceſe, and are allowed their Liberty by the Treaty of Weſtphalia; but the preſent Elector of Cologne having oppreſſed them, the Elector of Hanover, now King George, ſent Troops to garriſon the Town in 1711, and ſee them righted: The Elector of Cologne complained of it to the Dyet, but King George publiſhed a Manifeſto, wherein he juſtified his Proceedings to be according to Agreements with the See of Cologne in 1643, and ſince, upon which the Proteſtants were reſtored to their Liberties, and the Hanover Troops withdrawn.

Other Places of Note are,

1. Peyna, the Caſtrum Peynum of the Latins, 12 Miles North-Eaſt of Hildeſheim, and 15 Weſt from Brunſwic. 'Tis a little Town, with a ſtrong Caſtle on a Hill, and the chief Strength of the Biſhoprick. Maurice, Elector of Saxony, was defeated and killed near it in 1553, by Albert Marquis of Brandenburg.

2. Eltz, on the Borders of Calenberg, 8 Miles South-Weſt from Hildeſheim, formerly called Aulica, when Charlemain ſojourned here during his War againſt the Saxons, and founded the Biſhoprick here or at Peyna, which was afterwards tranſlated to Hildeſheim.

3. Sarſtede, 6 Miles North-Weſt of Hildeſheim, noted for a Victory gained here over the Imperialiſts by the Duke of Brunſwic-Lunenburg, during the Civil War. Here are ſeveral little Towns, Capitals of their Diſtricts, not worth deſcribing. Near the Caſtle of Marienburg, in this Country, Country, there's a Hill full of Marble Beams, and when a Stone is broke, it ſmells like burnt Horn, and in the middle of the Stone there's a black Earth.

XIII. The Dutchy of Brunſwic, taken at large, includes both that and Hanover, and the Principality of Grubenhagen, and the Counties of Blanckenburg and Reinſtein; and ſometimes the Name is given to all the Dominions of the ſeveral Branches of the Family, who each of them have Title of Duke of Brunſwic; but the Dutchy properly ſo called, is poſſeſſed by the Duke of Brunſwic-Wolfembuttle. This Dutchy like that of Hanover, is populous and fruitful. Their Wheat and Rye grow ſometimes to ſuch a Height as to exceed the talleſt Man on Horſeback. A great part of the Hercynian Foreſt did formerly run through this Country, and is now divided into Woods and Parks, which yield Timber for all Uſes, ſtore of Deer, wild Swine, Hares, &c. and Fowl of all ſorts. Here are alſo rich Mines of Iron, Salt and Coal, and their Rivers abound with Fiſh. The Ruins of many old Caſtles and Forts appear on the tops of Hills and craggy Mountains here, which ſome think were built by the Romans, and others by Charlemain in his War with the Saxons. The Inhabitants are warlike, and of a larger ſize than moſt other Germans. They are capable of all Fatigues, being uſed to cold Lodgings and coarſe Diet, which is uſually dry'd Bacon and Sauſages, and black coarſe Bread mix'd with Rye and Wheat. Here grows no Wine, but they have plenty of good Beer of ſeveral ſorts. They are not reckoned ſo complaiſant as other Germans, but very hoſpitable and ſincere. Luther's Reformation was introduced here by Duke Julius, who died in 1599; many of them are rigid, but thoſe named Calixti about Helmſtat, &c. are moderate, have a good Opinion of the Calviniſts, and are much increaſed of late.

Places of Note are,

1. Brunſwic, Lat. 52. 20. Long. 11. 30 Miles Eaſt from Hanover. It was ſo named from Bruno, one of its Princes. Dankquardh, Duke of Saxony was the firſt who wall'd it in 861, and called the Caſtle Dankquardh-Croſs. It was augmented by ſucceeding Princes, became an Imperial City, and one of the greateſt Hans Towns. The Emperor Frederic II. made the Town a Dutchy. Duke Otho the Couragious, gave the City liberty to chuſe their own Magiſtrates, and to govern according to their own Laws, which pretending to be Independent, it was 6 times beſieged by the Dukes, and at laſt taken by Duke Rodolphus Auguſtus in 1671. He frequently reſided here, and kept a ſtrong Guard. The Town is divided into 5 Corporations, who have each their Hall, and are governed by diſtinct Magiſtrates, and 5 different Courts of Judicature, but they unite on extraordinary Occaſions. The River Ocker runs through the City, which is ſtill rich and populous, tho' much ſhort of what it was when free, the chief Merchants having removed to other Places, ſo that moſt of their noble Houſes and Warehouſes are now empty. They value themſelves on being the firſt Town of Note that embraced Luther's Doctrine. The Houſes are generally well built. The Palace is a ſtately ancient Fabrick, and the Town-houſe magnificent. Here are many fine Churches. The City is well fortified, ſurrounded with double Walls and a Ditch, and defended by a ſtrong Citadel. Their chief Trade is in tanning Leather, and brewing Mum from Barley and Wheat-Malt mixed. There is one ſort thin and weak for their ordinary Drink; but what they call Ship-Mum is very thick, and ſcarce drinkable till purified at Sea. Of this they tranſport great Quantities, and Hops is a great Commodity here. There is a ſet number of Brewers, who have the Privilege of making it from the beginning of October to the end of March, but muſt ſell none till it be old enough, to keep up the Reputation of the Liquor. They have alſo a ſweet ſort of Beer, called Brewhan. Moſt of their Halls are now turned to other Uſes; one of them made a Fleſh-Market, and the chief an Houſe for an Opera. Their annual Fairs ſerve for little other uſe than Diverſion to the neighbouring Princes and Nobility.

2. Wolfembuttle, upon the ſame River, 9 Miles South-Eaſt from Brunſwic, is the ancient Seat of the Dukes, ſtrong by its Situation near Marſhes, and ſo well fortified, that it is reckoned one of the ſtrongeſt Towns in Germany. 'Tis divided into two Parts, one called Arx Guelphica, which is the Duke's Palace, and was ſo named from Duke Ecbert of the Family of the Guelphs; the other Henrickſtat, from Duke Henry the Founder. The new Church here is an admirable piece of Architecture. In a Vault under it there lie 21 Dukes and Dutcheſſes in Coffins of Lead, with Inſcriptions upon them. The Palace, which is the ſtrongeſt and moſt ſtately that belongs to the Family, has noble Apartments, rich Furniture, and coſtly Paintings. The Library here, founded by the Learned and Brave Duke Auguſtus, is reckoned one of the beſt in Europe. M. Haniſius, the Library Keeper in 1604, gave an Account, that it contained 124000 Volumes; but Conringius, who publiſhed an Account of it in 1660, mentions only 27666 Volumes, and 115504 Treatiſes by 56393 Authors. There are 2000 Manuſcripts, of which ſome of the moſt curious are, Firſt, 438 Folios of French Embaſſies, tranſcribed from the French King's Library at the Charge of the Founder. 2. A Latin Pſalter in Notis Ciceroneanis. 3. The four Evangeliſts in Syriac, given by A. Kircher, in 1666. 4. An ancient Copy of the Edda Iſlandorum, with the Skialdi annexed, much better than that publiſhed by Reſenius in 1665. There are alſo 41 Volumes writ by the Duke himſelf, 12 of which are on Muſick. He gave alſo a ſhort Account of the moſt conſiderable Authors in his Library in 4 large Volumes, and an Alphabetical Catalogue of their Names in a 5th. He wrote alſo a Commentary on Trithemius's Cryptography, with other Works upon the like Subject, under the covert Name of Guſtavus Selenus. He wrote a very Learned Piece of the Antiquity and Myſtery of the Game called Cheſs. Under his Picture in the Library an ingenious Gentleman writ this Diſtich:

Tota tuos Europa Duces Rezeſq; recenſe,
Hic ſenio cunctos vicit & ingenio.

He died in 1666, aged 88.

3. Helmſtat, 20 Miles Eaſt from Brunſwic, is reckoned the oldeſt Town in the Circle next to Bardowic. Charlemain founded it in 782, and named it ſo from the Multitude of Elms about it. Its chief Ornament is the Academy of Julia, founded by Duke Julius in 1566. Among other Privileges granted it by the Emperor Maximilian II. the Rector is to have the Title and Dignity of a Count Palatine. The Duke's Eldeſt Son Henry-Julius was the firſt Rector, and founded the fair College called Julium Novum. His Father and he furniſhed it with a conſiderable Library. Among ſome Hundreds of Manuſcripts they have an ancient Hebrew Pentateuch in Vellum, of two Volumes, in a very fair Character, for which ſome Jewiſh Rabbies, well verſed in Antiquity, offered a great Sum. 'Tis agreed by the Brunſwic Family, that each of the Dukes Regent ſhall be Rector in their turns for a Year. No Univerſity in the Empire has bred more Learned Men ſince it was founded. The Faculty of Divinity here being charged with having given their Opinion in the Caſe of the Marriage of the Princeſs of Brunſwic-Wolfembuttle with the preſent Emperor, then King of Spain, that a Proteſtant Princeſs might with a ſafe Conſcience embrace the Romiſh Religion, they diſclaimed it in 1708, by a publick Declaration under their Hands and Seals, as a Popiſh Forgery.

Having thus finiſhed the Deſcription of the Dominions of his Majeſty in Germany, 'tis proper to add an Account of his Majeſty's other Pretenſions, which, according to the Atlas Hiſtorique, are as follow: 1. On the County of Staden, againſt the Archbiſhop of Bremen formerly, and now againſt the King of Sweden. 2. Upon the County of Poitou in France, by Donation from Richard of England to Otho I. of Brunſwic in 1190. 3. On the Succeſſion of Maud, Dutcheſs of Lombardy in Italy. 4. On the Dominions which formerly belonged to Henry the Lion, Duke of Brunſwic, who married Maud of England. 5. Upon the County of Eichsfelt, poſſeſſed by the Elector of Mentz. 6. On the County of Regenſtein, poſſeſſed by the King of Pruſſia. 7. On the Principality of Taranto in the Kingdom of Naples, by a Treaty made in 1337. 8. Upon the Biſhoprick of Hildeſheim and Hoxter, as mentioned already.

A brief HISTORY of the Family of BRUNSWIC.

THIS illuſtrious Family is ſo ancient, that Antiquaries are at a Loſs about its Origin. The Germans, in a Genealogy printed lately at Brunſwic, derive it, according to the Humour of their Country, from Wodin, or Odin, whom the old Pagans took to be a God, and others fancy him to have been one of Noah's Sons or Grandſons, who peopled this part of the World. The Author of this Genealogy mentions 11 Princes after Odin, and then comes to Horſa and Hengiſt, the Founders of the Saxon Government in England, and ſo goes on till he brings the Genealogy to Margaret the Wife of Malcomb III. King of Scotland, and Siſter to Edgar Atheling the true Saxon Heir, and to Maud the Daughter of Henry II. of England, who married Henry the Lion, Duke of Bavaria and Saxony, from whom our King is lineally deſcended.

The firſt part of this Account, as to Odin and his immediate Succeſſors, muſt be own'd to ſmell of the Fable; there is however a great deal of Truth in the latter part; and had the German Author been acquainted with the Britiſh Hiſtory, he might have deriv'd his M. jeſty's Genealogy, by Margaret of Scotland and Maud of England, much higher from the old Britiſh and Scotch Royal Families, long before the Saxons had any Footing in England; for the Britiſh and Scotch Royal Blood was mix'd very early, according to Leſley and Buchanan, who ſay, that Durſtus, the 11th King of Scotland, who began his Reign 107 Years before our Saviour's Birth, married Agaſia, Daughter to a King of the Britons; and Voada, the famous King of the Britons, mentioned by the Roman Hiſtorians, was Siſter to Caractacus, who came to the Scots Throne A. D. 29. Carantius, choſe King of the Britons in the Reign of the Emperor Valerianus, was Son to Athirco, who came to the Throne of Scotland A. D. 221. But if this be objected againſt as dubious, becauſe of its Antiquity, there is leſs reaſon to doubt what follows; for the Hiſtorians of both Nations agree, that Aurelius Ambroſius, who was choſe King of the Britons when the Romans left the Iſland, had no Iſſue but 2 Daughters; Anna, the Eldeſt, who married the King of the Picts, and Ada, the youngeſt, who married the King of the Scots. Mordredus King of the Picts, Grandſon to Aurelius by his Daughter Anna, did after his Grandfather's Death claim the Crown of the Britons, wherein he was ſupported by the Scots; but the Britons rejected and kept him out by the Help of the Saxons. Hungus, afterwards King of the Picts, and deſcended from Aurelius as above, married his Siſter Ferguſiana to Achaius King of Scots, and dying without Iſſue, the Scots Line had by this means both what's called the Hereditary and the Collateral Claim to the Crown of the Britons by Aurelius's two Daughters, and alſo to that of the Picts by Ferguſiana. Her Son Alpin, who ſucceeded as King of the Scots in 830, did accordingly claim the Pictiſh Crown, but fell in the Quarrel; yet his Son Keneth II. who ſucceeded in 834, made good his Title by an abſolute Conqueſt of the Picts. So early had the Scots Line, from whom his Majeſty is deſcended, the Hereditary Title to the Sovereignty of Great Britain, as being next in Blood to the Crowns of the Picts and Britons.

After this the Scots Kings fell Heirs both to the Daniſh and Saxon Kings of England thus. King Malcolm III. of Scotland, who came to the Crown in 1061, married Margaret Siſter to Edgar Atheling, the true Lineal Heir both of the Daniſh and Saxon Race; which Edgar dying without Iſſue, the Right fell to Queen Margaret's Poſterity, in whom centred at once the Hereditary Titles of the Scotiſh, Pictiſh, Britiſh, Daniſh and Saxon Royal Families.

Thus his Majeſty's Genealogy from the ancient Britiſh, Scots, Pictiſh, Daniſh and Saxon Royal Families of this Iſland, before William the Norman's Time, as he is derived from the Royal Line of Scotland, is made evident. We come next to ſhew his Deſcent from the Scotiſh, Norman, and Welſh Royal Families after William the Conqueror's Time, which will appear thus.

Henry I. of the Norman Race, and youngeſt Son to William ſurnamed the Conqueror, marry'd Mathilda Daughter to Malcolm III. King of Scotland, by his Queen Margaret, Siſter to Edgar Atheling abovementioned. Henry I. had by this Queen Mathilda his Daughter of the ſame Name, known by the Name of Maud the Empreſs, and afterwards Queen of England. Her Son Henry II. had a Daughter called alſo Maud, married to Henry the Lion, Duke of Bavaria, Saxony, Brunſwic-Lunenburg, &c. the greateſt Prince of the Empire in his time, from whom, by this Princeſs Maud, King George is lineally deſcended.

That his Majeſty is alſo derived from the Kings and Princes of Wales after the Saxon and Norman Conqueſt, appears thus: Walter, who by Office was Great Steward of Scotland, and from whom the Royal Family

Family of Stuart had their Origin and Name, was deſcended, according to the Scots Hiſtorians, from Banquho, Thane of Lochaber, whoſe Son Fleanchus fled from the Tyranny of Mackbeth, that had uſurped the Crown of Scotland in 1046, and retiring to Wales, married there a Daughter of the Prince of that Country, from whom Robert Stuart the firſt Scots King of that Family was the ſeventh Deſcendant.

His Majeſty is alſo deſcended from the Plantagenet Family by Joan, Daughter to the Earl or Duke of Sommerſet, Son to John of Gaunt, who was Queen to King James I. of Scotland. His Majeſty is twice deriv'd from Margaret Queen of Scotland, Daughter to King Henry VII. of England, firſt by King James V. her Son, and then by Lady Margaret Douglas, her Daughter by her ſecond Husband the Earl of Angus, this Lady being Mother to Henry Stuart, Lord Darnly, Father to King James V. of Scotland, Great Grandfather to King George. By Margaret, Daughter to Henry VII. who was the true Heireſs of the Family of Lancaſter, and of Cadwallader the laſt Prince of Wales, his Majeſty is again derived from the Houſe of Lancaſter, and the Royal Blood of Wales; and by her Daughter Lady Margaret Douglas, he is alſo derived from the Royal Family of Baliol, two of whom were Kings of Scotland; and by Mary Queen of Scots he is alſo deſcended from the Royal Family of Bruce, two of whom poſſeſſed the Scotiſh Crown; and by his own Mother the late incomparable Princeſs Sophia, Daughter to the Lady Elizabeth, who was Daughter to King James the Firſt of Britain and the Sixth of Scotland, his Majeſty has in his Veins the Blood of all the Royal Families that ever reigned in Great Britain, unleſs it be that of ſome of the petty Kings before the Roman Conqueſt, or during the Saxon Heptarchy.

Having thus traced his Majeſty's Genealogy from the Kings of Great Britain, we come next to the Family of Brunſwic. The Atlas Hiſtorique ſays, ſeveral Authors derive this Family from Actius King of Alba, Grandfather by the Mother's ſide to the Emperor Auguſtus. The Founder of the Family is by moſt Authors allowed to be Azo, or Albert d'Eſte, Great Marquis of Lombardy, Son to Hugh Marquis of Ferara, whom they derive from Auguſtus's Grandfather as above. Others ſuppoſe him to have been of German Extraction, and deſcended from Charlemain. Moſt of them agree, that he was a very powerful Prince in Lombardy, and Marquis of Tuſcany; that when the Emperor Conrad the Second returned to Germany, Azo followed him, and there married Cunigunda, the only Daughter of Guelph II. Earl of Altorf and Ravenſberg, and Siſter to Guelph III. who poſſeſſed himſelf of the Dutchy of Carinthia and the Veroneſe. This Lady being Great Grand-daughter to Otho I. ſirnamed the Great, brought the Imperial Blood of Saxony into the Family; and her Brother Guelph III. dying without Iſſue in 1055, his Dominions paſſed in her Right to her Son Guelph IV. from whom the ſecond, or preſent Guelphic Family, the moſt Illuſtrious Houſe of Brunſwic is deſcended. Albert, after Cunigunda's Death, married another Lady named Ermengard, by whom he had a Son called Azo, or Fulco, Lord of Eſte, from whom the Dukes of Modena in Italy are deſcended. Guelph IV. called the Valiant, ſucceeded his Father Albert, and was the firſt Duke of Bavaria of this Family, that Country and Title being given him by the Emperor Henry IV. in 1701, upon the Proſcription of the former Duke, whoſe Daughter Guelph married, but had no Iſſue by her. His ſecond Wife was Judith of Flanders, by whom he had Henry the Black, who married Wulfield, Daughter of Magnus Billing, Duke of Eaſt Saxony, which includes Lunenburg and Brunſwick. This Lady by her Father's ſide brought the Royal Blood of Denmark and Norway, and by the Mother's ſide that of Hungary into the Family. Henry the Proud ſucceeded his Father Henry the Black in 1191. He married Gertrudis Daughter to the Emperor Lotharius II. with whom he received the Dutchies of Saxony and Brunſwic, ſays the Atlas Hiſtorique. Lotharius deſigned him Succeſſor to the Empire, and ſent him the Imperial Ornaments; but Conrad III. being elected, he demanded them back, and being refuſed, complained of it to the Dyet of Goſlar, charged Henry with a Deſign to overturn the Conſtitution of the Empire, and alledged, he was incouraged to it by his overgrown Dominions, which reached from Denmark to Sicily, and by his Relation to many great Families in Germany and Italy. He alſo took notice of the Trouble that Henry's Anceſtor Hugo, Marquis of Ferrara, had given the Emperor Henry II. and prevailed with the Dyet to deprive Henry of the Dutchies of Bavaria and Saxony. Henry died this Year, but his Brother Guelph maintained his Pretenſions, carried on a War againſt Conrad with various Succeſs, but being cloſely beſieged by Conrad in Wemsberg, Anno 1140, he ſurrendered, on Condition that his Lady and others ſhould have leave to march unmoleſted thro' the Emperor's Camp with their beſt Jewels; upon which his Lady and the reſt came out with their Husbands at their Backs, and left all their Riches behind. This generous Stratagem ſo pleaſed the Emperor, that he pardoned Guelph and his Officers, and entred into an Alliance with him. Guelph recovered Saxony and Bavaria afterwards by Arms; but the Emperor obliged him to quit the latter, and took him with him to the Holy Land, where he died.

Henry the Lion, Son to Henry the Black, ſucceeded, and married Maud Daughter to Henry II. of England. He made a Journey to the Holy Land with a great Retinue of Princes, &c. The Emperor Barbaroſſa ſent an Embaſſy on his behalf to the Greek Emperor, who received him with the greateſt Magnificence. He performed the uſual Devotions at the Holy Sepulchre, was at great Expence in beautifying and repairing the Place, had a ſplendid Reception from the Sultan of the Turks, who called him Brother, made him many rich Preſents, and congratulated his Eſcape from an Ambuſh laid for him by a treacherous Saracen. He was by far the moſt powerful Prince of the Empire, his Dominions extending from the Elbe to the Rhine, beſides the Dutchies of Holſtein and Mecklemberg beyond the Elbe, which he conquered; and in length they reached from the German Ocean to the Confines of Italy. This overgrown Power drew upon him the Envy of other Princes, who incenſed Frederick Barbaroſſa againſt him, ſo that in a Dyet at Wurtsburg in 1179, or 1180, he was proſcribed, and his Dominions divided among other Princes. Upon this he retired to England, and by his Father-in Law's Interceſſion had Brunſwic and Lunenburg, and moſt of Lower Saxony, reſtored to him. Radovicus de Geſtis Fred. I. Imper. Lib. 4. Cap. 42. gives him the following Character. He was of a graceful Preſence, a ſtrong Body and extraordinary Genius. He affected generous Exerciſes, abhorred Sloth and Luxury, was modeſt and grave, had a Manly Severity of Temper, was a conſtant Terror to Offenders, and exceedingly beloved by good Men, whom he protected. His Courage was great, and his Actions conſiderable; yet was more deſirous of doing things that merited Applauſe, than of receiving it, and never loved to ſpeak of himſelf, but did Great Things with Little Pomp and Noiſe. This Author being his Cotemporary, deſerves the more Credit in what he ſays of him.

He had by Maud of England three Sons; 1. Henry, who was Count Palatine of the Rhine in Right of the Heireſs which he married. He had no Iſſue but 2 Daughters, one of whom married Otho the Illuſtrious Duke of Bavaria, and the other Herman, Marquis of Baden. Henry the Lion's ſecond Son was Otho IV. choſen Emperor of Germany in 1198. He was much favoured by his Uncle Richard I. of England, who made him Earl of Poictou in France, and York in England, where he was when elected Emperor againſt Philip Swabia, who with all his Adherents was Excommunicated by Pope Innocent III. becauſe he would not ſubmit to him. Otho maintained his Title with various Succeſs; and tho' at laſt forſaken by the Pope and moſt of his Friends, he would never quit his Claim, but held it reſolutely till the Death of his Rival Philip in 1208, when he was unanimouſly re-elected. He went to Rome, where the ſame Pope received him with great Joy, and Crowned him there in 1209. The ſolemn Oath which the Pope then impoſed upon him, contained among other Articles, that he ſhould obey the Holy See, and reſtore to it entire the Patrimony of St. Peter, which had been detained by ſeveral preceding Emperors; and alſo that he ſhould aſſert with all his Power the Dignity of the Empire, recover its Rights however diſperſed or alienated, and vigorouſly defend the ſame. The Pope did not conſider how far this laſt Clauſe extended; for after the Ceremony was over, Otho enquired carefully what Imperial Fiefs had been alienated and uſurped, and diſcovered the Biſhops of Rome to have been the chief Uſurpers; that they had poſſeſſed themſelves of Apuglia and Calabria, and diſpoſed of them as Fiefs of the Church to the King of Sicily; and that what they called the Patrimony of St. Peter, was a great Part of Italy, viz. the Mark of Ancona, the Dutchies of Tuſcany and Spoletto, &c. which were Imperial Fiefs, but had, contrary to all Right, been given in 1077 to the See of Rome by Mathildis, Wife to Guelph V. Brother to Henry the Black of Brunſwic, and Grand-Uncle to Otho. This Lady inherited the abovementioned Dominions with Lucca, Mantua, and Ferrara from her Father; but being Fiefs of the Empire, ſhe had no Right to diſpoſe of them without Conſent of the Dyet; therefore ſeveral of Otho's Predeceſſors had juſtly reſeiſed them, and the Houſe of Brunſwic's Pretenſions to them were confirmed by the Donation of the Emperor Frederick I.

Otho underſtanding this, did ſoon perceive that one part of his Oath muſt neceſſarily be broke, as inconſiſtent with the other; and conſidering that his Duty to the Empire was much leſs diſputable than his Obedience to the See of Rome, he not only refuſed to reſtore the Mark of Ancona, but recovered by Arms other Fiefs of the Empire which the See of Rome had uſurped. Upon this the Pope excommunicated him, pronounced him to have forfeited the Imperial Dignity, abſolved his Subjects from their Allegiance in 1210, and ſet up Frederick II. then King of Sicily, againſt him. Otho returned to Germany, where the Papal Faction prevailed. Rebellions were raiſed on every ſide by the Intereſt and Power of the Clergy, and many of the ſecular Princes fell off from him. On this Occaſion Otho made a pathetick Oration to the Dyet at Nuremburg in 1212; wherein he repreſented to them the Grounds of his Quarrel with the Pope, the unſufferable Avarice and Uſurpations of the See of Rome upon the Empire, how mean it was for the German Princes to be led and directed as Slaves to the Papacy, and what Dangers muſt enſue to their Right of Election, if they ſuffered the Popes to nominate and dethrone Emperors at Pleaſure. But notwithſtanding the Influence which this Speech had on ſeveral of the Princes, moſt of them, eſpecially the Archbiſhops of Mentz and Treves, and other Biſhops, elected Frederick. Otho being thus deſerted by thoſe whoſe Rights he maintained, and who, contrary to ſolemn Promiſes and perſonal Obligations, fell in with his Rival, ſaw it was in vain to ſtruggle at Home; therefore he joined his Forces with the Engliſh againſt his old Enemy Philip of France, and fought valiantly at Bovines in 1214; but the French getting the Victory, he retired to his own Dominions in Saxony, and retained the Imperial Title and Regalia till he died in 1218.

Otho leaving no Iſſue, his Brother William of Lunenburg, Henry the Lion's third Son, ſucceeded to his Dominions. He was born in England Anno 1184, during the Exile of his Parents, was ſirnamed Longſword, married Helena Daughter to Woldemar I. of Denmark, was taken in the Wars of Hungary in 1205, ranſomed himſelf by a great Sum, and died in 1213.

His Son Otho ſucceeded, but was ſoon involved in War. The two Sons-in-Law of Henry Count Palatine abovementioned, ſold their Rights in Brunſwic to the Emperor Frederick II. But Otho, unwilling to ſuffer ſuch an Alienation, ſeiſed that City in 1227, turned out the Emperor's Garriſon, and kept the Town till 1235, that by the Advice of his Friends he ſubmitted to the Emperor, who took it ſo well, that he reſtored him the Town; and for his Aſſiſtance againſt the Pope, who had ſet up Frederick's Son as his Rival, he created him Duke of Brunſwic. Thus, ſay Meibomius and Spener, thoſe Dominions which before this were Free and Hereditary to the Family, became Imperial Fiefs. Otho married Maud of Brandenburg, had Differences with the Archbiſhop of Bremen for the County of Stade, which he pleaded belonged to his Family. He had four Sons, the firſt of whom, John, was called Duke of Lunenburg, becauſe that Part of the Dominions fell to his Share, and continued in his Line for ſome time. But we paſs over that, and his Female Iſſue, and keep directly to thoſe who continued the Line from whom his Majeſty is deſcended.

Albert, ſirnamed the Great, ſecond Son to Otho, who died in 1252, ſucceeded to the Dominions of Brunſwic. He married Adelheid, Daughter to Henry the Magnanimous, Duke of Brabant, whoſe Portion was to be paid by his Kinſman Henry III. of England, who adviſed him to the Match. He made War upon the Archbiſhop of Mentz and Count Eberſtein, took them both Priſoners, and ordered the latter to be hung up by the Feet. He afterwards died of a Wound receiv'd in Battle againſt the Marquis of Miſnia in 1279. He had ſix Sons and a Daughter: The firſt Son was Henry the Wonderful, who founded the Line of Grubenhagen, which failed in 1596, when that Part of the Dominions returned return'd to the Line of Brunſwic. 'Tis proper here to obſerve, that Albert's Lady, after the Death of her Husband, wrote to Edward I. of England, deſiring him to take her Sons under his Protection, and putng him in mind to pay the Portion which he had jointly promis'd her, with his Father. And here we muſt alſo take notice, that Bremen muſt then have been in Poſſeſſion of the Family, becauſe Albert wrote to Edward I. in the behalf of the Townſmen, whom he calls his Subjects, there being then a Controverſy betwixt them and the Londoners about Trade.

His Second Son, Albert the Fat, continued the Line of Brunſwic, and inherited by his Father's Will the County of Gottingen. He marry'd a Princeſs of the Vandals, took Brunſwic and Wolfembuttel from his Brother William, dy'd in 1318, and left 8 Sons, who all dy'd without Iſſue, except the Eldeſt, Otho the Liberal, who had only a Daughter, that could not ſucceed by the Laws of the Country. Erneſt of Gottingen, the eighth Son's Line fail'd in his Grandſon, ſo that the ſeventh Son, Magnus, continued the Line: He ſucceeded his elder Brother, marry'd a Daughter of Brandenburg, dy'd in 1368, and left four Sons; the Eldeſt, Lewis, dy'd without Iſſue in 1358.

Magnus, ſirnamed Torquatus, the ſecond Son, ſucceeded: His Sirname was occaſion'd thus: He was very diſorderly in his Youth, and being much addicted to Arms, made his Father's Subjects and Neighbours very uneaſy; upon which that Prince endeavour'd to reclaim him by Admonitions and Letters; but finding it in vain, threaten'd to hang him if ever he caught him in the Field in a hoſtile Manner; which Magnus made ſo little Account of, that he put a Silver Chain about his own Neck, by way of Deriſion, ſaying, if his Father caught him he ſhould not be at a Loſs for ſomething to hang him by. After the Death of his Brother and Father, he had a great Controverſy with his Couſin William Duke of Lunenburg, and Albert Duke of Saxe-Lawenburg, about the Succeſſion of Lunenburg. Duke William favour'd Albert of Saxony, third Son of his ſecond Daughter, and ſollicited the Emperor Charles IV. to inveſt him as his Heir. The Emperor accordingly inveſted Albert, but Duke William changing his Mind he gave it to Magnus Torquatus. The Emperor taking this as an Affront, put Duke William into the Ban of the Empire. The Lunenburgers, not knowing what to do, demanded Security from Duke Magnus, that they might be indempnified if they acted contrary to the Emperor's Mind. He promis'd they ſhould, and on Duke William's Death took Poſſeſſion. The Dukes of Saxe-Lawenburg diſputed it, and procur'd the Emperor's Mandate for Admiſſion, but Magnus ſtill kept them out: Having ſeveral of his great Men taken in his War with the Duke of Mecklemburg, he agreed to pay him a Sum for their Ranſom; and becauſe the Senate of Lunenburg would not advance it, he quarrel'd with them, upon which they admitted Duke Albert of Saxony, abovemention'd, to be their Prince: Magnus drove him out by Force, for which he was put under the Ban of the Empire. In 1372, the Difference was referr'd to the Deciſion of the Emperor, who ſummon'd both to appear; but Magnus failing to do ſo, Judgment was given againſt him: Upon this a Battle enſued in 1373, wherein Duke Magnus was baſely ſtabb'd in the Back, as he ſingled out Count Otho of Schawenburg, who took part with Albert. Magnus marry'd a Daughter of Brandenburg, by whom he left four Sons: The firſt Frederick was elected Emperor, but was ſlain in his Return from the Dyet, and left only two Daughters, one married to the Houſe of Auſtria, and another to the Count of Schwartsburg, ſo that his ſecond Brother Bernard I. ſucceeded. He marry'd a Daughter of Saxony, was taken Priſoner in Battle, ranſom'd himſelf for 7000 Livres of Gold, dy'd in 1434, and left two Sons, the firſt dy'd without Iſſue, and the ſecond, Frederick, ſucceeded. He was a very pious Prince, marry'd Magdalen Daughter to Frederick I. Elector of Brandenburg, built a Cloyſter at Zell, to live retired, in 1458, and reſigned the Government to his Son Bernard II. who dying in 1464, without Iſſue, Frederick reſumed the Government, and afterwards put it into the Hands of his ſecond Son, Otho, named the Conqueror, or Magnanimous, who marry'd Anne Daughter to John Count of Naſſau-Dillenburg, and dy'd in 1471, before his Father, who dy'd in 1478.

His Son Henry Duke of Lunenburg ſucceeded, marry'd Margaret Daughter to Erneſt Elector of Saxony, aſſiſted his Kinſman Henry Duke of Wolfembuttle againſt the Frieſlanders, and dy'd in 1532. He left three Sons: The firſt was Otho, who affecting Retirement, reſign'd the Dutchy to his ſecond Brother Erneſt, contented himſelf with an annual Penſion, and a Reſidence at Harburg, was twice marry'd, and founded the Line of Harburg, which was extinguiſhed in 1642.

His ſecond Brother Erneſt continued the Family, marry'd Sophia Daughter to Henry Duke of Mecklemburg. He was the firſt Proteſtant Prince of this Family, and his Brother Otho abovementioned, and his other Brother Duke Francis, were of the ſame Religion. Erneſt and he, with the Elector of Saxony, George Marquis of Brandenburg, and the Prince of Anhalt, were amongſt thoſe who ſign'd the Proteſt, in 1529, againſt the Dyet of Spire, for hindering the Reformation; from which Proteſt the Name of Proteſtants was firſt deriv'd. Duke Erneſt, and thoſe Princes, did likewiſe ſubſcribe the famous Confeſſion of Augsburg, and preſented it to the Emperor Charles V. in the Dyet at Augsburg, Anno 1530; wherein they were join'd by John Frederick Duke of Saxony, the Landgrave of Heſſe, and the Senates of Nuremberg and Rentling. They alſo ingaged in the League of Smalcald, made betwixt ſeveral Proteſtant Princes and Cities, for mutual Defence, if attack'd on account of Religion. Among thoſe Cities were Brunſwic, Gottingen, and Hanover, all in the Dominions of the Family. Duke Erneſt dy'd in 1546, and left by his Wife, four Sons, all Proteſtants: The two eldeſt dy'd without Iſſue, and the third, Henry, reſolving at firſt upon a ſingle Life, gave up the Dutchy of Lunenburg to his younger Brother William, reſerving to himſelf the ſmall Principality of Danneberg; but changing his Mind afterwards, he marry'd a Daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Lawenburg, and by her Iſſue formed the Line of Wolfembuttle.

William, abovemention'd, founded the Branch of Zell, and from him our King George is deſcended. William marry'd Dorothy Daughter to Chriſtian III. of Denmark, became Heir to the Dominions of Frederick Count of Diepholt, and dy'd in 1592. He had ſeven Sons, all Proteſtants, who all died without Iſſue, except the ſixth, George Prince of Calemberg, or Duke of Hanover, on whom the Dominions devolved: He was the firſt of that Line, continued the Family, and was Grandfather to our King George: He marry'd Anne-Eleanor Daughter to Lewis Prince of Heſſe D' Armſtad, gave Proofs of his Valour at the taking of Colmar, deliver'd Lunenburg from the Swedes, and died in 1641. He left four Sons: 1. Chriſtian-Lewis Duke of Lunenburg-Zell, a Proteſtant, who died in 1665, without Iſſue. 2. George-William who ſucceeded his Father, marry'd Eleanora-Deſmires Daughter to Alexander Lord of Olbreuze, by whom he had Sophia-Dorothea his only Child, born in 1666, and married in 1682, to George-Lewis, now our King, Son to his Brother Erueſt-Auguſtus, of whom more anon. George-William died in 1705, and our King, in Right of his Lady Sophia, became Heir to the Dutchies of Luuenburg and Zell.

George Prince of Calemberg's third Son, was John-Frederick Duke of Hanover, a Papiſt. He married Benedicta-Henrietta-Philippa Daughter of Edward Prince Palatine, Brother to the Princeſs Sophia our King's Mother. He left only two Daughters: The firſt married to the Duke of Modena in 1695; the ſecond Wilhelmina-Amelia married in 1699, to the late Emperor Joſeph then King of the Romans and Hungary, and is now Empreſs Dowager.

Duke George's fourth Son was Erneſt-Auguſtus a Proteſtant, and Father to our King. He married in 1658, Sophia Daughter to Frederick V. Elector Palatine, (Crown'd King of Bohemia in 1619.) by Elizabeth only Daughter to King James I. of Great Britain. He was made Biſhop, or rather Prince of Oſnabrug in 1662, and ſucceeding his Brother Duke John, who had no Male Iſſue. He was afterwards created Elector of Brunſwic-Lunenburg, of which 'tis proper here to give a ſhort Hiſtory.

THE Proteſtant Powers in the Empire, having loſt Ground by the Devolution of the Electorate Palatine to the Popiſh Line of Newburg, upon the Death of the Proteſtant Elector Charles-Lewis, Nephew to the Princeſs Sophia of Hanover, without Heirs Male, it was thought reaſonable that a new Proteſtant Electorate ſhould be erected. This was concerted by the late King William of Great Britain, and other Potentates, in a Congreſs at the Hague, Anno 1691. They agreed that the fitteſt Perſon was Duke Erneſt-Auguſtus of Hanover, becauſe he had married a Proteſtant Daughter of the Palatine Family, ſhe being alſo Grandaughter to King James I. of Great Britain: They conſider'd likewiſe, that Duke Erneſt's Perſonal Merit was uncontrovertible, and the Dignity of the Family of Brunſwic ſuch, that they had the firſt Seat in the College of Princes at the Dyet, and were one of the moſt conſiderable in the Empire for Antiquity, Wealth and Power. This being repreſented to the Emperor Leopold, he was willing to teſtify his Gratitude to the Proteſtants for their gallant Aſſiſtance in his War againſt France; and being alſo deſirous to engage them further in his Intereſt, he readily agreed to it; but ſeveral German Princes, among whom was the Duke of Brunſwic Wolfembuttle, oppos'd it, out of Spite and Envy. The Emperor order'd it, however, to be put to the Queſtion in the College of Electors, where it was carried in the Affirmative, and a Reſolve accordingly drawn up in Form, and ſign'd at Ratisbon, Octob. 17. 1692, thus; "That in Conſideration of the great Merit of his Highneſs the Duke of Hanover, and his Predeceſſors, as alſo of his Power, "the conſiderable Rank which he held in the Empire, the Succours "which he had already granted, and others which he had promiſed, "and for other weighty Reaſons, the Dignity of Elector ſhould be "conferr'd on him and his Heirs Male.

The College of Princes immediately entered their Proteſt againſt this Reſolve, as contrary to the Laws of the Empire, becauſe done without their Conſent: Nevertheleſs, the Emperor gave the Inveſtiture at Vienna, December 29. 1692, by delivering the Electoral Cap to the Duke of Hanover's Plenipotentiaries, and declaring him Elector and Gonſalonier, or STANDARD-BEARER, of the Empire. The Pope ſtorm'd, proteſted, and would have annull'd the Imperial Decree; by another from the Vatican; but not daring to venture upon that, he forbad all Perſons to own the new Elector. But notwithſtanding all the Oppoſition of the Pope, and other Princes, yet June 30, 1708, the three Colleges of the Empire agreed to the Eſtabliſhment of this new Electorate, in the Perſon of that Elector's eldeſt Son, George-Lewis, (now King of Great Britan) with all the Formality and Strength which the Laws of the Empire could give it. But the Title and Office of Standard-Bearer, which was annexed to the Dignity of this Electorate, being alſo claimed by the Duke of Wirtemberg, as belonging to his Family, that of ARCH-TREASURER of the Empire was given to the Elector of Brunſwic inſtead of it, in 1709. The Elector Palatine, who had it before, being, upon the Proſcription of the Elector of Bavaria, reſtored to the ancient Prerogative of the Palatine Family, as firſt Secular Elector, and Arch-Steward: But the Elector of Bavaria being ſince reſtored, and the Elector of Hanover's Pretenſions to the Office and Dignity neglected at the Treaty of Utrecht, the Controverſy with the Elector Palatine, about that Affair, is not yet determined.

Duke Erneſt, Father to our King, had five younger Sons, the ſecond, fourth and fifth were killed in the Emperor's Service againſt the Turks and French, and left no Iſſue. The third, Prince Maximilian turned Papiſt, and is now one of the Emperor's Generals, but not yet married; the ſixth, Prince Erneſt, a zealous and learned Proteſtant, is, according to the Treaty of Weſtphalia, choſen Biſhop of Oſnabrug, and not yet married. Duke Erneſt had only one Daughter, Sophia-Charlotte, married to Frederick King of Pruſſia; ſhe died in 1705, and left Iſſue, of which in their Place.

George-Lewis, the Elector Erneſt's eldeſt Son, now our King, has by Princeſs Sophia-Dorothea of Zell, 1. His Royal Highneſs George-Auguſtus Prince of Wales, born October 30, 1683, he married, Auguſt 22, 1705, Wilhelmina-Charlotta Daughter of John-Frederick Marquis of Brandenburg-Anſpach: Her Royal Highneſs, beſides being an accompliſh'd Princeſs in all other Reſpects, has this further Merit, that tho' the preſent Emperor, when King of Spain, propoſed Marriage to her, ſhe preferr'd her Religion to the greateſt Dignity in Chriſtendom; which raiſed her Character ſo high in the Eſteem of the Elector of Hanover, that he juſtly conceived her to be the fitteſt Match for the Prince, whom Heaven has bleſſed with the following Iſſue by her. 1. Prince Frederick-Lewis, born January 19, 170$\frac{6}{7}$. 2. Princeſs Anne, born October 22, 1709. 3. Princeſs Amelia-Sophia-Eleanora, born May 30, 1711. 4. Princeſs Elizabeth-Carolina, born, May 30, 1713.

His Majesty King George has also a Daughter, Princess Sophia-Dorothea, born March 16, 168⅞. and marry'd in 1706, to Frederic-William King of Prussia, Son to Frederick King of Prussia, by her Aunt Sophia-Charlotta above-mention'd, and has Issue by him one Son, Charles-Frederick, born Jan. 13, 17¹¹₁₂. and two Daughters, viz. Frederica-Augusta, born June 22, 1709, and Frederica-Louisa, born Septemb. 17, 1714.

'Tis fit to observe here, that as his Majesty's Grandfather Frederick, Elector Palatine and King of Bohemia, and his Grandmother Princess Elizabeth of Great Britain, were deprived not only of the Elective Crown of Bohemia, but of their Hereditary Dominions in Germany, by the House of Austria, for their firm Adherence to the Protestant Religion; his Majesty, by the over-ruling Hand of Providence, is not only advanced to the Dignity of an Hereditary Elector in the Empire, but to the Hereditary Crowns of Great Britain and Ireland, by the Concurrence of the same House of Austria; so that the Protestant Offspring of those Royal Confessors is amply rewarded and advanced to an higher Degree of Honour than what they themselves lost: for besides his Majesty's Advancement, their Grandaughter, his Sister, was honour'd with the Hereditary Crown of Prussia, and their Great-Grandson and Great Grandaughter are now possess'd of the same Dignity; and besides his Majesty, now happily in Possession of the British Sceptre, there are already 11 other Protestant Princes and Princesses of the King and Queen of Bohemia's Offspring, entitled to the Reversion of it by our Laws.

Having brought his Majesty's Genealogy and Line as far as we can, we shall next take a short View of the other Branches of the illustrious House of Brunswic.

The first is that of Grubbenhagen, descended from Henry the Wonderful, Duke of Brunswic, eldest Son of Albert the Great, the Line of Brunswic being continued by the second Son Albert the Fat, as above. Henry the Wonderful dy'd in 1322, and by his Wife Agnes of Misnia had four Sons and three Daughters; one of the latter, call'd Adelheid by the Germans, and Irene by the Greeks, was married in 1318 to Andronicus II. of the Paleologi, Emperor of Constantinople. His eldest Son, call'd Henry the Younger, accompany'd his Brother-in-Law Andronicus to the Holy Land, dy'd in 1357, and by his Wife Helena of Brandenburg left two Sons, Otho and Balthasar. Otho succeeded, was also Prince of Tarento in Italy, and marry'd Joan I. Queen of Naples in 1376. He was very kind to Pope Urban VI. before his Exaltation to the Pontificate: But that Pope was so ungrateful and insolent, that Otho holding the Cup to him at Dinner on his Knee, he let him kneel so long before he took it, that the Cardinals, asham'd at his treating so great a Prince in that manner, told him it was time for him to drink. Urban used him worse afterwards, for Otho perceiving he was like to have no Children by his Queen, perswaded her to adopt his Cousin Charles de Duras, and marry him to her Neice. Notwithstanding this extraordinary Kindness, Charles was prevail'd on by the Pope to rebel against Otho and Joan. Upon this Otho besieg'd Charles in Naples, and brought him to great Distress; but the Rebel deliver'd himself by the following knavish Stratagem: He suborn'd an old Neapolitan Soldier, in whom Otho and Joan had much Confidence, to counterfeit the Signet of the Queen, then besieg'd in Castelnuovo by Charles's Adherents, and in her Name to write to Otho, that with six of his Confidents he should come to her that Night, by a secret Way that she nam'd, otherwise she must surrender, and fall into the Hands of her Enemies, but had something to propose to him that would prevent it. Otho believing this, went accordingly, was intercepted by an Ambush, and put in Prison. This made his Men break up the Siege, which gave Charles an Opportunity to take and put the Queen to Death. Otho escap'd from Prison after three Years, renew'd the War, punish'd the Chief Neapolitans severely for their Treachery, and pardon'd the rest, upon their Petition, but upbraided them with Tears in his Eyes, for their Treachery to himself and his Queen, who had used them so tenderly. Many Years before this, Otho challenged Henry Duke of Lancaster to a Combat, for some injurious Words: the Place appointed was the Clergy's Mead near Paris, where both appear'd; but the Duke of Lancaster denying the Words, King John of France put an End to the Quarrel, with a Salvo for both their Honours, and declar'd that it proceeded from Misinformation. Otho dy'd in 1388, without Issue, as did his second Brother Balthasar, Count of Fundi in Right of his Wife, being put to Death by the Rebel Charles in 1381. So that the Line was continued by his fourth Brother Ernest; but the Male Issue failing in 1596, the Principality came to Julius Duke of Brunswic, of which Line we come next to give an Account, after it came to be distinguish'd from Lunenburg. The former was founded by Magnus Torquatus's third Son Henry, who dy'd in 1416, and the latter was continued by Torquatus's second Son Bernard, who dy'd in 1434, as we have heard before in our King's Genealogy: the eldest Son Frederick the Emperor having left no Male Issue, Henry of Brunswic marry'd Sophia Daughter to the Duke of Pomerania, dy'd in 1473, and was succeeded by his Son William, call'd the Victorious, because he defeated the Hussites in Bohemia: He marry'd Cecilia Daughter to Frederick I. Elector of Brandenburg, dy'd in 1482, and was succeeded by his Son William, who marry'd a Daughter of Pomerania, laid Siege to Brunswic, rais'd it on Conditions, dy'd at the Siege of Orth in Friesland, in 1514, and was succeeded by his Son Henry, who lived a most violent Papist, but dy'd a Protestant in 1568. His Son Julius by Mary of Wirtemberg succeeded, was a zealous Protestant, marry'd Hedwige Daughter to Joachim the Second, Elector of Brandenburg, founded the University of Julius at Helmstad, and dy'd in 1589. His Son Henry-Julius succeeded, marry'd first Dorothy of Saxony, then Elizabeth of Denmark, besieged Brunswic in vain, dy'd in 1613, and left four Sons, all Protestants, none of whom having Issue, the Dominions fell to Augustus of the Line of Lunenburg-Daneberg, in 1634, now call'd the House of Brunswic-Wolfembuttle: Which Line we shall next describe.

It was founded by Ernest of Lunenburg's third Son Henry, a Protestant, who resolving at first on a single Life, gave up to his younger Brother William the Dutchy of Lunenburg, as already mentioned, reserving to himself only the small Principality of Daneberg, but afterwards marry'd a Daughter of Sax-Lawemburg, dy'd in 1598, and was succeeded by his Son Augustus, who dy'd in 1666, and by his second Wife Dorothy of Anhault had a Son named Rudolphus-Augustus, who succeeded, took the Town of Brunswic, dy'd in 1704, and having no Male Issue, the Dominions came to his second Brother Anthony Ulrick; he marry'd a Daughter of Holstein-Norburg, had the Character of a very learned Prince, was famous for his noble Library, and continued a Protestant till the 76th Year of his Age, when some cunning Priests taking the Opportunity of his Dotage, prevail'd upon him, by Promises of great Advantages to his Family, to turn Papist: he seem'd however to be but an awkard Convert, dy'd in 1714, and was succeeded by his Son Augustus-William, a Protestant, who marry'd a Daughter of Holstein-Gottorp: He left also another Protestant Son call'd Lewis-Rodolphus, marry'd to a Daughter of the Prince of Oetingen. Duke Anthony left three Daughters, 1. Elizabeth-Christiana, who turn'd Papist, and marry'd the present Emperor Charles VI. by whom she has a Daughter. 2. Charlotta-Christiana, a Protestant, who in 1711 marry'd Alexius-Petrowitz, late Prince Royal of Muscovy; she dy'd in 1716, but has left a Son by him, who was declared uncapable of the Succession, and the same was settled by the Czar on another Son of his own by a second Marriage; but he died since in 1719.

The next Branch is that of Bevern, which was founded by Ferdinand-Albert, third Son to Duke Augustus of Brunswic-Wolfembuttle; he marry'd a Daughter of the Landgrave of Hesse, dy'd in 1687, and is succeeded by his Son Ferdinand-Albert, a Lieutenant General in the Emperor's Service.

By all this it appears, that the Family is one of the most ancient and illustrious in Europe, is descended from, and has intermarry'd with most, if not all, the Sovereign Families in Christendom; that there have been two Emperors of Germany, and an Empress of Constantinople of this Family, besides an Empress Dowager of Germany, and an Empress Consort now living; that the Kings of Sweden, Denmark, Poland, and Prussia, the Electors of Bavaria and the Palatinate, the Dukes of Modena, the Families of Hesse, Baden, Mecklemburg, and several Princes of the House of Saxony are also descended from them. It appears likewise, by the Genealogies of the Family, exhibited by the Atlas Historique, and Mr. Disney, that there has been one Cardinal, 18 Archbishops and Bishops, all Princes of the Empire, of the House of Brunswic; but 'tis particularly to be noted, as to his Majesty's Line, that it exceeds all the other Branches of the Family for Antiquity and Splendor of Descent, as having not only all that they can pretend to, but also the additional Honour of being descended from all the Royal Families that ever bore Sway in Great Britain; that he is the 20th Sovereign of the Family of Brunswic by Lineal Descent, the 50th Sovereign of England, and has the Blood of all the English Princes in his Veins since the Heptarchy was united in the Person of Egbert till the Reign of King Charles I. and that he is the 112th King of Scotland, as appears by the History and Genealogy of those Kings, by whom he has also the Blood Royal of France and Burgundy. And this is farther to be said for his German Ancestors, that they have always signaliz'd themselves by their Bravery, and by their stedfast Adherence to the Reformation, almost from the Beginning: And it was a particular Providence that brought his Majesty to the Throne of Great Britain, for the Support of the Protestant Interest, when it was in the greatest Danger that it has been at any time since the Reformation began in England.

XIII. The County of WERNIGENROD, is for the most part inclosed by his Majesty's Dominions, except on the West, where it has part of Halberstad, and on the North has that part of the King's Dominions call'd Hartzwalt; it is about 16 Miles from South to North, and 10 where broadest, from East to West: It belongs to the Count of Stolberg. It has only some Villages; for Elbingrod, formerly reckon'd its chief Town, lies in the King's Dominions, about 4 Miles South-West from Blankenburg, and is not considerable; therefore this County is commonly reckon'd a Part of that of Blankenburg or Reinstein.

XIV. The Dutchy of MAGDEBURG, has Part of Brunswic and the Marquisate of Brandenburg on the West, Part of the same Marquisate on the North and East, and the County of Barbi and the Principality of Anhalt on the South and South-East. 'Tis of a very unequal Form, because much indented by those Dominions: 'Tis near 70 Miles long from South to North, and 60 where broadest, from East to West. This Country is very fruitful in Corn, abounds with Wood in the Eastern Parts, and is well inhabited. The Name is derived from its Capital, in Lat. 52. 15. Long. 12 ½. 50 Miles East from Brunswic: 'Tis as ancient a City as most in Germany; some take it to be Ptolomy's Vesovium, others say it was founded by Drusus and his Son Germanicus, in the Time of Augustus. The Name signifies Maiden Town, which some ascribe to Venus's being worshipped there, till her Image and Temple were destroy'd by Charlemain's Order, who built St. Stephens Church there, with its Treasure. It was first wall'd, about 940, by the Emperor Otho the First, and inlarged by his Empress Edgitha, Daughter to our Saxon King Edred. The Cathedral is supposed to be of her Foundation, for Dr. Brown observes, 'tis a very fair Structure, after the English Model, and has the Effigies of that Empress in Stone, with a Representation of a great Sum of Gold, which she gave for building it. That Emperor prevailed with the Pope to make it the See of an Archbishop, who was to be Primate of Germany, and subject to none in Spirituals but the See of Rome. This was opposed by the three Spiritual Electors, and the Bishop of Saltzburg, who refused to own him as Primate. The first Tournaments in Germany were appointed here, by the Emperor Henry the Fowler, in 638, where none were admitted but the ancient Nobility, of a clear Reputation, especially in their Conduct towards Ladies: One only of a Family was allow'd at a time. Princes were allow'd 4 'Squires, Counts and Barons 3, Knights 2, and Gentlemen 1. Those who enter'd the Lists gave in their Names and Quality at the President's Lodging, in the Presence of three Heralds, who were to see that he was Noble both by Father and Mother. The Heralds held their Helmets and Swords till they confess'd themselves, and then they enter'd the Lists. Their Horses were to be without Defect, their Furniture according to Rule, their Saddles without rising before or behind; and after Performance the Judges gave Sentence, and the Conqueror had the Prize given him by some Lady, or the Prince who furnish'd it; but these Pastimes were abolish'd afterwards, because they raised such an Emulation and Envy amongst the Nobility, that that ſeveral of them kill'd one another, on the Spot. This City had formerly the ſupreme Juriſdiction in Spirituals and Temporals, over all Saxony, and Otho I. made it Imperial. Their Archbiſhop was a Count Palatine, and determined all Cauſes; but theſe things are altered ſince the Chapter embraced Luther's Reformation in 1566, when they choſe Joachim-Frederick, Son to the Elector of Brandenburg, Adminiſtrator; for which, and refuſing the Interim, it loſt the Title of an Archbiſhoprick. Joachim ſucceeding to the Electorate, they choſe his Brother Chriſtian-William, who held it till May 10, 1631, that Tilly the Imperial General ſtormed the Town after a long Siege, and ordered his Men to ſpare neither Age nor Sex, Church or private Houſe, and to extirpate the Name of the Inhabitants. They ripped up Women with Child, murdered ſucking Infants before their Parents Faces, and raviſhed young Women in the open Streets; to prevent which many of them run into the Elbe, and others into the Fire, before Tilly's Face. Sixteen Churches and Chapels, many of them cover'd with Lead, and one with Copper, were burnt down, as were all the Houſes, except a few Fiſhermen's Cottages; and of 40000 Citizens, not above 400 eſcaped, deſtitute of all Support. The brutiſh Popiſh General did afterwards boaſt of it in his Cups, and call'd it the Marriage-Feaſt of Magdeburg, alluding to the Name of the Town. He ſpared the Cathedral for the ſake of its Altars and Reliques: 'Tis a very magnificent Structure, has Forty nine Altars, and the High-Altar in the Choir, of one Stone of divers Colours curiouſly wrought, 9 Hamburgh Ells long, four broad, and one thick, ſo that 'tis valu'd at two Tun of Gold. Here is alſo in one of the Chapels a Tomb of the Emperor Otho and his Wife Edgitha. Dr. Brown ſays, that in the Cathedral of St. Maurice, there are the Statues of the five wiſe Virgins ſmiling at the five fooliſh ones lamenting, extremely well done. Among other Reliques they pretend to ſhew the Baſon in which Pilate waſh'd his Hands, and the Ladder on which the Cock crow'd when St. Peter denied his Maſter. In the Ruins of the Auſtin Friars, of which Luther was one, there's his Chamber, Bedſtead, and Table, with an Inſcription over the Door in German Verſe, importing ſo much. When the Town was ſtorm'd, the Adminiſtrator was carried Priſoner to Auſtria, where he turn'd Papiſt, after which the Chapter choſe Auguſtus, Son to the Elector of Saxony, who continued till his Death in 1680. By the Treaty of Weſtphalia, the Archbiſhoprick was ſeculariz'd, and annexed as a Dutchy to the Electorate of Brandenburg, which it was accordingly, upon the Death of the laſt Adminiſtrator, and has added 600000 Crowns per Ann. to the Revenue of the Family. The Electors of Brandenburg have been very liberal to the Town, and fortified it well, ſo that it has a good Trade, and is of conſiderable Extent, but it has never recovered its ancient State. The Inhabitants have built one ſtately Church, and the Jeſuits have a very fine one, the three Religions being allowed here according to the Treaty of Weſtphalia. The City is now govern'd by Burgomaſters and Magiſtrates, under the Elector. There are twenty eight other Towns in this Dutchy, but don't merit a particular Deſcription.

XV. The Principality of HALBERSTAT lies South from Brunſwic, and South-Weſt from Magdeburg, is about 40 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and 15 where broadeſt from South to North. It is fruitful in Corn, abounds with pleaſant Foreſts and Plenty of Veniſon. Hækel, a large Park in the middle of the Country, gives name to the ancient Family of Hackelborne. The North-Weſt Part is full of Fens and Marſhes, thro' which there are Dykes and Roads caſt up to Brunſwic, Helmſtad, &c. The Name comes from the Capital; Lat. 52. Long. 11. 45. 30 Miles North-Weſt from Magdeburg, 30 South-Eaſt from Brunſwic. 'Tis ſuppoſed by ſome to be Ptolomy's Φυγεσγ; but others think 'tis derived from the German Word Halbſtad, which ſignifies half the Town, becauſe the firſt Foundations were double the Extent of the preſent Town. 'Twas made a Biſhoprick by Charlemain in 780, who transferred the See hither from Oſterwic. Hiſtorians give an Account of 48 of their Biſhops, moſt of them of the Houſe of Brunſwic, and more remarkable for their Exploits in War than their Learning. Their 15th Biſhop Ramhard, defeated the Emperor Henry V. in the Woods of Welfo. Their 18th Ulrick, was routed by Henry the Lion Duke of Brunſwic, who burnt the Town, with the Citizens and Clergy that fled to the Cathedral. Their 29th, Albert of Brunſwic, fought twenty Battels, and gain'd moſt of 'em over his Rivals, whom ſeveral Popes ſet up againſt him. Their 31ſt, was Albert a great Philoſopher, who being defeated by Gerrard the Eloquent, Biſhop of Hildeſheim, it occaſioned a Jeſt, That Rhetorick was too hard for Logick. Their 44th, was Henry-Julius of Brunſwic, elected when two Years old, and when of Age, he introduced Luther's Reformation in 1591. He was ſucceeded by his Son, an Infant, who ſoon died, and then by two of his Brothers, the laſt of whom, Chriſtian, took part with the Proteſtants in the Civil Wars of Germany, was a great, but unfortunate, Captain. Their 48th and laſt Biſhop was Leopold-William of Auſtria, who being put in by the Imperialiſts when they took the Town, reſtored Popery, but the Swedes retook the City, re-eſtabliſh'd Lutheraniſm, and kept Poſſeſſion till the Biſhoprick was ſecularized and given to the Elector of Brandenburg, by the Treaty of Weſtphalia. The Town is well built, lies upon the ſmall River Hotteim; the Streets are ſtreight and uniform, and many of the Buildings ſtately. The moſt remarkable Thing here, is the Inn, named the Commiſs, reckoned the largeſt in Europe, and having the moſt and beſt Accommodations of the Sort, ſo that Count Wallenſtein, the Imperial General, kept his Court in it for ſome Months, and found Lodgings there for all his Attendants and Guards.

Other Places of Note are,

1. Gruningen, 10 Miles farther Eaſt. 'Tis a ſmall Town, with a large Caſtle, formerly the Reſidence of their Biſhops. Here's a curious Chapel gilt all over on the Inſide, with fine Galleries, and a large gilt Organ. 'Twas built by Biſhop Henry-Julius, and here's alſo a large Tun for Wine, in Imitation of that at Heidelberg, but not ſo large, yet it contains 966 Hogſheads of Wine.

2. Oſterwick, a ſmall ſtrong Town, formerly the Biſhop's See, on the River Iſle, 15 Miles Weſt from Halberſtad.

3. Guedenburg, a ſmall City near the Frontiers of this Principality, purchas'd in 1698, by the King of Pruſſia from the Elector of Saxony.

XVI. The Abbacy of Quedlinburg lies in the Confines of this Principality, but being Part of the Circle of Upper Saxony, we ſhall deſcribe it there.

III. The Circle of UPPER SAXONY,

LIES Eaſt from that of Lower Saxony, and part of the Circle of the Upper Rhine, and North-Eaſt from that of Franconia. Its Extent from the Borders of Franconia, on the South-Weſt, to the furtheſt Part of Pomerania, on the North-Eaſt, is 370 Miles; but the Breadth is very unequal, being contracted in the middle, and indented with other Dominions on all Sides. The greateſt Breadth from Eaſt to Weſt, is in the Dominions of the Houſe of Saxony on the South, where it is about 170 Miles, and in the Dominions of the Houſe of Brandenburg, on the North, where the Extent is much the ſame; the Elector of Saxony is the ſole Director of this Circle. The Country in general is fruitful in Corn, eſpecially in the Dominions of the Houſe of Saxony. Here are alſo Vines in ſome Parts, and Mines of Tin and Lead. The Inhabitants, in general, are Brave and Warlike, but reckon'd very haughty, and the Saxons, in particular, accounted the greateſt Drinkers in Germany. We ſhall deſcribe the Dominions contain'd in this Circle, beginning at the North.

I. POMERANIA or POMEREN, divided formerly betwixt the King of Sweden, and the Elector of Brandenburg, from whence the Weſt Part was call'd Swediſh, and the Eaſt, Brandenburg-Pomerania. The Extent of both from Eaſt to Weſt, is about 175 Miles, and the greateſt Extent from South to North, about 65, it being indented by a great Bay of the the Baltic, with ſeveral Iſlands on the North. It has Mecklemberg and Part of the Marquiſate of Brandenburg on the Weſt, Part of Pruſſia and Poland on the Eaſt, and of the Marquiſate of Brandenburg on the South. The Name is derived from its Situation on the Coaſt. Hiſtorians ſay it was anciently ſubject to Poland, and had afterwards Dukes of its own. It was then of a much larger Extent, including Pomerania, Caſſubia, and a great Part of both Old and New Brandenburg; it lay alſo farther into the Baltic, but thoſe Parts, with ſome of the Iſle of Rugen, were ſwallow'd up by the Sea. The Air is reckon'd the coldeſt in Germany. The Soil in moſt Parts is ſandy, and their Corn-Fields frequently ſpoil'd by Sand in tempeſtuous Winds. In other Parts they have enough for their own Conſumption and Tranſport. Here are many large Woods and Foreſts, which abound with Deer, wild Boars, Hares, Foxes, Wolves, wild Horſes, wild black Cattle and Fowls of all Sorts: Here are alſo Bevers, and ſuch Plenty of Water-Fowl, that they reckon twenty Sorts of wild Ducks. They have great Plenty of Salt and Freſh Water Fiſh, and particularly Salmon and Lampreys of a very great Size, eſpecially in the Bay of Stetin and Lake of Laſſen; and about Grypſwald and Rugen they have good Herring-Fiſhing. There are many fair and fruitful Meadows betwixt the Branches of the Oder, and as great a Quantity of Fruits of all ſorts as any Province in Germany. They have no Wine of their own Growth, but excellent Mum, and Beer of ſeveral Sorts. There are ſome Iron Mines in Upper Pomerania. This Country abounds with Amber, as well as Pruſſia, eſpecially on the Coaſts of Brandenburg-Pomerania, about Dantzic and Oliva, &c. where it is not only thrown up by the Sea, and found among the Sea-Weeds and Sands, but alſo dug out of the Rocks and Mines. The Way of finding out the Veins, was diſcover'd by the Care of the late Elector of Brandenburg, Frederick-William, who appointed Officers to overſee the Workmen, and to prevent their imbezzling the Amber when found: He made likewiſe excellent Regulations about it, and raiſed conſiderable Sums from it: 'Tis frequently dug out of the Ground at a great Diſtance from the Sea, and many times found by the Husbandman as they plow their Land. In ſome Places 'tis found in a Matrix of Wood, which the skilful know at Sight, and take it out of the Wood. Authors differ about the Derivation of it, as we have mention'd already in the Deſcription of Pruſſia. The Curious may ſee a large Diſſertation upon this Subject in Lowther's Philoſoph. Tranſ. Vol. II. p. 473, &c. by Mr. Philip-Jacob Hartman, who was upon the Spot, and ſaw many Sorts of it. He is of Opinion, that there is none of it ſoft, and that what other Authors have ſaid of ſoft Amber, is a Miſtake; for he found, upon Tryal, that what they call by that Name, is to be referred to another Claſs: He found many Pieces with the Draughts of Shrubs, Leaves, Animals, Clouds, and Latin, Arabic, and Hebrew Letters naturally form'd in them; and on one Piece he ſaw the Repreſentation of an old Man with an Infant in his Arms, which put him in mind of old Simeon and our Saviour: He has alſo ſeen Pieces of it repreſenting all ſorts of Fruits, and obſerves, that Amber has been found in the Entrails of Birds and Fiſhes, and that the Country People take notice that Ravens and Crows are very greedy of it, and ſmall Pieces are ſometimes found in their Excrements. He alſo obſerves, that there's Vitriol, Nitre, Bitumen, Allom, and Foſſile Wood in this Country, and that Diamonds and Jaſpers are many times found here. The chief of the ancient Inhabitants were the Rugij, Reudigni, and Longideduni, who lived under ſeveral Princes for many Centuries, but we have little of their Hiſtory. The firſt of whom we have any Certainty, is Duke Barnimus, of the ancient Family of the Gryphones, frequently mention'd in their Annals, and the Country bears ſtill a Griphon for their Arms. He reigned about 933, and his Grandſons Bogeſlaus and Wartiſlaus divided the Country betwixt them: The former had Pomerania, and retained the Laws and Cuſtoms of his Countrymen, the Sclavonians: The latter had Lower Pomerania, and conform'd to the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Saxons, upon which his Sons had the Title of Dukes, and were made Princes of the Empire by the Emperor Frederick-Barbaraſſa. It continued under their two Branches, called the Houſes of Wolgaſt and Stetin, for about 200 Years; but that of Stetin failing in 1464, his Dominions were given by the Emperor Frederick III. to Frederick II. of Brandenburg. This occaſioned Wars betwixt the Elector and the Houſe of Wolgaſt, which were concluded by Treaty, on Condition that both ſhould retain the Title and Arms, but the Poſſeſſion was to remain to the Duke of Wolgaſt, and upon the Failure of his Male-Iſſue, come to the Houſe of Brandenburg. Accordingly, when Duke Bogeſlaus XIV. died in 1637, the Elector of Brandenburg put in his Claim; but the Swedes having aſſiſted Duke Bogeſlaus during the Civil Wars in Germany, la Forreſt ſays, he made the King of Sweden Heir by his Will. The Swedes being thus in Poſſeſſion, would not part with it; ſo that by the Treaty of Munſter it was agreed, that Lower Pomerania, with the Iſles of Rugen and Wollin, ſhould be annex'd to the Crown of Sweden, and Upper Pomerania likewiſe, upon Failure of the Male Iſſue of the Houſe of Brandenburg, which was allow'd to enjoy the Title and Arms, and had Magdeburg, Halberſtat, and Minden given them in Compenſation, with 4 more Votes in the Dyet, for his new Principalities, of which tho' the Revenues may be as large, the Elector would rather have had Lower Pomerania, that he might have been conſiderable at Sea, becauſe of its good Harbours, and at the ſame time be deliver'd from the Neighbourhood of ſo great a Prince as the King of Sweden. It continued thus for ſome time, till the late Elector of Brandenburg, Frederic-William, Grandfather to the preſent King of Pruſſia, made War upon the Swedes, then in the Intereſt of France, and took the chief Towns, with moſt of Swediſh Pomerania, but reſtored them by the Treaty of St. Germain en Laye in 1679. It continued in Poſſeſſion of the Swedes till the preſent King of Sweden, Charles XII. did, by the Influence of Lewis XIV. of France, kindle a War in thoſe Parts at his Return from Turkey; upon which the Northern Confederates drove him out of the whole Country, which is now poſſeſſed by the King of Pruſſia, under a ſort of Sequeſtration, ſince 1713.

SWEDISH or HITHER POMERANIA, is about 100 Miles long, from South Eaſt to North-Weſt, but the Breadth not proportionable, the greateſt being but 30 Miles. It lies along the Coaſt of the Baltic and the Mouth of the Oder, which divides it from Brandenburg-Pomerania on the Eaſt, and has Mecklemburg and part of Brandenburg on the Weſt, and part of Brandenburg on the South.

Places of Note in Swediſh Pomerania are,

1. Stettin, Lat. 53. 31. Long. 15. 15. 70 Miles North-Eaſt from Berlin. It is Capital of its Dutchy, lies on the Weſt ſide of the Oder, and was ever reckon'd the Metropolis of all Pomerania. 'Tis ſo ancient that its Origin is not known; but about 400 Years ago it had a quite different Situation, for the Church of St. Peter, now without the Walls, was then in the middle of the Town. The Saxons brought hither by the Dukes of Stetin, to reform the Language and Manners of the Inhabitants, contributed much to its Beauty, Strength, and Trade, which was the moſt conſiderable of any in thoſe Parts, till the Settlement of the Dutch Republic, which has alter'd the courſe of Commerce in thoſe Countries. 'Tis a Hans Town, ſtands on the Riſing of a ſmall Hill, and has ſtill a great Trade in Goods of all ſorts, particularly Fiſh, ſalt and freſh, Wood and Timber for Fuel and Building, Maſts, Linen, Canvas, Honey, Wax, Corn, &c. and is a proper Centre for exchanging the Commodities of Poland and Germany with thoſe which are brought from the Baltic, by the Conveniency of the River Oder. They have large Granaries, Store-houſes, an Arſenal, and a Dock for building Ships. 'Tis ſtill ſo populous that many of the Inhabitants are obliged to live in Cellars and Vaults. The Caſtle, formerly the Duke's Palace, and lately the Reſidence of the Swediſh Governour, is one of the beſt Pieces of Architecture in the North, and vies with moſt of its kind in Italy. The Inhabitants are noted for their Civility to Strangers, and their Bravery in defending themſelves when attack'd. The River Oder, which advances the Trade of the Town, is very broad here, and has many Iſlands; about 15 Miles below the Town, it forms a Lake call'd the Groſs Haffe, about 30 Miles long and 10 broad, which empties itſelf by 3 Currents into the Baltic, one of 'em betwixt the Iſlands of Uſedom and Wollin, and another on each ſide of 'em, and forms the three ſafe Harbours of Divenow, Swine, and Penemunde.

The Imperialiſts beſieged this Town in 1659, 4 Months in vain, and it held out againſt Frederic-William, Elector of Brandenburg, from the 7th of July 1677, till the 26th of December. 'Twas one of the moſt remarkable Sieges that had been in Europe till then. He carry'd on the Siege with 32000 Men, 8000 of 'em Danes, and 4000 Lunenburgers. He was alſo aſſiſted with Daniſh Men of War, who fought the Swedes in the River, moſt of which were ſunk by the Cannon of the Elector's Forts. The Swedes before the Siege ſent out all uſeleſs Perſons, and had 3000 Men in Garriſon, beſides the Burghers, who were more reſolute than they. On the 14th of Auguſt his Guns ſunk and ſhatter'd moſt of their Ships in the River, and on the 15th many Houſes and the Great Church were burnt by his Granadoes. The Elector being griev'd at it, offer'd them honourable Terms, which they refuſed. The Town having ſuffer'd much, he ſent to them on the 22d, expreſſing his Pity for them; but they were obſtinate, made it Death for any one to talk of a Surrender, ſecured ſuch of their Wives and Children as remained, in Places prepared for them under Ground, and made vigorous Sallies, but were repulſed. The 6th of Septemb. he ſent a Trumpet to forewarn them of their Danger, and offer'd them larger Priviledges than they had, but they ſtill refuſed. The 22d the 8000 Danes landed to aſſiſt him, of which he gave the City Notice, and ſummon'd them again, but to no purpoſe. His Men ſuffer'd much by the great Rains, but he augmented their Pay, and promiſed them the Plunder of the Town, if he took it by Storm. He took the Counterſcarp the 2d of October, upon which the Governour ſent to the Swediſh General for Relief, which was promiſed, but never came. The Garriſon made a vigorous Sally, drove the Lunenburgers out of their Trenches, took one of their Generals, 40 Officers, and 2 Cannon. The Elector undermined the Wall, fill'd the Ditch, took a Demi-baſtion, ſummon'd them again on the 1ſt of Nov. and threaten'd their Ruin, if they refuſed his new Proffers. They reply'd, that they would hold out to the End of the Year, and hoped to have the ſame Terms then. The Elector had then loſt 7000 Men, and many of the reſt were ſick and wounded; but tho' the Town was in Ruins, and 1400 Citizens kill'd, beſides Soldiers, they continued reſolute, and made vigorous Sallies, hoping the Rigour of the Seaſon would force the Elector to break up. On the 20th a Quarrel happen'd betwixt the Garriſon, who were for Capitulating, and the Burghers that oppoſed it, ſo that ſeveral fell on both Sides. One of the Citizens, a chief Officer, being at his Poſt on the Wall when News was brought him that his Wife and Children were kill'd in his Houſe by the Enemies Fire, would not quit his Poſt, but ſaid he could meet his own Death with as little Concern as he heard of theirs. The 30th the Garriſon ſally'd, took a ſmall Man of War, and the Elector's Foot being reduced to 10000, and his Horſe in a bad Condition, every one thought he would raiſe the Siege, but he did not. A new Mutiny fell out the ſame Day betwixt the Garriſon and the Burghers about Capitulating, but the Governour appeaſed the Soldiers by promiſing to Capitulate before it came to Extremity; and the King ſent the Town a new Charter with larger Priviledges, and an Exemption from Taxes for many Years. They made ſome ſucceſsful Sallies, ruined part of the Enemies Works, defended the Breaches in their Walls, and fill'd them up by Night. The Elector ſummon'd them again on the 19th, and offer'd to confirm the new Priviledges granted by the King of Sweden; but ſtill they refuſed, ſally'd next Day, and took 2 Galliots with Guns and Powder, which they very much wanted; and tho' the Garriſon was reduced to 700 Men, and but 400 of them ſerviceable, they continued obſtinate; yet on the 20th, finding no Hopes of Relief, they propoſed a Capitulation on honourable Terms, and ſaid if they were not granted, they would die Sword in Hand, and be buried in the Ruins of the City. The Elector anſwer'd, that tho' their Obſtinacy had been enough to harden him, yet out of Pity, and to ſave the Men on both Sides, that muſt be loſt in the Aſſault, he would Capitulate, if they intreated for it. Upon this they ſent out Hoſtages, and the Elector generouſly granted them honourable Terms, and ratified all the new Priviledges allowed them by their King; but they inſiſting on too high Terms for the Garriſon, Hoſtilities were renewed with Vigour on both Sides till the 26th, when they accepted the Elector's Terms; and on the 6th of January he enter'd the Town in Triumph, with the loud Acclamations of the People. He continued the Magiſtrates, freed the Town from ranſoming their Bells, and of his own accord exempted their Fiſhery from Taxes for 8 Years, on Condition that they ſhould rebuild their Churches, and he promiſed to rebuild the Great one himſelf. He continued the Univerſity, Schools, and Religion as they were. The Magiſtrates, Judges, and Miniſters ſwore Fealty to him, and gave him a ſplendid Entertainment. A vaſt Number of Houſes, and all their Churches were ruined. They had a fine Train of Artillery, but wanted Powder, Salt, and Wood. The Elector loſt 8000 Men, ſpent 30000 Granadoes, 24000 Hand-Granadoes, 150000 Cannon-ſhot, and 98000 Pound of Powder in the Siege. He reſtored the Town to the Swedes by the Treaty of Nimeguen. The preſent King of Pruſſia took it into Sequeſtration by Conſent of the Duke of Holſtein, Octob. 7, 1713, it having been inveſted in July before by the Northern Allies.

2. Stralſund, Lat. 54½. Long. 13. 42. 80 Miles North-Weſt from Stettin, the largeſt and richeſt Town in Pomerania: Its chief Trade is in Corn, Pitch, Tar, Roſin, Wax, Honey, Hides and Tallow. Some derive the Name from Sunnii II. King of the Franks, its ſuppoſed Founder, but it more probably comes from the narrow Sea betwixt it and Rugen. The firſt certain Account of it is, that being for the moſt part deſtroy'd, it was magnificently rebuilt, enlarged, and peopled with Germans by the Prince of Rugen about 1209. But moſt of it being afterwards burnt by the Danes, the Situation was alter'd about 1230. It is an Imperial City, and has great Priviledges; the chief are, that their Magiſtrates determine all Cauſes without an Appeal, coin Money, and raiſe Troops for Sea and Land Service. They have Power to make Confederacies for advancing their Trade, and to chuſe what Prince of the Empire they pleaſe for their Protector; and in caſe of a Naval War by the Empire, they are not obliged to venture their Ships any farther abroad than is conſiſtent with the Safety of the City. Theſe Priviledges they have maintain'd againſt ſeveral Princes who attempted to invade them, and are ſaid to have reſiſted the united Power of Denmark, Sweden, and ten other Princes at once, after which it became terrible. It lies in a ſort of Peninſula, form'd by the Sea and Lake Franeken. The Sea betwixt it and Rugen is a Mile broad, and there are 6 Gates, with as many Bridges leading to it from the City; to which the Merchant Ships that ride in the Harbour are faſten'd. On the Land-ſide 'tis fortified with regular Bulwarks, and Fiſh-ponds two Muskets-ſhots broad, over which there are 4 Cauſways and Bridges, leading from 4 Gates, and all fortified, which makes the Approaches to the Town very difficult. Their chief Trade is in Corn, which they tranſport in great Quantities. The Houſes are beautiful, being of Stone, and uniform. Count Wallenſten, the Emperor's General, beſieged it in vain, and broke up diſgracefully, during the Civil Wars; a little after they put themſelves under the Protection of Guſtavus Adolphus, King of Sweden. The late Elector of Brandenburg took it in 1678, after deſtroying 1500 Houſes by Bombs, and was the only Prince that ever took it by Force till then; but he reſtored it with the other Towns of this Country by Treaty in 1679. In 1711, the Kings of Poland and Denmark beſieged it in vain. In 1715, the King of Sweden arrived here from his long Confinement in Turkey, after his Defeat at Pultowa, and animated the Garriſon to hold out a vigorous Siege againſt the Kings of Denmark and Pruſſia; but notwithſtanding his continually ſupplying them with Men and Proviſions from the Iſle of Rugen, the Town was forced to ſurrender on Terms.

3. Bardt or Bar, on the Mouth of the River Bardt, Capital of its Lordſhip, 15 Miles Weſt from Stralſund. Its Arms are a Man's Head with a long Beard, whence ſome think it was poſſeſſed anciently by the Lombards. 'Twas formerly Capital of the Country, is well peopled, and defended by a ſtrong Caſtle; the adjacent Fields are very fruitful in Corn of all ſorts. It lies on a Bay, but ſo ſhallow, that 'tis not capable of being a good Harbour. 'Twas taken by the late Elector of Brandenburg in 1677, but reſtored in 1679.

4. Gripſwald, 15 Miles South-Eaſt from Stralſund, a Hans Town, with a good Harbour, on a Bay of the Baltic; 'tis well fortified, and has an Univerſity, founded in 1456, which has bred many learned Men. It had formerly a great Trade in excellent Salt, but 'tis decay'd for want of Fuel. The adjacent Fields abound ſo much with wild Garlick, that when it flowers, Strangers are ſcarce able to bear the Smell, and all their Fleſh and Butter taſte of it. 'Twas taken by the Swedes in 1631, and left to 'em by the Treaty of Weſtphalia. The late Elector of Brandenburg took it in 1678, and reſtored it in 1679.

5. Triplow, a pretty Town on the Tollen Sea or Lake, 30 Miles South from Gripſwald, defended by a ſtrong Caſtle.

6. Anclam, on the Pene, 20 Miles South-Eaſt from Gripſwald, well fortified, taken by the late Elector of Brandenburg in 1678, together with Dammin on the ſame River, but reſtored in 1679. It was retaken by the Pruſſians in 1715.

7. Damgarten and Tribſes, two Towns on the Frontiers of Mecklemburg, where the Swediſh Officers exact Toll from Travellers. The Duke of Mecklemburg claim'd them at the Treaty of Nimeguen, but in vain. The Town is very ſtrong, and lies on a Gulph, 25 Miles Weſt of of Stralsund. 'Tis remarkable for the Swedes having march'd their Troops in 1712, thro' the Morasses here, which were thought unpassable, even in the height of Summer.

8. Wolgast, on a Branch of the Oder, 15 Miles South-East from Gripswald, formerly Capital of a Dutchy, and gave Title to a Branch of the House of Pomerania. It has the best Harbour in the Country next to Stralsund, and a Castle, which makes it one of the strongest Towns of the Country. Gustavus Adolphus took it in 1630, and the late Elector of Brandenburg took it in 1679, but restored it the same Year. The Swedes took it in 1715, but were soon dislodged by the Prussians.

BRANDENBURG, or FURTHER POMERANIA, is 145 Miles from South-West to North-East, and 50 where broadest South and North.

Places of Note here,

1. Camin, over-against the Isle of Wollin, formerly the See of a Bishop, who was invested and confirmed by the Pope; but at the Treaty of Munster the Diocess was secularized and given to the Elector of Brandenburg, and erected into a Principality. The Town lies on the East side of that Branch of the Oder call'd Divenow. Its Bishop introduced Lutheranism in 1534.

2. Colberg, a strong Town at the Mouth of the Persant, 30 Miles North-East of Camin. 'Tis Capital of Cassubia, has a good Harbour, defended by a strong Citadel, and has a good Trade in Salt made here, which brings the King of Prussia a considerable Revenue. The Swedes took it in 163', after 5 Months Siege, and 'twas given to the Elector of Brandenburg by the Treaty of Munster.

3. Coslin, 15 Miles North-East from Colberg, a City where the Bishop of Camin usually resided, because of its good Air.

4. Corlin, a very pleasant Town on the Persant, 15 Miles East from Coslin.

5. Belgarden, 5 Miles South-East, a little Town of good Trade on the same River.

6. Rugenwold, 20 Miles North-East of Camin, Capital of the Country named Vandalia. 'Tis supposed to have its Name from the Rugii who founded it.

7. Stolpe, a fortified Town, with an ancient Castle, about 18 Miles further North-East.

8. Stargard, 10 Miles South-East from Dam, Capital of that call'd Pomerania Proper; 'tis small and ill peopled, yet a Hans-Town, and the Seat of the Courts of Justice for the Country.

9. Dam, a small Town on the Oder, over-against Stetin, and formerly belonged to that Dutchy, but mortgaged with Golun, 12 Miles South of it, to the Elector of Brandenburg for 50000 Crowns in 1679.

The most Easterly Part of this Country is call'd Pomerellia, and has several Towns, but of no great Note, as Rugenwald its Capital, 15 Miles North-East of Coslin, Lawenburg on the River Lobo, 25 Miles East of Stolpe, and Butow, 25 Miles further, which gives Name to their Lordships.

The ISLANDS on the Coast of Pomerania;

1. Rugen, famous for the Courage of the Rugii its ancient Inhabitants; 'twas formerly larger, till separated from the Isle of Ruden, now 3 Leagues from it, the Ground betwixt them and other Parts of Rugen being overflow'd by the Sea during a Tempest in the 14th Century, which made a Passage for the largest Ships. 'Tis about 35 Miles long, and 20 broad, but so full of Creeks and Peninsulas, that there is scarce any part of it above 3 Miles from the Sea. There is one Creek on the East side which almost runs thro' to the other side, but those Peninsulas are so guarded by high Rocks, that they fear no more Inundations. 'Tis so fruitful in Corn, that 'tis call'd the Granary of Stralsund, and is well stock'd with Horses, Black Cattel, Sheep, and the largest Geese in Europe. The Forest of Jasmund furnishes them with Fuel and Timber, and the Sea, Bays and Lakes with Plenty of Fish for Consumption and Export. The ancient Inhabitants were the Rugii or Runi, and some think this was the Insula Runorum; but Wormius says, they lived further East. They had formerly Princes of their own, who govern'd Part of Pomerania, and were formidable to their Neighbours; 11 of 'em are mentioned in History; the first Wilzlaus, lived about 938. The 4th Raze, a great Warrior, who subdued Lubeck and the neighbouring Country, and dy'd about 1141. The 5th Teslaus, who had great Wars with the Danes with various Success, but at last was conquer'd. The 6th Jarsmar, who was the first that embraced Christianity. The 9th Jarsmar II. who after many Battles shook off the Danish Yoak in 1259. The 10th Wilzlaus III. so zealous a Christian that he preach'd in Person to the Livonians. The 11th Wilzlaus IV. from whom those of Stralsund revolted, because he claim'd the Sovereignty, and of the Strait betwixt them, and he being kill'd in the Siege, there was an End of his Line and the Controversy in 1325. Waldemar of Denmark took it in 1368; but afterwards the Dukes of Pomerania became Masters of it, and instead of the Sclavonic, brought in the German Language, and Lutheranism in lieu of Paganism, to which they had Apostatized, and turned as gross Idolaters as at first. Upon the Failure of the House of Pomerania, it was by Contract to have gone to the Family of Brandenburg; but by the Treaty of Westphalia was given to the Swedes. Frederic III. of Denmark pretended a Title to it, but resigned to the Swedes in 1658. During the Wars betwixt the late Elector of Brandenburg and the Swedes, Christian I. of Denmark attempted it, but was defeated by the Swedish General Count Coningsmark. He conquer'd it however in 1678, but by the Interposition of Lewis XIV. of France, quitted it again by Treaty in 1679. It continued in Possession of the Swedes, till it was with Swedish Pomerania taken from them by the Northern Allies, and continues with the rest under Sequestration, in the Hands of the Brandenburgers and Danes, the Saxons having driven the Swedes out of it in July 1713.

Cluverius in his Germania Antiqua says, there's a mighty deep Lake of black Water, with abundance of Fish, in the Forest of Jasmund, which the Inhabitants say will neither bear Boats nor Nets; and that in his own Time some People carry'd a Boat thither, and next Day came with Nets in order to fish, when to their great Surprize they saw their Boat on the top of a tall Beech-tree; and asking which of all the Devils carry'd it thither, they heard a Voice, but saw no body, that said, 'twas not all the Devils, but only I and my Brother Nicholas. Upon which that learned Author observes, that the Unclean Spirit being angry that his Worship should be abolish'd where 'twas once perform'd, loves still to play his Tricks there: For in this Wood the old Pagans used to consult the Devil, and sacrifice Christians. We leave the Story and the Comment to the Reader's Judgment, but think this might be a Trick by some waggish or superstitious People, to impose on the Credulity of the Vulgar.

The Inhabitants of this Island depend upon Stralsund, with which they have their chief Trade, and are entirely under the Jurisdiction of the City, which is the Key and Fortress of the Island.

It suffer'd much during the Civil Wars of Germany, and during those betwixt Denmark, Brandenburg, and Sweden, in 1677, and lately. Here are several Noble Families, who derive their Pedigree from the ancient Rugii, and are much respected by their Tenants, who farm their Lands at easy Rents.

The Island is honoured with the Title of a Dutchy or Principality, is capable of raising 7000 stout Men, and might easily be made impregnable by a few Forts. Arcona, their ancient Capital, and Camerents were both reckon'd impregnable, till subdued with the rest of the Island by Waldemar I. of Denmark. Here's no other Place of Note now but Bergen, formerly accounted a City, but now only an open Village of about 400 Houses, and they have another call'd Putbas, South of it, which is a Place of pretty good Trade.

This Island was attack'd by the Northern Allies in 1712, but the Swedes repulsed them with Loss, and the Czar was wounded. In 1715 they attack'd it again, and after the Danes had beat the Swedish Ships on the Coast, the Allies landed upon the Island, defeated the King of Sweden in a Battel at the Village of Strelsau, where he was wounded, and afterwards narrowly made his Escape to Schonen; and soon after the Allies had taken this Island, Stralsund surrender'd to them. Old Fahr, a Fort in this Island, was garrison'd by the Swedes, who made an obstinate Defence in 1715, by Order of their King, who threaten'd to hang them if they surrender'd; but they yielded notwithstanding to the Danes, and were made Prisoners of War.

2. Wollin lies 5 or 6 Miles South East from Rugen, in the Mouth of the Oder, is about 25 Miles long, and 15 where broadest. It has a Town of the same Name on the West side. Adam of Bremen says, it was anciently the largest in Europe, call'd Julinum, and the greatest Mart next to Constantinople, being frequented by Merchants of most Nations, who had their separate Streets and Houses of Exchange. It was extraordinary strong, and populous, maintain'd a War alone against the Danes, and took their King Suinotte three times Prisoner; but by the just Judgment of God for their Apostacy from Christianity, most of it was destroy'd by Lightning, and the rest by Waldemar of Denmark; since which it was never able to recover, Lubec and Dantzic having got most of its ancient Trade. This Island was also taken by the Northern Allies in the late War.

3. Usedom, East from Wollin, from which 'tis separated by a Branch of the Oder; 'tis about 12 Miles long, and 10 broad; after the Destruction of Wollin it had a great Trade; but most of it being burnt in 1473, it never recover'd its ancient Lustre. 'Tis defended by a strong Castle, which the Elector of Brandenburg took in 1676, but restored it to the Swedes by Treaty. 'Twas taken, with the rest of Pomerania, by the Prussians, &c. in 1713, retaken by the Swedes in 1715, but they were soon after dislodged by the Prussians.

4. Ruden, a small Island 3 Leagues from Rugen, further up the River, was fortify'd by the Swedes in 1715, but taken by the Prussians and Danes that same Year.

II. BRANDENBURG Marquisate and Electorate, has Mecklemburg and Pomerania on the North, Part of Lunenburg on the West, Saxony and Part of Magdeburg and Silesia on the South, and Poland on the East. 'Tis 170 Miles where longest, from East to West, and 100 where broadest, from South to North.

The Soil of the Country in general is sandy and woody, yet abounds with Corn. They have great Flocks of Sheep, but not black Cattel in proportion. Here are Mines of Silver, Brass, Iron, and Copper. Their Money has more Allay than that of Brunswic and Saxony.

The Climate is cold, and their North Situation makes the Winter sharp for 7 or 8 Months; but they have Plenty of Wood for Firing.

The Country People are generally poor, and have sorry Houses and Accommodation. La Foreſt says, that were they as much given to Trade as to Drinking and good Cheer, they might make considerable Profit of their Sheep, and breed more black Cattel; yet they are own'd by all to be very brave. But since his Time the Trade of the Country is much improved, the late Elector Frederic-William having entertain'd many of the French Refugees, and other persecuted Protestants, to whom he allow'd great Priviledges, and an Act of Naturalization, which has settled many useful Manufactures here, and doubled several Branches of the Revenue.

The Inhabitants are generally Lutherans, but the Prince being a Calvinist, most of the great Men and Governours are the same; and there are many Calvinist Churches in his Dominions: The Lutherans and they live in good Harmony; the Churches of both are well endowed, kept in good Repair, and the Laity of both are indifferently employ'd by the Government. The Papists are also allow'd their Churches and Monasteries, according to the Treaty of Westphalia; and in some Places by Agreement with the Elector Palatine, as Duke of Newburg and Juliers, on Condition that he allow the same Liberty to the Protestants there; which the present Elector having attempted to infringe, the King of Prussia put a Stop to it, by threatning to treat his Popish Subjects in the same Manner.

Their Commodities are chiefly exported by the Elbe and the Oder, betwixt which there's a Communication by a Canal. There are many Lakes in this Country, the chief of which is call'd Ukerzee.

The Country in general is call'd Mark, and the Prince Markgrave, which we call Marquis. Selden in his Titles of Honour says, this Name was first given to the Governours of Frontier Countries, which march'd or bounded upon other Princes Dominions; but now 'tis a common Name to many Sovereigns in Germany. It was first used in the Empire in Charlemain's Reign, as the Title of an Office, but was made Hereditary by the Emperor Henry I. who having conquer'd this Country, expell'd most of the old Inhabitants, that were Branches of the Sclavonians, and gave it to Sigifrid Earl of Rengelheim, whom he appointed Markgrave, to defend the Country againſt the Vandals, and he and his Succeſſors new peopled it from the Netherlands, Weſtphalia, Franconia, and Saxony, which occaſioned that Mixture that is ſtill obſerved in their Dialect.

The Country is divided into the Alo or Old Mark, Middle Mark, and New Mark, and ſome add the Uker Mark.

I. The ALT-MARK is the Weſt Part, has Mecklemburg on the North, Magdeburg on the South, Saxe-Lawenburg, and Part of Lunenburg on the Weſt, and the Middle Mark on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 75 Miles where longeſt from South to North; and 50 where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. Some call it the Galilee of Germany, becauſe it abounds in Herbs and Fruit. They divide it into four petty Provinces, Oſtland on the Eaſt, Zermundland on the Weſt, Angerland on the South, and Zenland on North. But we ſhall give the chief Places of the whole, as they lye in the Map.

1. Stendal, on the River Ucht, Lat. 52. 50. Long. 12. 37. 30 Miles North from Magdeburg. 'Tis the Metropolis of the Country, a Hans Town, neat, well built, and the Seat of the Court of Juſtice for the Country. Their cheif Trade is Corn and Linnen; and being on the Road from Hamburg and Lubec to Magdeburg, &c. has conſiderable Advantage by Paſſengers. It was built by the Emperor Henry I. in 920, and fortified by Albert, ſurnamed the Bear, in 1150; and has a pleaſant Plain, and a large Foreſt in the Neighbourhood.

2. Soltwedel near the Frontiers of Lunenburg, 38 Miles North-Weſt from Stendal. 'Tis a large Town on the Weſt Bank of the River Jetze. Some derive the Name from a Temple here dedicated to the Sun by the Pagans. The City and neighbouring Territory had formerly Princes of its own, who did great Things againſt the Huns. The Town is divided into Old and New; the former ſaid to be built by Claudius Druſus, and the latter by the Emperor Henry I. Their chief Trade is in Beer tranſported to other Places.

3. Gardeleben, about 13 Miles South-Weſt from Stendal. Some derive the Name from the pleaſant Gardens in the Neighbourhood, where there is an old Fort, in their Language called Iron-Jaws. The chief Trade is in Beer and Hops, reckon'd as good as any in Germany; and the Town has 3 Hop-Poles laden with Hops, for its Arms.

4. Tangermund, or Angermund, about 7 Miles South-Eaſt from Stendal, where the River Anger falls into the Elbe, by which it has a conſiderable Trade for Corn, &c. with Hamburgh. The Caſtle here was built by the Emperor Charles IV. in 1376. when he bought the Mark, and reſided in it ſome Time. The King of Pruſſia has a Palace here.

5. Oſterburg, about 17 Miles North from Stendal, at the Conflux of two Rivers. 'Tis a ſmall Town, ſuffer'd much by Fire in 1491; but it is noted for a good Corn-Market.

6. Werben, at the Conflux of the Elbe and Havel, 20 Miles North-Eaſt from Stendal, built by the Emperor Henry the Fowler, on the Ruins of the old Caſtellum Vari. Guſtavus Adolphus order'd the Caſtle, which commands the Town, to be built, and reckon'd it might be made one of the ſtrongeſt Places in Germany.

7. Hanelsberg, on the River Havel, 10 Miles North-Eaſt from Oſterburg, and 7 Eaſt from Werben; formerly a Biſhoprick, Suffragan to Magdeburg, but aboliſhed at the Reformation in 1555.

8. Perleberg, the chief Town of the Diſtrict of Prignitz, in a fruitful and pleaſant Plain. Here are ſeveral other Places reckon'd Towns, but being no better than Villages, are not worth deſcribing.

II. MIDDLE MARK, in the middle of the Country, is the largeſt of the Diviſions, and is about 90 Miles long, from the Elbe to the Oder.

Places of Note are,

1. Brandenburg, about 37 Miles South-Eaſt from Stendal, in the middle of the Marſhes on the River Havel, which divides it into the Old and New Town. It gives Name to the Marquiſate, and was formerly the Metropolis. 'Tis remarkable for its Antiquity, ſome aſcribing the Foundation of it to one Brenno, 416 Years before Chriſt; and others to one Brando, A. C. 230. It was made a Biſhoprick by the Emperor Otho I. in 946, which was aboliſh'd at the Reformation in 1563. The Elector George-William, appropriated it to himſelf in 1628. The Streets of the upper Town are built croſswiſe, and center in a fine Market-Place, where there is a Statua Rolandina, a Proof that it formerly enjoy'd great Privileges. In the Great Church there are many Monuments and Sepulchres of Biſhops and Princes. The Town is well ſupplied with Fiſh by a Neighbouring Lake, which is 10 Miles long.

2. Berlin, 30 Miles Eaſt from Brandenburg, Lat. 52. 36. Long. 14. 11. It lies in a fruitful Country, with Vineyards on one ſide, Marſhes on another, and Woods, full of Game, on the third: Was built by Albert the Bear in 1152, from whom it derived the Name, as Angelius a Werdenhagen, who deſcribes the Hans Towns, ſays all the other Towns in this Country, which begin with Ber, do. 'Twas firſt fortified in 1222, and the Works are now ſo regular and ſtrong, that 'tis capable of holding out a long Siege. The Canals from this Town to the Oder and the Elbe, make it one of the beſt trading Towns, as it is one of the fineſt, in Germany, and open a Communication by ſmall Veſſels from Sileſia to the Mouth of the Elbe. It lies on the Banks of the Spre, miſtaken by ſome Geographers for Ptolomy's Suevus. On the other ſide ſtands the Town of Coln, ſurnamed on the Spre, to diſtinguiſh it from Cologn on the Rhine. It was enlarg'd, one Third, by the great Elector Frederick-William, who built the Town called Dorothyſtat, from the Name of his ſecond Lady; another Part of it is now called Fredericſtat, from himſelf, and both begun to be fortified. The King of Pruſſia's Palace is in the Caſtle here, built by Joachim II. but much enlarg'd and beautified by his Succeſſors; ſo that 'tis now very ſtately, and adds much to the Magnificence of the City, the Streets of which are large and well paved, and many of them planted with Rows of Trees on the Sides of the Canals, that ſeparate the five Wards, into which the City is divided, and have Drawbridges over them, after the Model of thoſe in Holland, and every whit as neat. The new Houſes are of regular Architecture, which adds much to the Beauty of this City. The late King ordered a fine Bridge of hewn Stone to be built over a Branch of the Spre, and an Equeſtrian Statue to be erected upon it, to the Honour of his Father Frederick-William, one of the greateſt Generals and beſt Princes of his Age. The Man and Horſe are of one entire Piece, caſt at once, weighs 30000 Quintals of Metal, and coſt 400000 Crowns. The old Town is divided into three Quarters or Wards, viz. Berlin, Coln, and Werder; and the New into the abovemention'd Wards of Dorothyſtat and Fredericſtat; beſides which there are large Suburbs. The moſt remarkable Buildings here are, 1. The Palace built of Free-ſtone, waſh'd on one ſide by the River Spre, and on the other, there is a great Gate into a large Square, where the Stables are. On the Front there is the great Street which leads to the Ward, called Fredericſtat, and behind the Palace lie ſpacious Gardens, kept in very good Order, with fine Water-Works, Statues, &c. The Palace contains two great Courts: The firſt, where the Officers of the Guards lodge, from whence there are great Stairs, by which one may ride on Horſeback up to the Court, which is oval; and there are four other Stairs which lead to the ſeveral Parts of the Court: Here are ten great Apartments for the Royal Family, with great Numbers of Chambers for the Courtiers, all magnificently furniſh'd, beſides many Halls, Chambers, Cloſets, and Galleries, with whatever can be wiſh'd, for Conveniency and Grandeur. In the King's Apartment there is extraordinary rich Furniture of maſſy Plate, Pictures, and other great Curioſities, eſpecially a large Cabinet full of ancient, rare and valuable Medals, with many wonderful Curioſities of Nature, ſcarce to be met with in othe Courts: They are deſcribed in ſeveral Volumes, by Mr. Berger in his Theſaurus Brandenburgicus. Near this is the Royal Library, diſpoſed in excellent Order, and ſaid to be equal to the beſt in Europe, eſpecially ſince the Addition of the learned Baron Spanheim's Library, who was known to be very skilful and curious in his Collections. The Queen's Apartments are very large, ſumptuouſly furniſhed, and adorn'd with Pictures of the beſt Maſters: There is one great Chamber full Pieces done by Vandyke, amongſt which that of the Holy Supper is reckon'd the beſt that he did; and a ſecond which repreſents the unnailing our Saviour from the Croſs, done ſo to the Life, as moves all that ſee it to Compaſſion: There is another, of the Wiſe-Men that came to worſhip our Saviour; and a third of all the Royal Family of England. The Gallery, above 50 Paces long, is full of Pictures, by the beſt Italian Maſters; one of them our Saviour's Head, by the famous Raphael d'Urbin, valued at 50000 Crowns; and there are many rare Pictures, by the famous Luke Kranach. In ſhort, there is ſcarce a Palace in Europe more exact, commodious, or ſtately. 2. The King's Stables have Room for above 400 Horſes, of which he has above 3000 of his own, with Equerries, throughout his Dominions to breed and take care of them. The Stables he built in the new Town, but burnt in 1712 by an accidental Fire, were ſo magnificent, that Strangers often took them for the Palace of ſome great Miniſter; they were divided into two Courts, and had nine Pavillions at equal Diſtances; over them was the Academy of Painters, of the Learned, and of all genteel Arts, and a fine Obſervatory for Aſtronomers. 3. The Arſenal ſtands in the Quarter called the Werder, is a maſſy ſquare Structure, of excellent Architecture, with Conveniencies for Arms of all Sorts, and is reckon'd one of the beſt furniſh'd in Europe; here is Store of great Guns, and all the Arms are kept in excellent Order: Here is a noble Pedeſtrian Statue of the late King ſet up in the Area. 4. A Sluice, wrought with hewn Stone, near the Arſenal, with a large wet Dock, which may be called the Port of the City, becauſe of the great Number of Veſſels that are conſtantly going up or down there, beſides the ſmaller Veſſels in the Canals of the Town. The late King deſigned to build a new Gate and new Street, both call'd Royal, with another extraordinary Statue of himſelf to be ſet over the Gate, with many other curious Figures in Stone; but the preſent King not being ſo much for Magnificence, 'tis a Queſtion whether 'twill be finiſh'd. 5. In the Quarter properly called Berlin, there is a ſtately Amphitheatre, near the Town-Wall, for fighting and baiting of Lyons, Tygers, Bears, and other wild Beaſts, of which a good Number is always kept in the Dens underneath. By an Accidental Fire here, in 1712, the great Magazine with the Stores of Proviſion, Ammunition, Arms, and Cloathing, the great Brewhouſe for the Court, the Steeple of the Cloyſter-Church, which was the Granary of the City, were conſumed, together with the King's Stables, and another Magazine of Powder near the Ramparts blew up at the ſame Time. In ſhort, the Court is reckon'd one of the moſt magnificent in Chriſtendom, and Strangers are civilly entertained there, according to their Quality. The Court is very ſumptuous in their Apparel and Equipage; there are reckoned 2500 Gentlemen belonging to it, fit for Command in the Field, and the Troops of his Houſhold are above 8000. He has 6 or 7 ſupreme Courts of Judicature, for trying all Cauſes in his Dominions, well ſupplied with able Judges; and all his Countries are well furniſh'd with a Learned Clergy: He preſides in Council himſelf, and in his Abſence the Prince Royal if of Age; and next to him ſits the Prince of Anhalt. The Elector Frederick-William's Annual Revenues, were computed at 15 Millions of Livres, and he left his Succeſſors in a Way of increaſing them: He was in four Months time able to raiſe 20000 Foot and 4000 Horſe in his own Dominions, without draining his Garriſons; and the preſent King has an Army of 60000 Men ready on occaſion; ſo that he is juſtly reckon'd the moſt powerful Prince of the Empire next to the Arch-duke of Auſtria. The Trade of the City and Country is much improv'd by Naturalizing the perſecuted French, and other Proteſtants, who have ſet up curious and profitable Manufactures in Gold, Silver, poliſh'd Steel, and Glaſs, Cloth, Silks, Stockings, &c.

3. Frankfort, on the Oder, 45 Miles South-Eaſt from Berlin. 'Tis divided into two Parts by the Oder, over which there is a large Timber-Bridge. The Streets are wide, the Houſes well built, the Market-Place ſpacious and ſtately, and they have three great Fairs per Ann. 'Tis ſaid to have been founded, A. C. 146. by Sunno a Prince of the Franks, who drove out the Vandals, and planted a Colony of his own People in theſe Parts. In 1253, it was rebuilt and enlarged one third by the Elector John I. In 1379, Elector Sigiſmund gave it great Privileges upon entring into the Hans League; and Joachim I. founded their Univerſity in 1506, which he ſupplied with learned Profeſſors from Leipſick; ſince which Time it has bred many learned Men. Without the Walls are the Ruins of a Carthuſian Monaſtery, where Johannes ab Indagine, who wrote 300 Treatiſes on different Subjects, was Prior. This Town has a conſiderable Trade, by the Oder and the Canal betwixt the River and the Elbe. There is Oſteocolla found in the Neighbourhood.

Town

4. Spandaw, near the Conflux of the Havel and Spre, 6 Miles North-Weſt from Berlin: A ſtrong Place both by Art and Situation. 'Tis uſed as a Priſon for State-Criminals.

5. Oranienburg, a ſmall City, about 18 Miles North-Weſt from Berlin: the King has a Country Seat near it, the pleaſanteſt of any in his Dominions, and encompaſſed with fine Meadows, Parks, and Foreſts, ſtock'd with all manner of Game. The Seat was begun by the late Elector, for the Pleaſure of his Electreſs, and called after the Name of her Family. It lies in a Country that much reſembles Holland, becauſe of the many Meadows round it, watered by Canals, drawn out of the Hagel, and theſe are bounded by Woods, acroſs which ſeveral long Viſta's are cut, ſome of which reach even to other Houſes. The Palace conſiſts of two Courts, the Body of the Houſe being in the middle. His preſent Majeſty has conſiderably augmented it, and added ſeveral Ornaments to it, in Honour of his Mother, as appears from a Latin Inſcription over the Gate: The Garden is very large, and furniſh'd with Statues, Fountains, Obelisks, Grotto's, a Volary, an Orangery, and here's a Houſe at ſome ſmall Diſtance, called the Favourite, where the King may lye conveniently when he pleaſes. There is alſo a Menagery, and Hermitage, &c. The Spout in the great Stair-Caſe, mounts 46 Foot, and is exceeded nevertheleſs by another in the Garden; both are ſupplied by moſt coſtly Water-Works, raiſed on the River ſide, in a ſpacious Flat where there is no Eminence. Here is a Gallery and Cabinet, containing a wonderful rich Store of China-Ware, Gems, antique Heads, Seals, and the like, ranged by the King himſelf, into the moſt admirable Figures imaginable, as of Pyramids, Obelisks, Pillars, &c. The Rooms, inſtead of Wainſcot, are lin'd with pure Looking-Glaſs, and the Mouldings and Frames are finely gilt and painted. It being four German Miles from hence to Berlin, each Mile is diſtinguiſhed by a Pedeſtal of hewn Stone ſet up at the End of it, with proper Numbers, and Inſcriptions, in Imitation of the Military Stones of the ancient Romans. There is the like Diſtance betwixt Berlin and,

6. Poſtdam, or Potzdam, which lies in an Iſland about four Leagues in Circumference, formed by the Spre and the Havel. This Town is 12 Miles South-Weſt from Berlin, encompaſſed with Hillocks, Coppices, Groves, and Foreſts. The King has a Palace here, which he goes to in the Summer, with a fine Garden, and Caſcades, and a Menagery ¼ of a League from it, with abandance of Pheaſants, and ſtrange Birds, little Indian Goats, and other foreign Animals. The Iſland is diverſified with thick Foreſts, flat Meadows, and delightful Fields, and about the middle of it ſtands the Pleaſure-Houſe and Garden of Bornheim, which has the beſt Fruit of any of the King's Gardens. The King has two leſſer Houſes in this Iſland, well furniſh'd, the one called Kapput, a League below Poſtdam on the ſame River, where it forms a ſort of Lake from thence to Poſtdam; and the other Kleiniken, half a League above Poſtdam, on the ſame River, ſo that the King may divert himſelf in his Yatchts, from Poſtdam to either of thoſe Houſes.

7. Schoonhauſen, within a League of Berlin, another Seat where the King uſes to reſide in Summer. The Palace is convenient, and the Gardens handſome.

8. Fredericſdal, within a League of Oranienburg, is a ſmall Palace, built more regularly than any of the reſt, after the Model of Marli. The King has a neat Farm and Dairy here, managed by Swiſſers, who make as good Butter and Cheeſe as in their own Country.

9. Lutzelburg, a ſmall Village about a League from Berlin. There is a Palace here, with a very fine Garden, on the Banks of the Spre, from whence they paſs to Berlin, either thro' a Park, or in a Drawboat by Water.

10. Ruppin, on the little River called Rhine, which divides it into the Old and New Towns; 50 Miles North-Weſt from Berlin. 'Tis the Capital of a County of its own Name, and had formerly its own Lords, till 1524, when their Iſſue failing, it was purchaſed by Joachim I.

11. Lebus, upon the Oder, 40 Miles Eaſt from Berlin, 'twas formerly a Biſhoprick, founded by Miceſlaus, the firſt Chriſtian Prince of Poland, about 965. It embraced the Reformation in 1555, and in 1628, it was united to the Dominions of Brandenburg, by the Elector, who is Biſhop of Lebus, and Chancellor of the Univerſity of Francfort.

12. Furſtenwalt, a little pleaſant City on the North Bank of the Spre, about 36 Miles North-Eaſt from Berlin.

THE Towns of chief Note in that Diviſion called the Uker Mark, are only Prenſlow, Strasburg, and Templin, which are well fortified, and belonged to the Dukes of Pomerania, till ſeized by the Elector Frederic I. in 1424. The firſt is well ſupplied with Fiſh from that called the Uker Sea, and ſtands on a ſmall River at the End of that Lake, about 67 Miles North from Berlin. The ſecond ſtands but 25 Miles to the North Eaſt of Berlin. And the third about 57 to the North.

III. The NEW-MARK lies betwixt the River Warta and Pomerania, and is divided from the Middle Mark by the Oder. 'Tis about 100 Miles in Compaſs, and belonged to the Teutonic Knights, till it was purchaſed by the Brandenburg Family, in the 13th Century; but they had not peaceable Poſſeſſion of it till the 16th. It has more Corn and Paſture than any other Place in the Marquiſate. They have ſome Vineyards on the Banks of the Oder, but of no great Account. Sometimes the Boors find Quantities of old Coins here, and precious Stones, but ſell them for little.

The chief Towns are,

1. Kuſtrin, 43 Miles North-Eaſt from Berlin, and 18 North from Francfort. It was but a Fiſhing-Village, till it was fortified in 1537, by the Elector John; ſo that it is now the Key to New-Mark. Guſtavus Adolphus beſieged it in vain in 1631. 'Tis ſtrong both by Art and Nature, being ſituate on a Marſh, at the Conflux of the Oder and Warta. It has an Arſenal well furniſhed, and a Citadel reckon'd impregnable. The Burghers have neat and well furniſhed Houſes, and the Market-Place is the beſt in the Marquiſate.

2. Falkenburg, a Town with a ſtrong Caſtle on the Frontiers of Pomerania. It ſtands on the Frage, about 107 Miles North-Eaſt from Berlin.

3. Drieſſen, or Dreyſen, a Town on the Conflux of the Netze and the Frage, near the Frontiers of Poland, 80 Miles North-Eaſt of Berlin.

4. Landſperg on the Warta, over which it has a Bridge, 63 Miles North-Eaſt of Berlin, and 33 from Francfort: Lies conveniently for Trade, which conſiſts chiefly in caſting Iron-Ordnance. It was twice taken by the Swedes during the German War.

5. Sunneberg, on the ſame River, 50 Miles almoſt Eaſt from Berlin; was the Reſidence of the Bailiffs of the Order of Malta, till the 16th Century, when the Electors ſeized it, and aſſume the Power to preſent the Bailiffs, and diſpoſe of their Commanderies.

6. Croſſen, at the Conflux of the Bober and Oder, 75 Miles South-Eaſt of Berlin; Capital of a Dutchy of the ſame Name: Formerly Part of Sileſia, but has been in the Family of Brandenburg ſince 1274, and gives them Title of Duke. The City is ancient, lies in a pleaſant Valley, and good Air; has a conſiderable Trade by the neighbouring Rivers; and many of the Houſes are built of hewn Stone. The adjacent Hills are covered with Fruit-Trees of ſeveral Sorts, and particularly with Vines, but the Wine is not very good.

7. Schwſed, upon the Oder, 47 Miles North-Eaſt from Berlin. 'Tis the Appanage of one of the Sons of the Family, who has a pleaſant Palace and Garden here; and from hence Prince Philip, Uncle to the preſent King of Pruſſia, is denominated Prince of Brandenburg-Schwed. The Town is noted for a Treaty of Neutrality, for Swediſh Pomerania, to prevent its being ruined by the late War in the North; but Charles XII. of Sweden refuſing to ſtand to it, loſt that Country.

8. Sternberg, Capital of a County on the Frontiers of Poland, 65 Miles Eaſt from Berlin.

Their HISTORY.

THE Atlas Hiſtorique derives the Princes of this Family from that of Aſcania; which gave Occaſion to ſome fabulous Antiquaries to derive them from Aſchenaz, Noah's Grandſon. The firſt mention'd in any certain Hiſtory is Bernthobaldus I. Son to a Lord of Aſcania, and Ballenſted, who liv'd about 524. Others derive them from Adulgerius, choſen King of Bavaria in 456, whoſe Succeſſors took only the Title of Dukes. They made great Conqueſts upon the Romans, and ſome of the Family were Kings of Lombardy; and from Thaſſilo II. King of that Country, came the Branches of Brandenburg; but the firſt called Markgrave of Brandenburg, was Sigifrid, already mention'd, created Markgrave by the Emperor Henry I. being his Brother-in-law, and famous for his Wars againſt the Sclavonians. Several of his Succeſſors were very great Men, and drove the Sclavi and Vandals out of the Country, which came afterwards to the Branch of the Family of Anhalt, who poſſeſſed it 170 Years; but the Branch of that Line failing, which was in Poſſeſſion, it return'd, as a Fief, to the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria; who not regarding the Pretenſions of that Family from which the extinguiſhed Branch deſcended, he gave it to his own Son Lewis, who for 26 Years was engaged in War againſt an Impoſtor, who pretended to be Waldemar Marquis of Brandenburg, that died in the Wars abroad. This Impoſtor was Son to a Miller or Baker, and was ſupported by the Neighbouring Princes, and particularly thoſe of Anhalt, who thought themſelves injured by the Emperor: But the Impoſture being diſcovered, the Emperor Charles IV. confirm'd Lewis, or as Aventine ſays, ſold it to Otho of Bavaria for 200000 Pieces of Gold, which he afterwards ſpent upon a Baker's Wife that was his Miſtreſs. Charles IV. gave it afterwards to his own Son Wenceſlaus, who being elected Emperor, quitted it to his Brother Sigiſmund King of Hungary and Bohemia, who afterwards ſucceeding to the Empire, and not being able of himſelf to reſtore the Peace of the Country he gave it to Frederick V. Burgrave of Nuremberg, who undertook to ſettle Peace in the Country; for which he was to have 100000 Gold Crowns of Hungary, and to reſtore the Electorate: Frederick having reduc'd the Country, Sigiſmund, and the Dyet, made him Elector, but on Condition, that if the Emperor paid him 400000 Crowns, the Electorate ſhould return to Sigiſmund and his Heirs, and if they failed, to his Brother Wenceſlaus and his. But afterwards, in 1415, the Electorate was diſcharged, by Letters Patents, from their Oath to Sigiſmund and Wenceſlaus; and in 1417, Frederick was ſolemnly proclaimed Elector, in the Council of Conſtance. He afterwards reduced ſeveral Towns belonging to the Country; and while thus engaged, Lewis of Bavaria invaded his Dominions of Nuremberg, which Frederick revenged by a War, in which he gained great Reputation. During this Expedition the Emperor made Frederick, Marquis of Miſnia, Elector of Saxony, and Frederick of Brandenburg quitted to him the Electoral Territory of Saxony, on condition that he ſhould pay him a certain Sum for having defended it. In 1426, Frederick of Brandenburg was made General againſt the Huſſites, which prov'd ruinous to Bohemia, and Part of his own Dominions: At the ſame time the Elector of Saxony made War on Frederick, who worſted him, and reconciled thoſe of Magdeburg and Hall to their Biſhops, againſt whom they had rebelled. Frederick advancing in Years, ſettled his Dominions by Will: To his eldeſt Son, John, being one that loved Eaſe, he left a ſmall Part; but the Electorate to his ſeccond Son, Frederick; and to his third Son, Albert, he left Nuremberg, and what he poſſeſſed in Franconia: John thank'd his Father for conſulting his Eaſe; and the Elector dying in 1440, Frederick II. ſucceeded, and ſome Time after was choſen King of Poland, upon the Death of Ladiſlaus, at the Battle of Varna, without Iſſue; but Frederick refuſed it, becauſe Ladiſlaus had a Brother who was Duke of Lithunia. The Poles after this beſieged Francfort on the Oder, where Frederick defeated them. Soon after the King of Bohemia, and Duke of Bavaria, made War upon him, for Luſatia, which he held as a Fee from the Crown of Poland; but a Peace was concluded by dividing the Country betwixt them. He had afterwards a War about the Dutchy of Pomerania, which he demanded upon the Death of Otho III. Duke of Stettin, by Virtue of an Agreement betwixt their Anceſtors: He accordingly took Poſſeſſion by the Emperor's Conſent; but the Duke of Wolgaſt controverted his Title, as being nearer a-kin to the Duke of Stettin, and the Matter was compromiſed Promised by the Mediation of Casimir King of Poland, George-Podiebrat King of Bohemia being declared a Heretic, the Pope offer'd his Crown to Frederic of Brandenburg, but he refused it; and being advanced in Years, he resigned the Electorate, with the Emperor's Consent, to his Brother Albert and his Heirs, upon whom the Emperor did also settle the Dutchies of Pomerania and Stettin, the Burgraviate of Nuremberg, the Principality of Rugen, and the Right of Succession to Mecklemburg. This Frederic was call'd the Marquis with Iron Teeth, some say because of his Cruelty, but others, more probably, from his Success in War. He retired to Franconia, where he dy'd in the 58th Year of his Age.

His Brother Albert the First succeeded in 1442, and at 24 Years of Age was made General of the Empire against the Bohemians and Poles, in which he was successful. He assisted Lewis Son to Lewis of Bavaria, who disinherited him, defeated and took the Father, and made him pay a considerable Ransom to his Son. In 1448, Albert made War on the Town of Nuremberg, with which all the Imperial Towns took part, as most of the Princes of the Empire did with Albert. In two Years time they fought 9 Battles, of which Albert gain'd 8, but both were forced to give over at last for want of Money and Provisions. His Reputation by this War grew so great, that he was afterwards made Arbitrator of all Differences in the Empire. In 1461, he had War with the Duke of Lower Bavaria, for supporting Adolph Count of Nassau, and keeping him in Possession as Archbishop of Mentz; which was accommodated by the Cardinal of Augsburg. He design'd to have seiz'd the Dutchy of Stettin, but contented himself with accepting Homage for that Dutchy from the Dukes of Pomerania, on Condition that when their Posterity fail'd Albert should succeed. To strengthen himself, he enter'd into a mutual Contract of Succession with the Families of Saxony and Hesse, in case any of their Lines should fail. Some time after he was made General of the Empire by Frederic III. against the Duke of Burgundy, during which Expedition he left the Government to his eldest Son, and being advanced in Age, confirm'd him in it, reserving only the Title of Elector, and retired to his Dominions in Franconia. Upon the Death of the Emperor Frederic III. in 1493, he went, notwithstanding his great Age, to assist at the Election of a new Emperor, and afterwards dy'd suddenly in a Bath at Francfort in 1494. He was admired by all for his noble Mien, great Eloquence, Wisdom and Valour, and fought more Battles than any General of his Time. Upon these great and different Qualities, he was call'd the Achilles, the Ulysses, and Cicero of Germany.

His eldest Son John I. succeeded, was an excellent Prince, both in Peace and War, and so remarkable for his Eloquence, that he was also call'd the German Cicero, and employ'd it in accommodating Quarrels among Princes. He contributed much to the Election of the Emperor Maximilian; and his Money being exhausted by War against the King of Hungary and the Duke of Sagan in behalf of his Sister the Dutchess Dowager of Glogaw, he laid an Excise upon Beer in his Dominions, which occasioning a Revolt in the Old Mark, he subdued the Rebels, and deprived the People of their Priviledges. He became so extraordinary fat, that not being able to bear it, he ruined his Health by attempting to make himself lean; and finding his End approaching, he call'd for his Son Joachim, gave him pious Advice, recommended to him the settling of an University at Francfort on the Oder, which he himself had design'd, order'd him to do his People Justice, and not to let his great Men oppress them.

Joachim I. succeeded, upon the Death of his Father, in 1499, and tho' but 16 Years of Age, his Father had taken such Care of his Education, he was advised to take the Government upon him, tho' according to the Golden Bull he was too young for it. He establish'd the University of Francfort on the Oder, in 1506, according to his Father's Desire, and above 1000 Scholars enter'd to it in the first half Year, under their Rector Conrad Wimpen. Joachim's Wisdom and Probity gain'd him the Esteem and Affection of all his Neighbours; and the Hamburgers trusted him with the Defence of their City. The New Mark fell to him, according to Agreement with Albert I. because of the great Sums the Family had expended in Defence of the Teutonic Order, to whom it belong'd. In his Time Luther began to preach, and Joachim with the Elector of Treves advised him at the Dyet of Worms to retract what he had writ against the Pope and his Clergy. Luther refusing, the Elector was somewhat offended; yet was in such Esteem with both Papists and Protestants, that they agreed to chuse him at the Dyet of Augsburg, in 1530, to speak for both to the Emperor Charles V. towards whose Election Joachim and his Brother Albert Archbishop of Mentz had much contributed. He acquitted himself so well, that both Sides admired his Eloquence, Learning, and Solidity. He was so far convinced of the Truth of the Protestant Religion, that he marry'd Elizabeth of Denmark, a Lutheran, authorized the Reformation in his Dominions, and punish'd the Citizens of Stendal, who were stir'd up by a Monk to raise a Tumult against their Magistrates on account of Religion: He condemn'd the Ringleaders to dye, but at the Request of his Sons, chang'd the Sentence into Banishment. After this he had no more Troubles: and to prevent Differences among his Sons, he left Joachim, his eldest, the Electorate, and all his other Dominions, but the New Mark, which he gave his Son John; after which he dy'd, in 1536, being the 51st Year of his Age, and the 36th of his Reign.

His eldest Son Joachim II. succeeded: His Father had taken such Care of his Education, that he exceeded all the Princes of the Empire in Knowledge, Virtue, and decent Behaviour. His Father took him always to the Dyet, or employ'd him there as his Deputy; by which he was perfectly vers'd in Government, and the publick Affairs of the Empire, which procured him universal Respect. He had also great Knowledge in the Scriptures and Languages, and was so much esteem'd by the excellent Emperor Maximilian I. that he betrothed to him his Grandaughter the Infanta of Spain; but her Death prevented the Marriage. Joachim at the Head of his own Troops contributed much to the Victory over the Turks at Leopold, and kill'd a Basha with his own Hand, for which the Emperor Charles V. made him a Knight of the Golden Fleece, an Honour conferr'd upon none in those Days, but such as distinguish'd themselves in Battel. He marry'd first Magalen of Saxony, and after her Death Hedwiga Daughter to Sigismund King of Poland. He join'd those of the Augsburg Confession, contrary to the Advice of both his Fathers-in-Law and his Uncle the Elector of Mentz. He added to the Endowments of the University of Francfort, from the Rents of the Monks and Priests, and took care that those Youth design'd for Church and State, should be educated in good Principles. He polish'd his Court by his own illustrious Example, reform'd Corruptions in the Courts of Justice, and kept his Subjects in perfect Peace. He preserv'd the Empire from the Invasion of the Turks, but was hinder'd from doing any thing considerable against them after the Victory of Leopold, the Imperial Courtiers, who envy'd his Glory, keeping him short of Money and Provisions. He bravely opposed the Interim, agreed upon at the Dyet of Augsburg to be the Religion of the Empire, till the Determination of a General Council. He prevented the Execution of the Elector of Saxony, who was taken and condemn'd by Charles V. join'd with Maurice of Saxony, defeated the Emperor's Army, and forced him, after all Intercession was in vain, to set the Landgrave of Hesse at Liberty, whom he had unjustly detain'd, contrary to Promise. He renew'd the Treaty of mutual Succession betwixt his own Family and those of Saxony and Hesse. The Emperor Ferdinand I. had such a Respect for him, that when he assembled the Electors at Francfort to chuse his Son Maximilian II. King of the Romans, he went out of the City with the other Princes to meet Joachim; and when Ferdinand lay on his Death-Bed, he order'd Maximilian to take Joachim's Advice, as that of a Father. Upon Ferdinand's Death, in 1564, the Elector wept, as foreseeing the Troubles that follow'd upon it. He was reckon'd to have a Prophetick Spirit, and Historians observe the Accomplishment of his Predictions. He was a very religious Prince, and much taken up in Meditation on our Saviour's Passion, of which there was an Account found under his Hand before his own Death, which was sudden, being poyson'd by a Jew in a Glass of Sack, in the 66th Year of his Age, and the 36th of his Reign.

His Son John-George I. succeeded, in 1561. Tho' he had a good Education, he serv'd under Charles V. against the Protestant Princes of the League of Smalcald, and signalized his Valour on so many Occasions, that Philip II. of Spain made him General of his Army, and one of his Privy-Council. He had the same Posts under the Emperor Maximilian II. till he came to the Electorate upon his Father's Death. He banish'd all the Jews out of his Dominions, and put him that poyson'd his Father to a cruel End. He preserv'd the Civil and Religious Liberties of his Subjects, and was in such Esteem for his Justice, that the Elector of Saxony and the Dukes of Mecklemburg and Anhalt left him Tutor to their Sons, and he perform'd the Trust with great Integrity. He endeavoured to obtain Freedom for the Protestants in the Electorate of Cologn, after the Pope had excommunicated their Elector for turning Protestant; made Religion and Justice flourish in his own Dominions, supported his Grandson John-George in the Administration of the Bishoprick of Strasburg, and dy'd piously in 1598, in the 72d Year of his Age, and 27th of his Reign.

His Son Joachim-Frederic succeeded: His Preceptor was the learned Hubner, whom he afterwards made one of his Counsellors. During his Minority, he was chosen Bishop of Havelburg and Lubec; but his Father took care of the Administration. At 19 Years of Age he went to the Emperor Maximilian IId's Court, follow'd him to the Wars in Hungary, and upon the Death of the Archbishop of Magdeburg, was made Administrator of the Archbishoprick, brought in the Reformation, and govern'd to the universal Satisfaction of his Subjects there for 30 Years. He lived in perfect Amity with the Neighbouring Princes, and frequently reconciled their Differences. He assisted Henry IV. of France against the Catholick Leaguers; and after his Father's Death was receiv'd with as much Joy by his natural Subjects as the Magdeburgers had Grief in losing him: but to testify their Love for him, and entitle themselves still to his Protection, they chose his youngest Son in his stead. The Emperor Rudolphus esteem'd him so much, that he readily granted him the Investiture, and all other Demands. He was suddenly taken ill in his Coach as singing Psalms, and dy'd, recommending himself devoutly to God, in 1609, the 62d Year of his Age, and 11th of his Reign.

His Son John-Sigismund succeeded, marry'd Anne Dutchess of Prussia, and Presumptive Heiress of the Dutchy of Juliers. He was confirm'd in the Dutchy of Prussia by the King and Dyet of Poland; and the Duke of Juliers and Cleves dying, he took Possession of those Dutchies in Right of his Electress, but was opposed by the Duke of Newburg; and at length they agreed to govern jointly. He join'd in the Protestant League against the Popish League in the Empire, dy'd in 1619, the 48th Year of his Age, and 12th of his Reign.

His Son George William succeeded, who during his Father's Life had been Administrator of Juliers and Cleves. He was a zealous Protestant, and in an Assembly at Leipsic endeavour'd an Union betwixt the Lutherans and Calvinists, which was defeated by the Stubbornes of some Clergymen. After the Defeat of Frederic V. Elector Palatine and King of Bohemia, at the Battel of Prague, George and the Elector of Saxony procured Peace in the Empire for some time: But the House of Austria being animated by Success to attempt the Liberties of the Empire, and the Ruin of the Protestants, the latter brought in Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden to their Assistance against the Emperor. During this War the Dominions of Brandenburg suffer'd much, and all the Elector could do was to defend his best Places. He dy'd in 1640.

Frederic-William, his Son, succeeded, and made a Treaty of Neutrality with the Swedes, who, by the Treaty of Munster, were obliged to evacuate Pomerania and the Marquisate immediately, but delay'd it till 1653, that he was forced to quit them all that call'd since Swedish Pomerania, with several Bailiwicks, and the Isle of Rugen; for which he had, but much short of an Equivalent, the Archbishoprick of Magdeburg, the Bishopricks of Halberstat and Camin, and the Principality of Minden, tho' he offer'd to quit all those, and to give 200000 Crowns for that Part of Pomerania which he was obliged to give up. He bravely maintain'd the Prerogative of the Electors as to the Ceremonial in the Dyet of Francfort, was a zealous Supporter of the Protestant Interest, and particularly of the Calvinists. In 1656, he was obliged, for the Preservation of Prussia, to join with the Swedes against the Poles; but the King of Denmark having declared War against the Swedes, he was forced to return to the Defence of his own Country, and made a Treaty with the Poles, by which they quitted him the Homage due to their Crown for Prussia, &c. and gave him the Town of Elbing, on Condition that he should restore it on their paying him 400000 Crowns.

On

On the Death of the Emperor Ferdinand III. the French were for making the Elector of Bavaria Emperor; but Frederic adhering to the Houſe of Auſtria, got Leopold advanced to the Imperial Throne, tho' the Elector of Bavaria had beforehand obtain'd 3 of the 7 Votes. He afterwards endeavour'd an Accommodation betwixt the Poles and Swedes; but not prevailing, he join'd with the Houſe of Auſtria, the Danes and Poles againſt the Swedes, which brought on the Treaty of Oliva in 1660. He then applied himſelf to the Affairs of Peace, and for his own Security made an Alliance with France and England. The French King having ſeiz'd the Principality of Orange, the Elector, as Tutor to the young Prince, to whom he was alſo Godfather, and nearly related, pleaded for reſtoring it. In 1666, he made a perpetual Treaty with the Duke of Newburg about the Succeſſion of Juliers and Cleves, and afterwards got the latter annex'd to his Family for ever. He aſſiſted the Emperor againſt the Turks, made Peace betwixt the Princes of Lunenburg, who were at Variance among themſelves, and contributed much to the Peace betwixt the Engliſh, the Biſhop of Munſter, and the Dutch; he aſſiſted the latter, and the Emperor againſt the French in 1672, and ſupported the Intereſt of the Prince of Orange againſt the De Wits and their Faction. Having received ſome Diſguſt from the Emperor and the States, he made a Treaty with France in 1673; but in 1674 renew'd his Alliance with them againſt the French, and march'd to Alſace with 20000 Men. In the mean time the Swedes, by the Sollicitation of France, invaded the Mark; upon which the Elector return'd from Alſace, defeated the Swedes, took all their ſtrong Towns in Pomerania, and drove them quite out of that Country, and the Iſle of Rugen. They to divert him invaded Pruſſia; but the Elector in the Middle of Winter paſs'd the Bay of Courland, where it was three Miles broad, with his Army and Artillery upon the Ice, which none had ever attempted before, ſurprized and defeated them, ſo that ſcarce a third part of their Army eſcaped to Livonia. Being ungratefully left out of the Treaty of Nimeguen, and the French joining the Swedes againſt him, he was obliged to quit all thoſe Conqueſts by the Treaty of St. Germains; but the French King by a ſecret Article paid him 300000 Crowns towards the Charge of the War. The King of Spain being in Arrears to him, and refuſing to pay, he fitted out 8 Ships, took a rich Veſſel on the Coaſt of Spain, and did himſelf Juſtice. For enlarging the Trade of his Subjects, he planted a Colony, and built a Fortreſs in Guinea, which he call'd Fredericksburg. He alſo made the Canal betwixt the Spre and Oder, mention'd in the Deſcription of Berlin, which City he enlarged and embelliſhed. He ſtudied the Welfare of his Subjects, aboliſhed Taxes on their Eſtates, and laid it on Conſumption, which had a very good Effect. He attempted an Union betwixt the Lutherans and Calviniſts, but without Succeſs. He was ſo charitable to the French Refugees, that he employ'd their Nobility in his Army and Court, and gave the others all the Priviledges of his own Subjects, with a long Exemption from Impoſts, and ſaid he would rather ſell his Plate than they ſhould want Subſiſtence. In ſhort, he was ſo brave and ſo good a Prince in all Reſpects, that his Subjects of all Perſwaſions loved him, his Enemies dreaded him, and the French call'd him the Great Captain of Germany. He lived in Splendour, but hated Luxury, was generous in rewarding Services, and juſt in puniſhing Crimes. He was exemplary in his Life, and dy'd piouſly, after ſuch Inſtructions to his Son, as became a David or Solomon, in 1688, the 68th Year of his Age, and 48th of his Reign, leaving behind him the juſt Character of Frederic-William the Great.

His Son Frederic ſucceeded, and ſoon after had an Interview with the Elector of Saxony, the Duke of Hanover, and the Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel, about the Security of their own and the Proteſtant Intereſt, and the Prince of Orange's Expedition into England, which had been concerted before with Frederic-William, who had always a tender Reſpect for the Prince of Orange, and he on the other hand regarded the Elector as a Father. Lewis XIV. of France having invaded Germany the ſame Year, the Elector aſſiſted the Empire, and in 1689 did in Perſon beſiege and take Bonne, where he gave great Proofs of his Hereditary Valour. In 1690, King William made him Knight of the Garter. In 1693, his Troops, under his Brother Prince Charles, ſignalized their Courage at the Battel of Landen, of which King William gave him an Account by Letter. In 1695 they did the like at the taking of Namure, which King William having ſignified to him by a Letter, he came to the Hague to congratulate his Majeſty upon his Succeſs, and invited his Majeſty and the Duke of Zell to his Palace at Cleves, where he gave 'em a ſplendid Entertainment. When Auguſtus, Elector of Saxony, was choſen King of Poland, the Elector ſeiz'd the Town of Elbing, for the Sum due to his Father. In 1700 he took upon him the Title of King of Pruſſia. King William of Great Britain dying in 1702, he claim'd the Principality of Orange, and other Parts of that Prince's Inheritance beyond Sea, as deſcended from Rene of Naſſaw, Prince of Orange; but there's ſtill a Controverſy depending about it, betwixt his Family and that of the Prince of Naſſaw, Hereditary Stadtholder of Frieſland, whom King William left his Heir. He took a Journey to Cleves, to keep the States of the United Provinces from being too much diſcouraged upon King William's Death; and his Troops contributed much in taking Keyſerſwaert from the French. Lewis XIV. of France having ſeiz'd the Principality of Orange upon King William's Death, and baniſh'd the Proteſtants, his Pruſſian Majeſty very kindly receiv'd 'em into his Dominions. In 1704 his Troops contributed much to the glorious Victory over the French and Bavarians at Hochſtadt; as they did in 1706, to the famous Victory over the French at Turin. In 1707, he ſucceeded the Dutcheſs of Nemours in the Principality of Neufchattel and County of Valengin, by the Interpoſition of Queen Anne of Great Britain, and the Allies, notwithſtanding the French King's Oppoſition.

By the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713, the French King and the King of Spain own'd his Title as King of Pruſſia, and quitted to him part of the Upper Quarter of Spaniſh Guelderland, viz. the Town of Gueldre, &c. in full Propriety and Sovereignty; likewiſe the County of Caſſel, and the Bailiwic of Kruckenbec in the ſaid Country, which he was at Liberty to call by the Name of the Principality of Orange, if he thought fit. They did likewiſe acknowledge him as Sovereign of the Principality of Neufchatel and Valengin; and the King of Pruſſia renounced to the Crown of France his Right to the Principality of Orange, and the Lordſhips of Chalons and Caſtle Belin, ſituate in France, and the County of Burgundy, and to ſatisfy the Heirs of the late Prince of Naſſau-Frieſland, as to their Pretenſions on the ſaid Principality and Lordſhips. Such of the Inhabitants as pleaſed were at Liberty to retire from the ſaid Principality and Lordſhips, and ſell their Eſtates and Effects without Hindrance, or to have them adminiſter'd by Proxy; and ſuch as had already retired, were to have the ſame Liberty. The King of Pruſſia dy'd in February that Year, and made a very pious Exit, having on his Death-Bed writ a very affecting Letter to the Queen of Great Britain, recommending to her to take Care for the Deliverance of the poor Proteſtants in France, who being condemn'd to the Galleys, and ſhut up in Priſons, &c. or groaning under the intolerable Yoke of Popery, led a Life ten times worſe than Death itſelf. He was ſucceeded by his Son Frederic-William, the preſent King, Nephew to King George by his Siſter, and alſo Son-in-Law to him, by marrying his Daughter.

His Titles are, King of Pruſſia, Markgrave of Brandenburg, Arch-Chamberlain and Elector of the Empire, Prince of Orange, of Magdeburg, Cleves, Juliers, Bergen, Stetin, Pomerania, Caſſubia, of the Vandals, and Croſſen in Sileſia, Burgrave of Nuremberg, Prince of Halberſtad, Minden, and Camin, Count of Hohenzollern, Marc, Ravensberg, Lawenburg, Botow, Arley, and Breda, Prince of Neufchatel, and Count of Valengin.

The principal Branches of this Family, who are Sovereigns in the Empire, are, 1. That of Barcith-Cullembach: 2. Anſpach; who both deſcended from the Elector John-George, that dy'd in 1598. The preſent Princeſs of Wales is a Daughter of Anſpach. 3. Hohenzollern, which is as old as Charlemain's Time. From this Family came the Burgraves of Nuremberg, from whence the Royal Family is deſcended; and from it proceeded alſo the Branch of Sigmaringen.

III. The Electorate and Dominions of SAXONY,

HAS the Dutchy of Brunſwic, the Principality of Halberſtad, the Dutchy of Magdeburg, and the Electorate of Brandenburg on the North, the Circle of Franconia, and part of Bohemia on the South, the Landgraviate of Heſſe on the Weſt, Sileſia and part of Bohemia on the Eaſt. The greateſt Length from Weſt to Eaſt is 220 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth from North to South 140; but 'tis much indented by other Dominions on all Sides.

The Limits of the Saxons are differently deſcribed by Hiſtorians and Geographers, becauſe the ancient Saxons being a warlike People, other Germans were ambitious to call themſelves by their Name; ſo that it formerly extended over both the Circles of Upper and Lower Saxony; but for ſome Ages the Name has been appropriated to the Dominions of the Houſe of Saxony.

The Country is divided,

Firſt, Into the Dutchy of SAXONY, which has Nether Luſatia, and part of the Marquiſate of Brandenburg on the Eaſt, the County of Mansfeld and Landgraviate of Thuringia on the Weſt, the Principality of Anhalt on the North, and the Marquiſate of Miſnia on the South. 'Tis pretty fruitful in Corn, tho' ſhort of the neighbouring Provinces. Wheat is ther chief Grain. In their Hills there are Mines of Silver and other Metals, but ſcarce Wood enough to refine them. Here are alſo ſome Vines. The Air is cold, but wholeſome. The Inhabitants are ſtrict Obſervers of the ancient municipal Laws of their Pagan Anceſtors, which Charlemain ſuffer'd them to retain, ſome ſay to pleaſe them, and others becauſe they could not be better'd; ſo that they are ſtill reſerv'd when general Laws are made by the Dyet. The beſt of them are collected into two Bodies, call'd Speculum Saxonicum, i. e. the Saxon Looking-Glaſs, and Statuta Civitatum Saxonicarum, i. e. the Statures of the Saxon Cities or Communities. There have been ſeveral Editions of them with Commentaries.

Places of Note here are,

1. Wittenburg, upon the Eaſt ſide of the Elbe, Lat. 51. 55. Lon. 13½. 15 Miles South-Eaſt from Deſſau, and 50 North-Weſt from Dreſden. 'Tis Capital of the Dutchy. Some derive the Name from Wittekind, an ancient Saxon Prince, and others from the White Rocks in the Neighbourhood, from whence the Students gave it the Greek Name of Leucoris. 'Tis a large populous City, of what they call an oblong Square, with a great Street in the Middle. 'Tis well fortified, having Marſhes and a Canal to the Elb on the North ſide, a deep Ditch, a good Rampart, and 5 large Baſtions on the other Sides. The Elector Frederic built a ſtrong Caſtle here, and founded the Univerſity in 1502. It grew famous by Luther's preaching, and Melanchthon's being Profeſſor there. It has large Priviledges, and is reckon'd the beſt Univerſity that the Lutherans have for Divinity. It was the Seat of the Prince till the Government came into the Family of Miſnia, ſince which their Seat has been at Dreſden.

2. Halle, 35 Miles South-Weſt from Wittenberg, on the Banks of the River Sala. Tho' it lie in this Country, 'tis ſubject to the King of Pruſſia, and depends on the Dutchy of Magdeburg. It was famous for Salt-pits in the Neighbourhood, diſcover'd by the Hermandurs, the old Inhabitants before our Saviour's Birth: They valued them as much as Mines of Gold; and they are indeed very conſiderable, as appears by the weekly Tolls of 5 or 600 Crowns, which they pay to the Adminiſtrator of Magdeburg. Theſe Salt Springs differ in their Nature, three of them hold above 7 parts of Salt, a third of Marcaſite, and 14 of Water, and one of them, which yields the pureſt Salt, holds leſs. Theſe Springs are alſo employ'd medicinally to bathe in, and a Spirit is extracted from the Water, which is good againſt Venom, and the Putefaction of the Lungs, Liver, Reins and Spleen. Some derive the Name from the Greek Word ἅλς, Salt. 'Tis call'd Halla Saxonum, to diſtinguiſh it from others of that Name elſewhere. It was built by the Emperor Otho II. in 981, and made an Imperial Town. This Priviledge continued till 1308, that it was united to Miſnia, and gave Title of Saxe-Halle to a Branch of the Family. Here is an Univerſity, and it has been much noted of late for an Hoſpital built there by Dr. Franks, without any certain Fund either for building or ſupporting it, but has been hitherto maintain'd, and made very conſiderable both for the Buildings and Number of Scholars, Mechanics, and Poor, by a wonderful Chain of providential Charities, of which there's an Account in a Book ſome time ago tranſlated and printed in London, call'd Pietas Hallenſis. This Town is alſo remarkable for their Language's being reckon'd the moſt refin'd in Germany, and by Conſequence the Standard of that Tongue, ſo that 'tis much frequented by Youth on that Account.

3. Quedlinburg, about 45 Miles North-Weſt from Halle. 'Twas formerly a Hans Town, but the Citizens rebelling againſt their Abbeſs in 1475, they were ſubjected by the Elector of Saxony. The Abbeſs is Sovereign of the City and Territories, and commonly a Counteſs or Princeſs of the Houſe of Saxony. 'Twas founded in the 10th Century, by the Emperor Henry the Fowler, and one of his Daughters was the firſt Abbeſs: All the Nuns muſt be of noble Extraction for eight Deſcents. It depends immediately on the Empire, and the Abbeſs has her Deputy in the Dyet. The Counteſs of Stolberg, who was Abbeſs in 1539, brought in Lutheraniſm; ſince which they have continued Proteſtants, and are under the Protection of the Elector of Saxony.

4. Torgaw, on the Elbe, 17 Miles South from Wittemberg, a large fortified Town, and has a great Trade in Beer. It was built and adorned with a ſtately Caſtle, by the Elector John-Frederic, in 1535; and taken by the Swedes during the German War, in 1637.

5. Bitterfield, on the Mulda, a fortified Town.

6. Wieſenburg, another, on the Frontiers of Anhalt, both taken by the Swedes, in 1637.

THE ſecond Diviſion is the Marquiſate of MISNIA, which lies South from the Dutchy. 'Tis of a conſiderable Extent, and ſubdivided into four Circles, Miſnia, Leipſic, the Mountains, and Voigtland. The Plains are fruitful in all ſorts of Corn, and the Hills abound with rich Minerals. There are large Vineyards, on the Banks of the Elbe, but the Wine not very good. Here are alſo Salt-Pits about Marsburg, but much ſhort of thoſe of Halle. Their Foreſts abound with Veniſon, and in ſome of them there are Bears. The Rivers abound with Fiſh, eſpecially Carps, as numerous and large as any in Europe. Some derive the Name from the Miſi, a People of Aſia, who ſettled here, and were ſo contemptible, as appears by Cicero's Oration for Flaccus, that it was reckon'd the greateſt Reproach to call a Man Miſorum ultimus: But the preſent Miſnians are ſo far improv'd, that they are reckon'd to make the beſt Figure of any Germans, and are noted for their Affability, Courteſy, neat Apparel, and good Shape; and Albinus commends them for their Chaſtity, and ſevere Laws againſt Adultery.

Places of Note are,

1. Dreſden, the Capital of this Diſtrict, and now of all Saxony, being the uſual Reſidence of the Electors. It lies on the Elbe, Lat. 51. 12. Long. 14. 11. Dr. Brown, Dr. Nicholſon, la Foreſt, and others, give the following Deſcription of it. 'Tis a large, well built, populous, and one of the moſt conſiderable Places in Germany. 'Tis well fortified after the modern Way; the Baſtions faced with Stone, and in ſome Places defended by a double Ditch. The Elbe divides it into the Old and New Towns, which have a Communication by a ſtately Stone-Bridge of 17 Arches. In the old Town there is a large Caſtle, and ſome of the Fortifications made by Charlemain. Here is alſo a Hunting-houſe, where fifteen Bears are kept, with Fountains, and Ponds, in which they waſh, with ragged Poſts round them, by which the Bears climb up to the Scaffolds on the Top, where they ſun and dry themſelves. Here is alſo a Houſe for keeping Lyons, and other wild Beaſts of many Sorts. That called the Horn-Gallery here, has ſeveral Apartments well painted with all Sorts of Hunting of Fowls and wild Beaſts.

The New Town is the moſt beautiful, the beſt fortified, and as well worth a Traveller's View as any Place in Germany. The Elector's Palace that ſtands here is very large, and has noble and ſplendid Apartments. The Hall is very ſpacious and adorned with fine Draughts of Cities, Pictures of Giants, and the Habits of many Nations very well done; but the moſt remarkable and ſurprizing thing is, the Collection of Rarities, which fills ſeveral large Chambers: They are ſo numerous that we cannot inſiſt upon them, and ſhall only ſay, in ſhort, that the greateſt Curioſities of Art and Nature are ſeen here in great Numbers. Amongſt others there are Pictures of a very great Value; and wonderful Performances in Clockwork. The Stables, which are near the Palace, are very ſtately and large, and well furniſhed with many fine Horſes, and an Iron Rack and a Copper Manger for each. Near the Stables there is a curious Fountain and Pond, ſurrounded with Balluſters, where the Horſes are watered and waſhed; and here is a long arched Walk before the Stables, painted with curious Horſes. Over this Walk there is a Gallery with the Pictures of all the Dukes and Electors of Saxony, in their Robes and Military Habits. Among the reſt there are the Pictures of Hengiſt and Horſus, the two Saxon Generals, under whom they invaded England, drawn according to the Deſcriptions given of them by romantic monkiſh Hiſtorians. In other Chambers over the Stables there are a great many Curioſities, among others, a Horſeman of Silver, moved by a Spring, who carries a Cup of Wine in his Hand; a Gun which diſcharges forty times without Intermiſſion. The Arſenal is an oblong-Square Building, and is as well furniſhed as any in the Empire: Here is 400 Braſs Ordnance, great Quantities of all Sorts of Arms, and ſeveral Suits of Armour, and Coats of Mail in Silver, and others of Steel, uſed by the Electors in their Wars. Here are alſo Repreſentations of Hungarian and Turkiſh Horſe and Foot, drawn up in Parties, with their Commanders at their Heads, contrived ſo as to turn round. The chief Church is a very fair Structure, having formerly belonged to the Biſhops of Miſnia, till 1274, that one of them yielded the Town to the Marquis of Miſnia. The Citizens contend with thoſe of Halle, for ſpeaking the beſt High-Dutch. Within three Miles of this City, there is a Bed or Quarry of Stones, which riſe about 17 Ells above Ground, and repreſent Columns with ſeveral Corners, and are ſo joyn'd as if it were done by Art; they have from four to ſeven Columns a Piece, are ſmooth on the Outſide, look as if they were mixed with Iron, are very weighty, and hard as Adamant: According to the Deſcription, they have ſome Reſemblance of the Giants Cauſeway in Ireland.

2. Miſſen, on the Elbe, 10 Miles North-Weſt from Dreſden. 'Twas formerly the Metropolis, but now inconſiderable. It was made a Biſhoprick by the Emperor Otho, about the middle of the 10th Century, but ſince the Reformation, has been ſecularized and poſſeſſed by the Electors. It had formerly the beſt wooden Bridge in Germany, which being deſtroyed by the Civil War, there is a worſe built in its ſtead. The Elector has a Palace here, in form of a Caſtle, for Defence of the Town.

3. Pirn, on the Elbe, about 8 Miles South-Eaſt from Dreſden, a ſmall fortified Town, noted for a Treaty of Peace between the Emperor Ferdinand II. the Elector of Saxony, and other Princes of the Empire, in 1636. It was taken and pillaged by the Swedes in 1640.

4. Muhlberg, a Village on the Elbe, 28 Miles North-Weſt from Dreſden, famous for a Victory by Charles V. over the Proteſtants in 1547, when Frederick of Saxony was taken by the Duke of Alva, who commanded the Imperial Army.

5. Naumburg, a very pretty Town, on the River Sala, 70 Miles North-Weſt from Dreſden. It formerly belonged to the Archbiſhop of Magdeburg, and has a Diſtrict about 25 Miles long, and 15 broad, but is now reckoned Part of the Circle of Miſnia. It is the Capital of the Biſhoprick, which was founded in 952, by the Emperor Otho I. and tranſplanted hither in 982. Lutheraniſm was introduc'd here in the Beginning of the 16th Century by their Biſhop, after whoſe Death the Elector took the Adminiſtration. It was quitted to him by the Treaty of Paſſau, in 1552. His Anceſtors did afterwards appropriate the ſame, and it gave a Title to a Branch of the Family, who was called Adminiſtrator. The laſt Adminiſtrator turning Papiſt in 1717, by which he was made incapable of enjoying the Proteſtant Biſhoprick, the Emperor pleaded, that he ſhould enjoy half the Revenue, which amounts in the whole to 70000 Crowns per Annum; but the Chapter refus'd it, as contrary to the Treaty of Weſtphalia. He was Duke of Saxe-Zeits, recanted before he died, but did not live to be reſtored to the Adminiſtration. Weiſſenfelt, on the ſame River, 10 Miles Eaſt from Naumburg, anciently Leucopetra, gives alſo Title of Prince to a Branch of the Family.

6. Marsburg, 10 Miles North from Naumburg, and 15 North-Weſt from Leipſic, on the River Sala. 'Tis a pretty large populous Town, and, as ſome think, derives its Name from Mars, whom the Pagan Saxons worſhipped here by the Name of Irman-Seul. 'Twas formerly a Biſhop's See, Suffragan to Magdeburg, founded by the Emperor Otho I. in 952, who made it an Imperial Town. The Duke of Saxony introduced Lutheraniſm here, about 1562, when he was Adminiſtrator, and the Revenues have ſince been a Portion to a Branch of the Family called Duke of Saxe-Marsburg. The Cathedral is worth a Traveller's View; and near it there is a Library of many ancient Mauſcripts, but ill kept: Among them are the Books of Samuel and Kings in Latin, in fair ancient Engliſh-Saxon Character. The laſt Duke dying, in 1690, without Heirs-Male, the Elector of Saxony took Poſſeſſion of it. Part of the Revenues of theſe Biſhopricks is appropriated toward the Maintenance of a Number of Canons belonging to each Cathedral, and the reſt to the Prince's Adminiſtrators.

7. Altenburg, on the River Pleiſs, 45 Miles South-Weſt from Dreſden. It was an Imperial City till Frederick Marquis of Miſnia took it in 1308, and united it to that Country. It has a fine Caſtle, where the Dukes of Saxony ſometimes kept their Court. The Town is pretty, and the Juriſdiction ſo large, that 'tis called a Dutchy. It has been poſſeſſed by the Duke of Saxe-Gotha ſince 1672, and was formerly called Oſterland.

8. Zeits, on the Mulda, 20 Miles South-Eaſt from Naumburg, and 12 North-Weſt from Altenburg. 'Tis a ſmall Town, was ſack'd in 982, by the Vandals, and gives Title to a Prince of the Family called Duke of Saxe-Zeits.

9. Lutzen, on the River Elſter, 10 Miles North-Weſt from Leipſic, famous for a great Victory which Guſtavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, obtained here over the Imperialiſts in 1632; but was killed in the Battle, and as ſome think by Treachery. His Fall occaſioned one to ſay, That he triumphed over his Enemies in the Arms of Death: And another made this Diſtich upon it:

Here, in this Field, the great Guſtavus dy'd,
While Victory lay bleeding by his Side.

2. The Circle of LEIPSIC, ſo called from its Capital, on the River Pleiſs, 48 Miles North-Weſt from Dreſden, and 25 North-Weſt from Meiſſen. 'Tis ſuppoſed to have been built by the Vandals, A. D. 700. And to have its Name from Lipzk, a Lime-Tree, with which that Country abounded, and hence ſome Latin Authors call it Philurea, from the Greek φίλυρεα, a Lime-Tree. It ſtands near the Conflux of three ſmall Rivers, in a pleaſant and fruitful Plain, abounding with all Neceſſaries and Pleaſures, particularly large rich Meadows mowed twice, and ſometimes thrice a Year, beſides pleaſant Woods, and many fine Orchards and Gardens belonging to the Citizens. The Town is large and populous, and the Houſes ſtately, eſpecially about the Market, where they are commonly 7 and 9 Stories high. The Town-houſe is a large and noble Structure. St. Nicholas Church is very fine, and the beſt adorned of any Lutheran Church in Germany. The City is very rich, becauſe of the Concourſe of Merchants from moſt Parts of Europe to their Fairs at Eaſter, Michaelmas, and Chriſtmas, when they are exempted from Tolls. 'Tis alſo the Seat of a high Court of Judicature, where the Elector himſelf is obliged to appear, when ſummon'd. Their Way of proceeding is deſcribed by Zobelius in a Book call'd Differentia Juris Civilis & Saxonici, and by the Author of the Chronicon Lipſienſe. Here is alſo a famous Univerſity, founded in 1408, on a Quarrel betwixt the Huſſites and Papiſts at Prague, from whence 2000 Students came hither in one Day: It has 4 Colleges, and 24 Profeſſors: Their chief Profeſſor of Divinity, Adam Schertzar, publiſh'd ſome Years ago a very learned Book, entitled Collegium Anti-Sociniauum, wherein he confuted the great Socinian Carpſovius. It has bred many learned Men; and there is a monthly Book publiſh'd here, giving an Account of remarkable Pieces upon all parts of Learning, call'd Acta Eruditorum Lipſiæ. In their Library there's abundance of Manuſcripts that belong'd to Monaſteries demoliſh'd at the time of the Reformation; among others, there is Tretzer's Greek Commentary on Homer's Iliads, in a fair and legible Character: This is look'd upon as a Rarity ſcarce to be found any where elſe. The Citizens alſo contend with thoſe of Halle for the Purity of the German Tongue. Luther diſputed here with Eckius againſt the Pope's Supremacy, in 1520; ſoon after which the City embraced the Reformation.

The adjacent Country was the chief Seat of the German Civil War; ſo that in two Years it was taken and retaken five times. It is fortified, has has a good Garriſon, and is defended by the ſtrong Caſtle of Pleiſſenburg on the River. 'Tis noted for three Victories obtain'd near it by the Swedes over the Imperialiſts, in 1631, when Guſtavus defeated Tilly, in 1641, and in 1642, when the Archduke Leopold and General Picolomini were defeated by the Swediſh Admiral Torſtenſon, who afterwards obliged the Town to ſurrender.

1. Altranſtad, a Village near this City, in the Way to Halle, is famous for being Charles XII. of Sweden's Head-Quarters in 1706, when he over-ran Saxony; and likewiſe for a Treaty in September that Year, betwixt his Swediſh Majeſty and King Auguſtus, by which the latter renounced the Crown of Poland to his Rival Staniſlaus, reſerving only the Title and Honours of a King: He alſo renounced his Alliances againſt the King of Sweden and Staniſlaus, promiſed to give no more Aſſiſtance to the Czar, and engaged, in concert with the King of Sweden, to preſerve the Proteſtant Religion in the Empire, as eſtabliſh'd by the Treaty of Weſtphalia, and to make no Alteration to the contrary in Saxony and Luſatia; and if attack'd on account of this Peace, he was to be aſſiſted by the King of Sweden and King Staniſlaus. There was another Treaty concluded there at the ſame time betwixt the King of Sweden and King Staniſlaus on the one part, and King Auguſtus on the other, to the ſame Effect, upon the Execution of which the Swediſh Troops were to evacuate Saxony. In September 1707, another Treaty was concluded here betwixt the King of Sweden and the Emperor, for reſtoring the Proteſtants of Sileſia to their Liberties, according to the Treaty of Weſtphalia; but ſome Delays happening in the Execution, and the King of Sweden ſtill continuing in the Country, and ravaging it in a barbarous manner, gave the Emperor and the Confederates very great Uneaſineſs; ſo that the Duke of Marlborough came hither, and prevailed with the King of Sweden to evacuate the Country, to the univerſal Satisfaction of the Confederates, who were jealous that the French Court might prevail with the King of Sweden to join them, or at leaſt to give the Allies a farther Diverſion, by invading the Emperor's Hereditary Countries.

2. Colditz, 7 Miles Weſt from Leipſic, a little City of good Trade.

3. Leiſnick, on the Mulda, 22 Miles South-Eaſt from Leipſic, noted for the Birth of Appian the Geographer.

II. The Circle of the MOUNTAINS, where are,

1. Freiberg, or Freidberg, a famous pleaſant Town on the Banks of the Mulda, about 13 Miles South-Weſt from Dreſden. The Name comes from the rich neighbouring Hills that abound with Mines. 'Tis defended by ſtrong Walls, held out againſt the Swedes in the Civil War, but ſurrender'd to the Imperialiſts in 1632, when the Elector of Saxony gave 80000 Rixdollars to ſave the noble Monuments of his Anceſtors, in St. Peter's Church here, from being defaced and rifled of the Robes, Jewels, and Rings, which according to Cuſtom had been entomb'd with them. The Monument of the Elector Maurice here is one of the nobleſt in Germany. The Town is chiefly remarkable for the rich Mines in and about it, diſcover'd in 1180. Dr. Brown in his Travels gives this Account of 'em: The chief is that upon the high Hill, which is 208 Fathom deep. The ſecond call'd the Prince of Heaven, was not many Years ago ſo rich, that 100 Weight of Ore yielded 65 Pound of Silver; tho' the Doctor ſays, 'tis a common Obſervation among Miners, that where the Veins are richeſt and pureſt, they are generally thinneſt, and not above two Inches broad; that the Ore commonly does not yield above 1½ Ounce of Silver per lib. yet they work it, tho' it does not yield above ½ Ounce: that thoſe of Potoſi don't yield above 10 or 12, tho' according to Alberto Alonſo, the round Hill of Potoſi alone has yielded betwixt 4 and 500 Millions of Pieces of Eight ſince 'twas dug. The third Mine here is call'd Neckbreak, and 80 Engliſh Fathoms deep; the Ore yields Copper and Silver, or Silver and Lead, and ſometimes all three ſeparately, tho' they work only for Silver. The Reſident of Brandenburg, commonly bound up with Wicquefort's L'Ambaſſadeur & ſes Fonctions ſays, that the richeſt Mines in this Country are thoſe of Sneberg, diſcover'd in 1471, from which Year to 1501, the Elector had for his Tenths 510 Millions of Gold, and 900000 Crowns; and from thence to 1537, 393 Millions of Gold, and 800000 Crowns; but they have not yielded in proportion ſince, tho' ſtill very rich, being in part ruined by the Wars. As to the Way of melting the Ore, and preparing the Sulphur and Vitriol here, the Curious may find the Particulars in the Doctor's Travels. In this Town there is a yearly Coinage of Rixdollars, and other Money, commonly as fine as our Sterling, and reckon'd the beſt in Germany.

2. Bebra, or Nebra, on the River Unſtrat, 10 Miles North-Weſt from Freiberg. 'Twas burnt by the Swedes in 1709, becauſe the Inhabitants did not furniſh them Forage at the time demanded. The People fled to the Churches for Security, but were driven from thence by Whips.

3. Chemnitz, on a River of its Name, Capital of this Circle, 30 Miles Weſt South-Weſt from Dreſden. 'Twas an Imperial Town, till reduced by the Marquis of Miſnia, in 1508; is defended by the ſtrong Caſtle call'd Auguſtusburg, and noted for Mines of Lead and Tin.

4. Frawenſtein, a Town among the Mountains, where there's a good Lead Mine.

5. Kongſtein, on the Elbe and Frontiers of Bohemia, 15 Miles South from Dreſden, a ſtrong Fortreſs, with an Arſenal, where the Elector keeps his Treaſure.

6. Marſenburg, on the ſame Frontier, built in the 16th Century, for working on the Mines then diſcover'd there.

7. Annaburg, within a League of it, built on the ſame Account, the Cloſe of the 15th Century.

III. The Circle of VOIGTLAND, Weſt-South Weſt from that of the Mountains, on the Frontiers of Bohemia and Franconia. The Name came from the Voigts or Provoſts formerly appointed by the Emperor to govern them.

Places of Note here are,

1. Zuickaw, on the Walda, the Capital, formerly an Imperial Town, 50 Miles South-Weſt from Dreſden. 'Twas reduced by Frederic Marquis of Miſnia, in 1308, and formerly one of the Theatres of War betwixt Charlemain and the Saxons.

2. Sneberg, on the ſame River, 8 Miles South-Eaſt, noted for its rich Silver Mines, deſcribed above with thoſe of Freiburg.

3. Plawen, 20 Miles South-Weſt from Zuickaw, a pretty little Town on the River Elſter.

4. Werda, 20 Miles Weſt from Zuickaw, on a River of its Name, had formerly Lords of its own.

THE third Diviſion of Saxony is the Landgraviate of THURINGIA, of a large Extent, and takes up the Weſt ſide of the Country. The Name came from the Thuringi, a Branch of the Vandals; and by the Names of ſeveral Towns, as Gotha, Gothleben, &c. it appears that the Goths were mix'd with them. This Province has the River Sala on the Eaſt, the Landgraviate of Heſſe and Dutchy of Brunſwic on the Weſt, part of Brunſwic and Halberſtat on the North, and Franconia on the South. It abounds with Corn and large Vineyards in ſome Places, which yield the beſt Wine in the Country. In their Fields and Gardens they have Wild Saffron and Dyers Woad. In ſome Places they have Mines of Copper and Silver, and rich Salt-pits. Here are many great Lakes, the chief of which are Wiſſenſee and Schwanſee. The old Inhabitants had Kings of their own chuſing, till ſubdued by Charlemain, about 1122, when he aboliſh'd Paganiſm. They were afterwards govern'd by the Biſhop of Mentz, or his Deputies; but the Emperor Conrad II. eſtabliſh'd Counts there, and Lotharius II. ſet Landgraves over them. Thus they continued till 1226, that Henry Marquis of Miſnia reduced them under the Houſe of Saxony. 'Tis now divided into ſeveral Dutchies, poſſeſs'd by the Branches of the Saxon Family, and ſeveral Counties under the Elector's Protection, but with Counts of their own.

Places of Note here are,

1. Erfurt, the Metropolis, which with its Diſtrict belongs to the Elector of Mentz, and therefore is reckon'd by ſome to belong to the Circle of the Lower Rhine; which being at a great diſtance, we chuſe to deſcribe it here. 'Tis in Lat. 51. 1. Long. 11. 50 60 Miles South-Weſt from Leipſic, and 100 Weſt from Dreſden. 'Tis reckon'd one of the largeſt and moſt beautiful Cities in the Empire, and almoſt as big as Cologn. The Name comes from a Ferry over the River Hiera, on which it ſtands, in a pleaſant and fruitful Plain. 'Tis very ancient, was made a Biſhoprick by Pope Zachary, who reign'd about 742. It has 3 Baronies and 72 Villages under its Juriſdiction. The neighbouring Country abounds with all ſorts of Corn, good Wine, and Woad, of which the Citizens make a great deal of Money in the time of their Fairs in Trinity-Week and at Martinmas. Their publick Edifices, eſpecially their Churches and Abbeys, are very beautiful. Here is alſo a ſtately Caſtle nam'd Ciriaxberg, and a famous Univerſity. When they embraced the Reformation, they put themſelves under the Protection of the Elector of Saxony, which occaſion'd many Conteſts betwixt that Prince and the Elector of Mentz. They afterwards attempted to make themſelves an Imperial Town, but the Elector of Mentz reduced it by the Aſſiſtance of the French; yet by the Treaty of Leipſic, 17 of the Villages and their Dependancies were quitted to the Elector of Saxony. Many of the Citizens are Lutherans. Here is the largeſt Bell in Germany, which they call Suſannah.

2. Weimar, 12 Miles North-Eaſt from Erfurt, a large, neat, and well built City on the River Ilm, which gives Title to a Prince of the Saxon Family. 'Tis very ancient. The Emperor Otho II. held a General Dyet here in 975. The Name is ſuppoſed to come from the great Wine Market which is kept here. 'Tis famous for the Birth of Bernard of Saxe-Weimar, its Duke, a zealous Proteſtant, and one of the greateſt Captains in the laſt Century. Here is a ſtately Palace that formerly belong'd to the Landgrave.

3. Jena, on the Banks of the Sala, 10 Miles Eaſt from Weimar, to whoſe Duke it belongs. 'Tis famous for an Univerſity founded by the Elector John Frederic, and endow'd with many Priviledges by the Emperors Charles V. and Ferdinand. It has bred many learned Men, and among others the great Philoſopher Juſtus Lipſius. The Elector gave it a Library, which increaſes every Day. The Town ſtands in a pleaſant Valley, and is fortified with Walls and Towers.

4. Gotha, about 15 Miles South-Weſt from Erfurd, on the River Lina. Some think it had its Name from the Goths, who founded it in their March to Italy; but it was only a Village till fortified by the Biſhop of Mentz, in 964. 'Tis Capital of a Dutchy, which gives Title to a Branch of the Saxon Family, who reſide in the ſtately Caſtle that was demoliſhed by the Emperor Maximilian II. in 1567; but ſince rebuilt by Duke Erneſt. Their chief Trade is in Woad of three ſorts, the firſt they ſow about Chriſtmas, the ſecond in the Spring, Summer, and Harveſt; ſo that they have three Crops of it, and the third grows wild: It is reckon'd a ſoveraign Balſamick for Wounds, and cures 'em almoſt with a Touch, if applied in time: It reſembles Plantin, but has a longer Leaf: The Roots fatten and improve barren Ground exceedingly; and being brought over to England with Clover, Cinquefoil, &c. thrives very well in many Places. The Dukes of this Family are deſcended from the Elector John-Frederic the Magnanimous, taken and deprived by the Emperor Charles V. in 1547; ſince which the youngeſt Branch has enjoy'd the Electorate.

5. Orlamund, or Erlamund, 12 Miles South-Weſt from Jena, on the River Sala, Capital of a County.

6. Tonneburg, a ſmall fortified Town, 15 Miles Weſt from Gotha, ſack'd by the Imperialiſts in 1567. In 1696, ſome Workmen digging Gravel under a Hill in the Neighbourhood, found the Skeleton of an Elephant, which occaſion'd various Opinions among the Naturaliſts: ſome thought it to be a ſort of Plaiſter form'd into that Shape by the Figure of the Place, according to Inſtances given by Athanaſius Kircher, who ſays, that there's a white fat Earth which being lock'd by Water full of Nitre, hardens in time, and takes the Figure of the Mould where it lies; but the Teeth and Bones of this Skeleton being hollow, and having Marrow as natural Bones have, whereas thoſe form'd of Plaiſter or Mineral are of an uniform ſolid Subſtance. Tenzelius, the Elector's Hiſtoriographer, who wrote an Account of the Matter, ſuppoſed that this Elephant muſt have been buried here under the Sediment left by the Deluge.

7. Eyſſenach, 18 Miles Weſt from Gotha, at the Conflux of the Neſſe and Horſet, a ſmall neat City, Capital of its Dutchy, which gives Title of Saxe-Eyſſenach to a Prince of the Family. It has a conſiderable Trade in Iron, and an Univerſity, founded in 1555. The Duke's uſual Reſidence is at his Caſtle of Marſul, 5 Leagues from hence.

8. Mul-

8. Mulhauſen, 20 Miles North-Weſt from Gotha, an Imperial Town, under the Protection of the Elector.

The Counties in this Province;

I. Schwartsburg, there are two ſo call'd, one in the South, and the other in the North. Of that in the South we have no Deſcription, but what is in our Map, which places it betwixt the Dutchy of Saxe-Weimar on the North, and Saxe-Altemberg on the South; that in the North is betwixt the Counties of Hohenſtein and Stolberg on the North, and the Dutchy of Saxe-Halle on the South: They are named from little Towns and Caſtles, and gave Title to an ancient Family, divided into the two Branches of Arnſtadt and Rudolſtadt, which perhaps gave the ſame Name of Schwartſburg to their ſeveral Territories. The chief Place of the North County is Sunderhauſen, a large open Town, ſuppoſed to be that called Sangerhauſen, in our Map, about 18 Miles South from Halberſtat. To this Country belongs Gleicken, and old Caſtle on the River On, Capital of its Diſtrict, which gave Title to a Branch of the Family of Schwartſburg, extinguiſhed in 1639; upon which the Elector of Mentz inveſted the Counts of Haſfelt with the Caſtle as a Fief depending on his See; and the Elector of Saxony inveſted the Counts of Hohenlo with the other Parts, conſiſting of ſome Bailiwicks; ſays la Forreſt.

II. Eichſeld, or Eiffeld, a ſmall County belonging to the Elector of Mentz; Weſt from the Counties of Schwartsburg and Hohenſtein, on the Frontiers of Heſſe and Brunſwic.

Places of Note here, are,

1. Heyligenſtat, 25 Miles North-Weſt from Mulhauſen. It was built by King Dagobert of France, who kept his Court here; and has nothing remarkable now, but a College of Jeſuits.

2. Duderſtat, a ſmall Hans Town 15 Miles North from Heyligenſtat. Here are other little Towns not worth deſcribing.

III. The County of Hohenſtein, Eaſt from Eiffeld. The only Place of Note here, is Northhauſen, an Imperial Town on the River Zarge, 35 Miles North-Eaſt from Duderſtat. 'Tis ſaid to have been founded by the Emperor Theodoſius II. or Mercovius King of France, about 447. Some Dyets of the Empire have been held here. It is now under the Protection of the Elector of Saxony. Walkenreedt in this County, near the Frontiers of Brunſwic, was an Abbey, but is now ſecularized.

IV. The County of Stolberg lies Eaſt from Hohenſtein. The Capital is of the ſame Name, and has a large Caſtle ſaid to be built by a Roman, the Founder of the Family of Stolberg. It lies near the Frontiers of Halberſtat, 10 Miles Eaſt from Hohenſtein. The Counts are divided into the Families of Stolberg, Iſenburg, Gudern, and Ortenberg. They have alſo the County of Wernigerod in the Principality of Halberſtat, and are Sovereign Counts of the Empire.

V. The County of Mansfeld lies Eaſt from Stolberg, and North from the Principality of Anhalt, is about 30 Miles long from Eaſt to Weſt, and 18 from South to North. Some derive the Name from Mannus Son to Tuſco the Father of the Germans; and others ſay, that Heger, one of their firſt Counts, was one of the Britiſh King Arthur's Companions at his Round Table, and built Mansfeld in Nottinghamſhire; but the more ſober Genealogiſts derive the Pedigree of the Counts of Mansfeld from Burchard V. Count of Quernfurt, to whom the Emperor Frederic Barbaroſſa gave this Country for his Service in the Holy Land, and his Succeſſors have enjoy'd it ever ſince, but pay ſome Homage to the Elector of Saxony. There have been ſeveral great Men of this Family, ſome of whom have been Privy-Councellors to the Emperor, and Deputy-Governours of Saxony. One of them, Peter-Erneſt, was Governour of Luxemburg, and General under Charles V. and Philip II. againſt France and the Netherlands. Albert, another of 'em, was a great Friend to Luther, and to John-Frederic, the depoſed Elector of Saxony, in whoſe Quarrel he loſt his Country, and afterwards bravely defended Magdeburg againſt the Imperialiſts. Erneſt, another of them, perform'd great things during the Wars of Germany againſt Ferdinand II. and eſpouſed the Cauſe of the Elector Palatine, who was choſen King of Bohemia. The Family is now divided into four or five Branches, which makes 'em leſs conſiderable than formerly. Some of the Branches oppoſed ſeveral of the Lutheran Doctrines in the 16th Century, which, La Forreſt ſays, gave Riſe to the Sect call'd Mansfeldians. The two chief Branches now are thoſe of Bornſtet and Eyſleben. The latter lives at a Town of that Name, and has nothing but the Hunting, Fiſhery, and Patronage of the Churches, the reſt being ſequeſter'd to the Elector of Saxony, who mortgaged his part for 600000 Rixdollars to the Elector of Hanover, now King George, in 1715, but redeem'd it.

The Country abounds with ſeveral ſorts of Minerals, which bring great Profit to the Inhabitants; among the reſt there is that call'd the Scheifferſteyn, peculiar to this and the neighbouring Provinces: 'Tis a blackiſh gliſtering kind of Slate, which melted and bray'd, yields much Copper and Silver. Hubenſak, who comments on part of Munſter's Geography, ſays, there's ſcarce the like in the World; that out of this Stone the Inhabitants melt Copper, each Hundred of which contains 10 or 12 Ounces of pure Silver; and the Stone abounds ſo much, that it is dug up every where. He adds, that in theſe Stones there are lively Repreſentations, in fair Strokes of Copper, of Fiſhes of ſeveral ſorts, Frogs, Water-Rats, and other Animals, that abound in a neighbouring Lake.

Places of Note are,

1. Eyſleben, 20 Miles South-Eaſt from Halberſtat, and 18 North-Weſt from Halle. 'Tis the Capital of the Country, derives its Name from Iron-Ore, which abounds in theſe Parts, and is by the Natives call'd Eyſen. 'Tis the Seat of the Prince, who is an Hereditary Count of the Empire, and has a Voice in the Dyet. 'Tis noted for the Birth of Luther, in 1483, and his Death in 1564. The Citizens have ſet up his Statue of Stone over the Door of the Houſe where he was born, with this Inſcription:

H ſtis eram Papæ, Sociorum peſtis & hujus
Vox mea, cum ſcriptis, nil niſi Chriſtus erat.

i. e. 'Gainſt Pope, and Popelings, I did War declare;
But Chriſt I preach'd, and wrote with utmoſt Care.

Forſter, Superintendant of this Church, ſays, a great Fire happening in 1601, burnt the Count's Palace, and 250 Houſes, but the Church where Luther was baptized, the Houſe where he was born, and that where he died, eſcaped the Flames, tho' all about them were conſumed. This Town ſuffered much in the 11th Century, during the War between the Emperor Henry IV. and the Saxons; as it did likewiſe in the Civil Wars, when the Imperialiſts deſtroyed Luther's Monument, and defaced the Inſcription. 'Tis defended by a good Citadel, and reaps conſiderable Profit from its Quarries of black Stone, and two Annual Fairs.

2. Mansfeld, 5 Miles North-Weſt from Eyſleben; an old ruinous City, on the River Vipren, defended by a ſtrong Caſtle on the Top of a Hill.

3. Vipren, a Town of good Trade, 8 Miles Weſt from Mansfeld. Arnſtein and Quernfurt are little Towns which give Name to their Diſtricts, and Title to the Branches of the Family.

4. The County of Barbi which lies between Magdeburg and Anhalt, has no Place of Note but a Town Caſtle of its own Name.

IV. The Principality of ANHALT. It lies for the moſt part between the River Sala and the Elbe, has Magdeburg on the North, Thuringia on the South, Quedlinburg on the Weſt, and part of the Dutchy of Saxony on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 90 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, but the Breadth is very unequal, the greateſt being on the Eaſt Side, which is but 35 Miles. This Principality is very fruitful in Corn, and tho' by ſome reckoned a Part of Saxony, it is Independant; and ſome of this Family hath been Electors both of Saxony and Brandenburg: Their Origin being the ſame with that of thoſe two Families. Some German Antiquaries derive it from Aſchenaz, Noah's Grandſon, but that we have exploded in the Hiſtory of Brandenburg. The Family however is very ancient, and they have a Genealogical Table in their Palace, which affirms, that their Anceſtors were Kings, Dukes, and Generals of the Saxons, before our Saviour's Time. The Atlas Hiſtorique carries their Origin no higher than Berentobaldus, who made Wars on the Thuringians, with Succeſs, in the 6th Century. His Succeſſor Berenger, was made a Count by Charlemain. Others of them were Generals of the Saxons, againſt Clovis II. and Dagobert, Kings of France. Albert the Bear, of this Family, was made Markgrave of Brandenburg in 1152, by the Emperor Conrad III. and his Son Bernard was made Elector of Saxony, inſtead of Henry the Lyon, and likewiſe poſſeſſed Anhalt. He and his Brother Otho divided the Family into two Branches, from whence came the Families of Saxony and Brandenburg, but they are ſaid to have loſt the Electorate of Brandenburg in 1142, and that of Saxony in 1180, both of which came to Deſcendants of younger Branches. Henry the Old, one of this Family, is ſaid to have been the firſt that was created Prince of Anhalt, by the Emperor Frederic II. There have ſince been very great Men of this Family, who have matched into the greateſt of the Empire. 'Tis divided into ſeveral Branches, viz. Deſſau the chief, Bernburg, Zerbſt, Hatzgerod, and Cothen. When their Dominions were divided, they agreed to ſubmit to the eldeſt of the Family, who has the ſupreme Government, and the only Power to aſſemble the reſt, upon Matters of Conſequence. They have but one Vote in the Dyet, and generally depute one of their Number to repreſent them.

Prince Lewis of Cothen, founded that called the Fructifying Society, for tranſlating the beſt Latin and Greek Authors into a good German Style: He was the firſt Preſident, and in a ſhort Time above twenty Princes, and Six hundred Noblemen entered into the Society, which has very much advanced Learning in Germany, and improved their own Language.

The Prince of Anhalt-Deſſaws Titles are, Prince of Anhalt, Count of Aſcania, Lord of Zerbſt, Bernbourg, &c. Thoſe of Zerbſt add Jeveren, Knyphauſen, &c. Their Dominions are thus: The Branch of Deſſaw has the Principality of Deſſaw. That of Bernbourg, the Lordſhip of Bernbourg and Ballenſted, Oldenhall, and the Provoſtſhip of Gerenrode. The Branch of Hatzgerode, the Bailiwick of that Name. The Branch of Cothen, Cothen, and its Diſtrict, Plotskaw the upper County of Warrenſdorf, Nieubourg, Wulſen, and Guſten. The Branch of Zerbſt, Zerbſt and its Diſtrict, the Bailiwick of Lindaw, Roſwic, Roſta; the Lordſhips of Severn, Knyphauſen, and Walternenburg.

The Princes of this Family claimed the Succeſſion of Saxe-Lawenburg in 1690, as next Heirs, but 'twas carried for the Princes of Lunenburg, as is ſaid before.

Places of Note here are,

1. Deſſaw, the Seat of the chief Prince, who is General to the King of Pruſſia, lies on the Elbe, 30 Miles South from Magdeburg, and 15 North-Weſt from Wittenberg, in a pleaſant fruitful Country. 'Tis well fortified, and adorned with the Prince's Palace, which, by an Inſcription over the Gate, appears to have been built by Albert and Waldemar, Princes of this Family. In one of the Chapels there is the Tomb of Rebobeck, an old Miller, who having followed Waldemar Marquis of Brandenburg, one of the Princes of this Family, to the Wars, where he was ſlain, did counterfeit him ſo artfully, that he impoſed upon the World for ſome Time, as ſaid already in the Hiſtory of Brandenburg. This Miller died in 1350. The chief Trade of the Place is in excellent Beer, which is tranſported over all the Country.

2. Zerbſt, 10 Miles North from Deſſaw. 'Tis very ancient, and was fortified: The Name in the Wendiſh Dialect ſignifying a Fort. 'Tis remarkable for little now, but the Reſidence of the Prince who bears that Title; and the Brewing of good ſtrong Beer, which they tranſport.

3. Bernburg, a fortified Town on the Banks of the Sala, 13 Miles Weſt from Deſſaw. The Prince of that Title has a Palace here ſeparated from the Town by the River. This City was taken by the Elector of Saxony's Troops in 1636; when they put all the Garriſon and Inhabitants to the Sword, except a few that belonged to the Prince's Court.

4. Aſcherleben or Aſcania, from whence the Family derived their ancient Title, is an old Town on the Frontiers of Halberſtat, 15 Miles South-Eaſt from that Town. 'Twas ſeized by the Canons of that Church, after the Death of Prince Otho's Widow, in 1315; ſince which the Family of Anhalt could never recover it, nor are they like to do it now, that it is fallen, with the reſt of that Biſhoprick, to the Family of Pruſſia.

5. Anhalt,

5. Anhalt near the South Border of Halberſtat, remarkable for nothing now but an ancient Caſtle, which gave Name to the Family and Principality.

6. Coten or Koten, 12 Miles South-Weſt from Deſſaw, remarkable only for a Caſtle, and being Capital of the County which gives Title to its Prince.

7. Hertzgerode, 7 Miles South-Eaſt from Quedlinburg, and Capital of the Diſtrict which gives Title to the Prince of that Name.

8. Worlitz or Coſwic, a little Town of good Trade on the Elbe.

9. Gernrode, an Abbey of Nuns founded by Duke Geron in 965. It embraced the Reformation in 1531. It has a Vote in the Dyet, but the Princes of Anhalt have the Advowſon.

V. THE Marquiſate of LUSATIA or LAUSNITZ, has Brandenburg on the North, Bohemia on the South, Saxony on the Weſt, and Sileſia on the Eaſt. 'Tis 95 Miles South and North where longeſt, and 60 Eaſt and Weſt where broadeſt. The Name comes from the Luſici, its ancient Inhabitants. The Moderns ſpeak a Mixture of Wendiſh and German, ſo that they are reckoned of Sclavonic Extraction. It had formerly Princes of its own, and has been at Times ſubject to the King of Bohemia, the Families of Brandenburg and Auſtria; but rebelling againſt the Emperor in 1620, it was reduced by John-George Elector of Saxony, and mortgaged to him for his Service, but ſettled upon him and his Heirs, by the Treaty of Prague, in 1635; except ſome Parts of it, which were left to the Elector of Brandenburg, it being formerly called the Eaſt Mark. The Elector of Saxony gave the Duke of Saxe-Marſburg that Part called Nether Luſace.

The Country is for the moſt part ſandy or boggy, ſo that it had ſcarce Corn enough for the Inhabitants, till of late, that they have improved it, and now makes excellent Beer. Here is ſuch Plenty of Wood, Veniſon, and Fiſh, as might enrich them had they any Commerce. They breed no Horſes, but are able, ſays Boter, to raiſe 20000 hardy Footmen.

'Tis divided into Upper and Lower, the former called Hexapolis, becauſe of 6 Confederate Towns in it.

Places of Note here, are,

1. Bantzen or Baudiſſin, on the Spre, 30 Miles Eaſt from Dreſden. 'Tis the Metropolis of the Country, was built by a Bohemian Duke of the ſame Name, about 800; afterwards made an Imperial City, but loſt its Privileges in the 13th Century, when reduced by the King of Bohemia. The Elector of Saxony beſieged it in 1634, when the Imperial Garriſon ſet Fire to the Suburbs to diſlodge the Saxons; but the Fire being carried into the Town by a ſtrong Wind, obliged the Garriſon to ſurrender. The Swedes demoliſhed the Remains afterwards, ſo that it has never recovered its Luſtre. Here is a Church where both Lutherans and Papiſts have their Worſhip.

2 Leibaw, 10 Miles South-Eaſt from Bautzen, one of the oldeſt Towns in the Country, and the Place where the Deputies of the reſt of the Confederate Towns conſult. It lies on a ſmall River, and is ſurrounded with pleaſant Meadows. In 1639, the Swedes found 70000 Crowns in Caſh, and other good Booty here.

3. Gorlitz, 25 Miles Eaſt of Bautzen, on the Weſt Side of the River Noiſſe, is well fortified, and the Approaches difficult, becauſe of Moraſſes. 'Tis the Seat of Juſtice; the Reſidence of the Governour; has neat Churches; many ſtately Houſes, and a good Trade in brewing Beer, and dying and dreſſing Linnen and Woollen.

4. Zittaw, on the Neiſſe, 15 Miles South of Leibaw, an ancient Town, has a good Trade in Beer, and an old Franciſcan Monaſtery, turned to an Hoſpital ſince the Reformation.

5. Luben on the Spre, 45 Miles North from Bautzen. 'Tis Capital of Nether Luſatia, has the chief Place in the Dyets, and a Palace where the Elector ſometimes reſides.

6. Guben, 21 Miles Eaſt from Luben, on the River Neiſſe. 'Tis a well fortified little Town; the Imperialiſts took it in 1631, but 'twas ſoon after ſtormed by the Marquis of Hamilton, who joined the Swedes with a Body of Troops, and put moſt of the Garriſon to the Sword. The Imperialiſts took it afterwards, and held it out three Weeks againſt the Swedes, but were obliged to ſurrender at Diſcretion for want of Neceſſaries.

7. Soraw, on the Borders of Sileſia, on the ſame River, 25 Miles from Guben: By ſome reckoned Capital of Nether Luſatia. 'Twas frequently taken and retaken during the Civil Wars of Germany.

8. Cothus or Cotiuitz, on the Spre, 18 Miles South of Luben, a fair Town, ſubject to the King of Pruſſia.

9. Camitz or Camiens, a little City, well built and fortified, ſubject alſo to that King. It is on the Frontiers of Miſnia, 10 Miles North-Weſt of Baudits.

10. Koniguart, a pretty little City on the Weiſs.

Here are ſeveral other ſmall Towns that do not merit a Deſcription. This Country was over-run by the Swedes in 1706.

The HISTORY of SAXONY.

THE Atlas Hiſtorique has a very large Tree of the Family: Some derive their Origin from Herteric a King of the Saxons, famous for his Victories over the Goths before the Time of our Saviour; and they bring down his Succeſſion to Hengiſt, who invaded England; and ſo to Wittekind, famous in Hiſtory for his War againſt Charlemain; who having conquered the Country, made him Duke of Angria. From Wigbert Brother to Wittekind, they derive Ludolph, ſaid to have been the firſt Hereditary Duke of Saxony, and Grandfather to the Emperor Henry the Fowler. From Ludolph's Son Otho, they derive the Branch of Saxony, who enjoy'd the Country till Henry the Lyon was diſpoſſeſſed by the Emperor Frederic I. and ſucceeded by the younger Son of Albert the Bear, of Brandenburg; from which Son called Albert I. came the Saxon Branches named Albertine and Erneſtine.

Having ſaid ſo much of this in the Hiſtory of the Family of Brandenburg, we need ſay the leſs here, and ſhall only obſerve, that this Family produced very great Princes, and particularly Frederic III. of the Erneſtine Line, who protected Luther in carrying on the Reformation, refuſed the Empire when offered him at the Death of Maximilian I. ſubdued the tumultuous Boors, was a very pious Prince, and dying without Iſſue, was ſucceeded by his Brother John, who defeated the Boors, and took their Enthuſiaſtical Leader Thomas Muntzer. In 1529, he was one of thoſe Princes who entered the famous Proteſt againſt Popery, from whence came the Name of Proteſtants. In 1530, he joined with other Princes in offering the Confeſſion at the Dyet of Augsburg to the Emperor Charles V. He alſo ordered the Defence of it to be Printed, and was Author of the League at Smalcald, againſt the Emperor, for Defence of the Proteſtant Religion, and the German Liberties. His Son and Succeſſor, John-Frederic, was defeated and deprived by the Emperor Charles V. and ſucceeded by his Son John-Frederic, who was impriſoned by the Emperor, and died in Continement. There were ſeveral other great Princes of this Line, but the moſt remarkable was Bernard, the 11th Son of John II. He was famous for his Prudence and Valour, contributed chiefly to the Victory of Lutzen, after the Fall of Guſtavus-Adolphus King of Sweden in that Battel, did many great Actions afterwards, was created Duke of Franconia, and died in 1639.

The Albertine Line, from whom the preſent Elector deſcends, was founded by Albert, Son to the Elector Frederic II. born in 1443. He was a great Captain, reduced the Netherlands to the Obedience of the Emperor Maximilian I. His Son Henry the Pious turned Proteſtant, and joined in the League of Smalcald; his Son Maurice did great Service to the Empire againſt the Turks and French, and afterwards againſt the Imperialiſts; drove Charles V. out of the Empire, for a Time, after having narrowly miſſed taking him, which brought on the Treaty of Paſſaw, betwixt the Emperor and the Proteſtants. He left only one Daughter, who was married to William the Great, Prince of Orange, in 1561. His Brother Auguſtus ſucceeded, and was of ſo great Authority and Prudence, that neighbouring Princes choſe him to be Umpire of their Differences. His Son George II. was a very great Prince and a zealous Proteſtant: He entered into the League with the Swedes againſt the Emperor, with whom he made Peace, in 1634; after which he ſuffered much by the Arms of the Swedes, till the Treaty of Munſter. He died in 1656, and was ſucceeded by his Son John-George II. a very great Prince and zealous Proteſtant: He died and was ſucceeded by his Son John-George III. famous for his Conduct and Valour in forcing the Turks to raiſe the Siege of Vienna in 1683; after which he did great Service againſt the French upon the Rhine, and died in 1691. He was ſucceeded by his Brother Frederic-Auguſtus the preſent Elector, and King of Poland, whoſe Hiſtory is ſo freſh in Memory, that we need not inſiſt upon it, but only obſerve, that he has ſcarce ever had quiet Poſſeſſion of that Crown, for which he changed his Religion; and by invading the King of Sweden, brought on that War which has proved ſo ruinous to Poland, Saxony, and Sweden, and the Northern Parts of Germany. The Electoral Prince his Son, having alſo turned Papiſt, gives great Uneaſineſs to the German Proteſtants, tho' they have both promiſed to make no Alteration in the Religion of their Country: And in 1705, being diſſatisfied with the Pope's Juggling, he publiſhed a ſevere Edict againſt Papiſts ſettling in Saxony.

The RELIGION of SAXONY, and the Elector's TITLES and REVENUES.

IS that of the Augsburg Confeſſion, already mentioned, wherein they differ little from the Caviniſts, but on the Head of Conſubſtantiation; as to which they hold, as appears by the 10th Article, That with the Bread and Wine, the Body and Blood of Chriſt are truly exhibited to thoſe that partake of the Lord's-Supper; but in ſome Editions, 'tis more groſly expreſſed, viz. That in the Lord's-Supper, the Body and Blood of Chriſt are truly preſent, and diſtributed to thoſe who partake of the Supper. 'Tis alſo to be obſerved, that in the 18th Article, about Free-Will, they agree with the Calviniſts, and condemn the Pelagians; but many of the Lutherans, ſince that Time, have fallen in with the Arminians. They alſo retain the Uſe of Images, but only for Hiſtorical Purpoſes, without worſhiping before them. There is another called the Confeſſion of the Saxon Churches, offered to the Council of Trent, in 1551. This was writ in the Synod of Wittenberg, to explain that of Augsburg, which Melancthon confeſſed he wrote in haſte.

The Elector's TITLES are, Duke of Saxony, Juliers, Cleve, Bergs, Engers, Weſtphalia, Elector of the Empire, Landgrave of Thuringia, Markgrave of Miſnia, of the Upper and Lower Luſatia, Count and Prince of Henneberg, Count of la Mark, Ravensburg, and Barby, Lord of Ravenſtein, &c. and Great Marſhal of the Empire: he commands the Garriſon when the Dyet ſits, ſo that the Elector in Charles Vth's Time, obliged him to remove his Guard from the Gate of Augsburg, and to give Security that he would no more invade his Privileges. He is alſo Vicar of the Empire, during an Interregnum, in all Places not belonging to the Elector Palatine's Vicariate. He alſo appoints the Meeting of the Dyets, except the Collegial ones, which are convened by the Elector of Mentz, but he muſt give Notice of it to the Elector, who orders Count Papenheim to ſummon the Members.

His REVENUES are ſuppoſed to be as great as thoſe of any Prince of the Empire, except the Arch-duke of Auſtria. Thoſe from the Mines at Friedburg, &c. are computed at 130000 l. per Ann. His Impoſts on Beer, at Leipſic, 20000, and thoſe on other Commodities, with his Tenths of Corn, Fruit, Wine, &c. make it in the whole, above 500000 l. per Ann. This enabled him to keep a more ſplendid Court than his Neighbours, till of late, that his Country has been exhauſted by the Swedes, and the Supplies he has had to maintain him on the Throne of Poland. This Court has been noted for the greateſt Drinkers in Germany, and ſome of their Hiſtorians ſay, that a red Noſe is the diſtinguiſhing Mark of the Family.

It has more Branches than any other Sovereign Family in Europe. There are 15 Male-Branches of it at preſent, viz. Marburg, Zeits or Naumburg, Zorbich, Spremberg, Pegaw, Gotha, Coburg, Eyſenberg, Saalfield, Hilburgſhauſen, Weymar, Weyſſenfels or Halle, Barby, Eyſenach, and Romhild. They have all of them particular Dominions, the chief of which have been mentioned in the Deſcription of the Electorate.

IV. The Circle of the LOWER RHINE.

IT extends from the Borders of the Dutchy of Cleve, on the North-Weſt, to the upper End of the Palatinate on the South-Eaſt, which is 170 Miles; but the Breadth is not proportionable, being very narrow in the Electorate of Cologne, and Part of that of Treves; the greateſt Breadth is from the Borders of the Dutchy of Luxemburg to the Rhine, where 'tis about 100 Miles. The Directors are the Electors of Mentz and Palatine. 'Tis in general very fruitful in Corn and Wine, and abounds with considerable Cities, but suffer'd much by the late Wars with France.

The Dominions here are,

I. The Electorate and Archbishoprick of COLOGNE.

IT has the Dutchy of Cleve on the North-West, the Electorate of Treves on the South-East, the Dutchy of Juliers on the West, and the Dutchy of Bergs on the East. 'Tis about 80 Miles long from North-West to South-East; but the Breadth is not proportionable, being very narrow at both Ends, and the greatest but 20. The Country is very fruitful, and water'd by several Rivers, but especially the Rhine, which advances its Trade. 'Tis divided into the Diocese and separate Domain, and the Diocese subdivided into Upper and Lower, which contain several Bailiwicks and Mannors. We shall begin with the North Part.

1. Rhineberg, a Town on a Hill upon the Rhine, from whence it has the Name: It lies on the Frontiers of the Dutchy of Cleve, and so by near Guelder, that it has been often claim'd by the Netherlanders, and some reckon'd part of the Dutchy of Cleve or Guelder: 'Tis about 11 Miles East of Guelder, 16 South-East of Cleve, and 40 of Cologne, being the lowermost Town of this Electorate: 'Tis large, well fortified, tolerably rich, lies well for Trade, and has a Right of Toll from Ships that pass on the Rhine. 'Tis Capital of a small County about 10 Miles in Extent, was taken by the French in 1672, but restored soon after. In 1702, the Hereditary Prince of Hesse-Cassel put a Garrison into it, after taking of Bon, tho' the Governour made some Resistance, pretending to keep it for the Emperor. It was afterwards betray'd to the French by the Elector of Cologne, but forced to surrender to the King of Prussia in 1703, who obliged the Town to admit some Protestants into the Magistracy, and to allow them the Exercise of their Religion. It has been since restored to the Elector of Cologne, by the Treaty of Rastad.

2. Camp, a Mitred Abbey, in the Neighbourhood of Rhineberg, nobly endow'd by several Emperors.

3. Meurs, Capital of its County, about 9 Miles South-West of Rhineberg, a neat small City, with a good Citadel. It had Counts of its own, fell afterwards to the House of Orange, and now belongs to the King of Prussia, (as one of the Heirs to King William III. of Great Britain) in whose Favour the Emperor erected it into a Principality, and he was allow'd a Vote in the College of Princes in that Capacity, notwithstanding the Opposition made to it by the other Claimants of the House of Orange.

4. Ordingen, a small City near the Rhine, 6 Miles South-East from Meurs.

5. Nuys, on the Erpe, near where it falls into the Rhine, 5 Miles South-West from Dusseldorp, and 28 North-West from Colen. 'Tis supposed to be the Novesium or Nussia of Tacitus. Drusus built a Fort here, to secure the Roman Frontiers, which occasion'd the building of the City: 'Tis pretty large, fortified by the River on one Side, and by a double Wall on the other. The Rhine formerly ran by its Walls, and they levied Toll on Ships that pass'd that Way; but the River having alter'd its Course, they have now dug a navigable Canal from the Erpe to the Rhine. It held out a long Siege against Charles the Bold of Burgundy, in 1474, for which the Emperor Frederic IV. gave them many Privileges, particularly to coin Money, and to bear the Spread Eagle in their Arms; but on condition that they should take no Toll of any Vessels that traded thither. Here is a Collegiate Church, dedicated to St. Quirinus, where they shew his Tomb and Reliques. There are likewise some other good publick Buildings. It was several times taken and retaken by the French and the Confederates before the Peace of Reswic, when it was restored to the Elector.

6. Kempen or Kerpen, 15 Miles North-West from Nuys, on the Frontiers of Guelderland and Cleve. 'Tis a strong Town and Castle, and formerly belong'd to the Dutchy of Juliers. It held out a long Siege in 1642, against the Duke of Saxe-Weimar, but surrender'd on honourable Terms, and was afterwards given by the Spaniards to the Elector of Cologne. The French blew up the Castle in 1689, after which it was rebuilt. The French possess'd themselves of it again during the late War, but were drove out by a Body of Hussars, who kill'd or took all the Garrison.

7. Keyserswaert, about 6 Miles North-West from Dusseldorp, on the same side the Rhine. 'Tis a small ancient Town, and had its Rise from a College built in the Island Werda, by Swibert an Englishman, about 711, now demolish'd. It formerly belong'd to the Duke of Cleves, but was sold to the Bishop of Colen, in 1399, and confirm'd to the See in 1464, with some other Towns, for Soest and Santen. The Town is strong, and was possess'd by the French in 1689, but surrender'd to the Confederates on Terms. It was betray'd to the French by the Elector of Cologne in 1701, but retaken after a long and bloody Siege by the Confederates in 1702, upon which the French retired to a Fort in a neighbouring Island, but at last yielded on Discretion, for which the Governour cut his own Throat, and several of the Officers getting off in a Boat, were sunk by a Cannon-shot. The Emperor gave it then to the Elector Palatine, in consideration of his Services; but the Chapter of Colen, who had been in Possession above 500 Years, protested against it.

8. Zons, on the Rhine, 7 Miles East from Nuys, a handsome, well fortified Town, and has a good Trade in Corn, which grows plentifully in the Neighbourhood. It was betray'd to the French by the Elector of Cologne in 1701, but soon after retaken by the Confederates.

9. Woringen or Weringen, on the Rhine, 8 Miles North-West of Cologne, fam'd for a bloody Battel betwixt the Archbishop and the Citizens of Cologne, in 1297, when the Townsmen gain'd the Victory.

10. Colegne or Colen, the Metropolis of the Dioceses, reckon'd in the Circle of Westphalia, is in Lat. 51. Long. 7¼. 'Twas anciently named Colonia Agrippina & Ubiorum, the latter because it was founded by the Ubii, and the former because Agrippina, Daughter to Germanicus and Wife to Claudius, being born here, would have it honour'd by a Roman Colony, A. D. 48. In a Medal of Claudius 'tis call'd Colonia Agrippina Ubiorum. Some will have it much older, and say, it was tributary to Treves some Ages before our Saviour's Birth. The Ubii came hither from the other side the Rhine, 20 Years before that Time; the Roman Colony enlarg'd it much, A. D. 99, call'd it Second Rome, because of its Extent, fine Buildings, and Senate, and Metropolis of Germania Secunda. When Vitellius and Vespasian disputed the Empire, 'twas besieged by Tutor and Sabinius, and Agrippina forced to receive their Garrison, but she massacred them after Cerealis had defeated the Rebels. French Authors say, that Meroue their King, drove out the Romans in Valentinian the Third's Time, about 449. In 451, Attila the Hun ruined it. The Romans rebuilt it, but were dispossess'd by Childeric, Son to Meroue, who gave it to a Kinsman, and made him King; but his Successor Sigebert the Lame, being murder'd by his own Son Cloderic, about 599, Clouis the Great of France put Cloderic to Death, and united Colgne to his own Crown, under which it continued a long time. About 881, it was destroy'd by the Normans that ravaged Gallia Belgica. 'Twas rebuilt, and subjected to its Bishop by Otho the Great. Otho III. made it Imperial in 993. Frederic I. enlarged its Privileges in 1180, after which it increased much. In 1260, it enter'd into the League of the Hans Towns, and was made Capital of their fourth Province. 'Twas then, and is still, govern'd by a Senate, much like that of ancient Rome; and there are some Families who derive themselves from the old Roman Colony. In 1517, the People rebell'd, and cut off their Consuls, and other Magistrates, for cheating the Publick. They have had many Controversies with their Archbishops, about the Jurisdiction, and refused to submit to any thing inconsistent with the Dignity of an Imperial City; but the Emperor Maximilian I. made it up, and confirm'd their Privileges, on condition of their doing Homage to the Archbishop, who, on his part, was obliged to preserve their Privileges. The Senate determine all civil Causes; but the Archbishop has the sole Right to pardon Criminals, or put 'em to Death, after Tryal and Condemnation by the Senate. He has two Palaces here; but the Citizens don't allow him to reside there above three Days at a time. The Government is in 6 Burgomasters, 7 Eschevins, or Aldermen, and 150 Counsellors, who continue for Life; only two of the Burgomasters are Regents a Year by Turns. The Eschevins are chosen by the Archbishop, and the Counsellors by the Companies of the City; only 50 of the Counsellors act in a Year, so that all of 'em have their Turn in three Years; and when a Burgomaster dies, the Counsellors chuse another.

'Twas made an Archbishoprick in 743, ten Years after Mentz, and an Electorate in 1021. The great Chapter consists of 60 Canons, all Princes or Earls, for they admit none of an inferior Quality; but the Power of Election is in the 24 Seniors, according to the Author of the Ancient and Present State of Germany. Mr. Ray says, there are 62 Canons, 54 of whom are Noble, and 8 of 'em Presbyters; and that these 62, in Conjunction with the Dean, who has two Voices, and the two Burgomasters Regent, who have four Voices, chuse the Archbishop. Several Councils have been held here, the oldest in 346, wherein Euphrates, their Bishop, was deprived for Arianism. Another was held here by Charlemain's Order, in the Eighth Century; and several were held in the Ninth, for Reformation of Manners. Their University was founded in 1388, and is one of the best frequented in the Empire. An Account of all the remarkable things that have happen'd to this City from its Foundation till 1496, was publish'd from their Records, by John Kelhoff, a Citizen, by the Advice of the Senate and chief Citizens, in 1500. Dr. Brown, Mr. Ray, Mr. Misson, Dr. Nicholson, La Forrest, and Monconys, give the following Account of this City: That it lies in Form of a Half-Moon on the Banks of the Rhine; is one of the finest, strongest, and largest Cities in Germany. 'Tis encompassed on the Land-side by two strong Walls, with 83 Towers upon 'em, and has a tripple Ditch, beautified with several fine Rows of Trees; but the chief Strength lies in its Outworks, Half-Moons, and Ravelins. On the Side of the Rhine, it has but one strong Stone Wall. There are 300 Acres planted with Vines within the Walls, besides many other void Spaces; and most of the Houses belonging to the Canons and Prebends have large Gardens and Vineyards. There are 365 Churches, great and small, of which 11 are Collegiate, 19 Parochial, and 30 Chapels, besides 12 Monasteries, 22 Nunneries, and 4 large Hospitals. In short, a great part of the Town is taken up with those Churches and Monasteries, and many of them well endow'd. The Cathedral of St. Peter is very large and magnificent, and wou'd be one of the finest in the World, were it finish'd according to the first Model. Here they pretend to have the Tombs of the three Wise Men who came from the East to worship our Saviour, and are call'd the three Kings of Colen. In the Church of St. Gereon, who, they say, suffer'd here in the Reign of Maximilianus, they pretend to have the Heads of 1000 Martyrs; and in St. Ursula's Church, they shew her Tomb with an Inscription signifying that it was discover'd by St. Columba, a Scotsman. They alledge, that St. Ursula and 11000 Virgins, who came from Great Britain to convert the Infidels, were murder'd here by the Huns. These Legends bring a great many People hither, to see the Reliques, and perform their Devotions, which brings a great deal of Money to the Clergy, who upon this Account named Cologne the Holy City, and made the People believe that great Miracles are perform'd by the said Reliques, and particularly, that those of the three Kings procured a great Rain to the Hungarians, who sent Pilgrims hither, when they were like to be ruined by a Drought. In remembrance of which, some Hungarian Pilgrims come hither once in seven Years, and are entertained for 15 Days by the Magistrates, in a House built on purpose. In St. Ursula's Church they have the Bones of the supposed Virgins hung up in great Order on the Walls, and the Skulls of such as they say are most noted for Miracles, are kept in Cases of Silver, or cover'd with rich Stuffs of Gold, Silver, or Velvet. In the Church of the Maccabees, there is a Crucifix with an Everlasting Peruke on its Head; for tho' each of the Hungarian Pilgrims cut off a Lock from it when they go Home, the Priests say 'tis never diminish'd. The Curious may find abundance of such Legends in the Authors above-mention'd, which we pass over. This City has 13 Gates to the Land, and 11 to the Rhine. The chief Streets are large, and well paved. The Townhouse is a noble large Gothic Structure, and upon the Front there is a Man in Basso Relievo engaged with a Lyon, to represent one of their Burgomasters, who having exasperated their Clergy, they sent in a Lyon upon him, which he slew upon the Spot. In this House there are ſeveral Rooms full of Bows, Arrows, Croſs-bows, Bucklers, and and all ſorts of antique Arms. From the Tower of this Houſe, there is a lovely Proſpect of the City, and adjacent Country. This Town being a ſort of Staple, between the United Netherlands and Upper Germany, is one of the greateſt Emporiums of the Empire, and very populous: Moſt of the Inhabitants are Papiſts, but the chief Traders are Proteſtant Factors. The Lutherans have a Church within the City, and the Calviniſts have one at Mulheim, 2 Miles from hence on the other Side the Rhine. They have a good Trade with the Netherlands, by long round-bellied Veſſels of great Burthen, which in Winter are ſecured within the Key from Shoals of Ice. On the other Side the River, there is a Village named Deutz, in the Territory of Newburg, inhabited chiefly by Jews, who are not ſuffered to enter the City without a Guard.

In 1673, a Treaty of Peace was ſet on foot, at the Convent of Carmelites, near this City, between the Emperor, Great Britain, Spain, and France, which was interrupted by the Seizure of William Count of Furſtemburg, ſent hither as Plenipotentiary for France, but taken up as a Traytor, by the Emperor's Order; becauſe, being a Native of Germany, he took a Colonel's Commiſſion in the French Service againſt the Empire. He was upon that Account carried to Vienna, and condemned, but afterward ſet at Liberty by the Treaty of Nimeguen. He had been bred in France, where he was an Abbot before he took to the Sword. Lewis XIV. of France, made him Biſhop of Strasburg, and upon the Elector of Cologne's Death, ſet him up as Rival, for that Electorate, to Prince Clement of Bavaria the preſent Elector. The French King's being diſappointed in this Project, was one of the Occaſions of his War, which ſoon after followed againſt the Empire, by which this City and the Dioceſe ſuffered conſiderably.

In 1690, the French burnt and plundered the neighbouring Country, and made Incurſions into the Walls of the City. The Magiſtrates by way of Repriſal, contributed very largely to the Siege of Bon, to drive the French out of that Neigbourhood. This with what they had ſuffered a few Years before, by a ſort of Civil War or Rebellion within themſelves, exhauſted them ſo much, that they could not pay their Quota afterwards, according to the Laws of the Empire. After Bon was taken by the Confederates, the Canons of the Chapter, who had ſided with Count Furſtemburg, were drove out of the City, and deprived of their Revenues, till they were reſtored by the Treaty of Reſwic, in 1698.

This City and Dioceſe ſuffered very much again, by their preſent Elector's falling in with Lewis XIV. againſt the Confederates, in 1701. He raiſed Men for the Service of the French King and the Duke of Anjou, and taxed the Chapter and Dioceſe for maintaining them. They proteſted againſt his Proceedings, but he admitted French Garriſons into all his ſtrong Places, which obliged the City to re-inforce their Garriſon with Dutch and Pruſſians, but in 1702 they were ſo terrified by the Approach of the French, that they agreed to a Neutrality. The Emperor proſcribed the Elector, who retired to France, and then the City declared again for the Confederates. The Elector continued under Proſcription till reſtored by the Treaty of Utrecht.

Of the ELECTOR.

Erebert, the 31ſt Biſhop in their Catalogue, was their firſt Elector, and died about 1021. The two other Eccleſiaſtical Electors are not ſo rich as he of Cologne, for he generally holds the Biſhopricks of Liege and Hildeſheim in Commendam, and it has been cuſtomary for a conſiderable while, for the Canons of Leige to chuſe this Elector for their Biſhop. Formerly the Biſhops of Munſter, Utrecht, Liege, Minden, and Oſnabrug, were under his Juriſdiction, but that of Utrecht was ſecularized ſince the Reformation, as was that of Minden by the Treaty of Weſtphalia, and that of Oſnabrug was by the ſame Treaty agreed to be alternately in the Hands of a Proteſtant and a Papiſt, as formerly mentioned. The Elector is Chancellor of the Empire, for Italy; but the Italian Princes who depend on the Empire, appoint Vicars for that Poſt in their reſpective Dominions. His Annual Revenue is reckoned to be about 100000 l. Sterling; and he generally keeps a pretty handſome Court, with Civil and Military Officers, like the other Electors.

11. Broel or Bruel, 10 Miles South from Cologne, a ſmall City with a fine Caſtle, where the Elector ſometimes reſides, and diverts himſelf by hunting in a large neighbouring Foreſt.

12. Bon, on the Rhine, 15 Miles South from Cologne. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the Ara Ubiorum of the Antients, where they ſacrificed to their Idols, till deſtroyed by Biſhop Maternus, ſaid to be the firſt Founder of the See of Cologne. Cellarius thinks the Ara Ubiorum lay nearer that City. Others ſay, that Bon is Tacitus's Caſtra Bonnenſia, where the Romans ſometimes winter'd, and where Julius Cæſar made his Bridge over the Rhine. 'Tis alſo called by ſome Latin Writers, Colonia Julia Bonna. La Forreſt ſays, it was built in the Reign of Auguſtus, by Order of Druſus; ſo that on all hands it is agreed to be ancient. It lies in a plain fruitful Country, abounding with Vineyards; and tho' ſmall, is well inhabited, becauſe the uſual Reſidence of the Elector, who has a magnificent Palace here. 'Twas formerly Imperial, and is noted for the Coronation of Frederic of Auſtria, in Oppoſition to Lewis of Bavaria, in 1314. It ſuffered much during the Wars of the Netherlands, and the Garriſon was obliged to ſubmit to the Duke of Parma in 1588, for want of Proviſions. The late Elector of Cologne, having put it into the Hands of the French, the Prince of Orange, afterwards our King William, took it from them in 1673, which forced them to withdraw their Troops from the Netherlands. Cardinal Furſtemburg having re-admitted French Troops into that Place, when he contended for the Electorate, the Elector of Brandenburg took it, after a long and obſtinate Siege, in 1689, moſt of it being deſtroyed by Bombs. At this Time there was found in the Ruins, an Iron Cheſt full of Medals, to the Value of 100000 Crowns; they were of Ducat-Gold, and ſtamped, to counterfeit Roman Medals, but were ſoon perceived not to exceed 4 or 500 Years old. When the preſent Elector eſpouſed the French Intereſt in 1702, he alſo admitted a French Garriſon, but 'twas retaken by the Duke of Marlborough in 1703. It was afterwards garriſoned by the Dutch, who were obliged to evacuate it by the Treaty of Raſtad, in which there happened ſome Difference betwixt them and the Elector, but it has been ſince compromiſed.

The Town was regularly fortified, but by the Treaty of Utrecht, between the Dutch and the French King, the Fortifications were to be demoliſhed within three Months after it was delivered to the Elector. The Churches here are ſtately, eſpecially the Collegiate Church dedicated to the Martyrs of the Theban Legion, whoſe Reliques they pretend to keep here. The Town-Houſe is well built, and adorned with fine Paintings. There is an Apartment in the Elector's Palace, that goes a great Way into the Rhine. He has fine Gardens, with curious Water-Works and Grotto's, at a neighbouring Village. This is reckoned the chief Town of the upper Dioceſe.

13. Arenberg, about 18 Miles South-Weſt from Bon, a very neat and pleaſant Town, Capital of a County.

14. Linz, 10 Miles South-Eaſt from Bon, on the other Side of the Rhine, a ſmall but very ancient City. In 1702, 'twas taken from the French, by the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel, to facilitate the Siege of Bon.

15. Andernach, 20 Miles South-Eaſt from Bon, and 10 North-Weſt from Coblentz, at the Foot of a Ridge of Mountains. 'Tis memorable for a bloody Battel between the Emperor Charles the Bald, and his Brother Ludovicus Germanicus, in 876 or 877. Is defended by a Caſtle and Bulwarks, and the Boundary between the Archbiſhopricks of Treves and Cologne. There is a Cuſtom-Houſe here belonging to the latter, but its chief Trade is from Paſſengers. In 1702, the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel took it, the more to ſtreighten Bon, which was then block'd up by the Confederates.

The ſeparate Domain belonging to this Electorate, in Weſtphalia, is accounted for there.

II. The Electorate and Archbiſhoprick of TREVES, or TRIER.

IT has that of Cologne and the Dutchy of Juliers on the North-Weſt, the Palatinate of the Rhine on the South-Eaſt, Part of Luxemburg and Lorrain on the Weſt, the Dominions of Heſſe, and the Electorate of Mentz on the Eaſt. 'Tis ſo mixed with other Dominions, that it is not eaſy to fix its Dimenſions. The greateſt Length from South-Weſt to North-Eaſt is about 75 Miles, and Breadth from North-Weſt to South-Eaſt about 40.

The Treviri, the ancient Inhabitants of theſe Parts, were, ſays Mela, the moſt famous People of the Belgæ, poſſeſſed moſt of Mentz, and the Country between the Maeſe and the Rhine, until reduced by Veſpaſian; but their Limits are much contracted now. Cæſar ſays, they had continual Quarrels with their Neighbours, which made them a warlike People; and the Romans found it ſo to their Coſt, when one of their Armies was cut off by Ambiorix, General of the Treviri. The modern Inhabitants being uſed to a hard Way of living, make alſo good Soldiers.

The Country on the South-Weſt is barren, ill peopled, and overrun with Hills and Woods, and the Winds blow ſo cold among the Hills, that this Part of the Country is called the Sink of the Planets. But on the Banks of the Rhine and Moſelle, the Country is well peopled, abounds with Corn and Wine, and even in their Deſarts there is Store of Deer and other Veniſon.

Places of Note are,

1. Treves, on the Moſelle, Lat. 49. 51. Long. 6. 50. 25 Miles North-Eaſt of Luxemburg, and 60 South-Weſt of Coblentz. 'Twas anciently the Metropolis of Gallia Belgica, is mentioned with more Reputation and Grandeur by the Romans than any other Town in that Country, and had the Epithets of Auguſta, by Ptolomy and Auſonius. It vies for Antiquity with moſt Towns in Europe; their Antiquaries ſay it is 1250 Years older than Rome. It was a large and noted City before the Roman Colony was ſettled here by Auguſtus, ſo that it became the uſual Reſidence of thoſe who governed the Empire on this Side the Alps, and among others of Conſtantius, Conſtantine the Father and Son, &c. Whence Ammianus Marcellinus calls it, Domicilium Principum clarum, the famous Habitation of Princes. Auſonius takes notice of its large noble Fortifications, and great Trade. 'Twas 4 or 5 times ruined by the Huns, Vandals, and Goths, but always recovered with greater Luſtre. The Monkiſh Hiſtorians ſay, Chriſtianity was planted here by Eucharius, one of the Seventy two Diſciples ſent hither by St. Peter, that he raiſed from Death the only Son of a rich Widow, turned her Houſe into a Church, which was afterwards a Benedictine Monaſtery, and is now called St. Matthias. Eucharius they ſay was ſucceeded in the Biſhoprick, firſt by Valerius, and then by Maternus, two of his Aſſociates; but the People apoſtatized afterwards, and worſhipped Mars and Apollo on two neighbouring Hills that ſtill bear their Names, till Conſtantine deſtroyed their Idols, reſtored Chriſtianity, and made Agritius, Patriarch of Antioch, their Archbiſhop, in 333. Others ſay, he was made Archbiſhop by Pope Sylveſter I. in 330. In Remembrance of the Abolition of the Pagan Idolatry, they have Annual Revels on a Hill, where Apollo's Image ſtood, and tumble a flaming Wheel, or Barrel, from the Top of it. Several Councils have been held here, one particularly in 386, againſt the Priſcillianiſts. La Forreſt ſays, it was pillaged by the French, in 415, ruined by the Huns, in 451, by the French again, in 468, and ſack'd by the Normans, in 882, but repaired by the Inhabitants, who obtained large Privileges from ſeveral Emperors, and 'twas made Imperial, till 1568, that it was reduced by their Archbiſhop, and made ſubject to the See, by a Decree of Emperor Rodolph II. in 1580. 'Twas put into the Hands of the French, in 1632, on Pretence of keeping it from the Swedes, and they held it till 1645. They ſeized it again afterwards, and the Germans retook it in 1675, when the Marſhal de Crequi refuſed to ſign the Capitulation, till the Townſmen and Garriſon forced him to it. The French garriſoned it again in 1688, ruined the Wall and Bridge, and fortified the Citadel; but reſtored it by the Treaty of Reſwic 1697. They ſeized it again, but abandon'd it upon the Duke of Marlborough's Approach, in 1704, throwing their Ammunition and Corn into the River. The Allies caſt up Lines for Defence of the Town and Country that Year, but the Palatine General d'Aubach baſely deſtroyed the Fortifications and Magazines in 1705, when the French repoſſeſſed it, but were obliged to reſtore it and the reſt of the Electorate by the Treaty of Baden, in 1714.

'Tis

'Tis nothing ſo large and populous as formerly, nor is it very well fortified, tho' capable of being ſo by its Situation. 'Tis defended on the Weſt ſide by the Moſelle, and on the other Sides by a good Wall, on the Angles of which there are Works to cover the Curtains and Angles between them. The Fort of St. Martin contributes to the Defence of the City. The Trade of the Town is much decay'd, and the Houſes generally mean, but the Elector's Palace ſtately, and their Churches, and other publick Buildings, as fair and numerous as in any City of its Bulk in the Empire. Roman Urns and Medals are often found in the Ruins of the old City. St. Jerome mentions a good Library here in his time, from whence he copied St. Hilary's Commentaries. Their Univerſity was founded in 1472, and is well frequented. Here are 4 Collegiate, and 5 Pariſh Churches, 2 Abbies, and ſeveral other Religious Houſes. The Archbiſhop was formerly Metropolitan of Cologne, Liege, Utrecht, Strasburg, Worms, and Spires, and by conſequence the greateſt in the Empire, but is now the leaſt, ſince Pope Zachary exempted them from his Juriſdiction; ſo that he has no Suffragans but Metz, Toul, and Verdun, now in the Power of France. He has ſtill 28 good Bailiwicks, which, with the extraordinary Impoſts on his Subjects, his Cuſtoms on the Moſelle, and his being Guardian of the Miners, bring him a conſiderable Revenue, which before the Wars amounted to above 100000 l. Sterling per Annum.

The Chapter conſiſts of 16 Capitular Canons, who have the Right of chuſing the Archbiſhop, and 24 Domicil'd. They receive none but ſuch as can prove their being Gentlemen by 4 Deſcents on both Sides; and they refuſed to admit of Princes or Counts, that the Gentry might be ſure of the Electoral Dignity; yet of late they have been bribed out of that Maxim. The Provoſt, Dean, Treaſurer, Schoolmaſter, and Chanter, are diſtinguiſh'd from the other Canons by their Elective Dignities; but the 5 Deacons, and the Officials, who are named by the Archbiſhop, are not obliged to prove themſelves Gentlemen. In the Cathedral they pretend to have our Saviour's Coat, and St. Peter's Staff, to which they aſcribe Miracles, but have ſeldom ſhew'd 'em ſince the Treaty of Munſter.

The Archbiſhop preceeds him of Cologne, becauſe his Church is more ancient. He has a Right to re-unite to the Domain of his See all the Fiefs in his Dioceſe, for want of Heirs Male, unleſs the next of Kin have a Privilege to the contrary. He has Authority to put ſuch as he excommunicates into the Ban of the Empire, if they don't reconcile themſelves to the Church within a Year. He has a Privy-Council, and Officers of State to aſſiſt him in the Civil Government.

2. St. Maximin, a Benedictine Abbey, a Quarter of a League from the City, which has a Vote in the Dyet, and is united to the See.

3. Waſſerbilic, 10 Miles North from Treves, which the French deſigned to fortify in 1704, but were ſurprized, and the Garriſon cut off by the Allies.

4. Phaltz, a ſmall neat City, at the Conflux of the Kyll and Moſelle, 4 Miles from Treves.

5. Witlich, 15 Miles North-Eaſt from Treves, Capital of a Bailiwic, with the Caſtle of Ottenſtein, where the Elector uſually reſides.

6. Montroyal, on the Moſelle, 25 Miles North-Eaſt from Treves. It has a ſtrong Citadel and Outworks, which, together with its Situation, in a Peninſula form'd by the River, makes it very ſtrong. The French poſſeſs'd themſelves of it in 1687, and fortified it ſo as they thought it impregnable, but were obliged to diſmantle and reſtore it by the Treaty of Reſwic.

7. Cocheim, on the Moſelle, formerly an Imperial Town, 35 Miles North-Eaſt from Treves, a ſtrong Place, which the French took by Storm in 1689, after ſeveral Repulſes, and maſſacred 1300 Men, beſides Women and Children, and took about 300 Priſoners. It was reſtored by the Treaty of Reſwic.

8. Cell, a large open Town on the Moſelle, 30 Miles North-Eaſt from Treves, Capital of its Bailiwic, populous, pleaſantly ſituated, and makes ſo great a Quantity of Wine, that ſome name it Caſtellum Tabernarum, or the Tavern Caſtle.

9. Coblentz, on the Conflux of the Moſelle and the Rhine, 58 Miles North-Eaſt from Treves. The Name comes from the Latin Word Confluentia. 'Tis mention'd in Antonine's Itinerary, and the Notitia Imperii, was the Seat of the firſt Roman Legion, and one of their Prefects, and is ſuppoſed to have been founded by Druſus. 'Tis pretended to have been given to the See of Treves by Dagobert King of France, and was an Imperial Town till 1312, ſince which it has been ſubject to the Elector. It lies in a pleaſant Country, abounding with choice Vineyards, and is of a triangular Form, two ſides of which are defended by the Rivers, and the other by a good Wall, and modern Fortifications; ſo that 'tis reckon'd one of the ſtrongeſt Towns in Germany. 'Tis large, populous, and by its convenient ſituation on the two Rivers, has a conſiderable Trade in Wood, Corn, Wine, and Iron. Their Houſes are for the moſt part better built, and more uniform than the other Towns on the Rhine. The Inhabitants are very civil to Strangers, becauſe of their Commerce. Their beſt publick Buildings are the Elector's Palace, two great Churches, and ſome Monaſteries. It has a Stone-Bridge over the Moſelle, and one of Boats over the Rhine, ſo contriv'd, that they let three of the Boats ſlip in the middle, for Veſſels to paſs, and can quickly faſten them again. On the other ſide the Rhine, upon a very high Hill, ſtands the Elector's Caſtle of Hermanſtein, or Ehrenbretſtein, which is reckon'd impregnable: It commands the Town, and the Paſſage of the two Rivers, and has very good Outworks. At the Foot of the Hill there's a Mineral Fountain, whoſe Waters, mix'd with Rheniſh, &c. gives it a very agreeable Flavour, and is accounted wholſome. Upon the Banks of the Rhine, below this Hill, the Elector has a ſtately Palace, and Gardens, two large Wings with the Front of it, and two Pavilions look towards the River and the City, and the Name of the Elector Philip, who built it, is cut in the Lintels of moſt of the Windows. The French attack'd the Town in 1688, but could not take it, the Governour made ſo brave a Defence, tho' moſt of the City was ruined by the French Bombs.

10. Boppart, on the Rhine, 10 Miles South-Weſt from Coblentz, ſuppoſed to be Antonine's Bodobriga, and by the Ruins of the old Fortifications, to be one of thoſe built by Druſus. It was an Imperial Town, till given by the Emperor Henry VII. to the See of Treves. They reſiſted their Archbiſhop a long while; but he reduced them, built a Caſtle to curb them, and a Cuſtom-houſe to make the Veſſels that paſs by pay Toll, both which remain ſtill. It has a good Harbour for Veſſels, from whence it had the Name of Bon Port, of which the preſent is a Contraction. St. Severus's Church, and a ſtately old Palace, named Konigſhouſe, the Reſidence of their former Lords, are worth a Traveller's View. There is a fair Nunnery of Franciſcans, and another of Benedictines, near this City.

11. Engers, a fair Town and Fort, on the other Side the Rhine, 7 Miles North from Coblentz, Capital of its Territory, called Engerſgaw. It has a Caſtle named Cunen-Engers, and a noble Bridge over the Rhine, both built by Archbiſhop Kuno, in 1388.

12. Oberweſel, on the Weſt Side of the Rhine, 18 Miles South from Coblentz, at the Foot of a Hill. It formerly belonged to the Burgraves of Schomberg, was afterwards an Imperial Town, but has been ſubject to the See of Treves ſince 1313. 'Twas taken by the French in 1703, but reſtored by the Treaty of Baden.

13. Munſter-Meinfelt, 10 Miles South-Weſt from Coblentz. Suppoſed to be that called Meyn or Meyen, on the River Nette, 12 Miles Weſt from Coblentz; is alſo Capital of its Territory, to which it gives Name. It has a Caſtle built in 1280, by one of the Archbiſhops, and the Town was walled, and a Monaſtery built here by another.

14. Saarbruck or Saarbrug, on the River Saar, ſuppoſed to be the Caſtra Sarræ, Capital of its County on the Frontiers of Luxemburg, 12 Miles South from Treves. 'Tis a ſmall Town well fortified and handſomely built, by one of the Archbiſhops. St. Lawrence Church, and St. Nicholas Hoſpital, are the chief Structures. The Caſtle was baſely abandoned and demoliſhed by the Palatine General, in 1705, upon the Approach of the French.

15. Ulmen, 22 Miles South from Coblentz, in the Neighbourhood of a famous Lake, whereof the Inhabitants have a Tradition, that a monſtrous Pike, of 12 Foot long, always appeared before the Death of its Lord.

16. Prem, a Benedictine Abbey, ſaid to be founded by King Pepin of France, in 760. It lies 31 Miles North-Weſt from Treves, on a River of its own Name. The Elector is perpetual Adminiſtrator of it, and as ſuch, has a Vote in the Dyet. It belongs to the Circle of the Upper Rhine.

17. St. Vendel, or Wendel, on the Borders of the Palatinate, 22 Miles South-Eaſt from Treves. 'Tis well fortified; was taken by the French in 1703, but reſtored by the Treaty of Baden.

18. Limburg, on the Lohn, between the Counties of Idſtein and Wierberg, in the Country of Heſſe; once a large Town, with a Collegiate Church, governed by Canons of Noble Deſcent. It ſuffered much in the late Wars between the French and the Empire.

III. The Electorate and Archbiſhoprick of MENTZ.

HAS Part of the Electorate of Treves on the North-Weſt, the Electorate Palatine on the Weſt and South, and the Circle of Franconia and Landgraviate of Heſſe on the Eaſt; but this Dominion being mixed with others, it is not eaſy to give its Dimenſions. 'Tis about 77 Miles where longeſt, from South-Eaſt to North-Weſt; but the Breadth very unequal, the greateſt on the Eaſt Side being about 37 Miles. 'Tis divided into the Eaſt and Weſt Parts; the latter is called the Rheingaw, and comprehends ſeveral Counties and Bailiwicks.

Places of Note are,

1. Mentz, Lat. 50. 6. Long. 8 ¼. 'Tis Ptolomy's Mocontiacum, Tacitus's Magontiacum, and Antonius's Maguntiacum. 'Twas the chief Town belonging to the Romans in Upper Germany, and the Seat of their Governour there. The Name probably comes from the River Main, over-againſt the Mouth of which it lies. Some pretend it was built 1364 Years before the Incarnation, but others with more Probability aſcribe the Foundation to Claudius Druſus, ſurnamed Germanicus, who, Florus ſays, built many Forts on the Rhine; and the Situation of the Place being convenient, it is probable this was one of them. They pretend to ſhew his Tomb here, but it muſt only be ſome Trophy erected to his Memory; for tho' he died in Germany, it was not near this Place, and his Corpſe was interred in the Campus Martius at Rome. Some of the Monkiſh Antiquaries pretend, that the Archbiſhoprick was founded by Creſcens, who went from St. Paul to Galatia, 2 Tim. iv. 10. and having preached here 24 Years, was martyred near this City, his Corpſe buried in St. Hilary's Church, and from thence removed to that of St. Alban. They name a great many of his Succeſſors who were alſo Martyrs, but without any good Authority, for the beſt German Writers ſay, Worms was the more ancient Archbiſhoprick, and Mentz only a Suffragan, till 729, that Pepin and Pope Gregory III. gave Mentz the Preference, and made it an Archbiſhoprick. The firſt made an Elector, was Archbiſhop Wiligiſus, who died in 1011, and was ſaid to have been Son to a Wheelwright, from whence the Electors bear a Wheel in their Arms. 'Twas ruined by Attila the Hun, in 451; rebuilt by Dagobert I. of France, in 632; ruined by Emperor Frederic-Ænobarbus, in 1158, and rebuilt by the Emperor Otho IV. It was an Imperial City, till reduced by its Archbiſhop Adolph of Naſſau, in 1462, or as ſome ſay, by the Emperor Frederic I. in 1160. Guſtavus-Adolphus took it from the Imperialiſts in 1631, entered it with Triumph, obliged the Citizens to pay 80000 Crowns, as a Ranſom for their Lives and Houſes: The Clergy to pay him 4000, and the Jews 18000. The Imperialiſts retook it in 1635. The Swedes took it again next Year, and kept it till the Treaty of Munſter. The French took it in 1688. The Confederates retook it in 1689. The French endeavoured to ſurprize it by Treachery in 1691, but were diſappointed. It is well fortified, and has a ſtrong and regular Citadel, on a neighbouring Hill. The Elector's Palace is regular and magnificent, tho' built after the old German Manner. Here are many goodly Monaſteries, Churches, and publick Buildings, but the Streets are narrow, and the private Houſes old faſhioned. The Cathedral has many magnificent Tombs of deceaſed Electors. The Robes in which the Archbiſhop ſays Maſs, and the Canopy under which they carry the Hoſt in Proceſſion, are celebrated for Richneſs, being all embroidered with Pearl. The Chapter conſiſts of 42 Canons, 24 of which are Capitulars, and chuſe the Elector, but the reſt are Domiciled. They muſt all be Gentlemen by four Deſcents. The Proteſtants are allowed to dwell here, but not the free Exerciſe of their Religion. Here is an Univerſity founded about the Year 800 by Charlemain, but of no great Reputation now. They have a Bridge of Boats over over the Rhine, and Guſtavus-Adolphus made another over the Main; which is ſince removed. This City boaſts of the Invention of Printing, by John Guttenberg a Soldier, for which they quote the Nether-Saxon Chronicle, a Book of great Authority in Germany, that was Printed here in 1492; but Haerlem in Holland, diſputes this with them. They alſo claim the Invention of Gunpowder, by Berthold Schwarts a Cordelier: tho' our Frier Bacon is ſaid to have found it one hundred Years before him.

The ELECTOR is High-Chancellor of the Empire, and in that reſpect the ſecond Perſon in Dignity. He is perpetual Dean of the Electoral College, Guardian of the Archives and Matricula, Viſitor of the Aulic Council of the Chamber of Spires, and all the other Courts of the Empire. All foreign Princes and States direct to him what Propoſitions they make to the Empire: and the Princes and States of Germany addreſs to him when they would have their Grievances removed, but notwithſtanding all thoſe Dignities, the proper Revenues of his Electorate do not exceed 7000 Crowns per Ann. tho' by Taxes and otherwiſe, he is ſaid to have about 100000 l. per Ann. in the whole. He is aſſiſted by a Privy-Council, a Court of Juſtice, and has a Military Government for his Towns and Forts.

2. Bingen, on the Rhine 15 Miles below Mentz, and directly Weſt from it. It lies pleaſantly, and is ſuppoſed to be that called Bingium by Tacitus, Ammianus, and Ozonius. Druſus is fancied to have died here, and there is a Well in the Neighbourhood called Druſenbrun, from his Name. 'Twas formerly an Imperial Town, has a good Stone-Bridge over the River Nahe, which falls there into the Rhine, and a Caſtle on a neighbouring Hill. On an Iſland in the Rhine, near this City, there is the Ruins of an Old ſquare Tower, called the Mouſe-Tower, becauſe of the following Story generally believed in this Country. Hatto the ſecond of the Name, Archbiſhop of Mentz, ſeeing a Multitude of poor People at his Gate, begging for Bread, ſaid in diſdain, that they were Rats which deſtroy'd the Corn, ordered them to be put into a Barn, on Pretence of relieving their Wants, ſet Fire to it, and when they cry'd out in the Flames, ſaid, hear how the Mice crap: After which, he was by the juſt Vengeance of Heaven ſo purſued by Rats and Mice, that he fled to this Tower to avoid them, but in vain, for they ſwam the River, entered the Place, and eat him up. The People here cannot endure to have the Story accounted a Fable; and Trithemius ſays, he will neither approve nor condemn it.

3. Elfeld, a ſtrong Town with a fair Church, and a high Steeple, on the North Side of the Rhine, 15 Miles Weſt from Mentz, Capital of the Diſtrict called Rhingaw, about 20 Miles long on the Banks of the Rhine. This Country is ſo populous and fruitful, that it looks like an entire Town, intermixed with Gardens and Vineyards, which yield very rich Wine, and eſpecially about Rodeſheim, which is reckoned the beſt in the Country. This Diſtrict is ſhut up, on one Side with rocky Mountains, on which they have Watch-Towers to diſcover the Approach of an Enemy; and on the other, 'tis ſecured by the Rhine. In this Tract lies alſo the ſtately Monaſtery of Erbach, where many of the old Counts of Naſſau, and the Archbiſhops of Mentz have Tombs.

His other Dominions lie ſeparate from this Part, and are as follows:

1. Aſchaffemburg, in the Circle of Franconia, at the Conflux of the Aſchaff and Main, 40 Miles South-Eaſt from Mentz, and 20 South-Eaſt from Francfort. It has the ſtrongeſt Caſtle in the Elector's Dominions, built by Archbiſhop Albert, in 1122, to ſecure himſelf from the Emperor's Reſentments, whom he croſſed in the Election of a Biſhop of Wurtzburg. It was afterwards enlarged by his Succeſſors. From the Top of the Caſtle there is a noble Proſpect of the adjacent Country and the River Main, over which here is a fair Stone Bridge. The Town is divided into Upper and Lower, and beautified by a ſtately Palace lately built, where the Elector frequently reſides, and has a very ſpacious and noble Cellar.

2. Hochſt, a ſmall Town on the Main, where the Elector has a Toll-Houſe for Veſſels that paſs by it. It was given to that See by the Emperor Henry IV. in Compenſation for Pope Clement IVth's having made Prague an Archiepiſcopal See, and given the Archbiſhop Power to crown the Kings of Bohemia, which formerly belonged to him of Mentz. This Town was ruined by the Swedes, during the Civil Wars of Germany.

3. Konigſtein, in the Upper Rhine Circle, 13 Miles North-Eaſt from Mentz. Capital of a County, formerly belonging to the Church of Halberſtat, but united to this See in 1597. The Town is well fortified, but commanded by neighbouring Hills.

4. Ammenburg, or Amelburg, 6 Miles South-Eaſt from Marpurg in Heſſe, in a plain fruitful Country. It ſtands high, is ſeen at a great Diſtance, has a Collegiate Church, and a ſmall Diſtrict.

5. Fritzlar, formerly an Imperial City, is a ſtrong Town in the Landgraviate of Heſſe, upon the River Eder, 20 Miles Weſt from Caſſel. It was deſtroyed in 1232, by Conrad, Landgrave of Thuringia, who put all the Inhabitants to the Sword. The Caſtle has been ſo well fortified of late, that 'tis reckoned one of the greateſt Strengths in thoſe Parts.

6. The County of Reineck, in Franconia, with its Capital of the ſame Name, 32 Miles North-Eaſt from Aſchaffenburg. The Diſtrict is about 15 Miles long, and 8 broad.

7. Steinheim.

8. Epſtein.

9. The County of Lohr, on the Banks of the Main, and ſome other Places in Franconia.

10. Bergſtraſs, in the Lower Palatinate, which has ſeveral Towns.

11. The City of Urb, noted for its Salt-Springs, and ſome other Places not deſcribed.

12. Erfurt, in Thuringia, already accounted for.

IV. The Electorate and Palatinate of the RHINE.

IT has Part of Lorrain and Treves on the Weſt, Part of Mentz and Treves on the North, Part of Heſſe, Mentz and Franconia on the Eaſt, and Part of Alſace and Swabia on the South. From South-Eaſt to North-Weſt 'tis 90 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth from Eaſt to Weſt 90; but 'tis much narrower and indented with other Dominions toward the South: Part of it belongs to the Circle of the Upper Rhine, and Part to that of the Lower, where the Elector's Dominions lie.

Authors are divided about the Origin of the Name. Cluverius, in his Germania Antiqua, ſays, that what the modern Germans called Palz, Paltz, and Pfaltz, the Antients called Palanz or Palans, which in the old Celtic ſignified a Court of Juriſdiction, where the Officer, named Palatinus, preſided; and he proves from the Speculum Saxonicum, that every Teutonic Province had ſuch a Court, and that there were five Cities in Saxony which had ſuch Courts where the King himſelf preſided; ſo that the Name did not come from the Comites Palatii of the ancient French Kings. He agrees however, that thoſe Countries called Palatinates, derived their Name from thoſe Courts, which is now appropriated to this Country by way of Eminence, as being the oldeſt mentioned in the German Hiſtory. La Forreſt ſays, that Part of this Country, on the Weſt Side of the Rhine, being ſubject to the Emperors of the French Line; the Diviſions which happened about the Cloſe of the 11th Century, gave Opportunity to the Counts of the Palace, who were Judges between the Courtiers and the People, to make themſelves Sovereigns of thoſe Countries they held in Fee, and to enlarge their Dominions. He ſays, there were two of them, viz. the Counts Palatine of Saxony, and of the Rhine, and that the latter's Juriſdiction reached as far as the Alps. Selden, in his Titles of Honour, thinks the old Counts Palatine were like the Præfecti Prætorio among the Romans, or the old Chief-Juſtice of England, who had ſupreme Juriſdiction for the King in all Cauſes that came immediately to his Majeſty's Audience: He adds, there are other Counts Palatine, which is only a Perſonal Dignity acquired by the Profeſſion of the Law, or by Letters Patents, and of this Sort divers have been made, both by Popes and Emperors, with Power to create Doctors in all Faculties, Poets Laureat, Notaries, &c.

This Country is much the pleaſanteſt and fruitfulleſt Part of the Empire; ſo that it has been coveted by Neighbouring Princes in all Ages. Their Hills are covered with Vines, which yield the well known Rheniſh Wine. Their Plains and Valleys abound with all Sorts of Corn and Fruit, and their Foreſts with Deer and other Game. The Rhine, Neckar, Nahe, and other Rivers, improve their Commerce, and ſupply them with Plenty of Fiſh; and their Mountains have Minerals, among which there is Agate and Jaſper; and there is Gold ſometimes found in the Sand of the Rhine, of which they coin Pieces that bear its Name.

Part of this Country belongs to the Circle of the Upper Rhine, which we refer to its Place, and Part to that of the Lower Rhine, which contains the Elector's Dominions.

Places of Note here are,

1. Heidleberg, the Metropolis of the Palatinate, and anciently of all Swabia. Lat. 49 ½. Lon. 9. 1. 43 Miles South-Eaſt from Mentz, and 40 South from Francfort. The Name comes from Heidleberen, i. e. Myrtle-berries, which grow in the Neighbourhood; and hence Latin Authors call it Myrtilorum Mons, and Myrtiletum. 'Tis encompaſſed with Hills, covered with Vines, except on the Weſt, where there is a large fruitful and pleaſant Plain, on the River Neckar, which runs by the City, ſo that the Situation is very agreeable. 'Tis an ancient City, and belonged to the Biſhop of Worms, till 1225, when Prince Lewis I. obtained it; was much enlarged in 1392, and had the Suburb of Bergein added to it. The chief Beauty conſiſted in one fair Street and a ſquare uniform Market-Place. 'Twas large, rich and populous, and the Elector's Palace on the Aſcent of an adjoining Hill, was ſtately and magnificent, beautified with fine Grotto's, Gardens, &c. and near it a ſtrong Tower, which for Height and Fortifications was ſcarce to be matched in the Empire; and for its Strength was called Trutz-Keyſer, i. e. a Defiance to the Emperor; but after the Peace of Weſtphalia, 'twas called the Star-Fort. The Palace was incloſed with a Wall and a deep Ditch hewn out of the Rock. By an Inſcription over the Gate, it appeared to have been founded by Elector Lewis V. but enlarged ſince, and particularly by that called the Engliſh Building, in honour of the Electreſs our King James I. Daughter. In a Cellar under one of the Towers ſtood the famous Tun capable of 528 Hogſheads of Wine, which was rebuilt in 1664, and made capable of 600. The old one had Iron Hoops of 12200 Pounds Weight each, but the new one inſtead of them had large ones of Knee-Timber, like the Ribs of a Ship, with ſeveral Inſcriptions carved and painted, and ſupported by Pedeſtals. On one Side there was a handſome Stair-caſe of 43 Steps, leading to the Top, on which there was a Gallery ſet round with Baliſters. The Elector had a fine Cloſet of Curioſities, in which Mr. Ray ſaw, among other things, a Purſe made of Alumen Plumoſum, which endured the Fire without Damage in Subſtance or Colour; an Imperial Crown and Globe, richly ſet with precious Stones, which was uſed by the Emperor Rupert, a Prince of this Family; and a large Collection of ancient and modern Coins and Medals. Scaliger ſays, that in his Time the Elector's Library, kept in the Church of the Holy Ghoſt, was larger and better filled with choice Books, than that of the Vatican at Rome, and exceeded all in the Empire in that Reſpect as well as for the Number of Manuſcripts in all the Learned and other Languages. But when Count Tilly the Imperial General took this City, in 1631, the Spaniards deſtroyed much of this Library, and the reſt was ſent to the Emperor's at Vienna, and the Vatican at Rome. Here is an Univerſity founded by one of their Princes in 1347, which has bred many great Men. It had three or four Colleges for Subſiſtence of poor Scholars; and it was managed by the Academical Senate, conſiſting of 3 Divinity Profeſſors, 4 for Law, 3 for Phyſick, and 6 for Philoſophy; but 4 of the latter were only allowed to ſit, leſt they ſhould over-balance the reſt. They chuſe annually a Rector Magnificentiſſimus, who is only an Honorary Officer, like the Chancellors of our Univerſities; and likewiſe a Rector Magnificus, like our Vice-Chancellor, who is Preſident of the Senate. Beſides, they chuſe two or three more Officers out of their Number, to manage their Concerns. When a Profeſſor dies, the Senate names two in his Room, of whom the Prince chuſes one. This Senate has the Power of Life and Death in their own Juriſdiction, but the Prince reſerves the Power of pardoning if he thinks fit. They give no Degree in Philoſophy higher than that of Maſter, but in Law and Phyſic they create Licentiates and Doctors, and in Divinity Batchelors; Licentiates and Doctors. They have no Regard to the ſtanding of the Candidates, but prefer them according to their Abilities, after two Examinations, the first before the Faculty in which he is to commence, the Rector Magnificus presiding; and the second is before all the Professors, under the same President, when they are to hold a publick Disputation; give a Lecture in their own Faculty, and conclude with a Speech. This Ceremony is perform'd with great Pomp, and ends with a sumptuous Feast to all the Professors, whereat sometimes the Prince or his Deputy is present; and then a Catalogue is publish'd of the Names of the Professors, and of the publick Lectures they intend for that Year.

The City is divided into five independent Jurisdictions, 1. Aulica, under which were the Princes and Nobles, and the Marshal of the Court is President. 2. Cancellaria, to which belong all Counsellors, and other Officers of the Courts, Advocates, Doctors of Laws, &c. the Chancellor President. 3. Bellica, for the Soldiers, where the General presides. 4. Academica, already described. 5. Civica, for the Citizens. The Members of each of those Jurisdictions are not obliged to appear before any Court but their own. The City is divided into four Wards, under a Prætor and Burgomaster. The generality of the Inhabitants being Calvinists, the Affairs of the Church are managed by a Præfecture, or Presbytery, consisting of five Ministers of the City, two Deputies from each of the above-mentioned Jurisdictions, except the Aulica, and two from each of the four Wards of the City, making in all 21. The Laymen have equal Votes with the Ministers, one of whom always presides by Turns. They inflict no other Ecclesiastical Punishment, but to oblige such as are publickly scandalous to make Confession of their Crime at the Church-Door, and promise Amendment, the rest being left to the Civil Magistrate. There are two more such Præfectures in the Electorate, and each of them have an Inspector, who differs not from the other Ministers in Rank or Power, but only has a larger Salary. Each considerable Town has a Presbytery of the like Nature. The French Protestants have a Church here, and the Lutherans another, of which the Elector, tho' a Calvinist, laid the first Stone, to shew his Moderation. This City was very handsomly built, and the most remarkable Structures were, 1. The Town-house, famous for its curious Clock, which had divers Motions, and represented several Figures of Men fighting, and of a Cock crowing, &c. when it struck. 2. The Church of the Holy Ghost, already mentioned. 3. That of St. Peter, which contain'd many Monuments of the Electors. About a Mile from the Town there is a solitary Place, with three Fountains, that come from a Mountain, and after filling five Ponds, and passing over three Cascades, run in so strong a Stream thro' the adjacent Plain, that they drive four Mills, at a small Distance from one another. Dr. Brown says, there is a Monastery near this City, call'd Lobensfelt, which formerly belong'd to Jesuits, but was since bestow'd by the Elector upon Englishmen, about 100 of whom, in 1661, came hither, and settled with their Families. They call'd themselves Christian Jews, maintain'd a Community of many things, did not cut their Hair nor shave their Beards, and observ'd many other Ceremonies of the Old Testament.

The French seiz'd this City in 1688, from whence they laid the Country under Contribution for a time; but upon the Approach of the Imperial Army, they did, contrary to the Capitulation with the Dauphin, lay it in Ashes, with the Elector's noble Palace, the Churches, and other publick Buildings, and among others, that call'd the Temple of Concord, built by the Elector Charles-Lewis, where the Papists, Lutherans, and Calvinists, were allow'd the Freedom of their Religion, under three different Roofs, to shew his Moderation, and that Difference in Religion ought not to create any Divisions among Subjects, or deprive them of their common Birthrights, and the Protection of their Prince. The French, to add to their Barbarity, would not suffer the Citizens to go out of Town, but shut them up in the Great Church, till they burnt the City, and then also consumed that. Soon after this, the Allies encamp'd in the Ruins of the Town, which they inclosed with Pallisadoes, and gave what Comfort they could to the distressed Burghers. The Town was afterwards tolerably repaired, and had a considerable Garrison; but the French attack'd it in 1693, and by the Treachery of the Governour, who nail'd up his Cannon, destroy'd the Magazines, and retired to the Castle, the City was soon taken, and the People brutishly murder'd, except such as could get into the Castle. Upon the first Entrance of the French, the Gentlewomen, and others of the Town, sent to the General, and begg'd that their Honour might be saved; which he promised, and for that end order'd them all to retire to the Great Church, where, contrary to his Promise, they were brutishly ravished and stripp'd. The Governour, General Heidesdorf, capitulated for himself and his Garrison, which was allow'd to march out of the Castle: He was degraded from being a Teutonic Knight, turn'd off with Disgrace, and knock'd on the Head by the Country People. A few Days after, the French laid the City again in Ashes, broke up the Tombs of the deceased Electors and Electresses, exposed their Corpse inhumanly, carried off all the Lead they were embalm'd in, cut off their Heads, and kick'd them about like Footballs, not sparing even the Corpse of the late Elector, Father to the Dutchess of Orleans: They turned the Inhabitants, who were about 15000, out of the Town by Night, and being stripp'd of all they had, many dy'd of Want, particularly Women with Child, who fell in Labour by the Fright, and such of 'em as had Strength enough to go further, were forced to leave their dead Infants upon the Roads. When the French left the Ruins, the Elector encouraged the People to rebuild the Town, repaired the Castle, planted a small Garrison for their Defence, and promised them Exemption from Taxes for 30 Years, with Liberty of Conscience; but being a Papist himself, he was soon prevail'd on, by the Advice of the Jesuits, to make one of their Society a Professor in the University, and oppressed his Protestant Subjects, till the Elector of Brandenburg, and other Protestant Princes, interposed in their behalf. The French seiz'd it again in 1707, and put the adjacent Country under Contribution. These Calamities, together with the Elector's residing now at Dusseldorp, are like to hinder this City and Country from recovering its ancient Lustre and Wealth.

The Elector is a very great Prince, considering his other Dominions of Juliers and Bergs, &c. He has the Supremacy in Church Affairs, that was formerly claim'd by the Bishop of Spires. He is Patron of all vacant Benefices, but allows the Ecclesiastical Council, composed of two Clergymen and two Laymen, to present two Candidates, of which he chuses one. He is Master of all the Tythes in his Dominions, which in some Parts he allows to the Clergy, and in others he gives them Salaries out of the Revenues of the Church; but since the Electorate fell to the House of Newburg, who are Papists, the Protestants have been much persecuted: Yet in 1701, he promised them their Liberty, upon Complaints against him in the Dyet. The former Electors, before the Proscription of Frederic V. for accepting the Crown of Bohemia, were as formidable as any of the other Electors; but their Power and Revenue has been much lessen'd since, by giving the Upper Palatinate to the Elector of Bavaria. He has Power, says La Forrest, to summon the Emperor to answer before him, when charged with doing any thing prejudicial to the Rights or Majesty of the Empire; and he is likewise one of the Directors of the Circles of the Upper and Lower Rhine. The Elector of Mentz is Joynt Director with him in the Lower Circle. He has a Privy-Council, a Council of War, an Ecclesiastical Council, one call'd the Chief Chamber, and a Court of Justice to assist him in the Administration. He has Generals, and other Military Officers, and has standing Forces, consisting of 11 Regiments of Foot, 8 of Horse, and 4 of Dragoons.

2. Ladenburg, on the Neckar, 6 Miles North-West from Heidleberg, a small pleasant City, which belongs jointly to the Elector and the Bishop of Worms. It was spared by the Spaniards, during the Civil Wars of Germany, at the Intercession of the Bishop; but was burnt by the French in 1689. It was afterwards repaired, but burnt again by the French in 1692. Being repaired a second time, the French surprized it in 1694, carried off the Magazines and Garrison, and in the Month after burnt it again.

3. Manheim, at the Mouth of the Neckar, 10 Miles North-West from Heidleberg, and about ½ of a League from the Rhine. It was strongly fortified by Frederic IV. in 1606, but dismantled by the Spaniards in 1622. 'Twas refortified by the last Protestant Elector, who added several Outworks and two Citadels, in one of which there was a neat Church, named Concordia, where the Papists, Lutherans, and Calvinists, had their Worship by Turns. The French took it in 1688, and being obliged next Year to quit it, dismantled and burnt most of it, and plow'd up the sow'd Lands in the Neighbourhood, on purpose to starve the People. Being afterwards repaired, the French surprized it again in 1692, on the Sabbath-Day, while the People were at Church, plunder'd the Town, stripp'd the People, ravished the Women, dragg'd the Men naked over the Ice, afterwards burnt the City, and threaten'd, if ever they rebuilt it again, to put them all to the Sword.

4. Mosbach, near the Neckar, 30 Miles North-East from Heidleberg, a neat Town, Capital of a Bailiwic.

5. Horneck, upon the same River, a small City, pillaged by the Bavarians in 1622.

6. Sintzsheim, or Zizentsheim, 10 Miles South-East from Heidleberg, a small City, upon a Hill, in a marshy Country, noted for a Victory which the Marshal de Turenne obtained there over the Imperialists, in 1674.

7. Bretten, 18 Miles South from Heidleberg, Capital of its Bailiwic, noted for being the Birth-place of the famous Divine Melancthon, who composed the Augsburg Confession.

8. Frankendale, on the West side, 8 Miles North-West from Manheim, formerly an Abbey, which the Emperor Frederic III. fortified, and gave Rise to the Town. It was long held out by the Protestants in the 16th Century, but at last taken by the Spaniards, from whom the Swedes retook it two Years after, and kept it till 1652, tho' they ought to have restored it in 1648, by the Treaty of Munster. The French took it in 1688, and burnt it in 1689. It was rebuilt by the Elector in 1700, and well fortified after the modern Way.

9. Altzheim, or Altzey, on a River of the same Name, about 16 Miles North-West from Worms. 'Twas formerly Capital of a County, but now only of a Bailiwic. 'Tis a good Town, fortified with a Castle and Walls, and was formerly the Residence of the Electors. 'Twas taken by the French in 1691, but afterwards restored.

10. Oppenheim, upon a Hill on the Banks of the Rhine, 12 Miles North of Worms, formerly an Imperial Town, given by the Emperor Robert of the Palatine Family to his Son Lewis, who succeeded him in the Electorate, in 1410. It was burnt by the French, with other Towns of the Palatinate, in 1689.

For the other Towns in the Palatinate, we must refer to the Circle of the Upper Rhine, in which they lie, and shall begin with them, that the Description of this Country mayn't be interrupted.

V. The Circle of the UPPER RHINE

EXtends, according to the Matricula of the Empire, from the Frontiers of the County of Burgundy on the South-West, to the Dutchy of Brunswic on the North-East, 280 Miles; but is divided in the Middle by the Circle of the Lower Rhine, and the Breadth very unequal, being much indented by other Circles: The greatest is from the Maeze to the Rhine, thro' Lorrain and Alsace, about 110 Miles. It contains the following Dominions.

I. Those belonging to the Elector Palatine's Family, in which are,

1. Keyserslauter, on the River Lauter, 25 Miles West of Frankenda'e, and 38 from Heidleberg. 'Twas Imperial, mortgaged to the Elector Palatine by the Emperor Robert, in 1402, and is Capital of a Principality. 'Twas taken by the French in 1688, and restored by the Treaty of Reswic. They retook it in 1713, and restored it by the Treaty of Baden.

2. Lautereck, 30 Miles West from Worms, on the Conflux of the Glan and Lauter; formerly subject to a Count of its own, descended from the Family of Deux-ponts, who was also Prince of Veldentz; and dying without Male Issue, 'twas claim'd both by the King of Sweden and Elector Palatine, who has it.

3. Creutznach on the Nahe, 30 Miles North-West of Worms, Capital of the County of Spanheim, a large Town, defended by a Castle on a neighbouring Hill. The French took it in 1688, but restored it by the Treaty of Reswic.

4. Eberen-

4. Eberenberg, a ſtrong Caſtle, 4 Miles South-Weſt from Crentznach, ſeized by the French in 1689, and beſieged by the Landgrave of Heſſe, in 1692, when he was forced to retire on the Approach of the French Army. Prince Lewis of Baden retook it in 1697, and added new Works, but they were demoliſhed, and the Place reſtored by the Treaty of Reſwic, to the Baron of Seckingen.

5. Rhingraveſtein, Capital of its County, 6 Miles South of Crentznach.

6. Oberſtein, Capital of its County, 15 Miles Weſt of Creutznach.

7. Traerbach, a ſtrong and important Town, in the County of Spanheim, on the Moſelle, 22 Miles North-Eaſt of Treves. Taken by the French in 1689; reſtored, with the additional Works demoliſhed, by the Treaty of Reſwic; was again taken in 1702. The Dutch retook it by Storm in 1703, and cut off moſt of the Garriſon, the reſt retired to a Citadel, which being ſtrong by Nature and Art, and having ſubterranean Caves, they held out, tho' the Buildings were ruined by Bombs, till the Cloſe of 1704, when the Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel beſieged it, obliged the French, who came to relieve it, to retire, and the Place to ſurrender on Terms.

8. Veldentz or Weldentz, near the Conflux of the Moſelle and Leſer, 8 Miles South-Weſt of Traerbach, Capital of its County, and gave Title to a Prince of the Palatine-Family, who dying without Iſſue-Male, the Elector Palatine took Poſſeſſion of it, and the King of Sweden claimed it at the Treaty of Reſwic, when reſtored by the French, which Claim has not yet been determined.

9. Birkenfield or Birkenfels, 20 Miles South-Eaſt of Treves, in the upper County of Spanheim. 'Tis a walled Town, defended by a Caſtle; gives Title to a Branch of the Palatine Family, and is noted for the Death of Charles III. of Lorrain here in 1670, after the French had deſpoiled him of his Dominions.

10. Simmeren or Zimmeren, a City and ſtrong Caſtle on a River of its Name, 15 Miles North-Eaſt of Traerbach, Capital of a Principality, enjoyed by a Prince of the Palatine Family, from 1559 till 1673; that the laſt Prince dying without Heirs-Male, it fell to the Elector Palatine, whom the French King forced to pay 100000 Florins per Ann. for it to the Dutcheſs of Orleans, a Daughter of the Family.

11. Bacharach, a ſmall City on the Rhine, 15 Miles Eaſt from Simmeren, and 25 Weſt of Mentz, famous for the beſt Rheniſh Wine, whence ſome derive the Name from Bacchi Ara, i. e. The Altar of Bacchus. It was once an Imperial City.

12. Leinengen or Linage, 8 Miles South-Weſt from Worms, Capital of its County, quitted by the French in 1698.

13. Reinolskirk or Reipolskirk, Capital of its County, 3 Miles Weſt from Worms.

14. Deux-ponts, in German, Zweybrucken, 42 Miles Weſt from Worms, towards the Frontiers of Lorrain, Capital of a Dutchy of the ſame Name, above 40 Miles long, and from 8 to 25 broad. The Name comes from two Bridges over the two Rivers on which it ſtands. The Town is ſmall, but neat, and defended by a good Caſtle. It gave the Title of Duke to a Branch of the Palatine Family, from which the preſent Royal Family of Sweden deſcended, and kept Poſſeſſion till the Death of Charles XII. of Sweden in 1718; who leaving no Iſſue, Prince Adolphus-Guſtavus-Samuel, his Great Uncle, took Poſſeſſion as the next Heir-Male, and at the ſame time the Elector Palatine put in his Claim, which is not yet decided. This Town ſuffered much during the German Civil Wars, and alſo in thoſe betwixt France and the Empire; when it was taken by the French, but reſtored to the King of Sweden by the Treaty of Reſwic. The Dutchy is divided into five Bailiwicks, one of which called Biſchweiler, lies in Lower Alſace, where there are other Lands belonging to the Family.

15. Homburg, 6 Miles Weſt from Deux-ponts, a ſtrong Town, taken by the French in 1705, and reſtored by the Treaty of Baden in 1714.

16. Germerſheim, a conſiderale City on the Rhine, almoſt over-againſt Philipsburg, and about 5 Miles Weſt from it. There is a Bridge here over the River. 'Twas formerly an Imperial City, and quitted by the French to the Elector Palatine, after the Treaty of Reſwic.

17. Neuſtat, a neat ſmall City, once Imperial, on the River Spireback, 15 Miles Weſt from Spires, noted for the Defeat of a Body of Germans coming to the Relief of Landau, when beſieged by the French.

18. Kirn, 15 Miles Eaſt from Birkenfeld. Tis Capital of a County. In 1679, France, being Maſter of this as well as all the Country along the Moſelle, obliged the Proteſtants here to reſign the leſſer Churches to the Papiſts, who till then were not permitted the free Exerciſe of their Religion. In 1688, the City was fortified, and the French prevailed that the Papiſts might worſhip in the Cathedral, alternately with the Proteſtants; but being reſtored by the Treaty of Reſwic, with the Caſtle of Kurburg, the Papiſts were forced to leave the Cathedral to the ſole Uſe of the Proteſtants, and to be content with the leſſer Church. In 1699, the Prince of Salm in Lorrain, who claimed it, ſent Troops, who forced the Proteſtants to Maſs, upon which the Landgraveſs of Daun, who had been put in Poſſeſſion by Order of the Dyet, complained of this Violence, as contrary to the Peace of Weſtphalia.

Having thus deſcribed the Palatine Dominions, we ſhall next give a brief Account of the Family, before we proceed farther in the Geography of this Circle.

THE firſt Count Palatine is, by la Forreſt, ſaid to have been Sigonfrid or Ehrenfrid, deſcended from the Counts of Arden. By the Female Line the Dominions deſcended to the Houſe of Bavaria, which was veſted in the Palatinate in 1215; and from this Marriage deſcended the preſent Bavarian and Palatine Families. The Atlas Hiſtorique ſays, That Rodolph I. married a Daughter of the Emperor Adolph of Naſſau. Robert II. recovered what the Emperor Charles IV. had taken from his Predeceſſors, and died in 1398. His Succeſſor Robert III. called the Severe, was declared Emperor, in 1401, and died in 1410. Frederic IV. of this Family, married a Daughter of Orange, was a zealous Proteſtant, had Wars with the Houſe of Auſtria in Defence of his Religion, and died in 1610. His Son Frederic V. married Elizabeth Daughter to our James I. of Great Britain, had Wars with the Houſe of Auſtria in Defence of his Religion, and the German Liberty, and was choſen King of Bohemia; but not being duly ſupported, was defeated at the Battle of Prague, and afterwards proſcribed, ſo that he loſt both his Crown and the Electorate; but the latter was reſtored to the Family by the Treaty of Munſter, tho' with great Diminution of their Dominions. He had Iſſue by James the Firſt's Daughter; 1. Charles-Lewis, who ſucceeded to the Electorate. 2. Prince Maurice, who was taken during the War with the Emperor, and died not long after. 3. Prince Rupert, who was General for his Uncle our King Charles I. againſt the Parliament; after the Reſtoration he was made Duke of Cumberland, and died in 1682, without lawful Iſſue. 4. Edward, who married Anne Gonzague Daughter to the Duke of Nevers in France. Frederic V. had alſo ſeveral Daughters, the Eldeſt, Princeſs Sophia, Mother to King George of Great Britain. The Second was married to the Prince of Conde in France. The Third Elizabeth, was a Princeſs of great Learning, Abbeſs of the Proteſtant Nunnery of Herſorden in Germany, and died unmarried in 1980. The Fourth, Louiſa-Hollandina, was Abbeſs of Maubiſſon in France.

Charles-Lewis, Frederic the Fifth's eldeſt Son and Succeſſor, was a pious and learned Prince, and died in 1680. His Son Charles ſucceeded, was the laſt Elector of this Line, and died without Iſſue in 1685; upon which the Electorate came to the Branch of Newburg, deſcended from that of Deux-ponts. Charles-Lewis's Eldeſt Daughter, Charlotta, was married to Philip Duke of Orleans, Mother to the preſent Duke Regent of France.

The firſt Elector of the Branch of Newburg, and the firſt Papiſt who has enjoyed the Electorate ſince the Reformation, was Philip-William of Newburg; but being deſcended of zealous Proteſtant Anceſtors, he had imbibed ſuch moderate Principles, as made him avoid perſecuting his Proteſtant Subjects. He was very fortunate in his Iſſue, for he had five Daughters, three of whom were married to great Princes; the firſt to the late Emperor Leopold, the ſecond to the late King of Charles of Spain, the third to the late King of Portugal, the fourth to Prince James Sobieski, Son to the late King of Poland, and the fifth to the Duke of Parma. His Sons were alſo advanced to great Dignity in the Empire. The Eldeſt, John-William-Joſeph-Ignatius, ſucceeded in 1690; he married, firſt, the Emperor Ferdinand the Third's Daughter in 1678, and after her Death he married a Daughter to Coſmus III. Duke of Tuſcany, but died in 1716, without Iſſue by either. He was a very great Bigot, and by the Advice of the Popiſh Prieſts, did, contrary to his own Inclination, raiſe a bitter Perſecution againſt his Proteſtant Subjects, tho' he had blamed the French King for the like Practice, and generouſly gave the French Refugees Protection in his Dominions at firſt, but afterwards perſecuted and expelled them his Dominions in 1699. He treated his own Proteſtant Subjects with the like Barbarity, deprived them of all their Privileges, and would have forced them to turn Papiſts, and to educate their Children in that Perſwaſion; but after a long Interpoſition on their Behalf by the late King of Pruſſia, he came to an Agreement in 1705, that the Proteſtants ſhould be reſtored to their Churches, and allowed the Freedom of their Worſhip; but at the ſame time he obliged them to part with two Sevenths of the Revenues of the Churches, which he applied to maintain Popiſh Prieſts. He endeavored to have the States of Holland Guarantees of this Agreement, but they refuſed it, becauſe it was contrary to the Treaty of Weſtphalia; by which the Proteſtants of the Empire were to have full Enjoyment of all Religious and Civil Liberties as well as the Papiſts. He thought by this Conduct to have obliged the French King, and the Houſe of Auſtria, but was diſappointed in both Reſpects; for being firm to the Confederate Intereſt, his Dominions of the Palatinate were more barbarouſly uſed by the French than any other Part of Germany; and by the laſt Treaty of Peace at Baden, he was forced to reſtore the Upper Palatinate, and the firſt Electoral Dignity, to the Elector of Bavaria, without having received the Equivalent ſo often promiſed him.

The preſent Elector, his Brother, is Prince Charles-Philip, who has one Brother, Francis-Lewis, Great Maſter of the Teutonic Order, and Elector of Treves; and another, Francis-Sigiſmund, Biſhop of Augsburg.

We proceed to the Geography of the Circle, and ſhall begin with thoſe Parts which are included in, or lie next to the Palatinate.

1. Worms. This Biſhoprick derives its Name from the City, is about 18 Miles in Length, and 8 where broadeſt. It was formerly more conſiderable than now, becauſe the Elector Palatine took off a great Part of it at the Reformation; ſo that the Biſhop has only ſome Villages, and half the Town. The City lies about 19 Miles North-Weſt from Heidleberg, and 12 from Manheim, and is reckoned the ſecond City of the Palatinate. Freher, a learned Antiquary, ſays, it was the Metropolis of the Vangiones, and that not long before his Time, there was an Inſcription over one of the Gates in Capitals, with theſe Words, Speculum Vangionum, i. e. The Watch-Tower of the Vangiones. Cluverius ſays, the ancient Name was Bormitomagus, from whence came the modern Name Wormatia. It was deſtroyed by the Huns in 451, rebuilt by Clovis I. of France, 45 Years after, enlarged and made an Imperial Town by the Emperor Frederic-Barbaroſſa in 1158. It was a very ancient Metropolis, but made Suffragan of Mentz, as they ſay, by Pope Zachary, in 745. Munſter ſays, that in his Time, 200 Cities, great Towns and Villages, lay ſo near it, that they could bring Proviſions hither, and return home the ſame Night. It was one of the moſt conſiderable Cities in Germany, while the Imperial Chamber was kept here. The Town is ſubject to the Biſhop, but under the Protection of the Elector Palatine. The Papiſts here are very numerous, and have the Cathedral, but the Magiſtrates and moſt of the Inhabitants are Lutherans. 'Tis noted for Luther's bold Anſwer and Defence at the Dyet here, for which he was proſcribed and obliged to abſcond, during which time he wrote that, called, His Works from the Deſart. Mr. Ray ſays it is large, but was much decayed when he was there, and that there are 20 Canons belonging to the Cathedral, who chuſe the Biſhop. Miſſon, who was here in 1687, ſays, the Lutherans had only one Church for their own Uſe, and that of the Dominicans in their turn with the Papiſts, who had all the reſt, and that the Calviniſts had one at Newhauſel half a League out of Town. The Papiſts were not allowed however to make any public Proceſſions with their Hoſt, except on the Day after Eaſter. The Town had no other Fortifications but a double Wall, was as large as Francfort, but ſo ill-peopled, that he ſaw a Houſe ſold for 1000 Crowns which had formerly yielded as much per Ann. There is ſo much empty Ground in the Town, that being planted with Vines, yields annually 1500 Fodders of Wine, at 250 Engliſh Gallons per Fodder. This Wine is much eſteemed, and the Magiſtrates make Preſents of it, with ſome

Fiſh

Fiſh, to Princes, and other Travellers of Quality. The Churches of St. Paul and St. John are very ancient, built of vaſt ſquare Stones in an irregular Manner, with narrow Windows, and Galleries round the Outſide, juſt under the Roof, and the Walls are 12 Foot thick; ſo that they ſeem rather to have been deſign'd for Forts than Churches. The Cathedral is a long, high and ſtrong Structure, with a Tower at each of the four Corners. The Ornaments are Gothic, and over one of the Gates there's a Hieroglyphic with four Heads, ſuppoſed to be a Repreſentation of Ezekiel's Viſion. There's a Woman on its Back, which they ſay repreſents the Goſpel. At the Entrance of St. Martin's Church, over a moveable Altar, he ſays, there's a ſtrange Picture, well worth a Traveller's View: 'Tis about five Foot ſquare, and at one Corner of the Top has a Repreſentation of GOD the Father, addreſſing himſelf to the Virgin on her Knees, in the middle of the Picture, holding an Infant, repreſenting our Saviour, by the Feet, with his Head in the Hopper of a Mill, which the twelve Apoſtles turn by the Help of a Wheel, and the Aſſiſtance of the four-headed Beaſt before-mentioned; and hard by the Pope is drawn on his Knees, receiving the Hoſts which fall from the Mill into a Golden Cup, one of which he preſents to a Cardinal, who gives it to a Biſhop, the Biſhop to a Prieſt, and the Prieſt to a Layman.

There are two publick Halls here, in one of which the Magiſtrates aſſemble twice a Week, about Matters of State, and in the other for adminiſtring Juſtice. It was in the former that Luther appeared before the Dyet, when being heated with Debate, and by a Fire that was near him, he deſired a Glaſs of Wine, which being brought, he was ſo eager in his Diſcourſe, that he forgot to drink it, and ſoon after it broke in pieces on the Bench, without any body's being near or touching it; whence the Lutherans concluded, that there was Poyſon mix'd with the Wine: Upon this they broke the Bench, and ſtill keep the Pieces as a Memorial of his great Deliverance.

The Mint is a noble Structure, with a ſpacious Portico, where there's a vaſt Number of Bones and Horns, hanging betwixt the Arches. The former, they ſay, are thoſe of Giants, that lived among the ancient Vangiones; and the latter are the Horns of the Oxen that drew the Stones which built the Cathedral. The Outſide of the Houſe is adorned with many Pictures, and among them ſome of thoſe Giants in Armour.

The City was burnt by the French in 1689, when in a few Hours they laid in Aſhes what had been the Work of Ages. They left ſo much as to contain a Garriſon of 300 Men, who in 1692, being attack'd by the Landgrave of Heſſe, intrench'd themſelves in a Church, where they were forced, and all put to the Sword. Good part of the Town has been rebuilt ſince; and in 1698, the Popiſh Clergy were ſo inſolent, that they would needs carry their Hoſt in Proceſſion thro' the Streets on Chriſtmas-Day, which they were not allow'd to do before the War. The Magiſtrates ſent a Notary to forbid it; but the Prieſt at the Head of the Proceſſion ſtruck him over the Head with a Cenſer he carried in his Hand. Moſt of the Burghers being Proteſtants, ran to aſſiſt the Notary, and a great Company of Popiſh Peaſants, brought in on purpoſe, fired upon 'em; which ſo incenſed the Proteſtants, that they drove the Proceſſion back to the Church from whence it came, wounded ſeveral of the Papiſts, and among others, that inſolent Prieſt. The Papiſts complain'd of this as a Breach of the Treaty of Reſwic, betwixt France and the Empire, which reſtored Worms and its Dependencies to the Biſhop. The Proteſtants defended themſelves by the Treaty of Weſtphalia. Some of the principal Authors of the Tumult were ſeized, and a Palatine Regiment quarter'd in the City, to prevent further Diſturbances. At the ſame time the Elector incloſed it with a Wall.

2. Spire, a Biſhoprick, Suffragan of Mentz, 32 Miles long, and about 12 where broadeſt. It lies on both Sides the Rhine, and takes its Name from the Capital, which lies on the Weſt ſide of that River, 12 Miles South-Weſt from Heidleberg. 'Tis thought to be Julius Cæſar's Nemetum Civitas, or Noviomagum, and to have been built by the Nemetes, the old Inhabitants of this Country, whence it was call'd Auguſta Nemetum. It lies in a fine Plain, was large and populous, and ow'd its Security more to the Number of its Inhabitants than to the Strength of its Fortifications. It was the Darling of many Emperors, who endow'd it with great Privileges. Henry IV. made it Imperial, in 1090, built many fair Structures there, and particularly the Cathedral, where he and ſeven other Emperors were buried, and had noble Mauſolea. Its chief Privilege and Glory was the Imperial Chamber, or Sovereign Court of Judicature for the Empire, which was firſt eſtabliſh'd at Francfort in 1495, by Maximilian I. but tranſported hither in 1530, by Charles V. The Atlas Hiſtorique ſays, the Imperial Chamber had been at Augsburg, Worms, and Nuremberg, before it came hither; that it conſiſts of one Judge, who is a Papiſt, and two Preſidents, one a Papiſt, and the other a Proteſtant; of 15 Aſſeſſors, 8 of them Papiſts, and 7 Proteſtants: but tho' this Chamber, as well as the Aulic Council at Vienna, give definitive Sentences, yet there are Caſes in which the Subjects may appeal to the Emperor's Reviſal. The Subjects of the King of Pruſſia and the Elector of Saxony are not ſubject to this Tribunal; their Affairs being determined by their own Princes, without Appeal; and in Lower Saxony moſt Cauſes are determined by the old Saxon Law. The German Lawyers don't however agree among themſelves whether the Authority of this Chamber, or that of the Aulic Council be greateſt; yet moſt of them are for that of Spires; and prove by Records, that the Emperor himſelf has been ſummon'd before this Chamber. In Anſwer to which, the others ſay, that when the Emperors are ſummon'd to this Court, the Summons run in their own Name, and that the Sentence of this Court may be reviſed, but that of the Aulic Council not. The others reply, that the Emperor muſt be ſummon'd in his own Name, becauſe he is at the Head of the Adminiſtration; notwithſtanding which, he is ſubject to the Deciſions of this Court in Matters of Law; that the Electors are the like in ſome Caſes; and they offer Inſtances to prove, that the Sentences of the Aulic Council are alſo ſubject to Reviſal. The Origin of this Court is aſcribed to Charlemain, and ſome of his Succeſſors, who, with the Biſhops and Officers of the Crown, determined all Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes. The Prelates, Counts, and others of Quality were firſt heard in this Court. The Secular Princes could not be judged except in the Dyets of the Empire. When Law-Suits increaſed, and that it was troubleſome for thoſe concern'd to follow the Emperor's Court, which was not then fix'd, Maximilian I. eſtabliſh'd it at Francfort, for the Eaſe of the Subjects. The Aſſeſſors were not ſo numerous at firſt as now. The Emperor names a ſupreme Judge, who ought to be a Count or a Baron, and well vers'd in the Laws of the Empire. He names alſo four of the principal Officers, each Elector names one Aſſeſſor, and the other Members of the Dyet name the reſt. The Proteſtants during the Wars betwixt them and the Papiſts were frequently deny'd a Reviſal of the Sentence of this Court; but were reſtored to their Right by the Treaty of Weſtphalia. The Emperor's immediate Subjects bring all their Law-Suits to this Court; but others bring only Appeals, which are very few, becauſe they were uſually very ſlow in their Deciſions, tho' ſince the Treaty of Weſtphalia they made more Diſpatch. The chief Judge repreſents the Emperor's Perſon, and has a Scepter laid before him in Court.

This City was taken by Guſtavus-Adolphus, who demoliſh'd the Fortifications, becauſe he could not ſpare a ſufficient Garriſon for its Defence. The See was founded in the 4th Century, as is pretended, and has been largely endow'd by ſeveral Emperors. The People ſwear Fealty to the Biſhop, but are under Protection of the Elector Palatine. The Papiſts, Lutherans and Calviniſts have their Worſhip in the Cathedral by Turns, at different Hours, ſays Dr. Brown. The Magiſtrates and moſt of the Inhabitants are Proteſtants. The chief Structure was the Cathedral, beautified with 4 Towers; and here were many ſtately Houſes and Churches, and the Houſes were generally large, before it was barbarouſly burnt by the French, in 1689, upon the Approach of the Germans to relieve it, without ſparing the Records, tho' they had allow'd it a Neutrality in 1672, becauſe of the Imperial Chamber, which ſince that Time has been removed to Weltzar in Heſſe; nor is it ever like to return to Spire, becauſe it lies too near the Frontiers of France, and that there were frequent Debates betwixt the Magiſtrates and the Chamber about their Juriſdictions. So that this City can never recover its ancient Luſtre, tho' much of it be rebuilt by the Magiſtrates, who to encourage People to come hither, promiſed Liberty of Conſcience, and an Exemption from Taxes for a conſiderable Time, after it was, with the Dependencies of the Biſhoprick, reſtored by the Treaty of Reſwic.

3. Spirebach, a ſmall Place, on a River in the Neighbourhood of this City, where the French obtained a dear Victory over the Germans, commanded by the Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel, as he march'd to relieve Landau, in 1703.

4. Philipsburg, on the Eaſt ſide of the Rhine, almoſt over-againſt Germerſheim, about 7 Miles South from Spire, on the Mouth of the Saltza. 'Twas firſt wall'd, made a City, and endow'd with large Privileges, by Gerhard Archbiſhop of Spire, in 1443. It lies conveniently for commanding the adjacent Country, and therefore was well fortified by Biſhop Philip, in 1629, before the Civil Wars of Germany, and call'd by his own Name, inſtead of the ancient one, which was Udenheim. Frederic V. Elector Palatine, under whoſe Protection it was, ſuſpicious of the Biſhop's Deſigns, order'd him to deſiſt. The Biſhop refuſed, and alledg'd he had the Emperor's Placaert for what he did. Upon this the Elector rais'd Troops, and demoliſh'd the Fortifications; for which the Emperor ſummon'd him and his Confederates before the Chamber of Spire, and deſign'd to proceed againſt them with the utmoſt Severity. This was one of the Cauſes of the Civil Wars in Germany. The Spaniſh General Spinola repair'd the Fortifications, and made it almoſt impregnable in 1633. 'Twas taken the Year after by the Swedes, retaken by the Imperialiſts in 1636. It was taken from them by the French, under the Prince of Conde, who join'd the German Proteſtants in 1644. The French kept Poſſeſſion till 1676, by the Treaty of Munſter; and Lewis XIV. added to the Fortifications in 1666; ſo that they extended to the Rhine, which lies a Quarter of a League from the Town, and over the great Gate put up an inſolent Latin Inſcription; in Engliſh thus, Lewis XIV. the moſt Chriſtian King of France and Navarre, having finiſhed the Wars in both Germanys, and reſtored Peace every where, cauſed this Fortreſs to be ſtrengthen'd with theſe Ramparts and Walls, at his own Royal Charge, as a Monument of his own Valour, and of the Recovery of the German Liberty in 1666. He compleated it for the Terror of his Enemies, the Support of his Allies, and a Security to the French; being the ſecond Bulwark of France on this Side the Rhine, and a Key into Germany; the Loweſt in Situation, but not in Strength.

What he ſhuts, no Man opens; and what he opens, no Man ſhuts.

The Imperialiſts retook it in 1676, when the Emperor Leopold order'd that Inſcription to be razed out, and another Latin Inſcription to be put up in its ſtead; in Engliſh thus, " Leopold the Emperor, Cæſar, Pious, " Succeſsful, Auguſt, Conqueror and Triumpher, having undertaken a " neceſſary War for aſſiſting his Confederates, defending his Subjects, " curbing his Enemies, and reſtoring Peace every where, took this For- " treſs by Siege, that it might be a Monument to Poſterity of his " breaking off the Yoke of Slavery from the Neck of Common Liberty, " and reſtored it to Germany, unjuſtly taken from her in the Year of " our Salvation 1676.

" For the Terror of his Enemies, the Defence of his Subjects, and " the Security of Germany, he ſhut againſt the French, and open'd to " the Germans, this ſecond Bulwark of Germany on this Side the Rhine, " and Key to Germany, as a happy Omen of his like Succeſs in reco- " vering more.

" What the French ſhut, the Germans open.

In 1688, the French took it again, on the Birth-Day of the Dauphin, who commanded the Siege. The Garriſon made a good Reſiſtance, but the Governour was blamed for ſurrendring it ſooner than he needed to have done. It was reſtored to the Empire by the Treaty of Reſwic, in 1697, with the Fortifications on the Right ſide, but thoſe on the Left demoliſh'd.

5. Bruxhall, on the River Saltz, a large open Town, with a Caſtle, 9 Miles Eaſt from Philipsburg, and is the ordinary Reſidence of the Biſhop.

6. Altrip, once a fortified Place, which commanded a Paſs on the Rhine.

V. AL-

V. ALSACE or ELLSACE,

HAS the Palatinate on the North, Swisserland and Montbelliard on the South, Lorrain and France on the West, and the Circle of Swabia on the East. 'Tis 95 Miles from South to North, and 30 East and West. 'Tis divided into Upper and Lower, and subdivided into Bailiwicks, and other Jurisdictions. Some derive the Name from the River Ell or Ill, which runs thro' it, others from Edel-Sassen, as being the best Country formerly possess'd by the Saxons. 'Tis indeed a very rich and noble Province, and is well furnish'd with Necessaries, especially Corn and Wine, as any in the Empire. Their Hills are cover'd with Chesnut Groves, and they have rich Meadows, and fat Pasture, which makes their Butter and Cheese equal to the best in Holland.

In the Valley of Liberthal, near Geesbeach in this Country, there is a Cavern out of which flows an oily Liquor, which being distill'd and prepar'd according to Art, yields a Phlegm excellent against Putrefactions of the Lungs and Liver, and all foul Wounds and Ulcers, and the oily part yields an excellent Balsam against all inward and outward Corruptions, stinking Ulcers, hereditary Scurfs and Scabs, Apoplexies, Palsies, Consumptions, Giddiness, and Head-achs. It is also taken inwardly, with Succory-Water, against Corruptions of the Lungs. Lowthorp, Vol. II. of Philosoph. Transf. says, it is a kind of Petroleum, contains no other Mineral Juice but that of Sulphur, and seems to be thus distill'd by Nature under Ground.

'Twas taken from the ancient Saxons by the Kings of the Franks, and Hilderic, one of them, gave it to one of his Favourites, with the Title of a Dutchy. In 684, Charles Martel, Master of the French King's Houshold, re-possess'd it for that Crown. The Emperor Otho I. gave it to one of his Kindred, whom he made Landgrave of it. The Emperor Otho III. divided it into two Landgraviates, gave the Upper to the Counts of Hapsburg, and the Lower fell afterwards to the Counts of Ottingen, who sold it to the Bishop of Strasburg. It was during the German Civil Wars seiz'd by the French, and confirm'd to them by the Treaty of Westphalia, with a Reservation of the Privileges of the ten Imperial Towns. But Lewis XIV. of France extended his Jurisdiction over the whole, invaded their Liberties, and demanded what Sums he pleased from the Inhabitants. The Emperor Leopold complain'd of this to the Dyet, in 1680, adding, that the French King demanded a new Oath of Fidelity from the said ten Towns, as their Sovereign, had erected a superior Court of Judicature there, forbidding any Suits from thence to the Imperial Chamber at Spire, and obliged the Vassals and Nobles of Alsace to take a new Oath. Which the Dyet resolv'd was directly contrary to the Treaties of Munster and Nimeguen, and that the Emperor should demand Satisfaction of the French King for those Infractions. But Lewis XIV. did notwithstanding extend his Limits in Alsace, pretended to shew by old Writings that the whole Country belong'd formerly to his Crown, establish'd a Parliament there in 1693, and demanded Sums from the several Towns, which they were obliged to comply with. Alsace was confirm'd to the French by the Treaty of Reswic in 1698.

Places of Note are,

1. Strasburg, near the West side of the Rhine, at the Conflux of the Ill and Brensch, which fall into the Rhine, a little below the Town. It lies in Lat. 48. 46. Long. 8. 10. 45 Miles South-West from Philipsburg, and 35 North-East from Brisac. The Latins call it Argentoratum, Argentina, and Strasburgum. Cluverius derives the Name from Argenstraten, in German a bad Street. 'Tis an ancient City, was at first only a Fort, but at last became one of the most populous and best trading Towns in Germany. 'Twas made an Imperial Town by the Emperor Frederic II. and continued so till betray'd to the French in 1682. The Citizens were accounted rich and courteous, and had Houses fit to entertain Princes. It embraced the Reformation in 1529, and was before that the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Mentz. The Protestant Magistrates founded an University here in 1538, to which Ferdinand II. allowed great Privileges. The Government consisted formerly of two Councils, one of 71, in which there were 6 Burgomasters, 6 Stadtmasters, 15 call'd Patres Patriæ, and 13 chosen out of the Militia; the rest made up of other Citizens. The other was call'd the Great Council, and consisted of 300 Men, chosen by the several Companies of the City: But since the French took it, it has lost much of its Religion, Liberty, and Trade; whereas before, the Papists had only one little Church. Lewis XIV. restored Popery, with the Bishop to his See, and the Canons of the Cathedral, after they had been dispossess'd 152 Years. Ray says, that in his Time most of the Inhabitants were Lutherans, and the Papists had but one little Church, as before, which belong'd to the Commandery of Malta, and there were two Monasteries for Men, and two for Women. The titular Bishop had a Palace in the City, where he was not allowed to stay above three Days, but he might stay eight in an Inn. The Women here are generally beautiful, but their Dress seems fantastical to Strangers. Here are many stately Buildings, the most remarkable of which are, 1. The Arsenal, which was very well furnish'd with abundance of extraordinary large Cannon, and great Store of other Arms; but it was emptied by the French. 2. The Cathedral, reckon'd one of the Wonders of Germany, and was described at large in a Treatise writ on purpose by Schadæus, and printed there in 1617. The Steeple is reckon'd the highest in the Empire, and by some in the World. From the Foundation to the Top of the Spire it is reckon'd 575 Geometrical Feet. But what makes it most famous is its Clock, reckon'd by Mr. Boyle and others, as a chief Instance of the late great Improvement in Mechanicks. 'Twas finish'd in 1574, at the Charge of the Magistrates, by one Habricht, with the Advice of two learned Mathematicians, one of whom, call'd Dasipodius, publish'd a Treatise about this Clock. The first thing it presents to our View, is a Celestial Globe, with all the Motions of the Planets, fix'd Stars, &c. The next is a perpetual Almanack, in which the Day of the Month is pointed out by a Statue. The Hours are first crow'd by a gilt Cock, and then struck on a Bell by an Angel, near whom stands another, with an Hour-Glass in his Hand, which he turns as soon as the Clock is struck. The first Quarter is struck by a Child with an Apple; the second by a Youth with an Arrow; the third by a Man of full Age with a Tipstaff; and the fourth by an old Man with a Cane. On the Outside of the Church are shewn the true Increase and Decrease of the Moon, with the Course of the Sun thro' all the Signs of the Zodiac. Misson says, it much exceeds that of Lions, in the Variety and Curiosity of its Motions. The Steeple is curiously built of carv'd Stone, and so contriv'd that 'tis all open and pervious to the Light. It has 662 Steps from the Bottom to the Top, and at the Height of 640, there is a Place call'd the Crown, from whence there is a fine Prospect of the City and adjacent Country. The Cathedral is a noble Gothic Structure of about 400 Years old: The Roof is supported with great Pillars, at the Top of which there are Bass-reliefs, but so high that they are scarce visible to those that stand below. Dr. Burnet in his Travels says, one of them represents a Procession, in which a Hog carries the Pot of Holy Water, and Asses and Hogs in Priests Vestments follow, to make up the Train. There is also an Ass standing before the Altar, as if he were going to consecrate. One carries a Case with Reliques, and within it a Fox; and the Trains of all that form the Procession are born by Monkeys. There is also on the Pulpit a Nun cut in Wood lying along, and a Frier lying near her, with his Breviary open before him, and his Hand under her Coats. The Doctor supposed this to have been made by the Secular Clergy, whom the Monks did so much expose for their Ignorance formerly, and that in reprizal, when the Monks began to fall into Contempt, they made this Representation, to expose them to the Scorn of the World. This Cathedral is dedicated to the Virgin, and has a noble Pair of Brass Gates at the West end. The Doctor says, the Library here was very considerable, being in a great Room, very well contrived, divided into Closets all over the Body of the Room, which runs about them as a Gallery, and in those Closets were the Books of the several Faculties lodg'd apart: There was one for Manuscripts, in which there were several of considerable Antiquity. It was surprized in 1681, by Lewis XIVth's Order, in a time of Peace.

The chief Cause of its falling into his Hands, was a Quarrel betwixt Dietric and Obrecht, two of their Magistrates, which raised Factions on both Sides; but Dietric prevailing, got Obrecht beheaded, and was one of the chief who betrayed the Town to the French. Going afterwards to the Court of France, where he expected a Reward, he was, against the expres Words of the Capitulation when the Town surrender'd, confined to one of the Inland Provinces of France, on pretence that he would not change his Religion: So that Justice pursued him, in making him the first who suffer'd by the French Government. The Circumference of the Town was very large, and reckon'd 8 Miles many Years ago. It was also very well fortified with a double Wall and Ditch; so that it might easily have held out, had they not been betray'd, or if they had consented to receive a small Imperial Garrison of 500 Men, which was offer'd them when the Treachery was first suspected; but being jealous of their Liberties, they refused it, and chose rather to pay a Garrison of 3000 Men of their own, which exhausted the Revenue, and was much too weak to defend the City when the French came before it; whereas had they accepted the Emperor's Garrison, the French could not have attack'd it without making War upon the Empire. The French King enlarged the Fortifications so prodigiously, that Misson would not venture on describing them, but referr'd to the printed Platform for an Idea of them. He built also a Citadel betwixt the Town and the Rhine, and added a great Hornwork on the Bank, with several Forts on the Islands which secure the Bridge, and command the River. It was quitted to the French by the Treaty of Reswic, much against the Mind of the Protestant Princes and States of the Empire; but the Emperor's Plenipotentiaries being Bigots, were the less careful about it, because it was a Protestant City, and the French King was so proud of the Conquest, that he boasted in his Letter to the Archbishop of Paris, that Strasburg, the principal Rampart of the Empire, and of Heresy, was now reunited to his Crown for ever. It was capitulated by the Treaty, that the Protestants there should enjoy their ancient Liberties; but they were soon invaded, and had Popish Magistrates imposed upon them by the Interest of the Court, which occasioned many of them to leave the City, and has since diminished its Wealth and Beauty. The two Rivers which run thro' it, occasion abundance of Bridges, and they have many Wells in the Streets, with Pails of Brass handsomely turn'd like small Mortars, with which they draw up the Water.

2. Zabern, call'd Alsace Zabern, to distinguish it from others, 16 Miles North-West from Strasburg. 'Tis supposed to have been Antonin's Tabernæ, one of the Roman Garrisons, demolish'd by the ancient Germans, and rebuilt by Julian the Apostate. 'Tis defended by a strong Castle on a high Rock, thro' which there is only one narrow Passage cut out. 'Tis the usual Residence of the Bishop of Strasburg, who holds a Court here for determining the Causes of his Diocese. 'Tis noted for a Defeat of the Protestants near it, in 1525.

3. Phaltzburg, 8 Miles West from Zabern, on the Frontiers of Lorrain, to which it once belong'd. It lies at the Foot of a Mountain, is a small City, pretty well fortified, and has the Title of a Principality.

4. Lutzelstein, a Town and Castle with the Title of a County, on the Frontiers of Lorrain, 6 Miles North-East of Phaltzburg.

5. Haguenau, 12 Miles North from Strasburg, betwixt the Rivers Mottern and Zorna. 'Tis Imperial, encompassed with thick Woods, Corn Fields, and fruitful Vineyards. 'Twas given by the Emperor Charles IV. to the Dukes of Austria, in 1371. The Emperor Frederic I. built a Palace here, where he sometimes resided. It was the Seat of the supreme Court of Judicature for the Country. It was quitted to France by the Treaty of Munster, besieged in vain by the Germans in 1674, and most of it burnt by the French, upon the Approach of the Imperialists, in 1677. The Jesuits had in their College here an old Roman Battering-Ram, valuable for its Antiquity; but 'twas either destroy'd or remov'd by the French, who repossess'd it in 1703, and cast up Lines near it in 1704, which Prince Lewis of Baden forced, and took the Town in 1705. The French retook it in 1706.

6. Fort-Louis, 10 Miles South-East from Haguenau, and 15 North-East from Strasburg, lies on an Island in the Rhine, is small, but very strong, and had its Name from Lewis XIV. of France, who built it to command the Passage of that River. It was block'd up by the Imperialists in 1705, but in vain; nevertheless it was restored to them, and the Fortifications demolish'd, by the Treaty of Baden.

7. Weiſſenburg alias Croon-Weiſſenburg, 18 Miles North-East from Haguenau. 'Tis Imperial, and called Sebuſium by the Latines, as having been the Seat of the ancient Sebuſij. Dagobert of France preſented this City with a Crown of Silver gilt, of 24 Foot Diameter, and curious Workmanſhip; he granted them Privileges to hunt and fiſh for many Miles round: And the Emperor Charles IV. made the Abbot of this Place a Prince of the Empire, but it was ſecularized by Pope Alexander IV. and erected into a Provoſtſhip in 1496. The French took it in 1648, and kept it till 1704, when the Confederates took and raiſed Lines about it, which the French demoliſhed next Year, together with the Walls of the Town.

8. Lauterburg, a fortify'd Town on the Lauter, near its Conflux with the Rhine, 16 Miles North-East from Weiſſenberg. In 1694, Prince Lewis was obliged by the French to quit it, and they demoliſh'd the Confederate Lines, which extended hither from Weiſſenburg in 1706.

9. Landau, 15 Miles North from Weiſſenburg, on the Frontiers of the Palatinate, in which ſome Authors place it, but now reckon'd part of Alſace, becauſe under the Juriſdiction of Haguenau. It was quitted to the French by the Treaty of Munſter. The French brought moſt of the Plunder of the Palatinate hither in 1688, which was deſtroy'd by accidental Fire in 1689. The King of the Romans took it after an obſtinate Siege in 1702. The French retook it next Year, after having defeated the Allies near Spire. The Confederates took it again in 1704. It was quitted with its Dependencies to the French, by the Treaty of Baden.

10. Druſſenheim, 4 Miles South-East from Haguenau, had its Name from Druſus the Roman, who built a Fortreſs here to curb the Germans on this ſide the Rhine. 'Tis a fortify'd Town, was taken from the French by Prince Lewis of Baden in 1705, but retaken by them afterwards.

11. Molſheim, or Molſheim, a ſmall City, formerly Imperial, 8 Miles West from Strasburg, from whence the Canons retired hither after the Reformation. 'Twas almoſt ruined by the Imperialiſts in 1677.

12. Roſenheim, 10 Miles West from Strasburg, anciently Imperial, and one of the Ten included in the Juriſdiction of Haguenau, by Emperor Frederick II.

14. Schleſtat on the Ill, 23 Miles West from Strasburg, formerly Imperial; 'twas taken by the French, and quitted to them by the Treaty of Munſter; the Imperialiſts took it and demoliſh'd the Fortifications in 1673, but the French have ſince rebuilt and made it very ſtrong.

UPPER ALSACE, is the South Part of the Country, and contains,

1. Colmar, 38 Miles South-West of Strasburg, ſuppoſed to be built from the Ruins of Argentuaria, taken by the Emperor Gratian, in 378, and afterwards deſtroy'd by Attila the Hun. 'Tis the Capital of the Country, and the Seat of the Sovereign Council; 'twas formerly very Populous. The Duke of Saxe Weimar took it from the Imperialiſts in 1636. It was put into the Hands of the French in 1639, and quitted to them by the Treaties of Munſter and Nimeguen; but 'tis much ſhort of what it was.

2. Keiſerberg, a City upon the River Weils, 8 Miles North-West from Colmar; it lies in a Valley, and was formerly under the Juriſdiction of Haguenau.

3. Turcheim, on the River Fach, at the Foot of the Mountains of Vauge, formerly an Imperial Town.

SUNTGAU, the moſt Southerly Part of the Province, is a Mountainous Country, divided into 5 Bailiwicks, and contains,

1. Mulhauſen, the Ariabinum of the Ancients, an Imperial Town: The Inhabitants are Calviniſts, and made an Alliance with the Swiſſers in 1641, againſt the Nobility of the Neighbourhood, who envy'd their Freedom. It lies on the Ill, 20 Miles South-West from Colmar, and formerly belong'd to the Biſhop of Strasburg, whoſe Caſtle there they demoliſh'd during his Wars with the Count of Hapsburg.

2. Hunningen on the Rhine, about a Mile and a half North from Baſle. 'Twas built by Lewis XIV. of France, after the Peace of Nimeguen, to be a Curb on the Empire and the Swiſs Cantons. He made it exceeding ſtrong, with 5 Baſtions, beſides Tenailles, Ravelins, Counterſcarps, a Double Ditch, 2 large Hornworks, to the North and South, and a third on the other ſide the River: From the Ramparts there were Vaults to the Hornworks, and they had a Magazine ſo ſtrongly vaulted with Brick, that 'twas Proof againſt Bombs. But all the Fortifications were demoliſhed, and the Place was reſtored to the Empire by the Treaty of Baden, as it ought to have been by that of Reſwic.

3. Pfird or Ferette, 12 Miles South-West from Hunningen, and Capital of Suntgaw. 'Tis a pretty Town, lies near the Frontiers of Baſle, and is well fortified. 'Twas quitted to the French by the Treaty of Weſtphalia.

VI. The County of MONTBELLIARD.

SOme reckon it Part of the French Country; but as it belongs to the Duke of Wirtemberg, a Prince of the Empire, and gives a Title to a Branch of his Family, we chuſe to deſcribe it with the Upper Rhine Circle, tho' it depends on none. It lies West from Suntgaw, has Lorrain on the North, and the upper County of Burgundy on the West and South, is 22 Miles East and West, and 30 South and North: A very pleaſant Country, and the fartheſt Part of the Empire on this Side. The Inhabitants are a Mixture of French, Germans, and Swiſſers, and their Language the like. Some derive the Name from the pleaſant neighbouring Hills, and the fine Air. The Capital is Montbelliard, 20 Miles South-West from Betford, and 45 South-West from Baſle. 'Tis a handſome City on the Side of a Hill, with a good Citadel on the Top. The Streets are uniform and large, and in the Neighbourhood are fine Groves and Gardens, the chief of which is the Duke's, with all manner of rare Plants and Herbs, and a ſtately Summer-Houſe. The Inhabitants of the City are Calviniſts. The French poſſeſſed it during the Wars with the Empire, but reſtored it to the Duke by the Treaties of Reſwic and Baden.

VII. The Biſhoprick of BASLE.

HAS Suntgaw on the North, Valengin on the South, French County on the West, and the Canton of Baſle on the East. Is about 30 Miles East and West, and 33 South and North. It has Plenty of Corn, Wine, Fruit, Wood, Meadow and Paſture Grounds. The Lake of Biel yields ſtore of Fiſh called Hourlings, which they ſalt and ſell at good Rates.

Places of Note are,

1. Porentru, the Capital, 20 Miles West from Baſle. Here the Biſhop has a noble well fortified Caſtle, is Temporal Lord of the Town, as Prince of the Empire, but in Spirituals is Suffragan of Beſancon. The Theatines have a College here. This Biſhoprick is in Alliance with the Swiſſers, and the Inhabitants are part Papiſts and part Proteſtants. He has Part of the Fines, Tithes, and other Revenues; but the Cuſtoms belong to the City, which he can neither mortgage nor tax. They are to ſerve him in War at their own Charge, but are not obliged to march any farther than they can return at Night, unleſs he pay them. They are governed by two Councils, and the Mayor and Senate determine all criminal Cauſes; but when they treat of Matters belonging to the Republick, the Burgomaſter, choſen by both Councils, preſides; and the Mayor, with other Officers who hold of the Biſhop, muſt withdraw. The Inhabitants are Calviniſts, as are thoſe of the Valley of Immer, or Lordſhip of Largue, which is ſubject to them.

VIII. LORRAIN.

HAS Luxemburg and the Electorate of Treves on the North, the upper County of Burgundy and Montbelliard on the South, France on the West, and Alſace on the East. The greateſt Extent South and North is 120 Miles, and East and West 95. 'Twas formerly much larger, and comprehended Brabant, Luxemburg, the Dioceſes of Metz, Toul, Verdun, Treves, Strasburg, and all Ellſace.

The Air is temperate, the Soil fruitful in Corn, Wine, and Graſs; but ſome of it, mountainous and overgrown with Woods, part of the ancient Foreſt of Ardenne. The old Inhabitants were the Mediomatrici, mentioned by Roman Authors, who called the Country Belgium primum. The preſent Name came from Lotharius a French King, who poſſeſſed it; hence it was called Lotharingia, and by Contraction Lorrain. In the Mountains there are Mines of Silver, Copper, Lead, and Iron; the latter the richeſt, but the Duke's chief Revenue is from Salt-Springs. The Foreſts abound with Veniſon, Fowls, and Game of all Sorts; and the Rivers Maeſe, Moſelle, Sar, and Meurte, ſupply the People with Fiſh. 'Tis reckoned one of the moſt fertile and conſiderable Dutchies in Europe. It formerly depended ſometimes on France, and ſometimes on the Empire; and the Duke ſtill holds the Dutchy of Bar, of France, and the Marquiſate of Nomeny, and County of Blamont, of the Empire; but is otherwiſe independent; yet the Matricula reckons his Dominions part of the Upper Rhine Circle; and he furniſhes his Proportion of Men and Money for Defence of the Empire. The Country is divided into the Dutchy of Lorrain Proper, the Dutchy of Bar, and thoſe called French Lorrain and French Bar. Lorrain Proper is divided into the Bailiwicks of Nancy, Voſce or Vauge, Vaude Vrange, and the annexed Countries. One of 'em ſerves for an Arſenal, and the reſt for Stair-Caſes; and there is a curious Garden belonging to it. Here is alſo the Church of St. Epuras, with a fair Square before it, and the Franciſcan Church where the Dukes lie entombed. This Part of the City would be very pleaſant, but the Streets are too narrow. The new Town is much larger and better built, and was only a Suburb, till walled in the Cloſe of the 16th Century. It has a large Square, with ſtately Buildings, and opens to three large Streets. Here ſtands the Town-Houſe, the Courts of Judicature, the Jeſuits College, with ſeveral other Monaſteries and Churches. Here is alſo a Primate, who, tho' no Biſhop, is allowed to wear a Mitre. The City has four Gates, and was anciently well fortified. Charles the Hardy of Burgundy took it in 1475; the Duke retook it 1476: Charles beſieged it again in 1477, when he loſt both his Life and the Battle; the Particulars of which are engraven on a Copper-Plate in an old Chapel near the River Meurte. Lewis XIII. of France took it in 1633. Lewis XIV. made it very ſtrong, but demoliſhed the Fortifications, when he reſtored

The Duke of Lorrain added Profeſſors of Divinity, Law, and Phyſic; and Pope Gregory XIII. founded a Seminary for the Scots Nation. The City is fair, but open, had formerly a Caſtle on a neighbouring Hill, demoliſh'd by Lewis XIII. in 1635. Here is a Bridge over the Moſelle, with two Abbeys, and ſeveral ſtately Churches.

3. Hatton le Chatel, 17 Miles North-West from Pont a Mouſſon. 'Tis Capital of a ſmall Territory, with the Title of a Marquiſate.

IV. The BAILIWIC of CLEREMONT has,

1. The Capital of the ſame Name, on a Hill near the River Ayr, 14 Miles West from Verdun. It has the Title of a County, and was fortified, but diſmantled by the French in 1635.

2. Varenes, on the ſame River, about 8 Miles further North, had the ſame Fate.

The HISTORY of LORRAIN.

UNder the French Kings of the firſt Race, it was reckon'd part of the Kingdom of Auſtraſia, and under thoſe of the ſecond was Part of the Kingdom of Lorrain. After the Death of Lotharius, in 869, from whom it was call'd Lorrain, there being a Diſpute about the Succeſſion, the Kings of France and Germany divided it betwixt them. Charles the Simple reunited it to the Crown of France, in 915. It was afterwards conquer'd by the Emperor Henry the Fowler; and Otho II. gave the Lower Part, now call'd Brabant, to Charles youngeſt Son to K. Lewis IV. of France, on doing him Homage. The Emperor Henry III. upon the Failure of the Male Line in 1048, gave it to Gerhard of Alſace, the Founder of the preſent Family. His Male Line failing in 1430, his only Daughter married Rene of Anjou, King of Sicily. His Daughter Yoland was Mother to Rene II. Grandfather to Charles II. from whom came Charles III. ſo well known by his Misfortunes. Lewis XIII. of France made War upon him ſeveral times, and deprived him in 1634. He was reſtored by the Treaty of the Pyrenees, but invaded again by Lewis XIV. in 1664, on pretence of a Treaty. He oppoſed the Deſigns of the French, till 1665, that he died; but by a Treaty in 1679, it was to be reſtored to his Nephew Charles V. who had Princely Education in the Court of France, but was very unhappy in ſeveral Matches propoſed to him, being diſappointed by the Churliſhneſs of his Uncle, and the Treachery of the French King. This high-ſpirited Prince reſenting ſuch Treatment, made his Eſcape to the Emperor Leopold, who received him kindly, promiſed him Protection, and call'd him always Brother. The French King having demanded Marſal in Lorrain from his Uncle, this young Prince came Poſt from Vienna, and put himſelf into the Place to defend it; but was forced to quit it by his churliſh Uncle, who could not endure his being poſſeſs'd of any thing during his own Life. Prince Charles being falſely accuſed of reproachful Words againſt the French King, came on a ſudden to the Court to defend himſelf; but was deny'd Admittance, had a Guard ſet upon him, and was order'd to depart the Kingdom in a few Days; and was not ſuffered to conſummate his Marriage with Mademoiſelle de Nemours, to whom he was ſolemnly affianced with the French King's Conſent; but Lewis XIV. had no mind to part with his Dominions, prevailed with the Pope to diſſolve the Marriage-Contract, and gave the Lady to the Duke of Savoy. Prince Charles return'd again to Vienna, where the Emperor renew'd his Protection, and gave him a Regiment of Horſe, tho' he would not allow him to take the Field, becauſe he was not of Age; but the Duke ſtole privately from Court, and went to Hungary, where he contributed much to Montecuculi's Victory over the Turks, and gave ſuch Proofs of his Courage and Conduct, as aſtoniſh'd that General, and the other old Officers. He ſtood fair twice for the Crown of Poland, but was defeated by the Intrigues of Lewis XIV. who dreaded his having Power; and to prevent his Succeſſion, deſpoil'd his churliſh Uncle of all his Dominions; which ſo enraged Prince Charles, that he begg'd to be employ'd by the Emperor againſt the French, and did him very great Service againſt the famous Duke of Luxemburg, and other French Generals, till the Treaty of Nimeguen put an end to that War. The Emperor and his Allies inſiſted to have the Duke reſtored to his Dominions; but the French King would not grant it without keeping the Roads, that he might have a free Paſſage thro' Lorrain to Nancy, Alſace, Metz, Breſſe, and French County, which the generous Duke would not ſubmit to. The Emperor gave him his Siſter, the Queen Dowager of Poland in Marriage, and treated him with great Honour. He did him great Service afterwards againſt the French and the Turks, and died in his Way to Vienna in 1690, in the 48th Year of his Age, not without Suſpicion of Poiſon by the French Emiſſaries, leaving behind him the Character of a brave and conſummate General. He had four Children by the Emperor's Siſter, and his eldeſt Son Leopold, the preſent Duke, was reſtored to his Dominions by the Treaty of Reſwic.

IX. WETTE-

IX. WETTERAVIA,

IS the Name of the Country betwixt Heſſe and the Rhine, and alſo on the North-Weſt ſide of it, betwixt the Dutchies of Weſtphalia, Bergs, and the Electorate of Cologne. Sanſon reckons it a Part of Heſſe, becauſe that Family has a Share of it; but it contains ſeveral other Dominions, and chiefly thoſe of the illuſtrious Houſe of Naſſaw. Some derive the Name from the River Wetter, and others from the Wedrevii, its ancient Inhabitants. It abounds with Corn, Wine, and other Neceſſaries for Profit and Pleaſure, as much as moſt of the other Provinces on the Main and Rhine.

The Dominions here are,

I. The COUNTY of NASSAW, (in Latin Naſſovia or Naſgavia; both from the German Naſgaw, which ſignifies a wet or moiſt Country,) formerly of ſmall Extent, but in latter Ages became a conſiderable Principality, by the Acceſſion of the Counties of Weilburg, Idſtein, Wiſbaden, Dillenburg, Beilſtein, Gleilberg, Sigen, Hadamar, &c. and was comprehended under the general Name of Naſſaw Catzenellebogen; ſo that it had on the North, part of the Palatinate, and the Electorates of Treves, and Mentz on the South, the Landgraviate of Heſſe on the Eaſt, and the Dutchy of Bergs on the Weſt; but ſo intermix'd with other Dominions, that 'tis hard to give its Dimenſions, only in general 'tis about 60 Miles South and North, and 50 South-Eaſt and North-Weſt.

The Counties or Diſtricts into which 'tis divided, are very remarkable for their different Soil and Product: That Part call'd Weſterwald, towards the Dutchy of Bergs, has plenty of fertile Paſtures, breeds large Cattel, and yields Store of Cheeſe, as good as any in Holland. In Diets, which is hard and hilly, there is Store of Veniſon, good Corn, and ſome Wine. In Siegen and Dillenberg, there is good Mines of Iron, Lead, Copper, &c. and at Fraudenberg, they make Steel enough almoſt to furniſh the whole Empire. The Country was erected into a Principality by the Emperor Frederic II. in 1653.

Places of Note are,

1. Naſſaw, which gives Name to the whole, a ſmall City, with a Caſtle, on the River Lohn, 12 Miles South-Eaſt of Coblentz. 'Twas the uſual Seat of the eldeſt Branch of this illuſtrious Family, and lies on a Hill in the middle of a marſhy Country.

2. Diets or Dieſt, on the ſame River, 9 Miles North-Eaſt of Naſſaw, has 2 fine Caſtles on Rocks, is Capital of its County, gives Title to a Branch of the Family, and had formerly a Collegiate Church, ſubject to the Elector of Treves; but ſince the Reformation its Revenues have been applied to the Univerſity of Herborn.

3. Embs, in the ſame County, noted for its Bath, which ſome German Phyſicians prefer to thoſe of Wiſbaden. Weigelius publiſh'd an Account of 'em at Francfort in 1627, and ſays, they are built ſquare; the Water uſed by Day is drawn off by Night, and ſucceeded by freſh next Morning. They are impregnated with Vitriol, Allum, Iron, Sulphur, and are good againſt Weakneſſes in the Thighs, Arms, Legs, and other Parts; give preſent Eaſe in the Gout and Cramp; help Shortneſs of Breath, Obſtructions in the Breaſt and Stomach, and all Diſeaſes curable by bathing.

4. Wisbaden, 15 Miles South-Eaſt of Diets, belongs to the Branch of Naſſaw-Saarbruck, is Capital of its County, and famous for its Baths, whence comes its Name. They are impregnated with Sulphur, Allum, Salt, and Salt-petre; but the firſt has the Aſcendant, which makes 'em the hotteſt of any in theſe Parts of Europe, next to thoſe of Carelsbad in Bohemia, and ſome in the Black Foreſt. Several German Phyſicians have writ of their Vertues. 'Tis a large Town, and by old Ruins about it, ſeems to have been a Roman Garriſon, and, as ſome think, the Mattium of the Antients, which others aſcribe to Marpurg.

5. Idſtein, 10 Miles North Eaſt of Wisbaden, Capital of its County, belonging alſo to Naſſaw-Saarbruck.

6. Hadamar, on the Elſe, 20 Miles North of Mentz, near the Borders of Treves, gives Title of Prince to a Branch of the Family of Naſſaw.

7. Sigen, thought to be Ptolomy's Segodunum, 35 Miles North from Naſſaw, a ſmall City on a River of the ſame Name, with a Caſtle upon a Rock. 'Tis defended by a ſtrong Wall, and regular Fortifications; is Capital of its County, and gives Title to a Branch of the Family of Naſſaw. There is a noble Iron Mine near the Town, with Furnaces, &c. for cleanſing and working the Mettal. In 1559, the Prince's Padagogium was brought hither from Herborn; ſo that it was ſoon frequented by Students from Denmark, Poland, and all Parts of the Empire; and for their Encouragement, there was added an Academy for inſtructing Youth in Martial Exerciſes.

8 Dillenburg, 18 Miles South-Eaſt of Siegen, Capital of its County, is the Reſidence of that Branch of the Family of Naſſaw, has a good Trade, and two Annual Fairs for Cattel and Wool. Here is a ſtrong Caſtle on the Top of a Hill, and an Arſenal well provided with Arms and Ammunition for ſome Thouſands of Horſe and Foot, and the Jawbone of a monſtrous Fiſh taken near Catwick, well worth a Traveller's Sight.

9. Herborn, 15 Miles South-Eaſt of Siegen, noted for a famous Univerſity, which has bred many great Proteſtant Divines. 'Tis maintained by the Revenues of Monaſteries that were diſſolv'd at the Reformation. In the Caſtle there is a handſome Library, well furniſh'd with printed Books in all Faculties. The Town has a good Trade in Cotton and Woollen Cloth.

10. Bilſtein, 16 Miles North-Eaſt from Siegen, among Rocky Hills; 'tis Capital of its County, gives Title to a Branch of the Family of Naſſaw, and has a Caſtle and Church worth a Traveller's View.

11. Weilburg, 12 Miles South of Herborn, a large Town, Capital of its County, and belongs to the Family of Naſſaw-Saarbruck.

12. Solms, 10 Miles South-Eaſt of Herborn, Capital of its County, and gives Title to a Branch of the Family of Naſſaw, divided into thoſe of Braunfelt, Lich, and Greffenſtein. The uſual Reſidence of the Count is in the Caſtle of Braunfelt

13. Weſterburg, 16 Miles Weſt from Herborn, a large Town, with a good Caſtle, Capital of its County. Their Counts deſcended from the Family of Naſſaw, are divided into the Branches of Weſterburg and Limange.

14. Lich, on the Weter, in the South-Eaſt Parts of the County of Solms, gives Title to a Branch of that Family which has Poſſeſſions in Luſatia.

The Hiſtory of the Family of NASSAW.

THE Atlas Hiſtorique has a large Genealogy of it, and ſays, it yields to none in the Empire for Antiquity; that the Counts have Memoirs which ſhew that two Brothers, Counts of Lebarten, followed Cæſar in the Conqueſt of Gaul; who for their Service gave them Part of the French County, whence they carry in their Arms, a Lion, Or, in a Field, Azure, ſprinkled with Tickets, Or. One of thoſe Princes built the Town of Naſſaw, which gave Title to the Family and Principality, and became a conſiderable City, as may ſtill be perceived from the Ruins of publick Ways, Cirques, Aquaducts, Triumphal Arches, &c. about it. Some derive the Name and Family from Naſua, one of the German Commanders mentioned by Cæſar, de Bello Gallico, Lib. I. Sect. 37. But leaving doubtful Antiquity, The firſt of theſe Princes, whoſe Succeſſion can be exactly diſtinguiſhed, was, William with the ſhort Noſe, who lived ſome Time after Charlemain; his Succeſſors matched with the greateſt Families of the Empire, and one of them married Emperor Henry the Third's Niece, from whence came Adolph Count of Naſſaw, choſen Emperor in 1292. From Henry II. of the Family called the Rich, and his Wife, the Heireſs of Naſſaw-Guelderland, in 1254, came the Branch of Dillenburg, from which deſcended both the Branches of Naſſaw-Orange, and they ended in the Glorious William the Third of Great Britain; and from the Branch of Dietz, came the preſent Branch of Naſſaw-Friezland, which next to that of Orange, has been the moſt Illuſtrious. All Hiſtorians own, that the Family in general has been productive of Great Men. Cluverius calls them the Ornaments of Wetteravia, and the Glory and Support of the United Provinces. Dr. Nicholſon, Biſhop of Londonderry, in his Account of Germany in Pitts's Atlas, obſerves, That in all Ages they have been great Aſſertors of the Peoples Liberty, and ready to aſſiſt them againſt Tyrants. They have ever enjoyed as large Privileges as any other Princes of the Empire; never owned Subjection to any but the Emperor, and had the Prerogative of coining Gold and Silver in their own Name.

Their Titles are, Princes of Naſſaw; Counts of Catzenellobogen, Vianen, Dietz, Limpurg, and Bronkhorſt; Lords of Bielſtein, &c. The preſent Branches, according to the Atlas Hiſtorique, are, Naſſaw, Wisbaden, Weilburg, Idſtein, Otweiller, Saarbruck, Uſingen, Dittenburg, Siegen, Dietz, Hadamar, and Schaumberg, all Princes, beſides that of Frieſland, and others in the Netherlands, who have great Eſtates, tho' they be not Sovereigns.

II. The County of HANAW, about 40 Miles long and 45 broad, has Fulda on the North-Weſt, and Franconia on the Eaſt. The Capital of the ſame Name, lies 10 Miles Eaſt of Frankfort am-Main, on the River Kintz, which divides it into the old and new Town, both well fortified. The Situation is pleaſant, the Houſes well built, and the Streets regular and uniform. It had formerly Counts of its own, and belongs now to the Family of Lichtenberg, who have Poſſeſſions in Lower Alſace and Suntgaw. 'Twas twice taken by the Swedes in 1631, and the Imperialiſts took it by Stratagem in 1658. 'Tis much frequented by Merchants of ſeveral Nations, and particularly by the Dutch and French, who have Churches and the Liberty of Religion.

III. BUDINGEN County, about 20 Miles long and 9 broad, North from Hanaw.

Budingen, the Capital, 7 Miles North from Hanaw, is a neat City, with a fine Caſtle. It is alſo called the County of Upper Iſemberg; and its Counts formerly reſided at Ronenberg, a noble old Caſtle, near the Imperial Town of Gelnhauſen.

IV. FRANKFORT am-Main, Lat. 50. Lon. 9. 18 Miles Eaſt of Mentz, and 10 Weſt of Hanaw. Some derive the Name from Francus, a Leader of the Franci, who they ſay founded it; but others, with more Reaſon, from a Ford on the Main, which divides it into two Parts; that on the North Side, is called Frankfort; and that on the South, Saxenhauſen, from the Saxons its Founders. They are joined by a noble Stone Bridge of 14 Arches, betwixt two Towers of 400 Paces long, and both under the ſame Magiſtrates. The Town is well fortified by Walls, 11 Baſtions, large deep Ditches, Counterſcarps, and other Outworks, which tho' not exactly after the modern Way, is made up by the Situation of the City, in a low Ground. Ray, Monconys, Miſſon, and others, ſay 'tis large, populous, rich, and has a great Trade by the Main and Rhine. They have two annual Fairs in March and September, for all Commodities, but eſpecially Books, from all Parts of Europe; ſo that there is greater Choice here than in any Town in Chriſtendom, eſpecially during three Weeks, but at other Times the Bookſellers have little to do. There is an Annual Catalogue printed of ſuch as are brought hither. Here are alſo three Annual Marts, and the Names of the foreign Merchants are writ over their Doors; but when the Marts are done, moſt of their Shops are ſhut up. Moſt of the Streets are large, except two or three, which are full of Merchants Shops. The Houſes are built of red Stone, or of Wood plaiſtered and painted, or covered with Slates. Here is alſo a ſpacious Horſe-Market, where great Numbers are annually ſold. The City is Imperial, governed by a Prætor, 12 Burgomaſters, 14 Eſchevins or Aldermen, and 42 Counſellors. The Senate chuſes annually 2 Burgomaſters out of their own Number, and is divided into 3 Branches; the firſt is the Eſchevins; the ſecond the Literati or Learned, out of which the firſt Bench is ſupplied when a Vacancy happens; the third is of Tradeſmen, who never riſe to any other Dignity. The Jews here are numerous, confined to their own Quarter during the Night, diſtinguiſhed from the other Inhabitants by a Piece of yellow Cloth, and are forced to carry Water in Caſe of Fire, and do other ſorts of Drudgery. The Magiſtrates and moſt of the People are Lutherans, and have 5 Churches. The Papiſts are allowed their Worſhip, have the Cathedral of St Bartholomew, a Convent for Men, and another for Women, and ſome Chapels belonging to Commandaries, but muſt make no Proceſſions. The Jews have a Synagogue, but the Calviniſts have have their Church at Bockenheim, in the County of Hanaw, a League from the Town, and are obliged to marry and baptize in the Lutheran Churches. Here are several noble Fountains, and three particularly in the great Market-place. The chief Structures are first St. Bartholomew's Church, of stately Architecture; 'twas built by Pepin Father to Charlemain, and the Emperor is elected here. 2. The Town-house which is not extraordinary. The Hall where the Emperor, Electors, and Princes meet in Council after Election, has only a Throne, and and Benches covered with green Cloth, and some indifferent Pictures. The great Hall where they have their Entertainment is not very regular. There is a great Square before the House, where a whole Ox is roasted: At the Entertainment one of the Electors comes in Person for a Piece of Beef, which he carries to the Emperor; another carries him a Glass of Wine which runs from the Fountain during the Solemnity; a third carries him a Measure of Oats from the same Square; and a fourth distributes Medals here at the Coronation. Here is a Vestry where the Electors are shut up during the Election, and Count Papenheim stands before the Door with his Sword drawn to prevent their coming out till they have finished. The Original of the Golden Bull is kept in an Apartment here, which is hung with Tapestry, and has no other Furniture but some Elbow-Chairs of black Velvet, and a large Table with a green Carpet. 3. Braunfeld, formerly the Emperor's Palace, and now the Mansion-House of the Teutonic Knights, where Debtors have a Sanctuary for 14 Days. 4. The Port or Harbour. 5. The Citadel or Fortress of Saxenhausen. 6. The Houses of several Noblemen.

This City was one of the first which demanded the free Exercise of their Religion, according to Luther's Doctrine; which being refused in 1522, they deposed their Magistrates, and chose others. In 1530, the Augsburg Confession was established here. It was also famous for being an Asylum to the English Protestants who fled hither from the Popish Queen Mary's Persecution. The English Church built here during that Time is much decayed, and that called the English House is now made a Storehouse. A Difference arose among those Exiles about the Liturgy and Ceremonies used in the Time of Edward VI. which the first who settled here laid aside, and followed the Order of Switzerland and Geneva; but others who came afterwards from England adhering to their own Order, the Peace of the Congregation was thereupon broke; those for the English Liturgy and Ceremonies, accused Mr. Knox, the great Scots Reformer, of Disloyalty to the House of Austria, because he had preached against the Persecution of the Protestants by that Family, and writ a Book against Q. Mary, wherein he impugned Government by Women; so that he was obliged to withdraw, and the Schism that began in the Church of England in Edward the Sixth's Reign, about Ceremonies, Vestments, &c. was thereby heightened; of which the Reader may see an Account in a Book intituled, The Troubles of Frankfort, Fuller's Church-History, and Fox's Book of Martyrs.

The Citizens of Frankfort are generally neat in their Apparel, and with the Inhabitants of their Territory have the Character of a stout hardy People. They entered into the League of Smalcald in 1530, against the Tyranny and Oppression of the House of Austria; but were forced to open their Gates to the Imperialists in 1547, and to receive the Interim next Year. Gustavus-Adolphus King of Sweden entered this City without Opposition in 1630, and the Swedes kept it till 1634. Above 500 Houses were destroyed by a sudden Fire in 1719.

The Territory subject to the Magistrates lies on both Sides the Main, is about 11 Miles South and North, and 14 East and West. 'Tis covered with Woods and Vineyards, and has little arable Ground, so that the Inhabitants live chiefly by planting Vineyards, and making Wine. There are divers Mineral Springs and Baths belonging to this City, in which Women bath themselves when going to be married, and a Month after Child-bearing.

V. Friedburg, 12 Miles North of Frankfort, a rich Imperial City, at the Foot of a great Ridge of Hills. It has many large Privileges granted by Frederic II. and other Emperors who used to reside here some Months in a Year. The Annual Lent-Fair was transferred from hence to Frankfort, at the Request of the Merchants, for the better conveying their Goods by Water; in lieu of which, this Place had four annual Fairs, which keep up its Trade.

Other Towns in this Country are,

1. Butzbach, at the Foot of the same Ridge of Hills, a neat small City, the Seat of the ancient Buccinobantes. Near the Road betwixt this Town and Giessen, there are Ruins of old Walls and Forts, where sometimes are found ancient Medals and Coins, which shew Attila and his Huns to have encamped in these Parts. Here is a fair Castle belonging formerly to the Counts of Solms, with a good Library and Manuscripts. The Vineyards on the neighbouring Hills yield a strong palatable Wine, and they had Mines of Lead and Iron, which are now failed.

2. Mintzenberg, a small Town in the Neighbourhood, which formerly gave Title to a Count, whose Castle is now in Ruins, and his Lands divided among the neighbouring Counts, since the Extinction of his Family in 1250.

3. Hain, an old Town, formerly Part of Mintzenberg, but now of Hanaw, remarkable for the Ruins of a Roman Tower.

4. Hindstadt or Elosstadt, a rich Augustine Monastery founded in 1075. It stands in a fruitful Soil, and during the Civil Wars of Germany, was the Head Quarter of the Imperialists and Bavarians, and furnished the Commanders with Lodgings and Provisions.

VI. Hassia or Hesse.

Some comprehend Wetteravia and the Dominions of the Family of Nassaw under this Name; but modern Geographers contract and bound it on the South with Part of the Electorate of Treves, Mentz, and the Palatinate; on the North with Part of Westphalia and Lower Saxony; on the West, by Part of Westphalia and the Dominions of Nassaw; and on the East, by Part of Upper Saxony and the Circle of Franconia. 'Tis so indented with other Dominions, that we can't well give its Dimensions; but the greatest Extent South-West and North-East is 122 Miles, and the greatest Breadth East and West, 80. La Forrest says, 'twas Part of the Kingdom of Thuringia, and included that Country during the Race of the first French Kings, and was made a Landgraviate in 1130, by the Emperor Lotharius, who created his Son Lewis Landgrave, which Selden and he agree is the same with a Comes Provincialis, of whom there were two Sorts made by Charlemain, one to defend the Country by Arms, and another to follow the Court, and administer Justice to the Subjects, who were therefore called Comites, in German, Grave, and the Epithet Land was added by way of Eminence to those who had the largest Dominions, who were those of Thuringia, Hesse when separated, Alsace, and Lutchenberg, but the Family of Hesse now only retains the Title. The Country is divided into the Upper and Lower.

Lower Hesse, contains the Landgraviate of Hesse Cassel, and the Counties of Waldeck and Harsfelt.

The Country abounds with Corn and Wine, especially on the Rhine, Lech and Weser its chief Rivers. The Air is cold, but wholesome. In the North Parts are many Woods and Forests full of Game. In the Mountains are Mines of Copper, Lead, and other Metals, which sometimes yield great Profit. And in the Valleys, Flocks of Sheep, that bear the best Wool in Germany, which used to be bought by our English Merchants, and made into Cloth here, or their Factories abroad. The People are numerous and warlike, disciplined by the younger Sons of the Family, who are made Captains of their Districts, and paid by the Landgrave. Their Language is a Mixture of High and Low-Dutch.

Places of Note are,

1. Cassel, the Metropolis, in the North Part of the Country, Lat. 51. 22. Lon. 9. 58. 33 Miles South-East of Paderborn, and 88 North-East of Frankfort. Supposed to have been Drusus's Castellum Cattorum. It lies in a pleasant fruitful Plain, on the Banks of the River Falda, over which there is a fine Stone-Bridge. 'Tis fortified by strong Walls, and broad Ditches, and defended by one of the strongest Citadels in Germany; and tho the other Fortifications be not exactly regular, they are good; so that during the Civil Wars the Imperialists did not attack the City, because they thought it impregnable. The Burghers Houses were formerly mean, but now the City is large and well built. The adjacent Fields are covered with Flocks of Sheep, and tho' Wool be their chief Trade, it is not so great as formerly, because the Inhabitants do not apply themselves to manufacture it, but suffer Strangers to carry away the Profit of making and dressing the Cloth. The Streets are large, full of Shops, and they have several fine Markets, with Provisions of all Sorts, so that they live well. Here is a Gymnasium, which has had Professors of Note, but of late 'tis eclipsed by the University of Marpurg. The Landgrave's Palace is separated from the Town, built of hewn-Stone, beautiful, and very fine within; 'tis well contrived, has many noble Apartments, a large Court in the middle; is well fortified, and has Apartments in the Ramparts to lodge the Family without the Reach of Bombs, in Case of a Siege. Here are two Riding Houses for managing the Great Horse; and very fine Gardens, with curious Fountains. The Arsenal is a large Structure of hewn Stone, has Arms for 25000 Men, and in the lower Room 200 Cannon, among them several 64 Pounders, and many that were taken from the Imperialists and Spaniards during the Civil Wars. Here are also Muskets that have Darts which spring out from under the Rammer as soon as the Piece is discharged. From the Palace there is a noble Prospect over the adjacent Country, with a View of 60 Towns, the least of which have 300 Houses, a thing not to be matched in the Empire. In the Palace there is a Library well furnished with Books, Manuscripts, and Curiosities, too large to be insisted on. The Cathedral, dedicated to St. Martin, is capable of holding 4000 People, and has the Monuments of the Landgraves in Brass, Copper, and Marble, of curious Workmanship, and Inscriptions with brief Histories of the entombed Princes. Here is a Church in the Palace for the Devotion of the Court, and four more in the City, with two Ministers each, except the Soldiers Church, which has but one.

2. Waldeck, 20 Miles South-East from Cassel, on the Borders of Westphalia; Capital of its County. About 24 Miles long, and 24 broad, one of the richest in the Empire, for its Extent, having Plenty of Corn, Wine, Sheep, Venison, and Mines of Iron and Coal. 'Tis under Protection of the Landgrave, to whom the Counts do Homage. Some derive their Pedigree from Wittekind Count of Swachsburg, in Charlemain's Time; and others, from Count Henry, who slew Frederic Duke of Brunswic, Emperor Elect, at Fritzlar in 1000. This Family has produced very great Men, one of them, Wolgand II. was so much esteemed for his Gravity, Courage, and Prudence, that he was chosen President of the Conference at Ratisbon in 1556. Another of them was a famous General under our King William III. They have also the County of Pyrmont in Westphalia.

3. Wildungen, in the same County, a pleasant well built City, divided into Old and New by two Hills, on which 'tis situated, with fine Gardens betwixt them, stock'd with all manner of choice Fruit, and beautified with curious Waterworks. 'Tis noted for good Beer, in which they have a great Trade; and for Springs of Mineral Waters, which taste much of Vitriol, and will make one drunk as soon as the strongest Wine: They corrode all sorts of Stone, and therefore are transported in wooden Vessels; their Virtues have been described by Wolfius and Ellenbergen, two German Physicians.

4. Corbach, in the same County, 12 Miles North-West of Waldeck. Anciently an Imperial Town, and noted for a Mine of Gold in the Neighbourhood, now decay'd. It had many great Privileges. Its chief Trade is in Beer, equal to that of Wildungen. It has also an University well endowed, which has bred several considerable Men.

5. Eysenberg, on a Hill near Corbach, where the Count has a Princely Seat. In this Hill there are Mines of several Sorts, but chiefly of Iron, which occasions its Name. Here lay the Gold Mine of which the Count has several Rings and Vessels, which are kept in his Repository, as great Rarities. At Jodelsheim, about two Miles hence, there is a Silver Mine; and at Twisten, in the Neighbourhood, rich Copper Mines.

6. Frankenberg or Frankenau, 15 Miles South-West of Waldeck. Capital of its County, on the River Eder. 'Tis said to have been founded by Theodorick King of France, in 520. Mines of Silver and Copper were discovered here in 1590, but turned to no great Account.

7. Hæxfeld or Hartzfeld, 18 Miles South-West of Frankenberg, Capital of its County, a large Town with a good Castle, formerly the Seat of its Counts, who were made Princes of the Empire by Ferdinand II. and possess'd Lands in several other Provinces.

8. Fritzlar, belonging to the Elector of Mentz, and described in the Account of his Dominions.

9. Hirschfeld, on the Fulda, 35 Miles South-East of Cassel, a small neat City, with the Title of a Principality. Here is an Abbey of as noble a Structure as any in the Empire. 'Tis built on an Arch of 17 Pillars, of one entire Stone each, was founded by Pepin, endow'd by Charlemain, and under the Inspection of Albinus his Preceptor, whose Monument is still in the Church. Since their last Abbot died, in 1606, the Revenues have been kept by a Branch of the Family of Hesse as Administrator, and it was secularized by the Treaty of Munster. Its District is about 12 Miles long, and 12 broad.

10. Rodenburg, 10 Miles North of Hirschfeld, gives Title to a Branch of the Family, has a noble Collegiate Church, and a Quarry of Alabaster.

11. Ziegenheim, on the Schwalm, 22 Miles West of Hirschfeld, Capital of its County, united to the Landgrave's Domain in 1453.

12. Wetzlar, near the Mouth of the Dille, 8 Miles South-West of Solms, and 26 North of Francfort. 'Tis Imperial and ancient, suffer'd much by Fire in 1643, and is now the Seat of the Imperial Chamber, since Spires was destroyed by the French. The Great Church makes a good Figure at a Distance. The Prince of Hesse-Darmstadt has the Provostship, and names the Mayor of the Town.

13. Alsfeld, 13 Miles East of Marpurg, an ancient Town, formerly the Metropolis of the Country, and had Power of Life and Death. The chief Magistrate has a Sword carried before him. They lost their Records by a Fire some Ages ago, in remembrance of which they have an Inscription over the Gate of their noble Townhouse, signifying that it is the best way to forget things irrecoverably lost. 'Twas the first Town in Hesse that embraced the Reformation.

UPPER HESSE contains the Landgraviate of Hesse-Darmstadt, and the Counties of Catzenellebogen, Wied, Sayn, Lower Eyssenburg, and Runkel.

Places of Note are,

1. Marpurg, 50 Miles South-West of Cassel; 'tis reckon'd the second Town of the Landgraviate, and the Seat of the supreme Court of Judicature for the Subjects of both Landgraves: It consists of a President, and six Assessors, who finally determine all Causes. It lies pleasantly on the River Lohn, belongs to the Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, is well built, and fortified, and the Citadel on a neighbouring Hill, is one of the best in Germany. There is a fine Prospect from the Bridge of the neighbouring Vineyards and Hills. 'Twas formerly Imperial, and supposed to be the old Castrum Mattiacorum. The Great Church is a stately Fabrick, and has noble Monuments, of which Chytræus has given a large Account in his Deliciæ Itinerum. The University founded here in 1426, is one of the most considerable in the Empire. The Professors are Calvinists.

2. Giessen, 14 Miles South from Marpurg, a large old Town, has strong Walls, and regular Fortifications, and a Magazine with Arms and Ammunition for a considerable Army. They had an University, which began to flourish upon the Desertion of Lutheranism by the Professors of Marpurg; but Landgrave Lewis, who was a Calvinist, put a Stop to the University here by an Edict, and recall'd the Students to Marpurg. The Burghers live chiefly by making, dressing, and selling Cloth. The Sovereignty of the Town is divided betwixt the Landgraves of Hesse-Cassel and Darmstadt.

3. Grunneberg or Gromberg, a small Town, 24 Miles East of Giessen, remarkable for an extraordinary high Bridge that joins two Mountains: it belongs to Hesse-Darmstadt.

4. Ammeneberg, belonging to Mentz, and described in that Electorate.

5. Nidden, a large open Town, with the Title of a County, belonging to Hesse-Darmstadt.

6. The Town of Catzenellebogen, 6 Miles South-East from Nassaw, a small Town, but Capital of its County, the Seat of the ancient Catti, which is 20 Miles East and West, and 10 South and North. It came to the Family of Hesse by Marriage, in 1479, was long claimed by the House of Nassaw, and adjudged to 'em by the Emperor Charles V. in 1548, but resigned to the Landgrave of Hesse at the Treaty of Passaw, for 600000 Crowns; yet the House of Nassaw still retains the Title. 'Tis divided into Upper and Lower, most of the latter belongs to Hesse-Cassel, and the rest to the Branches of Darmstadt and Rhinfeld.

Places of Note are,

1. Darmstadt, in the Upper County of Catzenellebogen, 13 Miles South from Francfort. 'Tis the usual Seat of the Landgraves of Hesse-Darmstadt, who have a noble Palace and spacious Gardens here, that abound with all sorts of common and foreign Fruits, and yield annually Store of rich Wines. The Town is small, but makes a goodly Appearance, most of the Houses being high, and of hewn Stone. At a Tilting here in 1403, betwixt the Hessian and Franconian Nobility, upon a Challenge, 9 of the former, and 17 of the latter were kill'd, which made the Germans afterwards lay those Exercises aside. 'Twas well fortified, yet surprized in 1622, by Frederic V. Elector Palatine, and Count Mansfeld, who took Landgrave Lewis and his two Sons, for adhering to the Emperor's Interest; but the Matter was accommodated by our King James I. who being then about the Spanish Match for his Son, was angry with his Son-in-law the Elector, for taking Arms against the House of Austria. The French ruined the Castle and Fortifications during the late Wars. From hence to Heidleburg there is a Road call'd the Bergstraes or Hillstreet, 40 Miles long, planted with Trees on both sides.

2. Geraw, a small neat City on the River Schwartsbach, 7 Miles North-West of Darmstadt, subject to that Prince.

3. St. Goar or Guer, on the West side of the Rhine, 15 Miles South of Coblentz, a small City.

4. Rhinfeld, which gives Title of Prince to a Branch of the Family of Hesse, famous for a strong Castle built in 1255, on the Top of a Mountain, a little North of St. Goar, which it defends. The French attack'd it in vain in 1692. 'Twas long in Possession of the Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, as most capable to defend it, but contrary to Promi adjudged from him by the Aulic Chamber, and the Elector Palatine and other Troops sent against him to make him surrender it to t Prince of Hesse-Rhinfeld, which he did in 1718: but that Prince havi failed in performing some things to the Landgrave, he obliged him i it by his Troops in 1719, threatning otherwise to retake Rhinfeld.

5. Goarhausen, a Town on the other side the Rhine, 3 Miles further Ea

6. Wied, a large open Town, 5 Miles East from Andernach, on th other side the River, Capital of its County, which had formerly Lord of its own.

7. Sayn, another large open Town, 5 Miles South-East of Wied, Ca pital also of a small County, claimed by the See of Cologne since 1636 that their last Count died.

8. Isemburg, 5 Miles North of Wied, Capital of the Lower Count of Isenburg, with a good Castle, belonging to the Prince of that Name whose Family is divided into the Branches of Offenbach and Budingen.

9. Runckel, a strong wall'd Town on the River Lohn, in a pleasan rich Country, which produces Corn, Wine, good Apples, Iron, some Silver, Marble, and Free-stone.

10. Eschwige, near the Confines of Thuringia, 25 Miles South-East of Hesse-Cassel, built by Charlemain, destroyed by the Huns, and rebuilt in great Splendor by the Emperor Henry II. It lies on the Banks of the Werra, by which the Inhabitants send Timber and Coals, the great Commodities of the Country, to the Weser, &c.

11. Smalkalden, 25 Miles South-East of Hirschfeld; some place it in Franconia, but it belongs to the Landgrave of Hesse; has Iron Mines belonging to it, which employ 400 Smiths, who make Iron Ware, that is carried all over the Empire. Steel is also made and tempered at the neighbouring Village of Stahlberg; but 'tis most noted for a League made here in 1537, by the Protestant Princes, for Defence of their Religion and Liberty, against Charles V.

12. Schwalbach, 12 Miles North-East of Mentz, and 26 West of Francfort, noted for its much frequented Medicinal Springs. The first is Weinbrunn; the Waters have a tart Taste, are clear like Christal, and impregnated with Vitriol, Salt, Oker, Sulphur, Allum, and Salt-petre, in some Cases laxative, and in others restringent; are good against Defluxions of Rheum, Head-ach, Hardness of Hearing, bleer'd Eyes, and Hypochondriac Distempers. 2. Lindenbrunnen, whose Waters are so spirituous, that no Glass will hold 'em; but if close stopp'd in a well-temper'd Earthen Vessel, they taste much stronger of the Vitriol. 3. Kockbrunn, the only Water in the Village sweet enough for Cookery. 4. Augustbrunn, of the same Qualities with the Weinbrunn. 5. The Grindbrunn, excellent against Itch, Scabs, and the Venereal Disease. 6. Rottelbrunn, good against Convulsions, and Fits of the Mother. Several German Physicians have treated of their Qualities, and there was a Treatise which described their Qualities and Operations exactly, entitled, Responsa Medica de Probatione Facultate & Usu acidularum & fontium Swalbac, &c. Printed at Francfort, 1631. There are two more call'd Podelbrunnen, which differ from the rest, and all other Mineral Waters in Europe. The Steams of Vitriol, Sulphur, and other Minerals rise from 'em with such Force, as is ready to choak any one that holds his Head over them. They are so cold, that People cool their Wine by 'em in Summer. One of 'em throws out its Waters now and then with such Force, that it empties itself in a few Minutes, and does not recover its usual Quantity in some Days. This is ascribed to a violent Eruption of subterraneous Spirits, which sometimes burst out like a Whirlwind. In a neighbouring Cellar, the Steams are so strong, that they suffocate Dogs when let down in it; but if speedily exposed to the fresh Air, they recover.

Fulda, near the East side of the Country, 20 Miles South from Hirschfeld; 'tis Metropolis of a Country, formerly a Wilderness of Beech-trees, but now improved to a rich Soil. Some reckon it independent, because the Abbot of the Benedictines here, is a Prince of the Empire, sits at the Emperor's Feet in the General Dyet, and depends immediately on the Pope, to whom he pays Tribute after his Election. He is also first Chaplain to the Empress. The Monastery was founded by St. Boniface, in 744, and richly endow'd by several Emperors. The Great Church, dedicated to Boniface, is a stately Pile of ancient Architecture. The Monks have three Manuscripts writ by Boniface, one of them the New Testament compleat, the second the Evangelists apart, and the third upon the Trinity, in a Character much different from any now in Use. They had formerly a rich Library, furnish'd with Manuscripts of all sorts, and perused by the learned Flacius, but much embezzled during the Civil Wars. There are some Market-Towns, and others, belonging to the Abbot's Jurisdiction, but not described.

The History of the Family of HESSE.

THE Atlas Historique derives this Family from Pepin of France, Son to Carloman, who lived in the Time of Chilperic of France, about the Year 580, and was the first Duke of Brabant. After some Descents, Charlemain succeeded to that Dutchy; and after many Successions, Henry III. of Brabant, descended from Charlemain, came to the Landgraviate of Hesse, by marrying the Heiress, who was descended of the Family of Lorrain, and by Marriages from the Emperor Conrad III. and the Families of Saxony and the Palatinate. Herman, one of the Landgraves, was chose Emperor in 1246. Lewis the Mild, another of 'em, was also chose Emperor in 1440, but refused it; upon which some observe, that had he accepted it, his Family might still have enjoy'd the Title; for they have all of 'em been Princes of great Spirit and Courage. We can only mention the most remarkable of 'em, and therefore come to Philip the Magnanimous, a Prince of such Valour and Conduct, that tho' the Emperor Charles V. was his Enemy, he had the greatest Sway of any Prince in the Empire. In 1520, he defeated Ferdinand King of the Romans, and restored the Duke of Wirtemberg to his Dominions. He was the chief Procurer of the Protestant League at Smalcald in 1530, for Defence of their Religion and Liberties. In 1545, he defended Goslar, defeated the Duke of Brunswic, who sided with the Emperor, and seiz'd his Dutchy. In 1548, he united most of the Princes and Imperial Cities in Germany, in a League offensive and defensive, against Charles V. but that War proved unsuccessful; the Duke of Saxony, his Confederate, was taken by the Imperialists, as he himself was at the Battel of Muhlberg, and had very hard Terms imposed posed upon him by the Emperor, who, after signing the Treaty, did, contrary to his own Promise, and the Law of Nations, detain him Prisoner 5 Years, upon the mis-spelling of a Word in the Agreement, to which the Writer had been brib'd. He was at last rescued by Duke Maurice of Saxony, and his own Son William in 1552; after which he lived peaceably at home, but sent Forces to assist the Protestants of France. He was the first who introduced the Augsburg Confession into his Dominions, and had a great hand in quelling the Enthusiastical Boors in Munster. 'Twas observed of him, that he was born in his Father's Camp, and that this was look'd upon as a Presage of his being a great Warrior; which proved true. He died in 1567, and when open'd, it was found he had three Cods; which explain'd the reason of his being so much addicted to the Marriage-Bed, that his Lady, who was very honest, could not bear it; and therefore with her Consent, and the Advice of Divines, he was allow'd a Concubine. His Son William IV. call'd the Wise, succeeded. He was a Prince of great Valour, Constancy, Piety, and Learning. He introduced Calvinism into his Dominions, and died in 1592. His Son Maurice succeeded, was learned and valiant, but unsuccessful in his War against the Emperor Ferdinand II. He died in 1632, and his Son William V. succeeded. He was a brave Prince, but reduced to great Streights by the Emperor. He died in 1637, and left the Administration to his Widow Amalia-Elizabeth of Heinaw, the Heroine of her Age, who supported the Government by Arms, got her Son's Dominions enlarged by the Treaty of Westphalia, and died in 1651. Her Son William VI. call'd the Good, succeeded, married a Daughter of Brandenburg, and was a great Supporter of Calvinism. His Daughter Charlotte married Christian V. of Denmark. He died in 1663, and was succeeded by his Son Charles, the present Landgrave, a very brave Prince. He was one of the Confederate Generals on the Rhine, and obliged the French to raise the Siege of Rhinfeld in 1692. His Son the Hereditary Prince has signalized himself as Lieutenant-General under the Dutch in Flanders, Germany, and Italy. He married Princess Ulrica, now Queen of Sweden, and is Generalissimo of all her Forces by Sea and Land.

The other Branches of this Family are, 1. That of Darmstadt, who are Lutherans, and little inferior in Power to the eldest; they came from a younger Son to Philip the Magnanimous. 2. That of Hombourg, a Branch of the Family of Darmstadt. 3. That of Rhinfeld, descended from Landgrave Maurice above-mentioned, and are Papists. 4. That of Manfried-Rhinfeld. And, 5. That of Rottenburg, both Branches of Rhinfeld. 6. The Prince of Hirschfeld, Brother to the Landgrave of Hesse, a Calvinist, and has a numerous Family. 7. The Prince of Philipstadt, a Calvinist.

VI. The Circle of FRANCONIA,

HAS the Electorate of the Rhine on the West, the Landgraviate of Hesse on the North-West, the Dominions of Saxony on the North and North-East, the Circle of Swabia on the South, and of Bavaria on the South and East. The greatest Extent from West to East is about 180 Miles, and from South to North 80; but much indented both ways. The Name is said to be derived from the Franks, its ancient Inhabitants, who had their chief Seat here; but consisted of several Nations of Germany that leagued together for their mutual Defence against the Romans, and took the general Name of Franks, as fighting for Liberty. Others say, the Name came from an Army of French, who being call'd in during a Civil War, settled here, and gave Name to the Country; but La Forrest thinks it was the Seat of the Franks before they settled in Gaul. 'Tis encompassed with Woods and Mountains, but has no Hills of any extraordinary Height. Here are several Forests and Parks, well stock'd with Deer, Wild Boars, and other sort of Game. Most of the Hills, especially along the Rivers Main and Tauber, are cover'd with Vines, which yield as rich and as good a Wine as the best Rhenish. Other Parts abound with Corn, and other Fruit. Here are likewise many large Fields of Liquorice, Saffron, &c. The Dominion in this Country belonging to the Elector of Mentz, is already described in that Electorate. We shall take the rest in the Course of the Map, as follows:

I. ERPACH County lies East from the Palatinate, on which it borders, is 28 Miles long, and near 20 broad. It has fruitful Valleys, Meadows, Vineyards, and all sorts of Corn. The People are strong, valiant, and ingenious, and furnish other Parts of Germany with Iron Stoves, which is their chief Manufacture. Their Count is a Prince of the Empire, and derives his Pedigree from Eginard, Secretary to Charlemain. The Capital of the same Name, is in the South Part of the Country, about 16 Miles North-East from Heidleburg, and is but small. They have a Custom here, and in some other neighbouring Towns, to forfeit the Estates of those who die above 25 Years, and never attempted to marry.

II. WERTHEIM County lies East from Erpach, is about 20 Miles where longest, and 15 where broadest. The Capital of the same Name is 30 Miles North-East from Erpach, and about 18 North-West from Wurtzburg. It stands in a fruitful Soil, and good Air, was formerly considerable, but suffered much by the Endeavours of their Count to restore Popery, which they opposed, and continue zealous Lutherans. It lies at the Conflux of the Tauber and Main, and has a good Trade in Wine. The County abounds with Corn, Wine, Pastures, Wild Fowl, and Venison. Several Villages depend on the Town, but the most remarkable is that of Niclashausen, noted for the Birth and the Education of John Behem, a Boor, who fancied he saw strange Apparitions, that the Virgin Mary gave him a Visit, and told him, that the People of Wertheim owed no Obedience to any Magistrate, but were as free and unbounded as the Rivers that water their Country. By this Means he deluded a great many People, who followed him as his Proselytes; but they were soon dispersed by the Bishop of Wurtzburg's Troops, who seized Behem, and he was burnt for a Heretic at Wurtzburg, in 1476.

III. The Bishoprick of WURTZBURG, lies East of Wertheim, is about 70 Miles long, and 30 where broadest. The Capital is of the same Name, on the River Main. Lat. 49. 50. Lon. 10. $\frac{1}{2}$. 'Tis the Metropolis of Franconia, and has its Name from the great Variety of Herbs which grow in and about the Place. The Situation is pleasant, and the Town is divided into two Parts by the Main, over which there is a Bridge. There are Streams which run thro' most of the Streets. The City is very ancient: Some alledge it was founded before our Saviour's Incarnation; and others, 236 Years after. The Bishoprick is said to have been founded in the 8th Century by Boniface Archbishop of Mentz, and it continues Suffragan to that See. The Bishop is a Prince of the Empire, and in token of his Temporal Jurisdiction, has a Sword laid before him on the Altar where he says Mass: When he appears otherwise in Publick it is carried before him, and has this Motto, denoting both Jurisdictions, Herbipolis sola judicat Ense & Stola. He has 400 Villages and Towns under him, and is able to raise 15000 Men. He is called Duke of Franconia; and has above 100000 Crowns Revenue. His Chapter consists of 24 Capitular Canons, and 29 Domiciled: They must all prove themselves Noble by Descent; and when a new one is admitted, he must walk thro' the rest, drawn up into a Lane, and each of them lashes him with a Whip, on the Back. The Bishop's stately Palace, or Castle, is strong by Nature and Art, stands on a high Hill beyond the River; and there is a Pump with three Branches, that raises the Water from the River to the Top of the Castle, which is 200 Fathom. The Castle, which is the strongest in Franconia, is joined to the Town by a Wall, flank'd with four Bastions. In his Cellars are above 60 great Tuns of curious Workmanship, the least of which contains near 140 Hogsheads, and they pretend to have Wine there of above 100 Years old. There is a good Arsenal in the Castle, well provided with Cannon and Arms; and in one of the Courts a noble Fountain. The Fortifications of the City are not very regular, but the Town large and fair. Their Bridge is of Stone, and 300 Paces in Length. The Cathedral is ancient, but not magnificent. Here is an Hospital, accounted one of the richest and statelist in Europe: And an University founded in 1043; the Buildings are regular, uniform, and equal to most of the new Colleges in Oxford. This City was formerly Imperial, but reduced by one of its Bishops, since which it has lost its Privileges.

The Order removed hither from Prussia, when Albert of Brandenburg, their Great Master, embraced the Reformation, as was mentioned in the Account of Prussia. They still possess 11 Commanderies in the Empire; and the Commanders have a Right to chuse their Great Master, who is by his Place a Prince of the Empire. The Knights, before their Admission, must prove the Nobility of their Extraction by 16 Descents, both by Father and Mother. Some of them are Papists, some Lutherans, and other Calvinists, who possess Commanderies in Protestant Countries. The Seat of the Grand Master is at Mergentheim, in this Country, about 22 Miles South-West from Wurtzburg: 'Tis a small City on the River Tauber, and is also called Mariendal and Margenthall.

V. The Marquisate of ANSPACH, ONSPACH, or ONOLSBAC, in the South Part of Franconia, has the Domain of the Teutonic Order, and the Bishoprick of Wurtzburg on the West, Part of the Bishoprick of Bamberg on the North and East, and the Circle of Swabia on the South. It is so intermixed with other Dominions, that it is hard to give its Dimensions. 'Tis 60 Miles from South to North, and 70 where broadest, from East to West. The Country is fine and fruitful: Has its Name from the Capital, on the Frontiers of the Bishoprick of Aichstat, 20 Miles South from Nuremberg, and 45 South-East from Wurtzburg. 'Tis a neat well fortified Town, and has a noble Palace or Castle, where the Prince resides. He is a Branch of the great Family of Brandenburg, or Prussia, descended from the Elector John-George, who came to the Government in 1561. The Prince of this Country is a Lutheran, and Brother to Her Royal Highness the present Princess of Wales, and one of the most considerable Princes of Germany under the Degree of an Elector. The Country is divided into seven Bailiwicks.

2. Crailsheim, on the River Jaxt, Capital of a considerable Bailiwick.

VI. The Bishoprick of BAMBERG, lies East from that of Wurtzburg, and North and East from Anspach. 'Tis 50 Miles from South to North, and about 40 where broadest from East to West. The Country abounds with rich Fruits and Plants, particularly Corn, Wine, Saffron, Liquorice, and Prunes. The Capital, which gives it Name, lies 40 Miles North-East from Wurtzburg, on the River Regnitz. Lat. 50. Lon. 11. $\frac{1}{2}$. It has been the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Mentz, since 1106. 'Twas formerly Imperial, afterwards governed by Counts of its own, but now subject to the Bishop, who is Prince of the Empire, and has several Mannors in Carinthia, and Royalties elsewhere; so that that the King of Bohemia, the Electors of Bavaria, and Brandenburg, hold several Lordships of this See. La Forreſt says, he is the first Biſhop of the Empire, and depends immediately on the Pope. His Subjects are Papiſts, and cannot appeal from his Deciſions. He is joynt Director of the Circle, with the Marquis of Brandenburg-Culembach. He has 60000 Crowns per Ann. and has a Right to receive the Oaths which the Secular Electors ſwear to the Emperor, for the Offices of the Houſhold. This City was the Reſidence of the Emperors, when they had no Hereditary Dominions in the Empire, and then the Biſhop lived at Villach in Carinthia. The Cathedral is one of the moſt Magnificent in the Empire, has a lofty Steeple, and four noble Spires. The Chapter conſiſts of 20 Capitular Canons, and 15 Domicil'd. The Jeſuits have a ſtately College here. The Biſhop's Palace lies on an Iſland in the River, is very magnificent, and has fine Gardens, Orchards, and Hedges. The City is handſome and large, the River runs thro' the middle of it, and ſoon after falls into the Main. VIII. The Marquiſate of CULLEMBACH, lies at the North-Eaſt Part of the Circle; has Saxony on the North and Eaſt, Bamberg on the Weſt, and Nuremberg on the South. Tis about 50 Miles from South to North, but much contracted on the South, and about 25 where broadeſt, from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Twas formerly Part of the Burgraviate of Nuremberg, and is divided betwixt two famous Branches of the Houſe of Brandenburg, named Culembach, and Bareith, who are Princes of the Empire, and have each a Vote in the Dyet. The former is Joint-Director of the Circle, with the Biſhop of Bamberg.

Culembach, the Metropolis, lies near the Conflux of two Rivers, 30 Miles North-Eaſt from Bamberg, and is the Seat of the Prince, and defended by the Caſtle of Blaſſenburg.

BAREITH, the other Diviſion of this Country, is named from its Capital, which lies about 15 Miles South-Eaſt from Culembach. 'Tis a pleaſant City defended by a fine Caſtle, where the Prince reſides. Theſe two Princes are both Lutherans, and with the Prince of Anſpach, all of the Family of Brandenburg, are a great Security to the Proteſtant Intereſt in this Country.

IX. SCHWARTZENBURG County, lies betwixt the Marquiſate of Anſpach on the South, and the Biſhoprick of Bamberg on the North. 'Tis about 20 Miles long, and 15 broad. 2. Hohenkottenham, the chief Town of the Barony, about 6 Miles South of Schwartzenburg.

X. HENNEBERG County, lies in the North Part of the Circle, on the Frontiers of Saxony. 'Tis 35 Miles long, and 15 broad, populous and fruitful, tho' it has many Mountains and Woods. Henneberg Town and Caſtle, lies 35 Miles North-Eaſt from Bamberg.

Other Towns here are,

1. Maimungen, a neat ſmall City, 10 Miles North of Henneberg.

2. Schluſingen, 20 Miles North-Eaſt of Henneberg, noted for a Meeting of the Electoral College in 1623, when the Emperor Ferdinand II. transferred the Electoral Dignity from the Palatine Family to that of Bavaria. 'Twas the Reſidence of the Princes of the Country, whoſe Monuments are ſtill to be ſeen in the Great Church. Here is a College founded by the laſt Count of the ancient Family, who were Princes of the Empire. It belongs to the Houſe of Saxony, and is by ſome placed in the Circle of Upper Saxony, and made Part of Saxe Naumberg, but the Matricula places it in this Circle.

XI. COBURG Dutchy, tho' by ſome placed in the Circle of Upper-Saxony, is by the Matricula placed in this; and is now poſſeſſed by the Duke of Saxe Gotha, alias Coburg, together with the County of Henneberg. They are about 40 Miles from South to North, and 28 from Eaſt to Weſt.

Coburg, the Capital, is 25 Miles North-Eaſt from Bamberg, and the like Diſtance South-Eaſt from Henneberg. 'Tis one of the ancienteſt Towns in Germany, thought to be Ptolomy's Melochabus, is pretty large, defended by the Duke's ſtrong Caſtle on a neighbouring Hill. Luther lay ſome Time concealed here, where he compoſed ſeveral Hymns, which are devoutly ſung by his Followers. Here is a College with 11 Profeſſors of ſeveral Faculties, founded by the Elector of Saxony in 1602, who alſo built the Caſtle or Palace.

XII. HOHENLOE or HOHACH County, lies in the South Part of this Circle, Weſt from the Marquiſate of Anſpach. 'Tis 27 Miles long and 15 broad. The Name comes from an ancient Caſtle, the Seat of its Counts, about 15 Miles North-Eaſt from Hailbron. This Family is divided into ſeveral Branches, and poſſeſſes the County of Gleichen in Thuringia.

XIII. LEWENSTEIN County, lies South-Weſt from Hohenloe; is about 10 Miles long, and 7 broad, and has its Name from a Caſtle, 10 Miles South-Weſt from Hohenloe, and 5 South-Eaſt from Hailbron.

XIV. LIMBURG County, lies South from Lewenſtein; is about 12 Miles broad, and 12 long. It has its Name from a Caſtle 22 Miles Weſt from Anſpach.

XV. HALLE, and its Juriſdiction, lies North and North-Eaſt from Limburg, is about 12 Miles long, and 57 broad.

Halle, the Capital, is 15 Miles South-Eaſt from Hohenloe, noted for Salt-Works.

Theſe four laſt are by ſome placed in the Circle of Swabia, but the Matricula ſets them here.

XVI. Aichſtadt Biſhoprick, lies South-Eaſt from the Marquiſate of Anſpach, is 45 Miles where longeſt, and about 15 where broadeſt. The Country is fruitful. The Biſhop is Suffragan of Mentz, a Prince of the Empire, and has 50000 Crowns per Ann. It was founded by Boniface Archbiſhop of Mentz, at the ſame time with Wurtzburg, and has been richly endowed ſince by ſeveral Emperors and Princes.

Aichſtadt, the Capital, is 30 Miles South-Eaſt from Anſpach. Here is a fine Cathedral, to which one of their Biſhops preſented a fine Pyxis for the Sacrament, of pure Gold, in form of a Sun: It weighs 40 Marks, and is adorned with 350 Diamonds, 1400 fine Pearls, 250 Rubies, and ſeveral other precious Stones. The Chapter conſiſts of 16 Capitular Canons, and 15 Domiciled. The Town was taken by a French Detachment in 1704.

Other Places here, are,

1. Wilebaldsburg, a Fortreſs not far from Aichſtadt, where the Biſhop ſometimes reſides.

2. Bichſtet, on the River Altmur, which is another Fortreſs.

The Imperial Towns in this Circle, are,

1. Nuremberg, on the Regnitz, Lat. 49.$\frac{1}{4}$. Lon. 12. 50 Miles Eaſt from Anſpach. 'Tis thought to be Ptolomy's Segodunum by ſome, but rather the Caſtrum Noricum of the Ancients, the Caſtle here being built by the Norici, who inhabited this Country. 'Tis famous in the Hiſtory of Charlemain, as one of the Towns which chiefly oppoſed his Conqueſts. It became afterwards a Neſt of Plunderers; ſo that 'twas ſeveral times attacked and almoſt deſtroyed by ſucceeding Emperors, who put a ſtrong Garriſon into the Caſtle, commanded by the Burgrave or Governour of the City, to curb thoſe Robbers; and ſtill they maintain a Troop of Horſe to ſecure the Roads thro' the Woods. The People who came for the Protection of this Caſtle, firſt lived about it in Tents, and then built Houſes, ſo that by Degrees it grew up to a City; and the firſt Inhabitants were for moſt part Smiths, and other Artificers in Iron. La Forreſt, Dr. Brown, and Mr. Miſſon, give the following Account of it.

'Twas formerly ſubject to the Dukes of Brandenburg, as Burgraves: They purchaſed their Liberty from that Family in 1477. But one of thoſe Princes attempting to recover his Superiority, it occaſioned a long War, the Nuremburgers being aſſiſted by other Imperial Towns, till a Peace was concluded in 1552. They embraced the Augsburg Confeſſion in 1530; allow no Papiſt the Freedom of their City, and but half of a Church for Worſhip. The Calviniſts go a League out of Town to a Church in the Marquiſate of Anſpach, but the Lutheran Miniſters in the Town baptize their Children. The Jews live in a Village without the City, muſt pay ſomething when they come in, and are not allowed to lodge here. This Town ſubmitted to Guſtavus-Adolphus King of Sweden in 1631, and he twice obliged the Imperialiſts to break up from before it afterwards.

'Tis one of the largeſt, fineſt, and richeſt Trading Cities in Germany, is about 7 Miles round, defended by a large Ditch, and high tripple Stone Walls, with 365 Towers upon them, 180 of which are of hewn Stone, mounted with 300 Cannon, and ſome of them very good Fortreſſes. Here are 550 Streets and Allies, moſt of the Houſes are of Free-ſtone, ſix or ſeven Stories high, many of them painted without and have gilded Balls on the Top. The Streets are large, the Buildings uniform; they have 10 Market-Places regularly built; 13 publick Baths, and vaſt Numbers of Conduits and Draw-wells; their chief Fountain is adorned with many Braſs Statues, one of Neptune on the Top, three Yards and a half high, and others of Nymphs and Sea-Horſes, larger than the Life. The River Regnitz is let in by 12 large Arches under the Walls, runs thro' the middle of the City, and is let out by 12 other Arches. It ſupplies the Ditch and Town with Water, and upon the Stream there is a great Number of Mills for Corn, Paper, Iron, and making Sword-Blades, Knives, and other Iron Wares, with a great deal of Diſpatch and Art. There are 60 Mills within the Walls, and many of them for grinding Corn. Here are 11 Stone Bridges over the River, one of which of one Arch is reckoned a Wonder in Architecture.

The Inhabitants are about 60000, yet have but two Pariſh-Churches, properly ſo called; the firſt is that of St. Sebald, a Saxon or Daniſh Prince, who converted this Country: Here is a Braſs Monument erected to his Memory, with noble antique Figures. The Sextons have a rare Collection of Reliques, which they ſhew only to Travellers of Quality. The ſecond is St. Laurence's Church, which is chiefly frequented by the Nobility and principal Families: It has two Steeples in the Front, and is very large. The chief of the Citizens have their Tombs and Eſcutcheons here, and there is a Regiſter of all that have been buried here, for 500 Years, with the Time and Manner of their Death.

The Caſtle where the Emperor reſides, when here, is well fortified, and lies on the Top of an high Hill, from whence there is a fair Proſpect of the City. It is built after the old Roman Faſhion, and has many curious Pictures. Here is a Well in the Rock 1600 Foot deep, and the Chain of the Buckets that draw up the Water, is 3000 Weight: And near the Well there is the Armour of a Sorcerer who they fancy leaped his Horſe from it over the Town-Ditch. In one of the Halls of the Caſtle there are 4 Corinthian Pillars 45 Foot high each: And the Stadthouſe is a ſtately Fabrick, much larger than that of Augsburg, and as well adorned within. The Council-Chamber, Dining-Room, and other Apartments, are well painted and gilt, and adorned with curious Pictures. The Floor of the Senate-Houſe is paved with gilt Stones intermixed intermix'd with others of different Colours, ſo that it exceeds that of Amſterdam; and in one of the Chambers, there is the Pictures of all the Princes, and moſt other great Perſons in Germany, who have been entertained there.

The Arſenal is one of the beſt furniſhed in Germany, and has Arms for 10000 Men. Miſſon ſays, he ſaw a ſmall Cannon there of a Foot long, that carried 500 Paces, and two great Guns which carried Stone Bullets of 400 Pound Weight, and required but 50 Pound of Powder to charge each. The City has 6 Gates, each of them defended by a large Tower, and look towards as many different Roads. The publick Library is very large, conſiſts of 4 Galleries, and contains 20000 Volumes, many of them of an antique Bind, and among others a Greek Manuſcript of the Goſpels, of 900 Years ſtanding, with the Prayers and Hymns formerly uſed in the Greek Church, and the Characters much different from thoſe now in Uſe. They have a Treatiſe of Predeſtination, ſaid to be printed at Spire, and another printed by Fauſtus at Mentz, in 1459, with an Advertiſement that it was not writ, but printed by a new Invention; ſo that there muſt be a Miſtake in the Date of the former. In the publick Cellar, which is 250 Paces long, they have generally 20000 middle-ſized Tuns full of Wine.

This City, among many other Privileges, has the keeping of moſt of the Imperial Ornaments made uſe of at the Emperor's Coronation; as, 1. Charlemain's Crown, about which there is a Mitre enriched with a vaſt Number of Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, and Pearl, and on the Front a Croſs of Diamonds of great Value. 2. His Dalmatic Robe, embroider'd with large Pearl. 3. The Golden Globe. 4. His Sword. 5. His Golden Sceptre. 6. The Imperial Cloak, embroider'd with Eagles, and border'd with large Emeralds, Diamonds, Saphires, and Chryſolites. 7. The Buskins, cover'd with Plates of Gold. 8. The Gloves, embroider'd with precious Stones.

The chief Nobility and Gentry of this City conſiſts of 28 Families, call'd Patricians, out of whom they chuſe their ſupreme Magiſtrates. Their Common-Council is 42, 13 of whom are Burgomaſters, 13 Aldermen, and the reſt Elders. One Burgomaſter and Alderman have the Superiority by Turns, for the Space of a Lunar Month. Ordinary Matters are publickly debated and determined by a Common-Council; but raiſing of Troops and Taxes, and other Matters of great Moment, are referred to a ſelect Committee of Eight, who call three or four Civilians for Advice; and they are allowed Salaries for their Attendance on ſuch Occaſions; but no Lawyers are allowed any Vote or Share in the Adminiſtration. In extraordinary Caſes there is a great Council of 400, choſen out of all the Callings and Trades in the City, and they annually chuſe the Members of the other Courts. The Magiſtrates never allow Mechanics to meet publickly, except at Worſhip and Burials, for fear of Tumults. The Senators are generally ſo prudent, that it is a common Proverb in the Country, as prudent as a Senator of Nuremberg. Here is a College, with Profeſſors of all Faculties.

In a word, this City is the Glory of Germany; and, conſidering its great Diſtance from the Sea, is the Wonder of Europe, for Trade and Number of Inhabitants. No City in the World has a greater Number of curious Workmen in Metal of all ſorts, Ivory, Wood, &c. nor affords ſo good a Pennyworth of Artificial Commodities. They are particularly famous for Clockwork. Monconys ſays, there was a Coach made here for the King of Denmark, with Springs, ſo as it would go forward or backward, and turn about and make a League per Hour without Horſes, being managed by two Boys within: And the ſame Workmen made for the Dauphin of France a Repreſentation of a Squadron of Horſe skirmiſhing with a Battalion of Foot, both of 'em marching and firing by Springwork.

The ſame Author mentions a Cabinet of Rarities here, belonging to one Viati, a private Citizen, with ſuch Collections of Curioſities of Art and Nature, from moſt Places of the World, as was aſtoniſhing in a Man of his Rank. Among 'em were many excellent Pictures and Medals, and a Wind-Gun, that would do Execution at a diſtance, without any Noiſe.

The Territory of this City is 20 Miles long, and 20 broad, and they have 480 Boroughs and Villages under their Juriſdiction. The Towns of Note belonging to them are,

1. Altorf, 15 Miles South-Eaſt of it: the City attempted to conquer it from the Palatine Family; but being worſted, they bought it, and the Senate of Nuremberg founded an Univerſity here in 1578, which is well frequented, has bred many conſiderable Men, and leſſened the Number of Students in the College of Nuremberg. Here is an excellent Phyſic-Garden, well ſtock'd with Plants; an Anatomy Theatre, with Skeletons, and other Curioſities belonging to that Science; and in their Library there is Youngerman's Collection of Plants, writ by his own Hand.

2. Laffen, upon the Regnitz, 10 Miles North-Eaſt from Nuremberg, is a handſome Town; and they have ſeveral others that they conquer'd in the Upper Palatinate, Anno 1504.

The ſecond Imperial Town in this Circle is Weiſſemberg, in the Biſhoprick of Aichſtat, 10 Miles North from that City, and 28 South of Nuremberg, conſiderable only for its Rank.

The third Imperial Town is Rottenburg, on the Tauber, in the Marquiſate of Anſpach, 18 Miles Weſt of the Town of Anſpach. 'Tis a very pretty trading City, was formerly ſubject to the Counts of Caſſel, but has been free ſince 1191. 'Twas ſeized by the Elector of Bavaria in 1702, but retaken by the Imperialiſts in 1703.

The fourth Imperial Town is Winſcheim, in the ſame Marquiſate, 17 Miles North-Eaſt of Rottenburg, on the River Aiſch, conſiderable only for its Rank.

The fifth Imperial Town is Schweinfurt, on the Main, in the Biſhoprick of Wurtzburg, 22 Miles North-Eaſt of that City, and 25 Weſt from Bamberg. It has been free ſince 1388. The Latins called it Trajectus Suevorum, becauſe the Suevi or Swabians paſſed the Main here. Some will have it to be founded 217 Years before Chriſt. 'Tis neither large nor populous, but well fortified.

VII. The Circle of SWABIA

HAS the Palatinate of the Rhine and Franconia on the North, Swiſſerland and Part of Tirol on the South, the Rhine on the Weſt, and Bavaria on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 115 Miles South and North, and 140 where longeſt, Eaſt and Weſt.

The greateſt Part of Germany was called Swabia by the Romans, becauſe the Suevi were the moſt conſiderable People they knew, and extended their Dominions furtheſt in that Country; but it was afterwards appropriated to this Circle. 'Twas alſo called Allemannia, which is now common to all Germany. Plutarch ſays, the Suevi were the beſt Warriors in Germany. The modern Swabians retain the Courage of their Anceſtors, are capable of all the Fatigues of War, but charged with being much addicted to Venery.

The Country abounds with Corn, Wine, Flax, Woods, and Foreſts of Pine and Fir, Veniſon of all ſorts, and a good Breed of Horſes, black Cattel, and Sheep. In their Mountains they have Mines of Silver, Copper, and other Mettals. The Air is healthful. The poorer ſort accuſtom themſelves to ſpare Diet, and mean Lodgings, and make great Quantities of Linnen. The Country is commonly divided into Upper and Lower, and contains the following Dominions, which we ſhall deſcribe according to the Courſe of the Maps.

I. The Marquiſate of BADEN-DURLACH, on the Eaſt ſide of the Rhine, has Part of the Palatinate on the North, and the Marquiſate of Baden-Baden on the South.

Places of Note here are,

1. Durlach, 15 Miles South-Eaſt of Philipsburg, and 12 North-Eaſt from Baden, Lat. 49. 10. Long. 8. 50. 'Tis Capital of the Marquiſate, and the Reſidence of the Prince, who is a Lutheran, and his Subjects the ſame. He has a magnificent Palace here, fit for the greateſt Monarch in Europe, with a good Library, and a fine Collection of ancient Coins and Medals. The Town lies on the Banks of the Pfintz, at the Foot of a Mountain, on the Top of which there is a ſtrong Tower, with a conſtant Guard. The Streets are ſtreight and fair, and the Houſes ſtately and uniform. Here is alſo a Gymnaſium, with Profeſſors of the ſeveral Faculties. The Town and Palace ſuffered much by the French in the late Wars; ſo that the Proteſtant Cantons thought fit to aſſiſt that Prince with Contributions for repairing the Proteſtant Churches which the French ruined in this Country; and he himſelf gave large Immunities to ſuch Foreign Proteſtants as would ſettle in his Capital.

2. Pfortſheim, 15 Miles South of Durlach, at the Conflux of two Rivers. On one Side there are fair Meadows and Paſtures, and on the other Woods and Mountains. The Latins called it Porta Hercyniæ, becauſe it guards the Entrance of the Black Foreſt. It ſuffered much by the French, who took it in 1691, when they burnt the Towers and Mills, left it again, and retook it next Year.

3. Gerſbach, a ſmall Town, where the Marquiſs has a Palace and Court of Judicature for determining Cauſes belonging to the County of Eberſtein, which is Part of his Dominions. It has two Churches, one for the Lutherans, and another for the Papiſts.

4. Baden-weiler, lies betwixt Friburg and Baſle, near the Rhine, 12 Miles South from Briſac, in the Territory of which it lies, tho' Part of the Marquiſate of Baden. It is noted for Baths, which proceed from Minerals of Allum, Brimſtone, and Nitre, are not ſo hot as thoſe of Baden; but the Waters drunk are good againſt Aſthma's, inveterate Agues and Fevers, and by bathing cure the Itch, Scabs, Leproſies, old Sores, and Bruiſes.

5. Sauſenberg, an ancient Caſtle near Baden-weiller, which gives Title to a Landgraviate.

II. The Marquiſate of BADEN-BADEN, lies upon the Rhine, South-Weſt from Baden-Durlach, and is ſubject to another Prince of the ſame Family, who is a Papiſt; but his Dominions are not ſo large as the former. The chief Places here are,

1. Baden, the Metropolis of the Marquiſate, 22 Miles North-Eaſt from Strasburg. The Name comes from its Baths, which are ſaid to be 300. The Town ſtands among Hills, upon a rocky uneven Ground, ſo that the Streets are crooked. Some of the Baths are ſcalding hot. The Water of that named the Kettle, boils and ſmoaks as if a Furnace were under it. All of them proceed from Rocks of Salt, Allum, and Brimſtone, and have the ſame Taſte. They are reckoned ſpecific in the Cramp and Gout, and other Diſtempers, for which they are much frequented. Keiffer, a Phyſician, has writ a learned Deſcription of them. The Prince's Palace, or Caſtle, ſtands on a riſing Ground, is well fortified, and the chief Defence of the Town, which chiefly ſubſiſts by his Reſidence, and the Concourſe of Strangers to the Baths.

2. Stolhoffen, 5 Miles South-Weſt from Baden, a ſmall Town, near a Moraſs, and well fortified by Art and Nature. 'Tis famous for Lines that were caſt up here during the late Wars. The Imperialiſts repulſed the French here in 1703; but in 1707, the French forced the Lines, and raiſed vaſt Contributions in the neighbouring Country.

3. Fort Khiel or Kehl, on the Eaſt ſide of the Rhine, over-againſt Strasburg, a ſtrong Fortreſs, ſurrendered by the French at the Treaty of Reſwic, retaken by them in 1703, and reſtored by the Treaty of Raſtadt. Theſe two Marquiſates are about 87 Miles long, and 20 broad; abound in Corn, Wine, other Fruits, Hemp and Flax; are ſo full of Villages, that the Country looks like a continued Town, intermix'd with Gardens. The Inhabitants are well ſupplied with Fiſh by the neighbouring Rivers; and their Chaces and Parks are ſo well ſtock'd with Veniſon and Fowl, that the Boors have them for their ordinary Diet. Here are Woods of Cheſnut, which feed great Herds of Swine; and there are ſo many Quarries of Free-Stone and Marble of all Colours, that fair Houſes are built here at a ſmall Charge. In the County of Spanheim there is Agat, which the Inhabitants poliſh and export. The People make as good Soldiers as any in the Empire; and are very complaiſant to Strangers, being much civilized by the reſort of People of all Countries to the Bath.

The HISTORY of the Family of BADEN.

'TIS ſo ancient, that the Heralds are at a Loſs about their Pedigree: Some derive them from Archinbald, Major Domo to Clovis II. of France. Others from the Houſe of Della Scala, or Scaliger, in Italy. But the moſt probable Opinion is, that they are of the ſame Origin with the Houſe of Auſtria. Some of the Family have been Counts of Alſace; and from them ſome derive the Houſe of Lorrain; others have been Dukes of Zeringen and Carinthia, and one of them conquered Part of Auſtria. The Branches of Baden-Durlach, and Baden-Baden, proceeded from Prince Chriſtopher, who died in 1527. The late famous Prince Lewis-William of Baden-Baden, who obtained ſo many Victories againſt the Turks and French, was his ſeventh Deſcendant, and had from the late Emperor, the Earldom and Caſtle of Guntzburg, betwixt Ulm and Augsburg, and Fort-Keyl given him by the Empire in Conſideration of his great Services. He died in 1706, and left a Son under the Guardianſhip of his Mother. There is a Branch of this Family at Lobeſchutz in Bohemia, where the Family obtained a conſiderable Eſtate by Marriage.

The other Branch of Baden-Durlach is Lutheran, and has produced very great Men. The preſent Prince called Frederic the Great, has a numerous Iſſue, among whom there is one Son and two Grandſons.

III. The BRISGOW lies Eaſt from the Principality of Baden; and Weſt from the Principality of Furſtemburg. 'Tis ſubject to the Houſe of Auſtria, but is ſo indented, that we cannot well give its Dimenſions.

Places of Note here, are,

1. Old Briſac, on the Eaſt Side of the Rhine, almoſt over-againſt New Briſac, from which 'tis 8 Miles Eaſt; and 10 Weſt from Friburg. Lat. 48. 15. Lon. 8. Antonin called it Mons Briſiacus, and the People Briſigavi, from whence came the Name Briſgow; of which it was formerly the Capital, and Imperial: The Emperor Valentinian is reckoned its Founder. It lies on the Top of a round Hill, and is ſo well fortified by Nature and Art, that 'tis thought one of the ſtrongeſt Places in Europe. There is only one deep Well which furniſhes the whole Town. 'Tis capable of a Garriſon of 10000 Men, and the Fortifications are a League in Circumference. It has a ſtrong Citadel on the Weſt, with 8 Baſtions faced with Brick, and a Half-moon before every Curtain. The Ditch is broad; and the Counterſcarp, Covered Way, and Paliſadoes, in very good order. It joins to ſome Iſlands in the Rhine; fortified by Bridges, and had a fair ſtrong Bridge over that River. In 1638 it held out four Months Siege againſt the French and Swedes, and was reduced to ſuch Streights, that they dug up and eat the Bodies of the Dead, after they had been buried ſome Days. The Siege coſt 80000 Men on both Sides. It was taken and given to the French by the Treaty of Munſter, and confirmed to them by the Treaty of Nimeguen. Lewis XIV. fortified it after the modern Way, ſet up a Court there like the Chamber of Spire, and claimed ſeveral Towns and Villages as its Dependencies. 'Twas reſtored to the Empire by the Treaty of Reſwic, when the French deſtroyed the Bridge over the Rhine. The French retook it in 1703, but reſtored it by the Treaty of Baden in 1714.

2. Friburg, on the River Triſem, 10 Miles Eaſt from Briſac. It lies upon a Hill at the Entrance of the Black Foreſt, and is now Capital of the Briſgow. It was firſt a Village of Miners, who wrought in the neighbouring Silver and Gold Mines. The Townſmen grew ſo rich, that they purchaſed the Titles and Eſtates of Noblemen; and ſo numerous, that, in a little Time, they could ſend 3000 Men into the Field. They revolted from the Houſe of Furſtemburg, and ſubmitted to the Houſe of Auſtria in 1386. It was often taken and retaken by the Germans and Swedes during the Civil Wars. The Prince of Conde obtained a great Victory near it, over the Bavarians in 1634. 'Twas taken by the French in 1671 and 1677; and confirmed to them by the Treaty of Nimeguen, after which they made it very ſtrong, but reſtored it by way of Exchange, at the Treaty of Reſwic. They took it afterwards and reſtored it by the Treaty of Baden in 1714. 'Tis the Seat of a Sovereign Court, and of an Univerſity founded in 1450. The Chapter of Baſle reſides here. There are 14 Religious Houſes in the Town, which is very populous, and precious Stones, found in the neighbouring Country, are finely poliſhed here.

In the South Part of the Briſgow, are thoſe called the Foreſt-Towns, becauſe they lie at the Entrance of the Black Foreſt. They belong to the Houſe of Auſtria, and are as follow.

1. Rheinfelden, a ſmall City with a Bridge over the Rhine; 10 Miles Eaſt from Baſle in Swiſſerland. 'Tis Capital of a County which came to Emperor Rodolph I. by Marriage. 'Twas taken by the Swedes in 1638, and reſtored to the Emperor by the Treaty of Weſtphalia.

2. Seckingen, on an Iſland in the Rhine, 6 Miles Eaſt from Rheinfelden. 'Twas taken by the Swedes in 1638, and reſtored by the Treaty of Munſter.

3. Laufenburg, 10 Miles Eaſt from Seckingen; divided by the Rhine, was taken in 1638 by the Swedes, and reſtored in 1648. 'Tis very ſtrong and ſtands on a Rock.

4. Walſhut, on the North Side of the Rhine, 15 Miles South-Eaſt from Rheinfelden. 'Tis a ſmall but ſtrong Town, and has its Name from being a Key to the Black Foreſt.

IV. NELLEMBURG Landgraviate, lies Eaſt from the Foreſt-Towns, had formerly Princes of its own, but is now ſubject to the Houſe of Auſtria; is about 27 Miles long, and 12 broad. The chief Town is Nellemburg, about 5 Miles South-Eaſt from Furſtemburg, it has ſeveral others, but none that merit a Deſcription. The Inhabitants are Calviniſts, and under Protection of the Swiſs Proteſtant Cantons, this Country being formerly mortgaged to them.

V. The Principality and County of FURSTEMBURG, lies Eaſt from Part of the Briſgow, and the Black Foreſt, in form almoſt of a Semicircle, on both Sides the Danube which riſes here. The Country is about 70 Miles long, but for moſt part very narrow, the broadeſt Place being but 18. 'Tis divided into ſeveral Lordſhips, and poſſeſſed by ſeveral Branches of that Name. It was made a Principality in 1677.

Furſtemburg, the Capital, is in Lat. 48. Lon. 8. 50. About 15 Miles Weſt from Schaffhauſen in Swiſſerland. 'Tis the Seat of, and gives Title to, the eldeſt Branch of the Family, who is a Prince of the Empire. Cardinal Furſtemburg was of this Family, who chiefly betrayed Strasburg to the French when he was Biſhop of the Place, for which Lewis XIV. got him choſe Elector of Cologne, by a Party of the Chapter; but Prince Clement of Bavaria, the preſent Elector being legally choſe, and the French eſpouſing Furſtemburg, it was one of the cheif Cauſes of the War betwixt France and the Empire, in 1689; but the French King not being able to carry the Point, got Furſtemburg made a Cardinal, by way of Requital.

There is no remarkable Places in this Country, but only ſome large open Towns, as,

1. Huffingen, near the Fountains of the Danube.

2. Doneſching, another large Town, 6 Miles South from Villengen, near the Borders of the Black Foreſt.

3. Heyligenberg, a Caſtle on a Mountain with the Title of a County, that came to the eldeſt Branch of the Family by Marriage.

VI. The Biſhoprick of CONSTANCE, lies on the Banks of the Lake of that Name, upon the Frontiers of Swiſſerland, South-Eaſt from Furſtemburg, and Eaſt from the Canton of Schaffhauſen. The Biſhop is a Prince, Count, and Baron of the Empire, and was Sovereign of the Town of Conſtance, before it was Imperial. Our Maps do not exactly diſtinguiſh his Boundaries. 'Tis about 39 Miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 24 South and North where broadeſt. The Biſhoprick is ſaid to comprehend 800 Pariſhes, 400 Monaſteries, and 1000 Villages and Caſtles. He has alſo Poſſeſſions in Turgaw, which belongs to Swiſſerland, where we ſhall deſcribe it. He is Con-Director of the Circle with the Duke of Wirtemberg. His ordinary Reſidence is at Mersburg, a little neat City on the North-Side of the Lake, 12 Miles South-Eaſt from Uberlingen, and 8 North-Eaſt from Conſtance.

Conſtance, the Capital of the Country, lies on the South Side of the Lake. Lat. 47. 42. Lon. 9. 12. near the Frontiers of Zurich and Schaffhauſen: Some reckon it the Metropolis of Auſtrian Swabia, and the Country on both Sides the Lake is ſometimes called by the Name of Hegow. Some aſcribe the Founding of it to Conſtantine the Great, or his Father; and ſome think it more ancient, becauſe in the Chapel of St. Blaſius here, there is Part of an old Marble Monument, which mentions Diocleſian, Maximilian, and other Emperors; but this is thought to have been brought hither from the Ruins of the old Vitodurum, that lay in the Neighbourhood. The Town was taken by Attila the Hun, came afterwards into the Hands of the old French Kings, in ſome of whoſe Records it is called, Villa Regia Dagoberti Regis. The Biſhoprick was transferred hither from Windiſh, in 594, and is Suffragan of Mentz. The Hungarians beſieged it in vain, when they over-run the neighbouring Country in 938. 'Tis noted for a Council, called hither by the Emperor Sigiſmund in 1414, becauſe of the Schiſm occaſioned by three different Popes, ſet up at once by the Italians, French, and Spaniards. When the Council began, and were ſinging the Hymn as uſual, Veni Spiritus Sanctus, i. e. Come Holy Ghoſt; one clapped a Paper on the Door with theſe Words, Aliis rebus occupati, nunc adeſſe vobis non poſſumus, i. e. We are taken up with other Affairs, and cannot be with you now. They depoſed all the three Popes, having firſt impriſoned Pope John the Italian, who alone anſwered the Summons. They choſe Martin V. In the eighth Seſſion they condemned the Doctrine of Wickliff, whom they charged with many falſe Articles, and ordered his Bones to be dug up and burnt. They likewiſe ſentenced to be burnt, John Hus, and Jerom of Prague, contrary to the ſafe Conduct of the Emperor, who at firſt oppoſed it, but at laſt complied and ſaw the Sentence executed. To juſtify this, they made a Canon, That Faith was not to be kept with Heretics, nor thoſe ſuſpected of Hereſy; as Sleidan tells us in his Commentaries. They aſſerted the Authority of a Council to be above that of the Pope, as is owned by Carranzam in his Summa Conciliorum, Printed at Lyons, with Allowance, in 1683. This Council laſted four Years: During which 'tis ſaid there were here, 4 Patriarchs, 29 Cardinals, 346 Archbiſhops and Biſhops, 564 Abbots and Doctors, 10000 Secular Princes and Nobles, 450 common Harlots, 1600 Barbers, and 320 Muſicians; as Dr. Nicholſon, now Biſhop of Londonderry, ſays in his Account of Germany in Pitts's Atlas, the Emperor's Retinue was 4000 Perſons, and there were 30000 Horſe in the City at once.

This City was proſcribed in 1534, for refuſing the Interim, and forced to ſubmit to the Houſe of Auſtria, which governs them by a Deputy, but allows them moſt of their ancient Privileges, and to retain the Name of an Imperial City. It is very populous, well built, has abundance of fair Structures; and is well fortified by Art and Nature. It was beſieged in vain by the Swedes in 1635. It has a good Trade by the Neighbourhood of the Rhine, which runs thro' the great Lake into that called the Celler-See, with a fair Stream, and ſeems not to mix with either. Their Churches, and particularly St. Stephen's Cathedral, are very magnificent. Their Exchange and Town-houſe are fine Structures, and their Market-Places, and Bridges very ſtately. The Biſhop has a ſumptuous Palace in the Suburb of Peterſhauſen. The Swiſſers defeated the Auſtrians near this City in 1499.

On an Iſland in the Lake, there is the rich Abbey of Auge or Reſchenaw, founded by a Biſhop of Meaux in France, who retired hither in the 9th Century. It was united to this Biſhoprick in 1540. The Lake is 40 Miles long, and 10 where broadeſt.

2. Zell, or Rattolf-Zell, near the Weſt End of the Lake of Conſtance, 12 Miles North-Weſt from that City, was ſo called from Rattolf Biſhop of Verona, who built a Palace here, and founded the Town in 875. After being in Poſſeſſion of many other Princes it fell into the Emperor's Hands. 'Twas formerly one of the Seats of the ancient Dukes of Swabia, and came by Marriage to the Dukes of Wirtemberg, who were obliged to quit it after the Defeat of the Proteſtants at the Battle of Nordlingen; ſince which the Houſe of Auſtria has ſtrongly fortified it. 'Tis alſo defended by the impregnable Caſtle of Hohendweil, on the Top of an high inacceſſible Hill, in the middle of a fine Plain: A few Men may hold it out againſt an Army, the Hill is ſo very high and ſteep; and the Rock being of Flint, there is no ſpringing of Mines to annoy annoy it, nor can the Garriſon be eaſily ſtarved, becauſe they have a good annual Crop of Corn and Wine on the Hill.

VII. Uberlingen, on the other ſide the Lake, 60 Miles Eaſt from Zell, and 12 North-Weſt from Conſtance. 'Tis a fair Imperial Town, on the Top of a Rock, which furniſhes Stone for their Houſes and Fortifications. 'Tis encompaſſed with fine Orchards and Vineyards, and the Situation on the Banks of the Lake ſo pleaſant and magnificent, that the ancient Dukes of Swabia made it their Reſidence. Here is a very good Harbour, from whence they export Wine and Fruit to the neighbouring Country, which enriches the Place. They have great Privileges; tho' there lies an Appeal from their Common-Council to ſome of the neighbouring Imperial Towns. In their Vineyards and Orchards there are ſeveral cool Mineral Springs, good againſt the Stone, and a decayed Appetite: That on the Eaſt ſide of the Town comes from a Rock; It has a Tincture of Lead, Copper, and Brimſtone, and is conveyed by Pipes into a Bath in the City, for the Uſe of Patients. There is another in a Vineyard, which taſtes like Sal Armoniac, and removes Warts by once or twice waſhing. The Soil of this Vineyard is hot and ſandy, and produces the beſt Grapes in the Country. Here is the richeſt Hoſpital in Swabia, for poor and decrepid People.

VIII. Salmonſweiler, about 4 Miles Eaſt from Uberlingen, is the richeſt Ciſtercian Abby in Germany, lies in a ſmall Town of the ſame Name, which is populous, has a good Trade in Corn, and moſt of the Inhabitants are Papiſts.

Buchorn, on the ſame ſide of the Lake, 20 Miles South-Eaſt from Uberlingen, and 10 from Marsburg. It had formerly Counts of its own, but now belongs to the Houſe of Auſtria, who have made it a Dependant on Uberlingen, which is under their Protection. The Town is not large, nor the Air wholſome; but it has a good Trade with the neighbouring Countries by the Lake.

IX. Ravenspurg, 15 Miles North-Eaſt from Buchorn, on a River which falls into the Lake of Conſtance. 'Tis a walled Imperial Town, well built, and has a Council compoſed of Lutherans and Papiſts. Their Townhouſe and Churches are very neat. In the middle of the Town there is a high Watch-tower, which was blown down by a Whirlwind in 1552, when the Watchman or Trumpeter, who, according to Cuſtom, ſounds the Hour of the Night, fell down from the Top of it without any Hurt, tho' his Wife and Son were kill'd by it, as appears by the Inſcription put upon it when rebuilt.

Altorf or Weingarten, is an ancient famous Town, within 2 Miles of Ravenſpurg. It gave Title of Earl to a Family from whence proceeded a great Branch of the ancient Dukes of Bavaria, and the preſent Dukes of Brunſwic and Lunenburg. The Guelphian Family was anciently buried here, in the Monaſtery of Weingarten, whoſe Abbot is a Prince of the Empire. The Town belongs to the Houſe of Auſtria, and is the Seat of the Emperor's Lieutenant, who keeps a Court here to determine all Cauſes brought before him from the Imperial Towns in Swabia.

X. Wangen, an Imperial Town, 12 Miles South-Eaſt from Ravenſpurg, and 20 Eaſt from Buchorn, on the River Arg, which falls into the Lake of Conſtance. It is noted for a Trade in Paper and Flax, and for the beſt Sickles, which are ſent over all the Empire.

XI. Lindaw, an Imperial City, upon an Iſland in the Lake of Conſtance, 12 Miles South-Weſt from Wangen, and 15 Eaſt from Buchorn. There is a Stone Bridge of 290 Paces, betwixt that Part of the City which lies in the Iſland, and the other on the Bank of the Lake. Here is the Ruins of an old Tower, which ſome aſcribe to Tiberius in his Expedition againſt the Vindelici; but the Town had its Riſe from a Nunnery built here in 810, and called Lindaw, becauſe of the Linden or Tile-trees planted round it. The Abbeſs is a Princeſs of the Empire, and has Sovereign Juriſdiction within the Precinct of the Nunnery. The Nuns muſt all be Papiſts, and of noble Families, but marry when they will. The Magiſtrates and moſt of the Citizens are Lutherans. The Situation of it is pleaſant and healthful, and it lies ſo convenient for Trade, by means of the Lake and the Rhine, that they call it the Venice of Swabia. On the Lake ſide of the Town they have Plenty of Vines, which yield a rough harſh Wine. The Town on the Iſland is moſtly inhabited by Fiſhermen, Watermen, and Weavers. Here are ſeveral Springs of good Water, and fine Fields and Meadows on the North ſide of the Town. It was made Imperial by Rodolph I. It has a Caſtle, and is beſides ſo ſtrong by Nature, that the Swedes could not take it in 1647.

XII. WURTENBERG or WIRTEMBERG Dutchy, is the largeſt Dominion in this Circle, lies Eaſt from the Marquiſate of Baden, to the Neighbourhood of Ulm on the Danube, and South from the Counties of Lowenſtein and Limburg, as far almoſt as Furſtemburg. The Length from Eaſt to Weſt is about 75 Miles, and the Breadth South and North is much the ſame; but is indented with Imperial Towns, and ſome other Dominions. 'Tis one of the moſt fruitful Countries of Swabia. The Duke is a Prince of the Empire; and he and his Subjects are Lutherans. Their Mountains are full of Mines and Vineyards. Their Valleys are ſtock'd with large Herds of Cattel. Here is abundance of pleaſant Meadows and Foreſts, with Variety of Game. 'Tis watered with many ſmall Rivers, beſides the great ones, of the Danube and Neckar, and they have Lakes that abound with Fiſh. 'Tis ſo populous, that 'tis ſaid to contain 63 Cities, 158 large open Towns, 645 Villages, and 14 Abbeys. 'Twas made a County in 1078, and a Dutchy in 1495. Before the Civil Wars of Germany, the Duke was able to raiſe 24000 Men in 24 Hours; but the Calamities of War has leſſened the Number of People here, as it did elſewhere.

The Family of their DUKES

IS ſaid to come from Everard, Great Maſter of Charlemain's Houſhold; and they were made Counts by the Emperor Henry IV. They enlarged their Dominions by Marriages with the Families of Teck and Montbelliard. Ulric VI. was the firſt who embraced Lutheraniſm, entered into the League of Smalcald, and died in 1550. The preſent Duke is a Knight of the Golden Fleece, and General of the Emperor's Horſe; and is diſtinguiſhed by his Seat at Stutgard, which is the Capital, he being the eldeſt Branch of the Family. The other Branches are, that of Montbelliard, the Julian and Sileſian, thoſe of Bernſtad, Witingen, Juliusburg and Neuſtat.

'Tis encompaſſed with pleaſant Fields, Gardens and Meadows, well ſupplied by Fiſh from the River, and with Timber from the Neighbouring Woods. Here is a hot ſulphureous Bath from the Town, much frequented, becauſe this City lies in the Centre of the other Imperial Towns. The States of the Circle meet here; the Magiſtrates are half Proteſtants, half Papiſts. The moſt remarkable Structures are, St. Martin's Church, and an Hoſpital for decay'd Citizens. The Elector of Bavaria took this City in 1702, but was ſoon obliged to quit it.

XLII. Bucaw, an Imperial Town, 10 Miles Weſt from Biberach, on the Weſt Side of the Lake Pfederſee. 'Tis remarkable for little but a Nunnery, whoſe Abbeſs is a Princeſs of the Empire, and takes a Vow of Chaſtity, and all the Nuns are Counteſſes or Baroneſſes, with Liberty to marry.

XLIII. Augsburg, the Auguſta Vindelicorum of the Ancients, an Imperial City. Lat. 48. 25. Lon. 11. 19. 40 Miles South-Eaſt from Ulm. It lies near the Conflux of the Rivers Lech and Wertach; Had its Name from Auguſtus Cæſar, who, about 12 Years before our Saviour, ſubdued theſe Parts, and planted a Roman Colony here, under Druſus Nero, Brother to Tiberius. This City continued under the Romans and Goths, 550 Years; and was afterwards poſſeſſed by the Franks, till Charlemain's Time. It was next ſubject to the Dukes of Swabia, till Conradin the Laſt ſold them their Freedom, and obtained a Confirmation of their Privileges from the Emperor, about 912. It embraced Chriſtianity early, and ſeveral People ſuffered Martyrdom here in Dioclesian's Reign. Luther gave an Account of his Faith to the Dyet here in 1518, and in 1530. The Proteſtants preſented their Confeſſion of Faith to the Emperor Charles V. at the Dyet here, from whence it was called the Augsburg Confeſſion: But he having perſecuted the Proteſtant Princes, they levied an Army in Defence of their Religion and Liberty, which obliged him to call a Council for determining the Differences; and for that End, Matters were referred to a Committe of 7 Deputies; but Charles V. being diſpleaſed with the Demands of the Proteſtants, and hearing that the Turks prepared to invade the Empire, he diſſolved the Council by an Edict, wherein he ordered the Popiſh Doctrine to be maintained, and thoſe who held the contrary, to be treated as Heretics: But the Proteſtants being too ſtrong to be thus uſed, he was obliged to revoke his Decree next Year, and return to Augsburg, where he enjoyned that called the Interim, for accommodating religious Differences. This was a Medley, allowing the Proteſtants Something, but granting almoſt All to the Papiſts; ſo that it pleaſed neither Side, and was very ill obſerved. But the Proteſtants perſiſting in their Demands, were allowed the Freedom of their Religion here, in 1555. Sleidan ſays, the Senate of Augsburg firſt embraced Luther's Reformation in 1535, and ſent to him for Miniſters. La Forreſt ſays, they afterwards expelled their Biſhop and Clergy: But Sleidan ſays, they deſerted the City upon the Change of Religion, and the Senate publiſhed a Paper againſt them, directed to the Emperor and States of the Empire, with a Complaint how ill they had behaved, and that they had attempted to raiſe Tumults in the Town. But in 1551, the Emperor took the Town, and reſtored Popery, and next Year 'twas reſtored to the Lutherans by the Treaty of Paſſaw. Since 1555, the Magiſtracy has been half Lutherans, and half Papiſts, according to Dr. Nicholſon, who ſays, they conſiſt of 23 Papiſts, and 22 Lutherans; and that their Common-Council has 150 of each. In 1634 the Duke of Bavaria took it, after a long Siege; but they were reſtored to their Liberty by the Treaty of Munſter. La Forreſt ſays, that in 1687, a League was formed here, betwixt the Emperor, the Princes of the Empire, the King of Spain, the Prince of Orange, the Dutch, the Duke of Savoy, &c. to declare War againſt France, and her Ally King James II. The preſent Elector of Bavaria took it in 1704, after 13 Days Siege, but was ſoon obliged to quit it.

Dr. Nicholſon, Mr. Ray, Monconys, Miſſon, &c. give the following Account of this City.

'Tis about 8 Miles round, the Streets very large; the Houſes are beautiful, and many of 'em painted on the Outſide: they are generally of Timber; but near a fourth part of the Town is built of Free-ſtone. The Cathedral, Churches, Town-hall, Conduits, and other public Buildings are magnificent: But the chief Glory of the Town is that call'd the Fuggery, conſiſting of ſeveral ſtately Streets, and fine Palaces, built by the noble Family of the Fuggers, who are Lords of it, and great part of the adjacent Country. Four of the ſaid Streets are built croſswiſe, make a fair Town of themſelves, and are

are inhabited by poor Penſioners. They conſiſt of 106 Houſes, which, according to a Latin Inſcription over the Gate of the Hoſpital, were built by three Brothers of this noble Family, out of Thankfulneſs to GOD, for the Good of the Commonwealth, and for the Uſe of the frugal Poor. They are under the Inſpection of a Chaplain, who has a noble Salary. The Town-Hall is reckon'd the ſecond to that of Amſterdam: 'Tis of fine hewn Stone, very lofty, 38 Foot broad in Front, and 111 Foot in length. 'Tis divided into three Stories: The firſt has a fine Porch, adorned with two Columns of Marble, and ſupported by 8 Pillars. The ſecond is a Hall of the ſame ſize, with a delicate Cieling of Joyner's Work, ſupported by 8 Columns of green Marble, whoſe Baſes and Chapiters of the Corinthian Order, are of Braſs. The third Story is another large Hall of the ſame ſize, 110 Foot long, 38 broad, and 52 high. The Cieling is of Joyner's Work, framed in Compartments, painted and gilded. It has two great Gates of curious Architecture in Joyner's Work, painted and gilded; and there are two others on each ſide, which enter into as many large Chambers on both ſides the Hall. The upper Hall is paved with Marble. The Walls are adorned with Paintings, intermix'd with Emblems and Devices relating to the Government: But the Roof exceeds all the reſt, the Squares and Pannels of the Compartments being gilt and adorned with fine Sculptures, Pictures, &c. In the Chambers are very fine Stoves, which are ſunk in the Floor, and therefore do not appear but by a round Copper Grate, which lets the Heat thro'. There are two Platforms from the Chambers on the ſides, whence one looks down into the great Hall. Here is a large Arſenal, the Porch of which is a fine Piece of Architecture, of hewn Stone, with 5 great Figures in Braſs over it, one of 'em being the Genius of Peace with a flaming Sword in her Hand, trampling upon the Devil of War, and 3 little Cupids about her. There are 2 Halls full of Cannon, moſt of 'em Braſs, and among them a Leather Culverine, a ſix Pounder 26 Foot long, and fine Pyramids of Bullets. Over theſe 2 Magazines are 5 Stories: In the firſt of which are 300 Harquebuſſes; in the ſecond, 3000 new Muskets; in the third, old Muskets; in the fourth, Arms for Horſe; and in the fifth, Pikes and other Arms for 15000 Men. In ſhort, 'tis one of the beſt Magazines in Germany. The Cathedral has a Gate of Braſs, over which are ſeveral Scripture Stories in Baſſo Relievo. There is a Gate in the Town call'd the Secret Gate, which was contrived to let in People in Time of War, without any Danger, and has ſo many Engines and Diviſions, with Gates and Keys, and Apartments for Guards, at ſome Diſtance one from another, where the Paſſengers are examined, that 'tis impoſſible for the Town to be ſurprized by ſuch as are thus let in. In Time of Peace they let People in and out here at all Hours of the Night, paying 6 d. for a Horſeman, and 2 d. for a Footman. The Fortifications are not very conſiderable; yet it has held out many great Sieges. The Lutherans are much more numerous than the Papiſts; yet they live in a good Underſtanding. Their Poor are maintained in one and the ſame Hoſpital; and to avoid giving Offence, the Lutherans pull off their Hats to the Prieſts and the Company, when they meet the Hoſt in the Streets. The Jews are confined to a ſeparate Place, and muſt pay a Florin for every Hour they ſtay in other Parts. They have brought a Branch of the River Lech into the City, whoſe Water is clear and good; and upon it they have ſeveral Towers, with great Ciſterns on the Top fill'd by Pumps, which are moved by Mills, and convey the Water all over the Town. Here are many noble Fountains, with the Brazen Statues of the Heathen Gods and Heroes.

This was formerly a Place of great Trade, but is much decayed ſince Commodities from the Mediterranean ceaſe to be brought this way into other Parts of the Empire. They have curious Mechanics, eſpecially in Clock-work, Goldſmith's Work, and Ivory. They make Steel Chains of a Span long ſo fine and light, that they put them about the Necks of Fleas, which lift them up when they leap, and theſe they ſell for 10 d. a piece. The Citizens have great Variety of Habits, which are ſo regulated by the Magiſtrates, that every one's Quality and Religion is known by them. The City carries a Pine-Apple for its Arms, and ſeems to have done ſo a long time; for not many Years ago, a Pillar was dug up here with a Pine-Apple on the top, and certain Medals of Auguſtus, with ſuch a Pillar on the Reverſe; in whoſe Time ſome conclude from hence that this City was the Boundary of the Empire on that ſide. There is a vaſt Number of Roman Monuments in and about the City, and a Library famous for a good Collection of Manuſcripts, which Conringius equals to that of Vienna. The learned Welſer left them the greateſt Part of thoſe Rarities; and a great many Greek Manuſcripts have been ſince added by the Citizens. A Catalogue of this Library was publiſhed in 1675. The Juriſdiction of this City is about 70 Miles long, and 10 broad.

XLIV. BURGAW Marquiſate, lies South of the Danube, and Weſt of the Biſhoprick of Augsburg, is 30 Miles long and broad, and ſubject to the Houſe of Auſtria.

Places of Note here are,

1. Burgaw, Capital of the Country, on the River Mindel, 23 Miles North-Weſt from Augsburg. It held out a Siege in 1321, againſt the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria

2. Guntzburg, a ſmall City on the Danube, 8 Miles North-Weſt of Burgaw. 'Twas formerly ſubject to Lords of its own, and has a Caſtle, which is now the Reſidence of the Emperor's Governour.

XLV. ULM, an Imperial City on the Danube, 17 Miles Weſt from Burgaw, and 40 North-Weſt from Augsburg. 'Tis thought to be Ptolomy's Alcimenis. The Name is derived from a Foreſt of Elms in the Neighbourhood. Its Juriſdiction is 24 Miles long, and 16 broad, and contains 40 Bailiwics and Lordſhips. The Town is well fortified, after the modern Way. The Danube, which begins to be navigable here, ſerves it for a Ditch on one ſide; and the Garriſon, maintained by the City, have pretty little Houſes aſſigned them, where they live all together. Here is a Stone Bridge of 4 Arches over the Danube, which forms ſeveral Iſlands before the Town. The City is large and populous, and has a good Trade in Linnen and Cotton. They embraced the Reformation in 1529, and all the Magiſtrates and moſt of the Inhabitants are Lutherans. They are governed by 41 Aldermen, moſt of which are of the Nobility, and the reſt Tradeſmen. They chuſe annually out of the Nobility two Bailiffs, who preſide in their Council. Here are abundance of ingenious Mechanicks, eſpecially at Clock-work. Their Cathedral is, next to that of Straſburg, reckoned the fineſt in the Empire. A great Number of Architects, &c. were employed 111 Years in building it. It has 5 ſtately Spires, one of them 102 Foot high, and ſupported by 136 large Pillars. Their Organ was 23 Years a making, is 93 Foot high, 28 broad, has 16 Pair of Bellows, and above 3000 Pipes of pure Engliſh Tin; the largeſt above 40 Inches in Circumference. The Town-houſe is a noble Structure, and they have many other ſtately Buildings. The great Franciſcan Monaſtery was at the Reformation made a College, where they have Profeſſors of all Arts and Sciences. The Elector of Bavaria ſurprized this City by Treachery in 1702; but it was retaken by the Allies after the Battel of Hochſtadt.

XLVI. KIRKBERG County, is by ſome reckoned Part of the Burgaw, about 18 Miles long, and 8 broad, gives Title of Count to the Family of Fugger, which is very rich, and divided into ſeveral Branches. The chief Place is,

Kirkberg, 7 Miles South from Ulm, with ſome other Lordſhips, and particularly that of Kircheim, a large open Town, 8 Miles Weſt from Mindelheim.

XLVII. NORDLINGEN, an Imperial Town, near the Frontiers of Bavaria, 32 Miles North-Weſt from Augsburg, and 36 North-Eaſt from Ulm, on the River Eyer. It is the Aulæ Flaviæ of the Latins. 'Twas made Imperial in 1251, and is an Ally of the Swiſs Cantons. 'Tis remarkable for a Battel in 1634, when the Swedes and their Proteſtant Allies were defeated in the Neighbourhood; and for another in 1646, when the Swedes and their Allies defeated the Imperialiſts and Bavarians.

XLVIII. OETINGEN Principality, lies in the North-Eaſt Corner of the Circle of Swabia, has the Danube on the South, and the Marquiſate of Anſpach on the North. 'Tis 38 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and 30 where broadeſt, from South to North. Its Counts are Proteſtants, except the younger Branch, and were made Princes of the Empire in 1674. Nordlingen, above deſcribed, lies in this Country.

Other Places of Note are,

1. Oetingen, 20 Miles North from Dillengen, and 28 South-Eaſt from Anſpach. One half of it belongs to that Prince, and the other to the Citizens.

2. Wallerſtein, a large open Town on the Eyer, Capital of a Bailiwic, and gives Title to a Branch of the Family.

XLIX. ELVANGEN Provoſtſhip is by ſome included in the County of Oeting, from which it lies about 28 Miles North-Weſt. 'Twas formerly a Benedictine Abbey, but now ſecularized, and with the Town of the ſame Name, belongs to the Provoſt and his Chapter. He is a Prince of the Empire, has 10000 Crowns Revenue, and ſits alternately in the Dyet with the Abbot of Kempten.

L. Dunkel-Spikel, on the Wernitz, 15 Miles North-Weſt from Oetingen, a ſmall Imperial City; half the Magiſtrates Lutherans, and the other Papiſts. 'Twas taken by the Proteſtants from the Imperialiſts in 1646.

LI. Gingen, an Imperial Town, 15 Miles South from Nordlingen: The Magiſtrates and moſt of the People are Proteſtants.

LII. PAPENHEIM County, lies Eaſt from Oetingen, and is named from the Capital, on the Frontiers of Bavaria, 15 Miles South-Eaſt from Oetingen, and 20 Eaſt from Nordlingen. 'Tis but ſmall, and chiefly remarkable for its Count, who is Hereditary Marſhal of the Empire, and has ſome other Lands about Donawert and Memmingen.

VIII. The Circle of BAVARIA,

HAS thoſe of Swabia and Franconia on the Weſt, that of Upper Saxony on the North, Bohemia and Auſtria on the Eaſt, Tyrol and Carinthia on the South. The greateſt Length from South to North is 190 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth from Eaſt to Weſt 115; but 'tis much indented every way.

The Country in general abounds with Corn of all ſorts, Veniſon, Metals, Marble, Salt, Baths, and produces ſome Wine; ſo that it would be very rich, did not the Elector ingroſs the chief Commodities of his own Dominions here, which keeps the Inhabitants poor.

The People are reckoned more barbarous and bigotted than in any other Part of Germany; which is aſcribed to the arbitrary Government of the Prince, and the Impoſitions of the Clergy, who keep them ſo ignorant, that moſt of their Worſhip is paid to Images and Saints. The Peaſants live chiefly by Herds of Swine, fed in the Woods by Acorns and Crabs; and they make bold with the Veniſon in their Foreſts, tho' the Elector forbids it without his ſpecial Commiſſion.

The Dominions contained in this Circle are as follows,

I. The Electorate of BAVARIA,

WHich gives Name to the Circle, and is the moſt conſiderable Part of it: It abounds with Corn, but has little Wine or Trade. There is abundance of Deer in their Foreſts, and Fiſh in their Rivers; the chief of which are, the Danube, Inn, Lech, Iſer, Amber, Ill, Nab, and Regens. Here are reckoned 16 Lakes, 84 Towns, 726 Caſtles, and 4700 Villages. Bavaria was formerly a Kingdom, and included Tyrol, Carinthia, Carniola, Stiria, and Auſtria; but now contains only the Dutchy and Palatinate of Bavaria, which make up the Electorate, and ſome other leſſer Dominions, as the Landgraviate of Luchtenberg, the Counties of Chamb and Hag. The whole is ſubdivided into 5 Regencies, or Great Bailiwics, viz. Munich, Landſhut, Straubing, Burkhauſen, and Amberg. The moſt general Diviſion is into Upper and Lower. The former lies under the Alps, and is cold and barren: the latter lies on the Danube, and is as fruitful and pleaſant a Country as moſt in the Empire.

The chief Towns in Upper Bavaria are,

1. Munich or Munchen, ſuppoſed to be the Κεμβδανον of Ptolomy. Aventinus ſays, Duke Henry XII. founded it on the Ruins of a Monaſtery, whence it had the Name of Munchen, and the Picture of a Monk for its Arms. It ſtands on the River Iſer, Long. 12. Lat. 48-½. 36 Miles South-Eaſt from Augsburg. 'Tis the Metropolis of Bavaria, and the Seat of the Duke, was built in 962, walled round in 1156, and is one of the moſt pleaſant and populous Cities in Germany for its bigneſs, but not well fortified, and ſcarce half ſo big as Augsburg. Guſtavus-Adolphus took it in 1632, but would not ſuffer the Town or the Elector's Palace to be deſtroyed, ſaying, they deſerved to ſtand to the End of Time. The Streets are broad and regular, moſt of the Houſes well built, and finely painted on the Outſide. The Market-place is extreme fine, the Houſes round it uniform, with Piazza's, and rich Shops under them. The Iſer runs in Channels thro' many of the Streets; ſo that they have Mills within their Walls, and the better ſort Fountains and Water-works in their Houſes. Moſt of the Mechanics are Glaſiers and Silk-Weavers; and here are many Nobility and Gentry that attend the Court. Great Quantities of Salt, Wine, &c. are ſold here in their two annual Fairs, at St. James's Tide, and the Week after the Feaſt of the three Kings. The Town is ſo large, that it has quartered 18000 Soldiers for a conſiderable time. 'Tis governed by a Common-Council of 36; 24 of 'em make the Outer Houſe, and 12 the Inner: they are ſuperintended by 6 Aldermen, uſually Perſons of Birth. The chief Structures are,

(1.) The Elector's Palace, capable to receive the greateſt Monarch in Europe, with his Attendants and Guards. The Architecture is not very regular, becauſe built at ſeveral times. The Inſide far ſurpaſſes the Outſide. 'Twere endleſs to recount all the Curioſities mentioned here by Travellers. The moſt remarkable are, 1. The Long Gallery, adorned with Pictures by the greateſt Maſters. 2. The Antiquarium, or Statuarium, containing a vaſt Number of old and new Pieces, in Marble, Stone, Wood, &c. 3. The Great Hall of the Elector's Apartments, 118 Foot long, and 52 broad, adorned with curious Pictures of ſacred Hiſtory on one ſide, and profane on the other, with Latin Verſes under each. 4. The Hall fill'd with Antiquities brought from Rome, exceeds all the reſt, here being 192 Buſts, and 400 other Pieces, valuable for Workmanſhip and Antiquity. 5. The Library, wherein, beſides a vaſt Collection of printed Books in moſt Languages, ancient and modern, there are a great many valuable Manuſcripts, particularly a Latin Treatiſe in Folio, in an old ſquare Character, pretended to be written by Pope Clement I. to St. James the Apoſtle: The New Teſtament in the Indian, Armenian, and Wendiſh Tongues: Three noble Volumes in Royal Paper Folio, of Muſical Compoſitions, by Orlandi di Laſſo, and other famous Artiſts: A large Book of Medicinal Preparations, by that famous Italian Phyſician Gratiano di Francolino, &c. 6. A Chamber of Rarities, containing a neat Perſpective Globe, in the Circumference of which there is the whole Hiſtory of our Saviour's Paſſion, which being inverted, ſhews the Elevation of the Serpent in the Wilderneſs on one ſide, and our Saviour's Crucifixion on the other: A Landskip in Coral, and another repreſenting Buildings, Woods, &c. in their proper Colours, made of Stones laid in Wood: The Figure of Parnaſſus in Coral, with the nine Muſes round it: Flowers and Plants caſt in Gold: Several Drawers full of ancient and modern Coins and Medals: Heatheniſh Gods and Goddeſſes: The Picture of Chriſtopher Froſchammer, a notorious Murderer, who is ſaid to have committed 345 Murders with his own Hand, and to have been privy to 400 more committed by others. With many other Curioſities in Art and Nature. 7. In the little Chapel belonging to the Electreſſes Apartment, there is nothing ſcarce to be ſeen but Gold, Pearls, and Gems. 8. The Parlour of Perſpectives is extreme fine.

The Furniture of the Palace is rich beyond Imagination; and beſides the Tapeſtry in uſe, they reckoned in the Wardrobe to the Value of ſome Millions of Crowns. In the Treaſury there are whole Services of Gold, and many other precious Veſſels, vaſt Numbers of Pearls, Diamonds, Rubies, and other precious Stones, rare Pictures, curious Works, Medals, &c. and among the reſt, a Cherry-ſtone with 140 Heads diſtinctly engraven upon it, and a Boat of Palm-tree Wood turned into Stone. Mr. Miſſon adds, that there is nothing to be ſeen throughout the Palace but Marble, which is artificial, but ſo well hardened and poliſhed, that it looks like natural; and there is ſuch a vaſt Number of Aloe-trees in the Elector's Gardens, that he thinks all Europe cannot ſhew the like in Number and Quality. Here is alſo a noble Fountain, repreſenting Perſeus with Meduſa's Head in his Hand, and the Water guſhing out of her Head and Neck in ſmall Streams, as Blood out of the Veins of a Body newly beheaded. Here is alſo Grotto's, and other fine Water-works.

(2.) The Jeſuits College here is a Princely Fabric, and reckoned the ſtatelieſt Piece of modern Architecture in Europe, next to the Eſcurial in Spain. It conſiſts of two large Squares, beſides Cloyſters, with a vaſt Number of Lodging and Dining-Rooms, Schools, &c. and 800 Croſs-Windows. Their Church, built after the Italian manner, and dedicated to St. Michael the Archangel, is now the uſual Burying-place for the Electoral Family. The firſt entombed here was Renata, a Daughter of Lorrain, and Wife of William the Founder of the Church and College, who died in 1602. Behind the Choir they have their Treaſury, where there is a vaſt deal of Wealth, beſides Gold and Silver Crucifixes, Candleſticks, Chalices, rich Tapeſtry, and other Church-Ornaments. Miſſon ſays, the Jeſuits ſhew'd him a Joint as big as that of an Elephant, which they pretended to be one of St. Chriſtoper's Backbones.

(3.) The Dom Kirk, or chief Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is beautified with two delicate Towers, each 333 Foot high, and enriched with Reliques. 'Tis governed by a Provoſt, Dean, and 13 Canons.

(4.) The Franciſcan Monaſtery is worth an Engliſhman's View, becauſe of a Piece of Clock-work repreſenting two Engliſh Cavaliers, to whom an Angel blows a Trumpet; and for our Countryman William Occam's ſake, who having for ſome Years ſtoutly maintained Duke Lodowic the Fourth's Cauſe againſt the Pope, was buried here in 1347. There is alſo an Engliſh Nunnery in this City.

While this Town was poſſeſſed by the Imperialiſts in 1705, a Rebellion was raiſed in the Country: The Boors being joined by ſome regular Troops, took Branaw, Schardingen, &c. on pretence that they could not bear the Hardſhips they ſuffered under the Imperial Adminiſtration. The Emperor's Governour ſent Deputies to meet theirs, who propoſed that the Imperialiſts ſhould evacuate the Elector's Dominions, and that he ſhould be reſtored, and the chief Places in Tyrol put into their Hands till thoſe Conditions were performed: In ſhort, they were ſo obſtinate, that they refuſed Pardon, renewed Hoſtilities, and tho' their main Body was cut off at Kelheim, where their Leader was taken Priſoner, yet they appeared in a great Body before Munich, in hopes of being joined by the Inhabitants; but were attacked by the Imperialiſts, and all of 'em kill'd or taken. They held a Correſpondence with ſome of the Burghers, and deſigned to have put all the Imperialiſts to the Sword.

2. Freyſing, an ancient Town on the ſame River, 15 Miles North of Munich. 'Tis ſaid to have been founded by the Romans, and called Fruximum. The neighbouring Hill, on which ſtands St. Stephen's Monaſtery, was formerly called Teutonis Mons, becauſe of an Altar there to their Idol Teut. Pope Gregory II. made it a Biſhop's See about 716, Suffragan of Saltsburg. 'Tis commonly enjoyed by a Bavarian Prince. The moſt celebrated Biſhop of this See was Otto, Son to Leopold Marquiſs of Auſtria: He was Author of that called Ottonis Friſingenſis Chronologia, which gives a judicious Account of the moſt remarkable Revolutions in the World, from the Creation till 1158. The Town and the Biſhop's Palace are pleaſantly ſituate in the middle of fair Fields and Parks.

3. Ingoſtadt, on the Danube, 30 Miles North-Weſt from Freyſingen. Cambden thinks the Name is derived from the Angli, who ſent a Colony hither, from whence ſome Hiſtorians call it Anglopolis. It ſtands in a plain and fruitful Country; the Houſes are generally well built, the Streets uniform and fair, and the Caſtle impregnable. Here is a Gymnaſium, which has the ſame Privileges with the Univerſity of Bononia. Bellarmin and other great Men were educated here. It held out againſt the Proteſtants in 1545, and againſt Guſtavus-Adolphus in 1632. The Image of the Virgin in their Great Church coſt 50000 Crowns; 'tis of pure Gold, of a conſiderable Bulk, adorned with Jewels. Before it kneels a French King of the ſame Metal, but of a leſs Size, and near that an Image of St. Michael, compoſed of Jewels and precious Stones. This Town is reckoned the ſtrongeſt in Bavaria, and has one of the fineſt Arſenals in Germany. After the Battel of Hochſtet it was ſurrendered to the Confederates.

4. Donawert, 25 Miles Weſt from Ingolſtad, ſtands on the ſame River. 'Tis a ſtrong Town, was made Imperial by the Emperor Sigiſmond, and continued ſo till 1607, when it was proſcribed by Rodolph II. for embracing the Proteſtant Religion, and afterwards taken by the Duke of Bavaria. The Swedes took it twice in the Civil Wars; but 'twas reſtored to Bavaria by the Treaty of Munſter. Thoſe who go up or down the River are obliged to pay a ſmall Toll, which brings the Town a great deal of Money, as does the Paſſage of their Bridge over the Danube, becauſe it ſtands near many great Towns. Near this Town lies Schellemberg, a fortified Mountain, which ſerves the Town inſtead of a Caſtle. 'Tis famous for the Defeat of the French and Bavarians in 1704, when the Confederates forced the Trenches, and ſoon made themſelves Maſters of Donawert.

5. Rain, on the River Lech, 10 Miles South-Eaſt from Donawert, a well fortified Town, and reckoned one of the Keys of Bavaria.

6. Oetingen, Old and New, in a Plain betwixt the River Inn and the Mountains, 43 Miles Eaſt of Munich. Theſe Towns were formerly one, and much larger than now. 'Tis the Loretto of Germany, and much enriched by the Preſents of ſuperſtitious People, becauſe the Jeſuits give out that many Miracles have been done by the Virgin's Image and Reliques they keep here.

7. Tegernſee, 30 Miles South-Eaſt from Munich, named from the Lake on which it ſtands, is well fortified. Noted for a Monaſtery, whoſe Abbot takes place in Convocation before all the Abbots and Priors in the Country.

8. Waſſerburg, about 28 Miles South-Eaſt from Munich, is a pretty Town, ſtrong by Situation, at the Conflux of another River and the Inn. 'Tis Capital of a County of the ſame Name.

9. Hag, Capital of a County; it ſtands near the Inn, 12 Miles North from Waſſerburg, and is governed by its own Laws.

10. Muldorf, on the Inn, 15 Miles North-Eaſt, a little Town, famous for a Victory in 1322, by the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, over Frederic Duke of Auſtria, whom he took Priſoner.

11. Burkhauſen, a ſtrong Town on the River Saltzach, 12 Miles South-Eaſt from Muldorf.

12. Branaw or Brunnau, near the River Inn, 19 Miles Eaſt from Muldorf, is very well fortified, and held out againſt the Swedes in 1632.

The chief Towns in Lower Bavaria are,

1. Ratisbon or Regenſpurg, the chief City in the Circle, and the only Imperial Town in the Elector's Dominions. It lies on the South ſide of the Danube, Long. 12. 25. Lat. 45. 20. 55 Miles North from Munich, and 57 North-Eaſt from Augsburg. La Forreſt ſays, the Dukes of Bavaria poſſeſſed it till 1180, that the Emperor Frederic Barbaroſſa made it an Imperial Town. It has ſtill the Remains of the Palaces of the old Dukes of Bavaria, which are venerable Pieces of Architecture; and there is a Place ſtill in the Corn-Market called the Duke's Palace. The Elector Palatine had alſo two fine Palaces here, but was forced to quit his Pretenſions, by reaſon of his Quarrel with the Citizens about the Royalty of the Danube; which ſtill occaſions Diſputes between the Palatine and Bavarian Families.

The City is large, populous, and well fortified; the Situation is pleaſant, in a Soil which abounds with Corn and Paſtures, and Vineyards that yield a ſtrong palatable Wine, ſcarce inferior to the beſt Rheniſh. They have a great Trade by the Danube, which with other Neighbouring Rivers abounds with Fiſh. The Houſes are generally well built, and the Streets large. In one of the old Houſes over-againſt the Town-Hall, there is a famous Monument repreſenting the Emperor Henry the Fowler, and a Duel betwixt a Turk and a Nobleman of this City, in 913; with the exact Figures of the Arms, and Habits of thoſe Times. The Turk's Armour continued above 600 Years in the Church of the Monaſtery of Nider-Munſter, till Charles V. begged it of the Abbeſs: His Helmet was of caſt Braſs, weighing 20 lb. his Harneſs was a long Coat of Elephant's Skin, almoſt covered with thick Boſſes of Iron; his Shield was of well poliſhed Steel, upon which was engraved the Picture of a Devil with a Spear in his Hand; his Sword was two Yards and a half long, and near five Inches broad.

This City is the See of a Biſhop, who depends immediately on the Pope. They embraced the Augsburg Confeſſion in 1442, but the Biſhop, who is Lord of the neighbouring Territory, has Maſs ſaid in the Cathedral every Week. Here is a Stone Bridge of 15 large Arches, over the Danube, ſupported by ſquare Pillars, and defended by Buttreſſes againſt the Shoals of Ice: 'Tis 23 Foot broad, and 1091 long: There are three fair Towers on it. The Papiſts have the Cathedral and 90 other Churches; but the Lutherans are moſt numerous, and have the Government. La Forreſt ſays, The Burghers have a Privilege to throw their Children into the Danube, if they are incorrigible, without accounting for it.

The DYET of the EMPIRE.

THAT which makes this City moſt famous, is, its being the Seat of the Dyet of the Empire. The Atlas Hiſtorique, in which there is a noble Cut of this Illuſtrious Aſſembly, gives the following Account of it.

IT may properly be called a PARLIAMENT, it being the General Aſſembly of all the Eſtates of the Empire. 'Tis ſummoned by the Emperor, with Advice of the Electors, and the Emperor ſends Letters ſigned with his own Hand, and counterſigned by the Vice-Chancellor of the Empire, to each of the Princes and States, ſix Months before it is opened, to come thither in Perſon, or to ſend their Deputies, which they are obliged to obey, upon their Allegiance: But as for ſuch Abbots and Biſhops who are not Princes, he does not write to them, and only writes to their Directors to give them Notice. While the Empire was in the Hands of the French, the Princes were all obliged to appear in Perſon, except they were excuſed by the Emperor and Electors, but now moſt of them ſend their Deputies to ſave Charges, which makes their Proceedings much ſlower, becauſe their Deputies are often obliged to ſend for their Inſtructions in Caſes of Importance. And ſince the Time of Maximilian, many of them have forborn to ſend Deputies, but are as much obliged to ſubmit to the Reſolves of the Dyet, as if they did. Sometimes in Caſes of Importance, the Emperor not only ſends Letters, but Ambaſſadors, to require their Preſence; and in urgent Affairs, thoſe who do not ſend, make their Ambaſſadors Plenipotentiaries. The Emperor has Power, with Advice of the Electors to call the Dyet, when and where he pleaſes, provided it be within the Bounds of the Empire; but 'tis generally held in this City, becauſe of its convenient Situation, and the eaſy Paſſage to it by the Danube. All the Princes bear their own Charge, or that of their Deputies. When they arrive, they give Notice to the Hereditary Marſhal of the Empire, under the Elector of Saxony, who aſſigns them their Lodgings, according to their Quality. If the Emperor be preſent, they beg Audience of him, ſhew him their Summons, thank him for calling the Dyet, and promiſe Concurrence, for the Good of the Empire. If he be not there, the Princes ſend Gentlemen to notify their Arrival, to the Director of Mentz; but if they be Deputies they ſend their Secretaries, with their full Powers, as do alſo the Deputies of the Towns. When they are all come, the Marſhal of the Empire acquaints them when and where the Emperor or, if abſent, his Commiſſary is, to tell them what he has to propoſe. If the Emperor be there, he goes in his Robes to the Throne, which he aſcends by three Steps. The Electors ſit on a Bench which they aſcend by two, and the Princes on other Benches not raiſed ſo high. If the Emperor be there, before they proceed to Buſineſs, they attend him to Church, where publick Prayers are made for a Bleſſing upon their Conſultations. When they are returned, the Elector of Treves thanks the Emperor for calling a Dyet, and the Secretary of the Empire receiving the Propoſals from the Vice-Chancellor, reads them: After which the Colleges retire each to their ſeveral Apartments, and when they have conſidered them, agree upon a Day when to meet and communicate their Thoughts to one another; which when done and paſſed into a Reſolve, they ſend it to the Emperor, and if he approves it, it becomes a Law or Conſtitution of the Empire. The Princes are divided into two Branches, the Spiritual and the Secular. Formerly the Secular Princes did not meddle with Church Affairs, nor the Eccleſiaſtics with thoſe of the State; but when the Popes brought all Church-Affairs to their own Tribunals, ſuch of the Prelates as had no Temporal Juriſdiction, were excluded from the Dyet. The Archdukes of Auſtria, the Duke of Burgundy, and the Maſter of the Teutonic Order, ſit on the Eccleſiaſtic Bench, becauſe they are Princes of extraordinary Eminence. The Lutheran Princes were formerly excluded the Dyet, and could have no Redreſs, notwithſtanding their frequent Proteſtations, till they were allowed a Place by themſelves, by the Treaty of Weſtphalia. All the Eccleſiaſtical and Secular Members have not equal Votes; for ſuch of both as have Princely Dignities, are allowed ſingle Votes, but thoſe who have not, give their Votes by Companies, as the Deputies of the Towns of the Bench of the Rhine or of Swabia. The Counts and Barons were alſo formerly divided into the two Benches of Wetteravia and Swabia, when each Bench was allowed but one Vote; but now the Counts of Franconia and Weſtphalia, which includes thoſe of Saxony, are allowed two Benches and two Votes, the former ſince 1641, and the latter ſince 1654. The Deputies of the Imperial Towns make up the third Rank of Members. The Deputies of the City where the Dyet is held, ſit at a Table by themſelves, and take an Account of the Voices of the other Delegates, which are brought to them, and regiſtered by the two Regiſters of Ulm and Spire; the former repreſenting the Cities in the Circle of the Rhine, and the latter thoſe of Swabia. The greateſt Diſputes in the Dyet commonly happen about Precedency, in which they ſpend more Time than in debating the Emperor's Propoſals. Another Part of their Time is too often ſpent in Drinking-Matches, for which the Emperor Ferdinand did ſharply reprove them. A third Part of their Time is too often ſpent about the Power of the Dyet, ſhewing in what Caſes they may or may not be controlled by the Emperor. And the laſt Part is ſpent on the Emperor's Propoſals, making or annulling of Laws, regulating the Coin or raiſing Taxes, and ſuch other Affairs of State.

They ſit in a large ſtately upper Room in the Town-Hall, richly hung with curious Tapeſtry and Needle-work. The Emperor's Throne is covered with Cloth of Gold; and the Chairs and Benches of the other Princes and State are with Cloth of Silver, Velvet, Silk, Sattin, &c. according to their Qualities. The Elector of Treves ſits before the Foot of the Throne, as Director of the Electoral College: The Electors of Cologne, Bohemia, Palatine, and Brandenburg, ſit on the Right: Thoſe of Mentz, Saxony, Bavaria, and Hanover, on the Left. The Eccleſiaſtical Princes ſit under the Electors on the Right, and the Secular Princes under the Electors on the Left. The Deputies of the Towns, and of the Bench of the Rhine, ſit under the Eccleſiaſtical; and the Deputies of the Towns, and of the Bench of Swabia, ſit under the Secular Princes. The Deputies of Lubec and Oſnabrug, ſit at the croſs Bench, before the Elector of Treves. Count Papenheim, as Marſhal of the Empire, ſits at a Table in the middle of the Hall before the Croſs Bench. The Directoral Table with the Officers attending it, is on one Side before the Secular Princes.

None has a Right to ſit in the College of Princes, but thoſe who contribute to the Support of the Empire, according to the Matricula. The Directors of this College are, the Archbiſhop of Saltzburg, the Archduke of Auſtria, and the Duke of Burgundy, who preſide by Turns, as new Matters come to be debated. The Votes of the Secular and Eccleſiaſtical Bench, are alternately taken by Count Papenheim, after which the Archbiſhop of Saltzburg, and the Archduke, draw the Reſult, and report it to the Dyet. Such Princes as poſſeſs ſeveral Dominions, have a Vote for each. The Magiſtrates of the City where the Dyet is held, is Director of the College of the Towns.

There is another Dyet, called The Aſſembly of Deputations; where the Deputies choſen determine Things that have been referred to them by a Dyet, when the Elector of Mentz, in the Emperor's Name, ſummons the Deputies, at the Requeſt of the Directors or Captains of one or more Circles, to take Order about their Affairs, or to appeaſe Controverſies which they are not able to decide themſelves.

In 1703, the Elector of Bavaria poſſeſſed himſelf of the Town by Surpriſe, while the Dyet was ſitting, which was as great an Affront as could be put upon the Emperor and Empire; but the Town being in no Condition of Defence, the Dyet thought fit to remove. This Action of the Elector's was much reſented by the Proteſtant Deputies, who ſuſpected that the Neglect of the Popiſh Deputies to prevent it, proceeded more from Deſign than Supineneſs. He was humbled afterwards, when he and his Allies the French were beat at the Battle of Hochſtet.

2. Kelheim, 8 Miles South-Weſt from Ratisbon, upon the Danube, was ſurprized in 1705, by one Craus, a Butcher, at the Head of a Bavarian Mob: He called himſelf a General, had the Inſolence to menace Ratisbon, if the Magiſtrates took part with the Allies, and alſo threatened to levy Contribution in the Country. Being inveſted by a Detachment of the Confederates, he endeavoured to force his Way thro', but was drove back into the Town. Thoſe of his Party who made Reſiſtance were put to the Sword, and Craus was taken. Another Commander of the Rebels, who had taken Count Tattenbach, ſent word to the Imperial General, that they would treat the Count in the ſame Manner as he ſhould treat the Butcher: Notwithſtanding which, Craus was hang'd, drawn and quarterd, his Houſe razed, a Gallows erected on the Place, thoſe that aſſiſted him to take Kelheim, were ordered to draw Lots, and every 15th Man to be hanged, and the reſt able to bear Arms were obliged to liſt.

3. Straubing or Straubingen, 25 Miles South-Eaſt from Ratisbon. 'Tis a Town of good Trade, well fortified, and has a Bridge over the Danube.

4. Moſpurg or Moſburg, Capital of a County, 15 Miles Eaſt of Freiſingen, upon the ſame River. 'Tis a large pleaſant Town, had formerly Counts of its own. It has 28 Towns of good Note, beſides many Villages under its Juriſdiction, that come to a Court of Juſtice here.

5. Landſhut, 30 Miles South from Ratisbon, and 33 North-Eaſt from Munich. Is reckoned the chief Town of Lower Bavaria, and the Seat of the Elector's Deputy, who has a Court here for the Government of the Country, in which there are 6 Bailiwicks, 32 Market-Towns, 14 Monaſteries, and 74 Noblemens Seats with their Dependencies. The Town is generally well built. St. Martin's, which is reckoned its chief Church, has a Tower ſuppoſed to be the higheſt in the Empire. The new Buildings in the Duke's Palace are of fine Architecture, after the Italian Manner. The Town is well fortified, and defended by a Caſtle.

6. Paſſaw lies at the Conflux of the Danube and Inn, 50 Miles Eaſt from Landſhut. The River Inn runs into the Danube here with ſuch Force, that it keeps its Stream unmixed for a long way, as is perceived by the different Colours of the Water; and it is the ſame as to the River Ilz, which gives Name to that Part of the Town on the North Side of the Danube. This City is naturally well fortified on all Sides by Rocks and Rivers, is large, and an Imperial Town, but under the Protection of its Biſhop, who is a Prince of the Empire, and his Juriſdiction extends about 20 Miles on the North Side of the Danube. The Magiſtrates act by his Commiſſion, but pay ſome Acknowledgment to the Elector. The Biſhop is Suffragan of Saltzburg. His Palace and the Caſtle on a neighbouring Mountain, are handſomely built of Stone. The Churches are fair and ſtately, eſpecially St. Stephen's Cathedral, which is a ſumptuous Fabric, and has many fair Tombs and Monuments. The Town is famous for a Treaty betwixt the Emperor Charles V. and the Elector of Saxony, in 1552; by which the Proteſtants had Freedom of Religion granted them in the Empire. There are ſeveral Towns in Auſtria, and Lordſhips in Bavaria, that belong to the Dioceſe, which of late Years has commonly been governed by a Prince of the Houſe of Auſtria, and yields 80000 Crowns per Ann. The River Ilz produces Pearls, which belong to the Emperor and the Elector, who have each an Officer here to take care of their Intereſts. Moſt of the Houſes were formerly of Timber, but having ſuffered by Fire, they are rebuilt after the Italian Manner. Here is a Bridge over the Inn to that Part of the Town called Inſtat. The Elector of Bavaria took this Town in 1703, but was ſoon after obliged to abandon it.

7. Oberndberg,

7. Obernberg, on the River Inn, about 15 Miles South-West from Paſſaw. Is a ſmall City, with a good Caſtle, the uſual Reſidence of the Biſhop, and takes Toll from thoſe that paſs up or down the Inn. The Biſhop has alſo a Seat at Reccherſperg, another ſmall City near to this.

8. Abach, a fair Market-Town in the Danube, 6 Miles South-Weſt of Ratisbon. Noted for the Birth of the Emperor Henry II. for ſeveral Roman Antiquities found in the Neighbourhood, and a Bath which being artificially heated, cures Melancholy, Apoplexies, Dropſies, &c.

SALTZBURG Archbiſhoprick lies in the South-Eaſt Corner of the Circle, is 50 Miles South and North, and 75 where broadeſt, from Eaſt to Weſt. It abounds with Salt, Mines of Copper and Iron, and has ſome of Silver. Here are alſo many Quarries, with Variety of Stones of different Forms, and particularly Jaſper.

Places of Note are,

1. Soltzburg, on the River Saltz, ſo called, becauſe of the many Salt-Pits on its Banks, and hence came the preſent Name of the Town and Country. The Town lies in Lat. 47. 40. Lon. 13. 20. 60 Miles South-Eaſt from Munich, and 40 from Waſſerburg. The Biſhops of Chiemſee, Gurck, Seccaw, Titmoning, Lauant, Freiſingen, Paſſaw, Brixen, and Ratisbon, are reckoned Suffragans to the Archbiſhop. Charlemain gave him the Title of Metropolitan of Bavaria in 798, which formerly belonged to the Biſhop of Paſſaw. The Cathedral was built by St. Virgilius, a Scotſman, in 773, and by him dedicated to St. Rupert, Son to a King of Scots, who was the Apoſtle of Bavaria, as Canisius ſays, in his Monuments of Saltzburg, Antiq. Lect. Tom. IV. Pope Gregory VII. made the Archbiſhop perpetual Legate for Germany, in 1073, which occaſioned a Diſpute betwixt him and the Archbiſhop of Magdeburg for Precedency, till 1648, when Magdeburg being ſecularized by the Treaty of Munſter, this Archbiſhop was made Primate of Germany. He is a Prince of the Empire, Con-Director of the Circle with the Elector of Bavaria, creates Knights of the Order of St. Rupert, who have a Medal with that Saint's Effigies, and the Red Croſs of the Order; has the firſt Voice in the Dyet, of any Eccleſiaſtical Prince, next to the Electors, and is choſen by a Chapter of 28 Canons, who muſt all prove their Nobility before admitted. The Cathedral was new built in 1628, and reckoned one of the ſtatelieſt in Europe. The famous Phyſician Paracelſus, who died in 1541, is entombed in St. Sebaſtian's Church here. The Town is very ſtrong, and well built, it ſuffered much formerly by Fire, and Inundations of the three Rivers, at whoſe Conflux it lies, but 'tis now one of the faireſt Cities in the Empire. The Archbiſhop's Palace, upon a neighbouring Hill, is magnificent, well fortified, and called Mirabel: The Great Hall, the Tapeſtry, and his Cabinet of Rarities, are admired by Travellers. It has fine Gardens and Orchards, with Figs, Pomegranates, and other choice Fruits. The Inns of the City are ſo large, that they are capable of entertaining the greateſt Princes with their Attendants. The chief Trade of the Town is in Salt, from neighbouring Pits. The Archbiſhop has a noble Houſe, and Gardens of Pleaſure near it, with curious Water-Works, in the Shape of ſtrange Beaſts, Fowls, Fiſh, &c. of which many ſtrange Sorts are kept in Cages and Ponds. There are two curious Viſto's from Houſes of Pleaſure, and a fine Proſpect of the City from hence. A little above the Town is the famous Bath of Gaſtein. The Water is hot, taſtes ſtrong of ſeveral Minerals, cures the Stone, Cholic, Pox, and other malignant Diſtempers, but is never taken inwardly.

2. Berchtolſgaden, a little Town, 15 Miles South from Saltzburg, noted for an Abbey, whoſe Abbot is a Prince of the Empire, depends immediately on the Pope, and has 10000 Crowns per Ann.

3. Haltein, 8 Miles South from Saltzburg, on the ſame River, famous for its Salt-Pits, which employ Multitudes of People. One of the Pits is 6300 Foot deep. Several German Authors ſay, that a human Body was found here in the middle of a Rock of hard Salt, with its Limbs, Hair, and Cloathes, uncorrupted; and by the Antique Dreſs, ſeemed to have lain there ſome Ages.

4. Lauffen, 15 Miles North-Weſt from Saltzburg, upon the ſame River; a pleaſant Town of good Trade, ſuppoſed to be Antoninus's Laviacum, becauſe of a Roman Inſcription found near it. A General Dyet of the Empire was held here, by Frederic I. in 1147.

5. Chiemſee, about 22 Miles Weſt from Saltzburg. A ſmall Town on an Iſland in a Lake of the ſame Name, the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Saltzburg.

NORTGOW or the Upper Palatinate of Bavaria, has Part of Franconia and Swabia on the Weſt, Saxony on the North, and Part of Bohemia and Auſtria on the Eaſt, and the Danube on the South, except a ſmall Part which lies on the South Side of the River. 'Tis called Nortgow, becauſe 'tis the North Part of the Circle and Dutchy. 'Tis about 70 Miles from South to North, and 80 where broadeſt, Eaſt and Weſt. Some Parts of it are rocky, others fruitful, with plenty of Corn and Graſs, and a harſh ſort of Wine. It has Mines of Silver, Copper, and Iron; they export great Quantities of the latter. In 1664, at Freyung in this County, were found two remarkable ſorts of Lead-Ore, which were ſent, with ſome Specimens of other Metals, to our Royal Society. One of them is a kind of Chryſtalline-Stone, almoſt all good Lead, and the other not ſo rich, but both of ſingular Uſe for Eſſays upon the Coppel. In the South-Weſt Corner of the Province, betwixt two ſmall Rivers which fall into the Danube and the Main, there is the Ruins of a Canal, begun by Charles the Great, with a Deſign to make a Paſſage betwixt the Danube and Rhine; but Dr. Nicholſon ſays, the Men were obliged to deſiſt, by exceſſive Rains and frightful Apparitions.

Places of Note, are,

1. Amberg, the Metropolis, 30 Miles Eaſt from Nuremberg, and 30 North from Ratisbon. 'Tis reckoned one of the ſtrongeſt Towns in Germany. It lies conveniently for Trade, on the River Vils: Their chief Commerce is from their Iron Mines, and in the Wire they make of it. The Caſtle and Armory are curious Structures: and the Town has great Privileges granted them by the Emperor Robert. It belonged formerly to the Elector Palatine, as did all the reſt of the Country, but has been ſubject to the Elector of Bavaria ſince Frederic V. was proſcribed in 1623.

2. Sulzbach, 5 Miles Weſt from Amberg, had formerly Counts of its own, who were ſo conſiderable, that they intermarried with the Imperial Family. The Male-Iſſue failing, the City and its Territory are now in a Branch of the Family of Neuburg, from whom the preſent Elector Palatine is deſcended. The adjacent Country is ſo ſtony, that they have no Water but from one Rivulet, with which they brew excellent Beer, that ſupplies their Want of Wine. The Duke's Palace and the Church are fair Structures. 'Tis well built, and the Streets uniform, but it ſuffered much by the Civil Wars of Germany, as ſtill may be ſeen by the Ruins.

3. Chamb, 35 Miles South-Eaſt of Amberg, Capital of its County.

4. Waldſaſſen, a rich Ciſtertian Monaſtery, 38 Miles North-Eaſt from Amberg; noted for the Monuments of ſeveral Princes, and its Abbot's being a Prince of the Empire.

The Places belonging to the Family of Neuburg, in this Country, are,

1. Neuburg, on the South Side of the Danube, 10 Miles North-Weſt from Ingolſtadt. 'Twas formerly the Seat, and ſtill gives Title of a Duke to the preſent Palatine Family. 'Tis Metropolis of the Dutchy, which lies on both Sides the Danube, is about 50 Miles long, and 38 where broadeſt. Here is a ſtately Palace, and a Church and College of the Jeſuits. The chief Trade of the Town is in Wine, ſold weekly in their public Markets. The Duke has a great Revenue from a Toll on Veſſels that paſs up and down the Danube, over which there is a Bridge here. This City was taken by the Elector of Bavaria in 1703, but he was ſoon obliged to quit it.

2. Lavingen, a ſtrong well fortified Town, on the Danube, 22 Miles Weſt from Donawert. 'Tis a neat City, has a good Trade, and by the Roman Antiquities found in the Neighbourhood, 'tis ſuppoſed to have been a Roman Colony. 'Tis noted for the Birth of the famous Albertus Magnus, of a noble and ancient Family here, and for a ſtout Shoemaker, who killed a Hungarian Giant in a Duel, for which the Emperor Otho I. among other Favours, gave them for Arms, A Moor's Head Crowned, with a Chain of Gold about his Neck. Here is a Bridge over the Danube, a Caſtle, and a large Church covered with Copper, and has a Steeple above 300 Foot high. The Duke's of Neuburg were formerly entomb'd here.

3. Hochſtet, on the Danube, about 9 Miles Eaſt from Lavingen, and 15 Weſt from Donawert. It is claimed by the Biſhop of Bamberg, but poſſeſſed by the Duke of Neuburg. It has a very ſtrong Caſtle, is a pretty Town, well ſupplied with all Neceſſaries, and has rich Corn-Fields, and good Paſtures in the Neighbourhood. Its Fame will live to lateſt Poſterity, by the Great Victory obtained in the adjacent Plain, over the French and Bavarians in 1703, by the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene; in Memory of which there is a Noble Pillar erected, with an Inſcription upon it in the Field of Battle.

4. Blenheim, 8 Miles North from Hochſtet, famous for the taking of 20 French Battalions of Foot, and 12 Squadrons of Dragoons, after a ſtout Reſiſtance, by the Earl of Orkney, who attacked them here, after their Horſe were routed at Hochſtet.

5. Dillingen, on the Danube, betwixt Lavinghen and Hochſtet, a neat little City, with the Title of a County. It belongs to the Biſhop of Augsburg, who has a fine Palace here, where he uſually reſides. Here is alſo a ſtately College of Jeſuits.

6. Neumarckt. 'Tis Capital of a Territory, and lies about 17 Miles almoſt North from Donawert. 'Tis a fair City, ſtands in a pleaſant fruitful Country, and trades chiefly in Iron. It was formerly an Imperial City, and had a Proteſtant College, which was deſtroyed by the Duke of Bavaria, who took this Town in the Civil Wars, and has kept it ever ſince. There are ſeveral Towns belonging to its Juriſdiction, the chief of which is Gnadenberg, noted for a Monaſtery, one part of which is for Monks, and another for Nuns, with a magnificent Church, and 36 Altars. It embraced the Reformation in the 16th Century; but ſince it was reſtored to the Papiſts, by the Elector of Bavaria, it has loſt its former Grandeur, the Revenues being divided betwixt the Elector and the Jeſuits.

The Hiſtory of the Family of BAVARIA.

THIS Family being deſcended from the ſame Stock with the Elector Palatine, we need not enlarge upon it. The Country was formerly a Kingdom, and had very great Princes of Charlemain's Line, who extended their Dominions a great way into Hungary, &c. but were degraded for Rebellion, and Arnulf, the laſt of 'em, was obliged to content himſelf with the Title of Duke. Some derive both the Palatine and Bavarian Families from him. The Emperor Henry III. was one of this Family, and ſaid to be the firſt that came in by Election, according to the Order made by Pope Gregory V. He dying without Iſſue, Bavaria was given to other Families, but at laſt returned to Arnulf's Poſterity; and Duke Otho the Illuſtrious marrying the Heireſs of Henry Duke of Saxony and Count Palatine, brought the Electoral Dignity firſt into the Family; from his eldeſt Son came the Palatine Family, and from a younger that of Bavaria. Lewis of Bavaria being choſen Emperor, maintained his Title againſt Frederic of Auſtria and his own Brother Rodolph, Elector Palatine, whom he baniſhed, but confirmed the Title of the Lower Palatinate and Amberg to his Children, and ordered that the Electoral Dignity ſhould be alternately in them and his own Poſterity. But the Emperor Charles IV. gave it to Rodolph's Branch; againſt which the Dukes of Bavaria always proteſted at the Election of Emperors. Rupert, Elector Palatine, having married the only Daughter of George the Rich of Bavaria, he expected the Dutchy; but the Emperor Maximilian I. unwilling that the Palatine Family ſhould riſe too high, encouraged the other Prince of the Bavarian Line to diſpute his Pretenſions by War; ſo that Albert, deſcended from Duke Stephen, had the Dutchy. His Grandſon Maximilian joining the Emperor againſt Frederic V. Elector Palatine and King of Bohemia, had for his Service the Upper Palatinate, and the Title of Elector for Life. Several other Electors proteſted againſt it; but it was confirmed to him and his Heirs by the Treaty of Munſter. The preſent Elector Maximilian is his Son, and was, together with his Brother the Elector of Cologne, proſcribed for joining with France and Spain againſt the Emperor; but reſtored by the Treaty of Baden in 1714.

His

His Titles are, Duke of Upper and Lower Bavaria, and of the Upper Palatinate, Duke and Count Palatine of the Rhine, Elector, and Grand Maſter of the Emperor's Houſhold.

His Country ſuffered much by the late Wars, before which he was reckoned one of the greateſt Prince of the Empire. He has a ſplendid Court, his Miniſters being generally Counts and Barons. His ſtanding Troops were 24900 Foot, and 5850 Horſe and Dragoons.

IX. The Circle of AUSTRIA

IS by much the largeſt in the Empire, eſpecially ſince the Kingdom of Bohemia, the Dutchy of Sileſia, and Marquiſate of Moravia have been reckoned to it. Taking in thoſe Countries, 'tis 390 Miles from South to North, and 340 where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt; but is indented by other Dominions, as appears by the Map.

The Dominions contained in it are,

I. The Kingdom of BOHEMIA, which is almoſt of a round Form, has Saxony on the North-Weſt and North, Auſtria on the South and South-Eaſt, Bavaria on the Weſt and South-Weſt, Moravia on the Eaſt, and Sileſia on the South-Eaſt. 'Tis about 140 Miles South and North, and 170 where longeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. It lies in the 8th and 9th Climates, and the longeſt Day is 16 ½ Hours.

The Soil in general is fat and arable, but in ſome Places barren or ſandy. Here are many Woods and Foreſts that abound with wild Beaſts and Fowl. The Gardens and Orchards yield Fruit enough for Conſumption and Export. Their Wine does not keep long, therefore they don't much cultivate Vineyards. Their brown and white Beer is much valued and exported; and their Hops are better and more plentiful than thoſe of their Neighbours. They have Meadows and Paſtures in abundance; their Cattel are large, and their Horſes good for War. Here are Salt-pits, Mines of Silver, Copper, Tin, Iron, Lead, Sulphur, Nitre. Carbuncles, Amethyſts, Jaſper, Sapphire, and other precious Stones are found in their Mines, &c. of which there is a Hiſtory by Anſelm Boetius. Here is alſo Store of Saffron. Tho' the Air be cold, yet La Forreſt ſays, it breeds contagious Diſtempers in ſome Parts of the Country. The Inhabitants are generally large, well made, ſubtle, couragious; and generally true to their Word. Their Language is a Dialect of the old Slavonic; but moſt People of Faſhion ſpeak High Dutch, which begins to mix with their own.

The Proteſtant Religion had early footing here: Anne, Queen to our Richard II. being a Bohemian, ſome who came with her copied ſeveral of Wickliff's Writings at Oxford, and carried 'em to John Huſs and Jerome of Prague, who being convinced by them, ſet about a Reformation with great Succeſs; and it ſpread ſo, after they were burnt at the Council of Conſtance, that the Pope after the Death of their good King Wenceſlaus, who defended the Huſſites, ſtirred up the Emperor and other Princes to root them out; but they bravely defended themſelves under Ziſca, a valiant Lord, who had wonderful Succeſs: But after his Death, their Enemies found means to divide them, which at laſt proved their Ruin; the Remains of 'em being drove to the Mountains near Moravia, joined with the Waldenſes, and were called by that Name. When Luther appeared, they agreed very much with him in Doctrine and Diſcipline; and there were here and in Moravia 17 Barons and 146 Knights of their Communion. The Emperors Maximilian and Rudolph II. gave them Liberty; but Matthias perſecuted them, which gave riſe to the Bohemian War in 1618. The Proteſtants choſe Frederic V. Elector Palatine, King, to protect them; but he being defeated at the Battel of Prague in 1620, and the chief of the Proteſtants killed and executed, the reſt were baniſhed in 1639, and their Worſhip has not ſince that time been tolerated there. It appears by their Confeſſion that they were of the ſame Principles with thoſe named Calviniſts. The Country has never recovered the Loſſes ſuſtained by thoſe Wars, many of their Towns being ſtill ruinous, and others deſolate.

Places of Note are,

1. Prague, the Metropolis, Lat. 51. Long. 14. 40. It lies on the River Muldaw, Part of it on a Hill, and the reſt in a Plain. 'Tis divided into the Old, New, and Little City, which makes it one of the largeſt in the Empire. The Old Town, Eaſt of the River, is populous, and the Houſes fair, but old-faſhioned. Here ſtands the Univerſity, ſo famous when John Huſs was Rector, that there were 40000 Students here: 'Tis the only Univerſity in the Nation, and ſtill one of the moſt conſiderable in the Empire. This Part is called the Jews Town, becauſe great Numbers of 'em dwell here, are very rich, and trade in all Commodities, eſpecially in Jewels and other precious Stones found in the Bohemian Mines. The New Town was ſeparated from the Old by a Wall, but now only by a Ditch, into which they can let the Water of the River. Here are the Ruins of the Palace of their ancient Kings. The Jeſuits have a ſtately Church and College here; and over the Gate there are 13 Statues of Men large as the Life, of a Stone which reſembles Braſs. They have another in the Old Town, near the Bridge, and from its Belfry there is the beſt View of the City. The Leſſer Town is Weſt of the River, and much exceeds the Old in Pleaſantneſs and Building; 'tis joined to the Old by a Bridge of 16 Arches, 1700 Foot long, and 35 broad, with a high Gate and a large Tower at each End. Part of this Town is built on a riſing Ground, at the top of which lies Upper Prague, where the Emperor has a Summer-houſe and a magnificent Palace, with a multitude of Apartments, ſeveral large Halls, Galleries, noble Pictures, and large Stables. Here is alſo the Cathedral of St. Veit, with many ancient Monuments of great Perſons. Moſt of the Nobility have Houſes here. The Palace of Count Wallenſtein is very magnificent and large, above 100 Houſes being pull'd down to make room for it: The Hall is lofty and ſpacious, and the Gardens large and beautiful: Here is a noble Aviary, beautified with Trees, and his large Stables of fine Architecture, for 36 Horſes, with a Marble Pillar betwixt each Horſe, Steel Racks, and Marble Mangers, and over Head the Picture of every Horſe as large as the Life. The Palace and Gardens of Caboredo are alſo very ſtately. The Town-houſe is a fine Structure, and has a noble Clock with many Motions, like that at Lyons. In the Market-place there is a large Column, with a Statue of the Virgin, of gilt Braſs, and 4 Angels at the Corners, holding 4 Devils in Chains, and near it an old ſtately Fountain of curious Workmanſhip; the Baſon of red Marble, and in the middle there is a Figure on a Pedeſtal. The Caſtle on the Hill above the Town is very ſtrong. The States of the Kingdom formerly met here; and in 1618 threw the Emperor's Deputies out at the Windows, becauſe they had deprived them of their Privileges: They were not kill'd, tho' they fell from a great Height; in remembrance of which, there is a Pillar erected on the Place. This City was formerly Imperial, but now ſubject to the Emperor as King of Bohemia. The Burgrave of the City is Governor of the Kingdom. The Inhabitants are poor, and the Shops but meanly furniſh'd. The Women of Quality dreſs after the French Faſhion; the better ſort of the Citizens Wives wear Fur Caps, and long Cloaks with large Necks, ſome of 'em of Sattin, lined with Taffata, and Petticoats of the ſame, but ſhort, becauſe the Streets are dirty. The Jewiſh Women have a diſtinct Habit. This City is the See of an Archbiſhop, whoſe Suffragans are, the Biſhops of Leitomeritz, Koningretz, and Olmutz. The Town was taken ſeveral times during the Civil Wars of Germany, when the Swedes took a vaſt Booty here.

2. Carlſtein, 15 Miles South-Weſt from Prague, is a Fortreſs built by the Emperor Charles IV. and the Place where the Regalia of the Kingdom are kept.

3. Kuttenberg or Hora, 35 Miles South-Eaſt from Prague, according to our Maps; Dr. Brown makes it but 12, ſays, it lies near the Elb, is a conſiderable Town, has 30 Mines in the Nighbourhood; the chief is that of Kuttenburg, 19 Fathom deep, which contains Silver and Copper, 100 Weight of ſome Ore yields an Ounce of Silver, and from 8 to 10 of Copper; and the like Weight of other Ore yields 8 or 9 Ounces of Silver. When they meet with blue Earth, they think it a Sign of good Ore.

4. Czaſlaw, 37 Miles South-Eaſt of Prague, Capital of its Diſtrict, and famous for being the Place where the valiant Ziſca was buried: The Imperialiſts during the Civil Wars dug up and threw his Aſhes about.

5. Janikaw, 48 Miles South-Eaſt from Prague, noted for a great Victory by the Swedes over the Imperialiſts in 1643.

7. Badweiſſe or Budweiſs, 70 Miles South from Prague, a large Town, and one of the ſtrongeſt in the Kingdom.

8. Glatz, 80 Miles North-Eaſt of Prague, on the Frontiers of Sileſia, where ſome place it, Capital of its Diſtrict, which contains 9 large Towns, and 100 Villages. It has a ſtrong Caſtle on the top of a Hill, is a neat City, lies in a Plain by the River Neiſſa. 'Twas an Appanage, and formerly gave Title of Duke to a Son of Bohemia, and has the Power of coining Money in the Name of the Magiſtrates; but they ſeldom coin any above the Value of a Farthing or Half-penny. Their Trade is in Silver Ore, Iron, Timber, Coals, Veniſon, Cattel, Butter and Cheeſe. Its Diſtrict ſome Years brings 40000 Crowns to the Treaſury at Prague. Their Great Church was formerly an Idol Temple, where young Maids uſed to nail up their Hair againſt the Walls, as Tabulæ Votivæ; ſome of which remained there not many Years ago.

9. Elnbogen, 60 Miles Weſt of Prague, and 15 North-Eaſt of Egra, one of the Keys of Bohemia; 'tis well fortified, and opens a Paſſage into Saxony.

10. Carelsbad, 8 Miles Eaſt from hence, noted for its Baths and Medicinal Waters.

12. Egra, on a River of the ſame Name, upon the Frontiers of the Upper Palatinate, 70 Miles Weſt from Prague. 'Tis an Imperial Town, fortified with a ſtrong Caſtle, a double, and in ſome Parts with a treble, Wall. The Market-place is encompaſſed with fair Houſes. The Churches are fine. Count Wallenſtein, the Emperor's treacherous General, was kill'd here in 1634. About two Miles from the Town there is a Fountain, very cool and clear, and of a briniſh Taſte; 'tis purgative, and good againſt Diſtempers in the Eyes, Ears, Head, &c.

13. Ziateck or Satz, on the Eger, 35 Miles North-Weſt of Prague, a ſtrong populous Town.

14. Kadan, on the ſame River, 10 Miles North-Weſt, a ſmall City, noted for excellent Beer.

15. Leitomeritz, 25 Miles North-Weſt of Prague on the Elb, a rich Town, and a Biſhoprick.

16. Pilſen, 40 Miles South-Weſt of Prague, a large and well built fortified Town, on the Conflux of two ſmall Rivers; 'tis reckon'd the ſecond in the Kingdom, Capital of its Diſtrict, one of the moſt fruitful in the Country; has two fine Churches, and a ſpacious Market-place, where four or five Streets centre. 'Twas one of the laſt that yielded to the Imperialiſts during the Civil Wars.

17. Tabor, 45 Miles South-Eaſt of Prague, on the Conflux of two Rivers. 'Twas built by the valiant Ziſca, on a Mountain of the ſame Name, being naturally ſtrong by Situation, the Entrance to it being ſcarce 30 Foot broad: He fortified it with a deep Trench, and a treble Wall, and made it his chief Place of Arms; and hence his Followers were call'd Taborites. 'Tis now only a ſmall Town, with a Caſtle.

II. The Dutchy of SILESIA, lies Eaſt from Luſatia and Bohemia, and Weſt from Poland, South from Brandenburg, and North from Hungary, is 220 Miles long from South-Eaſt to North-Weſt, and 90 where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt, but much contracted at both Ends. It was formerly ſubject to Poland, and afterwards to Bohemia, on which it depends now.

The Country is well water'd by the Oder, the Weiſſel, and Elb, which have their Fountains here; it alſo abounds with Ponds and Lakes, ſo that the People are well provided with freſh Water, Fiſh of all ſorts, and have vaſt Quantities of Lampreys. Their chief Commodities for Trade are Wool and Flax. They have alſo Madder, ſweet Cane or Galengal, Wine, Mines of Silver, Lead, Copper, Iron, Quick-ſilver, Salt-petre, Salt, and Chalk. Here are all the wild and tame Beaſts and Fowl that are in any Place of the Empire.

Places of Note are,

1. Glogaw, on the Oder, Lat. 51. 50. Long. 16 ½. Capital of its Dutchy. The Town is regularly fortified, has a ſtrong Caſtle, and a fine Cathedral. It had formerly Dukes of its own, was taken by the Swedes, but reſtored by the Treaty of Munſter. The Inhabitants are afflicted with the Palsie, Gravel, and Stone, ascribed to their muddy bitter strong Beer, and eating too much Pork and Cheese. 'Tis called Glogaw the Great, to distinguish from a lesser Town in the Dutchy of Oppelen. They have a Law in this Dutchy, contrary to the German Custom, viz. That on Failure of Male-Issue, a Daughter inherits before any other of the Father's Male Relations.

2. Sagan, Capital of its Dutchy, 25 Miles West of Glogaw, on the River Bobor. 'Tis one of the largest and most populous Towns in Silesia; was taken and retaken during the Civil Wars. Its chief Structures are, St. Mary's Church, and two Monasteries. The Dutchy is fruitful in Corn, and well watered, and has several small Cities.

3. Wolaw, Capital of its Dutchy, 42 Miles South-East of Sagan. 'Tis a small Town of little Trade, subsists chiefly by Fish from a neighbouring Lake, and has six other small Towns, Capitals of Hundreds, under it; was garrisoned by the Swedes, and its District, for some Time, the Seat of War, betwixt them and the Imperialists.

4. Oels or Olse, Capital of its Dutchy, 25 Miles South-East of Wolaw. Is neat and regularly built, has a fair Church, Town-Hall, and Market-Place. It had handsome Fortifications which were demolished by the Swedes. The adjacent Country is pleasant and wholsome, and there are 7 other small Towns subject to it.

5. Breslaw, Capital of its Dutchy, and of all Silesia, on the Oder, where three other Rivers fall into it. Lat. 51. 20. Lon. 17½. 12 Miles South-West from Oels. The adjacent Country is fruitful and pleasant. The Town is much frequented by Foreign Merchants. 'Tis one of the largest, richest, and finest Towns in the Empire, has large Squares, stately Churches, and other Structures. The Houses are generally fair and well built, and on the Banks of the Oder, there are 4 old Piles of Building, with Turrets, formerly the Palaces of their Princes. 'Tis the See of a Bishop, and Seat of an University that has bred many learned Men. The Citizens are mostly Calvinists, and had their Liberty ratified by the Treaty of Munster. They are as genteel in their Habit, and well bred, as any in the Empire. The City is strong guarded by the Inhabitants, and has been a Sort of a Common-wealth since 1348, that Charles IV. enlarged their Privileges. Their Government is by 15 Senators, 11 of 'em chosen out of the Nobility, and 4 out of the Corporations. It suffered much formerly by the Poles and Tartars, which made them put themselves under the King of Bohemia's Protection. They depend now immediately upon the Emperor, and have the Spread-Eagle in their Escutcheon.

6. Lignitz, Capital of its Dutchy, 30 Miles West, from Breslaw. It had Dukes of its own, and was well fortified. 'Tis a large Town, has a noble strong Castle, and a stately Town-House and Hospital, and is famous for a Victory obtained near it over the Imperialists in 1635. The Dutchy is divided into seven Districts, denominated from their principal Towns. 'Tis the best Corn Country in Silesia, and abounds with a white Sort of Terra Sigillata.

7. Jawer, Capital of its Dutchy, 12 Miles South from Lignitz. Well fortified, suffered much by the Civil-Wars, but now rebuilt more stately. Here is a Castle where the Governour resides. It lies in a pleasant Plain, near rocky Mountains, which separates this Country and Bohemia. It has 11 other Towns under it.

8. Schweidnitz, Capital of its Dutchy, lies on a River 50 Miles South-West from Breslaw. Is one of the finest Towns of Silesia, has stately Churches and other public Structures, and in their Armory a great Gun which carries a Bullet of 320 lb. weight. Nine other Towns are subject to it: Striga, one of them, 8 Miles North, is noted for abundance of Terra Sigillata, first discovered here by Montanus, an eminent Physician, who used it many Years as a Secret, against all Poysons, and many other Diseases, and at last published a History of its Virtues: 'Tis a hard Earth with white, yellow, and red Veins.

9. Brieg, Capital of its Dutchy, lies on the Oder, 25 Miles South-West from Breslaw. The Streets are uniform, the Houses generally of Stone, and St. Nicholas's Church is a high stately old Fabric, with two Towers. It suffered much during the War of the Hussites; has nine other Towns under it, some remarkable for Mines. 'Tis one of the chief Dutchies of Silesia, and jointly subject to the Dukes of Brieg and Lignitz, descended from the ancient Hereditary Kings of Poland.

10. Munsterberg, Capital of its Dutchy, 25 Miles South-West from Schweidnitz. It lies in a fruitful Plain. 'Tis small and has nothing of Note, but a strong old Castle, a fair Town-House and School. It has five Towns belonging to it.

11. Oppelen, on the Oder, 20 Miles South-West from Brieg, is Capital of its Dutchy, well fortified, and has 12 Towns under it, where most of the People speak Polish, the Country having been mortgaged to that Crown.

12. Grotkau, Capital of its Dutchy, 18 Miles West from Oppelen, and 8 North-East from Munsterberg. 'Tis a small Town built mostly of Timber, except the Bishop's Palace, the Church, and Town-Hall, which are of Stone. There is such Plenty of Corn and Wood in the Neighbourhood, that they have a Proverb, That 'tis impossible for a Grotkauer to starve. It has a great Trade in Bed-Ticking; and has 11 other Towns under it.

13. Jagersdorf, 38 Miles South-West from Oppelen, Capital of its Dutchy, had its Name from the great Number of Huntsmen that liv'd here and rang'd the neighbouring Woods, that abounded with Game. 'Tis a small Town, fortified and defended by a Castle, and formerly belonged to the House of Brandenburg.

14. Troppaw, Capital of its Dutchy, 10 Miles South-East from Jagersdorf. It was swallowed up by a Deluge in 1405, occasioned by a sudden Thaw of Snow from the neighbouring Mountains. It was since rebuilt; abounds with all Necessaries; is noted for good Beer; has a Fortress of antique Structure; and has 8 other Towns under it.

15. Ratebor, 15 Miles North-East from Troppaw, is Capital of its Dutchy, lies in a pleasant Plain upon the Oder, is most of Wood, but the Duke's Palace, the Cathedral, and other public Buildings, of Stone. Most of the Inhabitants are Protestants, and here is still one Popish Monastery, but the Jesuits were expelled at the Reformation. It has five other Towns under it.

16. Teschen, Capital of its Dutchy, on the Oder, 25 Miles South-East from Troppaw. 'Tis one of the oldest Cities in Silesia. It lies on the Borders of Moravia, Hungary, and Poland, whence the Inhabitants have a mixt Language, scarce understood by any but themselves. There is a good Trade in Wine and Fruit from Hungary, store of Venison, wild Fowl and Fish; and two Sorts of Beer, one of Wheat, and the other of Barley-Malt, both much valued, especially the latter. It has 8 or 9 other Towns subject to it. In this Dutchy are many high Mountains, but two of the Ridges are chiefly remarkable; the first are, the Crapach, or Carpathian Mountains, betwixt them and Hungary on the South. They abound with Mines of Silver and Lead, which make the chief Riches of Silesia. The Miners are of Wallachian Extract, for most part Protestants, more hardy than the other Silesians, and great Numbers of them joyned the Swedes in the Civil War. The other Ridge divides this Country from Moravia; is by the Natives called Jablunca, and abounds with great Flocks of Sheep, and Mines, but the latter don't yield so much as those of the Carpathian Mountains.

III. MORAVIA.

LIES betwixt Bohemia and Silesia, and has part of Austria and Hungary on the South. 'Tis about 100 Miles East and West, and 75 where broadest, South and North. It had anciently Kings who reigned over Bohemia, Poland, and Silesia. Most of it towards the North is uninhabitable Mountains and Forests, but towards Austria and Hungary it abounds as much with fair Towns and Villages, as most Parts of the Empire. The Water in many Parts is Pestilential, because of a Mixture of Lime and Nitre in the Soil, that gives a Tincture to their Corn, Fruit, and other Vegetables, which occasions the Stone, Gout, Cholic, Falling-Sickness, and Hypochondraic Distempers: But Providence has furnished them with Medicinal Fountains and Baths, good against those, and most other Distempers, of which some Physicians of this Country have writ Treatises. Here are likewise Fountains of a salt, and acid Taste, very pleasant and wholesome. The Country is very well watered by the Moraw and Teya, and other lesser River, which plenteously supply them with Fish. Here is Corn of all Sorts enough for Consumption and export; Plenty of Red and White Wine. A good Breed of Horses, Black Cattle, Sheep, and Goats, and one Beast of Prey, called Risowe, peculiar to their Forests. 'Tis about as high as an ordinary Dog, but thicker, its Belly and Feet are spotted, and leaps suddenly on its Prey from Rocks or Trees. Dubravius in his History of Bohemia, speaks of Frankincense and Myrrhe, resembling the Genitals of Men and Women, dug out of the Earth here, and that he saw a Piece of Myrrh, resembling an entire Man. The Country People fancy, that among other Virtues it drives away Serpents and Evil Spirits.

The Moravians are in general a free-hearted People, not easily provoked, and hard to be appeased; are obedient to their Magistrates; brave, faithful to their Promises, but credulous of old Prophecies, and addicted to Drink. They espoused the Doctrine of John Huss, and most of them afterwards threw off the Church of Rome. Their Synod, in 1608, having given Leave for every Man to believe as God had given him Knowledge; the People abused this Liberty, ignorant Mechanics set up for Preachers, which divided them into Sects, who rejecting Communion with one another, the Emperor Ferdinand II. took the Opportunity, after the Defeat of the Elector Palatine, whom they had chosen King, to re-introduce Popery, and forced the Protestants who would not comply, to the Rocks and Mountains in the Borders of Silesia.

Places of Note here, are,

1. Olmutz their Capital. Lat. 49. 40. Lon. 17½. 45 Miles South-West from Teschen in Silesia. 'Tis a small neat well built City, lies on the Banks of the Moraw, and has a pretty Trade. Their Bishop is Suffragan of Prague, but pleads for an immediate Dependance on the Pope.

2. Brinn, 25 Miles South-West from Olmutz, on the Conflux of two small Rivers. 'Tis defended by a strong Castle on a neighbouring Hill; and held out against the Swedes during the Civil War. 'Tis well fortified, noted for the Unicorn Minerals found near it, which some resemble to the Trunk of a Walnut-Tree, others to the Bones of unknown Animals, and some think it a Petrefaction of Timber.

3. Iglaw, on the Frontiers of Bohemia, 50 Miles West from Brinn, on a River of its own Name. 'Tis large, well built and strong, and a great Thoroughfair betwixt Bohemia and Hungary. It was the first Town of Moravia, that embraced the Reformation. It surrendered in 1645 to the Swedes, who defended it against the Imperialists, and repulsed them after twelve Months Siege. Their chief Trade is in coarse Woollen-Cloth and Beer: and their chief Structures is the Jesuits Colloge, a Monastery of Dominicans, and another of Franciscans.

4. Znaim, on the Frontiers of Austria, 28 Miles South-West from Brinn. It has a strong Castle, but commanded by a neighbouring Mountain, so that it cannot hold out a Siege. There are many Vineyards which yield a palatable Wine. Their chief Trade is by Passengers betwixt Vienna and Prague. 'Twas frequently taken and retaken during the Civil Wars.

5. Kremsir, 22 Miles North-East from Brinn. One of the fairest Towns in Moravia. The Bishop of Olmutz has a Palace here. The Town is fortified, and was taken by the Swedes in 1645.

6. Ewanczitz, at the Conflux of two Rivers, 10 Miles South-West from Brinn, formerly noted for more different Sects than almost any other Town in Europe. The Hussites and Lutherans worshipped in the Parish-Church at the same Time. The Calvinists had two Churches, and with the Lutherans and Hussites, shared the Government. The Jews had one of the Suburbs, with a Synagogue and School. Those called the Holy Brethren of Swisserland, who deny'd Baptism, thought it damnable to wear a Sword, and had a Communion only at Whitsuntide, lived in the Suburbs. The Photinians, who denied the Resurrection, had also a Meeting here. The Quakers had one near a Fountain in a neighbouring Field. 400 Anabaptists had one at a neighbouring Village. These Differences gave the Roman Catholicks an Opportunity to drive them all from hence, except the Jews, who still have their Liberty.

IV. The

IV. The Archdutchy of AUSTRIA,

HAS Hungary on the East, Bavaria on the West, Bohemia and Moravia on the North, and Stiria on the South; is 160 Miles from East to West, and 85 where broadest from North to South.

It abounds with all manner of Necessaries, and is divided into Upper and Lower by the River Ens, which with the Danube, and other Rivers, afford them Plenty of Fish. Their Fields abound with Corn and Saffron. Here is Plenty of Wine for Consumption and Export, besides rich Wines from Hungary and Italy. They have some Mines of Brimstone. Halstat, in the South-West Corner of the Dutchy, furnishes them with Salt, which is made by letting in Water into the hollow Parts of a Mountain, where it drinks in the Salt of the Earth, and is afterwards let out and boil'd. Great Part of their Beef comes from Hungary. Here is a Bird call'd Gallina Corilorum or Hasel Hen, which they reckon a Dainty, and a Fish call'd Hausons, some of 'em 20 Foot long: 'Tis a grisly Fish, with a hollow nervous Cord down the Back, which they dry, and make into Whips. The Fishermen blow a Trumpet or Horn, the Noise of which brings great Shoals of 'em about their Boats. The Inhabitants being used to take a larger Glass than ordinary, are more brisk and jovial than their Neighbours, who therefore call them Ranters and Flaggoneers. The Air is unhealthful, especially in Lower Austria, where they are much troubled with Agues. This Country so abounds with People of Quality, because of the Court at Vienna, that there are reckon'd in it 100 Families of Counts and Barons, and 180 Knights, who have Votes in the Dyet.

UPPER AUSTRIA. The chief Towns are,

1. Gemund, Lat. 47. 54. Long. 14. 130 Miles South-West from Vienna, at the Mouth of the Draun, where it falls into the Gemunder Lake. It has a considerable Trade in Salt, which is made here, and exported to Vienna.

2. Steyer, 26 Miles East of Wels, is a neat Town, in a pleasant Valley, at the Conflux of the Steyer and Ens, from whence its Suburbs have the Names of Steyerdorf and Ensdorf. 'Tis chiefly inhabited by Cutlers, Smiths, and other Ironmongers, who have a great Trade.

3. Ens, lies 12 Miles North of Steyer, near the Mouth of the River of its own Name. 'Tis a fair, strong, and well built City, but was anciently much larger.

4. Lintz, the chief Town of Upper Austria, where the States meet: It lies on the Danube, Lat. 48. 20. Long. 14. 40. 90 Miles West of Vienna, in one of the most pleasant Places of the Emperor's Dominions. Many of the Nobility have Country-houses near it, where they hunt, hawk, &c. The Emperor Matthias in 1614, kept his Court here, and all the Branches of the House of Austria met to make a League offensive and defensive against any Potentates that should oppose them, and ruined a Lutheran Church and University, where Crusius says, 3000 Counts, Barons, and other Persons of Quality had been educated in the space of 20 Years. The Emperor's Army rendezvouz'd here when Solyman the Magnificent besieged Vienna; and when it was again besieged by the Turks in 1683, the Emperor retired hither. It was taken in 1703 by the Elector of Bavaria. 'Tis not large, but neat, and defended by a strong Castle on a Hill; the Houses are of Freestone. Here is a large square Piazza, adorned with two noble Fountains. The Emperor's Palace is on a rising Ground, from whence there is a noble Prospect of the Danube, and the neighbouring Country. It has two Fairs a Year, at Easter and Bartholomew-Tide, much frequented by Strangers. The chief Manufacture is excellent Gun-Barrels. The Suburbs on the other side of the River, consist chiefly of the Houses of the Nobility and Gentry; and are joined to the Town by a large wooden Bridge. The Jesuits have a College near this Place, with a very good Library.

5. Everding or Efferding, 14 Miles South-West from Lintz, a strong Town near the Danube, defended by a Castle within the Walls, and another without; it belongs to the Family of Staremberg.

6. Freystat, the chief Town of the District of Mackland, near the Borders of Bohemia, 29 Miles North-East of Everding. 'Tis well built, but not strong, noted for palatable Beer, and an annual Fair on St. Paul's Day, which lasts a Fortnight, and is much frequented.

7. Stain, a City, 55 Miles East of Freystat, and a little West of Krembs, on the North side of the Danube, and has a Bridge over the River.

LOWER AUSTRIA. Its chief Towns are,

1. Tyrnstein or Freyenstein, on the South side of the Danube, about 60 Miles West of Vienna. 'Tis the Place where Richard I. of England was kept Prisoner.

2. Melck, a pleasant Town on the Banks of the same River, 50 Miles West from Vienna. Lazius says, that Julius Cæsar being charm'd with its Situation, call'd it mea delecta, which was afterwards corrupted into Medelick, and built a Fort here. The Pictures of Romulus and Remus sucking a Wolf, are cut in the Wall of their Great Church. Here is a Monastery dedicated to St. Colman, who, they say, was of the Royal Blood of Scotland, and Apostle of Austria. He was murder'd by the Boors of this Country in 1012. Miraculous Cures were ascribed to his Reliques. There is a Monastery of Benedictines on a Hill near this Place, which is richly endow'd, has the Monuments of St. Colman, and many other great Persons, and challenges the Pre-eminence of all the Monasteries in Austria.

3. Horn, a strong Fort near the Borders of Moravia, 48 Miles North-West from Vienna.

4. Krems, on the Danube, 35 Miles West from Vienna. 'Tis a neat, large, well built Town, and has a great Trade, especially at their two yearly Fairs, which begin on St. James's and St. Simon and Jude's Days, and last a Fortnight each, being frequented by Merchants and Tradesmen from all Parts of Germany, Bohemia, Moravia, Hungary, and Poland.

5. Tuln, an ancient Town near the same River, 20 Miles East from Krems, and 15 West from Vienna. Part of the adjacent Country is from hence call'd Turnelfeldt, and is reckon'd one of the healthiest and richest Parts of Austria; yet Travellers hardly meet with worse Accommodation in any Part of the Emperor's Dominions. Near this Place the Roman Lieutenant Macrinus engaged the Huns, of whom 40000 were kill'd, and himself slain in the Conflict, which being ended, Attila was chosen King of the Huns.

6. Vienna, Lat. 48. 27. Long. 17. It was anciently call'd Vendum, Vindomina, Vindobona, and also Colonia Fabiana, because of a Roman Colony here under General Fabianus. Some think it Ptolomy's Juliobona. The German Name Wien, comes from a small River of that Name, which falls here into the Danube. It stands on the South side of this great River, was anciently famous for the Actions of several Roman Emperors against the Marcomanni and the Ruadi; and was the Station of the tenth German Legion. Henry I. of Austria rebuilt it in 1158, and it was beautified and wall'd in 1192, by the Ransom which the Marquis of Austria obliged Richard I. of England to pay, when he took him Prisoner in his Return from the Holy Land, because he took down the Austrian Banner at Joppa, and threw it into a House of Office. The Ransom was 140000 Marks of Silver in Cologne Weight, which was such a vast Sum in those Days, that the English were forced to sell their Church-Plate to raise it.

Æneas Sylvius, who wrote above 200 Years ago, says, this City abounded with Palaces fit for Kings, and Churches that vied with those of Italy. The City is well fortified, after the modern way, with two Bastions towards the River, ten towards the Land, and a deep Ditch, into which they can let the River, but generally keep it dry, for the sake of their Cellars. Including the Suburbs, 'tis of a very large Circuit, but the City itself is not above 3 Miles round. 'Tis very populous, and most of the Houses are well built of Stone, 6 Stories high, with flat Roofs; and those which are otherwise, are cover'd with Pieces of Timber shaped like Tiles. The Streets are of a middling size, and many of the Houses have 4 Cellars, one under another, with an open Space in the middle of each arched Roof, for a Communication of Air, and from the lowermost there is a Tube to the top, to let in the Air from the Streets. St. Stephen's Cathedral is a fair stately Fabric, but darkish, because of the painted Glass in the Windows: The Steeple is one of the finest in Germany, and much stronger than that of Strasburg, tho' not so beautiful; 'tis 480 Foot high, and under the Cross on the top there was the Turkish Arms, viz. a Star and a Half-Moon, set up by the Citizens, because when Solyman the Magnificent besieged the City, he would on no other Condition spare the Steeple; and tho' he was obliged to quit the Siege, the Arms continued there till the Turks besieged it again in 1683, after which, because they fired at the Steeple, the Arms were taken down. The Spire of this Steeple has large Crockets above a Yard long, and adorned with Foliage Work. From hence there is a noble Prospect of the City and adjacent Country, and of the Course of the Danube thro' most of Austria, towards Presburg in Hungary. There is a Case of wooden Hammers in the Tower, with which they call the People to Church from Good Friday to Easter-Day, because they will not suffer the Bells to ring out while our Saviour lay in the Grave. There is a Stone placed in the Wall at the Entrance of the Church, which they fancy to be one of those with which St. Stephen was stoned to Death: It is worn very smooth by the superstitious People, who think they merit by touching it. Here are many sumptuous Monuments of Princes and other great Persons. The Church of the Austin Friers has a Chapel resembling that of Loretto: Here are multitudes of Trophies taken from the Turks. The Jesuits have several very large Colleges; and before that which faces the Piazza, there is a Column of Copper on a Pedestal of white Stone, the Statue of the Virgin on the top, and four Angels round her, with Inscriptions recommending Austria to her Patronage. Here are many other noble Churches, and rich Convents, and particularly one for Scotsmen, in Honour of St. Colman their Countryman, whose Body was long kept here, had miraculous Cures ascribed to it, and he was reckon'd the Patron of Austria.

Here is a noble University, richly endow'd by several Emperors, who gave it large Revenues and Privileges. The Students are divided into four Classes, of several Nations, who have their peculiar Rules and Immunities. None are to be Professors of Divinity or Philosophy but Jesuits. The Civilians and Physicians have a Rector of their own, and admit Protestants, who are excluded the other Faculties. The Rector with the other Masters have Power of Life and Death over their own Members. Protestants had formerly the free Exercise of their Religion in the Church of the Holy Cross; but Ferdinand II. drove their Ministers out of Austria, after the Battel of Prague; so that the Protestants here go to Presburg in Hungary for the Sacrament, which is 40 English Miles, but there is the conveniency of going by Boats on the Danube, or by Coach every Day. The Jews were formerly allow'd a Suburb, but are now excluded.

The Imperial Palace is a noble Structure, but not answerable in Bulk to the Emperor's Grandeur: It consists of two Courts, the outer for the Courtiers and Guards is the largest; the inner is for the Imperial Family. Over the Gate of the Palace are the five Vowels in Capitals, which they fancy import in Latin, Austriæ est Imperare Orbi Universo; i. e. Austria has a Right to govern the whole World. The Emperor's Library for Number and Value of Books is equal to any in Europe. The Library-keeper told Dr. Brown, that it consisted of 80000 Volumes, and that the Emperor spared no Cost in purchasing more every Day from the Greek Convents in the Turkish Dominions, &c. He has a Right to two of whatever Books are printed in Germany. We can't insist on Particulars, but the Doctor mentions among others, a fair Greek Manuscript of the New Testament, 1500 Years old, writ with Golden Letters upon Purple. The Emperor has also a noble Collection of Rarities in 14 Cupboards, and among 'em 16000 ancient Greek, Roman, and Gothic Medals and Coins, and other admirable Curiosities of Art and Nature, of immense Value.

Near the Palace there is a noble Stable, with managed Horses from most Parts of Europe. Here is the best Arsenal of the Empire, and a Magazine of Naval Stores for the Emperor's Galleys, and other Vessels on the Danube. The River divides itself here into 7 Streams, with Bridges over each, made of Trees laid close to one another. Here are two Streets which cross one another, and the Ground of the one being as high as the Tops of the Houses in the other, they have built an Arch in the lowermost Street, to let the upper pass over it. In one of the Market-places there is a very gross Representation of the Trinity upon a Pedeſtal, the Father like an old venerable Man, with our Saviour on the Croſs in his Arms, and the Holy Ghoſt like a Dove hovering over both: 'Tis fenced in with Iron Rails, guarded by a Centinel, and the Roman Catholicks bow to it as they paſs. 'Twas ſet up in remembrance of this City's being delivered from the Plague above 100 Years ago. The principal Suburb is Leopoldſtat, divided from the City by a Branch of the Danube, and a large Plain: 'Twas equal almoſt to the City, and abounded with magnificent Houſes of the Nobility and Gentry, but was deſtroyed during the laſt Siege, and is partly rebuilt ſince. St. Peter's Iſland before the Town, is capable of encamping an Army for its Defence. The Town has 7 Gates; 5 of 'em have Draw-bridges over the Ditch; the ſixth is a Paſſage under a Tower to the Bridge on the Danube; and the ſeventh is near the Palace towards the River: One of 'em is call'd the Scots Gate, in remembrance of a noble Exploit there by Scots Troops. The Biſhop of this City depends immediately on the Pope.

This Town was taken by Matthew Corvin King of Hungary, in 1490, and he died here in 1495. Soliman the Magnificent beſieged it in 1529, with 300000 Men, and made 20 Attacks upon it; but Philip Elector Palatine bravely defended it; and upon Charles the Fifth's coming to relieve it with 90000 Men, Soliman retired. The Grand Viſier beſieged it with 100000 Men in 1683, from July 14, to the beginning of September; but Count Staremberg, tho' reduced to great Straits, bravely defended it, till relieved by the King of Poland, and the Electors of Saxony and Bavaria, who routed the Turkiſh Army.

This City was Imperial till it fell to the Houſe of Auſtria. The Inhabitants are rich, and well apparalled, becauſe 'tis the Reſidence of the Court, and the Place where the States meet.

The Emperor's Court, tho' ſome others may exceed it for Pomp, exceeds all in Chriſtendom for real Grandeur; for moſt of the Officers of State and of the Houſhold are Princes or Counts; 100 Gentlemen of the Bedchamber, with Golden Keys at their Breaſts, are all Counts and Barons; and 60 Pages are of the like Quality. The Captains of the Horſe and Foot Guards are Princes and Counts; and beſides vaſt Numbers of Perſons of Quality in the Hereditary Dominions that are frequently at Court. There are generally 30 Ambaſſadors or other Miniſters from Foreign Powers or Princes of the Empire here. The Emperor has of his own, 36 Colonels of Foot, 18 of Horſe, and 13 of Dragoons or Huſſars, moſt of 'em Perſons of Quality, and the Admiral and Vice-Admiral of his Galleys, and the Colonel of the Troops belonging to 'em, the like.

The Cabinet-Council conſiſts of 10 of the chief Nobility, the Emperor preſides, and the King of the Romans when of Age ſits next him. The Privy-Council is compoſed of 24 Princes, Counts, and Great Officers of the Houſhold, and the chief Miniſter preſides; they conſult about Affairs of the greateſt Importance, and have 10 Secretaries. The Council of War has two Generals for Preſidents, ſeven Marſhals de Camp, and ſeveral Secretaries.

The Aulick or Principal Council of the Empire conſiſts of 18, half Papiſts, and half Proteſtants, according to the Treaty of Munſter. They are named by the Emperor, and divided into two Benches, the firſt of Noblemen, and the ſecond of able Lawyers. It is equal to the Chamber of Spire for Power of Sovereign Juſtice; ſo that there is no Appeal from the one to the other. The Emperor as ſupreme Judge is Preſident of both, but can't ſuſpend or hinder their Deciſions. Tho' all the immediate Princes of the Empire have a Sovereign Power in Civil and Criminal Cauſes within their own Juriſdiction; yet in Civil Affairs of Importance, there is an Appeal from them to one of thoſe Courts.

Here is alſo a Court of Chancery for the Empire, of which the Elector of Mentz is always Chancellor. The Vice-Chancellor preſides in his Abſence, and has an Aſſiſtant, an Aſſeſſor, two Secretaries, and a Referendary.

There is likewiſe an Imperial Council, which conſiſts of many Lords and Gentlemen, with the chief Officers for the Civil Affairs of Hungary, Bohemia, Moravia, Sileſia, &c. who ſend Directions to the reſpective Governments of thoſe Countries.

Two Miles from the City lie the fine large Gardens of the Emperor Rodolph II. The inner Garden has a Cloyſter ſupported by 40 Pillars of white Stone on each ſide, and cover'd with Copper, as are alſo its Pavilions. Here are Houſes for breeding Lyons, Tygers, and other wild Beaſts.

8. Baden, 18 Miles South-Weſt from Vienna. A neat little walled Town, much frequented becauſe of its natural Baths, two of which are within the Town, five without the Walls, and two beyond a neighbouring Rivulet: The Water of that called the Duke's Bath, is for the moſt part tranſparent and blewiſh; it heightens the Colour of Gold, but turns all other Metals black in a few Minutes; it gives a fine green Colour to the Moſs and Plants, which it waſhes, and often leaves a Scum of Purple mixed with White. The Water of that called the Sowre Bath is very clear; the Steam turns Silver black, and gilds it if held at a Diſtance; but when the Water is cold it changes the Colour of no Metal. The German Phyſicians commend theſe Waters for the Head-ach, Dimneſs of Sight, Deafneſs, and other Diſeaſes of the Head; and likewiſe for the Gout, Dropſie, and other Chronical Diſtempers.

9. Nieuſtat, about 33 Miles South from Vienna. It lies in a Bog near the middle of a great Plain, is encompaſſed with a Ditch, and two Walls, and ſo ſtrong, that the Turks having long beſieged it with a great Army, offered to retire, if the Town would give them ſome falſe Trophy to carry to Conſtantinople; upon which the Governour ſent them a Whipping-Poſt 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Saltzburg, and the ordinary Priſon for Criminals of State. It ſuffered much by the Turks in 1683. Over the chief Gate are the five Vowels in Capitals, which they interpret differently from thoſe over the Gate of the Palace at Vienna, and make them ſignify the following Sentence, Aquila electa juſte, omnia vincit, i. e. The Eagle being juſtly choſen, overcomes all.

V. STIRIA Dutchy,

LIES South from Auſtria, is 130 Miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 100 South and North, including the County of Ciller. 'Tis divided into Upper and Lower. The latter has Store of Wine, Fruit, Fiſh, Veniſon, Iron, and Salt, and frequently ſuch plenty of Corn, that they want Vent for it. The Air is unwholſome, which make the Hungarian Feaver, and other Peſtilential Diſtempers frequent here. The Inhabitants of this and the neighbouring Countries are often troubled with ſuch extraordinary Swellings in the Throat, as makes them loſe their Voice and Senſes; ſo that moſt of their Towns have Hoſpitals for thoſe afflicted with the Diſtemper: The Swellings hang ſometimes ſo much below their Throats, that poor Women are forced to tie them up when they ſuckle their Children. 'Tis aſcribed to the Snow-Water which falls down from the Mountains into their Rivers and Brooks; for the better Sort, who drink good Wine and Beer, are ſeldom troubled with it.

Upper Stiria is mountainous and more healthy, abounds with Sheep and black Cattle, but has no Wine; ſo that they barter their Wool, Butter, Cheeſe, &c. for it, with Lower Stiria. The Language in general is Sclavonic, but in the Courts of Judicature, and Publick Acts, they uſe High Dutch. 'Twas formerly governed by Princes of its own, but is now ſubject to the Houſe of Auſtria.

Places of Note in Upper Stiria, are,

1. Judenburg, Lat. 49. Lon. 16. 100 Miles South-Weſt from Vienna. 'Tis a large well built Town, on the Banks of the Meur. 2. Lewben, 25 Miles North-Eaſt from Judenburg, on the ſame River, is a neat and pleaſant City, has a large Barony ſubject to it.

3. Eiſenartz, 40 Miles North-Weſt from Gratz, is famous for its Iron-Mines and Ware. They have 19 Iron-Mills on 2 ſmall Rivers in the Neighbourhood, and ſuch Numbers of Men are employed in the Mines, and Iron-Works, that the People of the neighbouring Countries bring hither, to an Annual Fair, all Sorts of Neceſſaries, which they barter for Iron and Steel.

3. Bruck, on the Muer, 15 Miles South-Eaſt from Lewben; an ancient Town, ſo well ſituate, that the Emperor ſummons the general Dyet of the States of Stiria and Carinthia to meet here.

Places of Note in Lower Stiria, are,

1. Gratz or Gracz, on the Meur, Capital of the Dutchy, 25 Miles South-Eaſt from Bruck, and about 85 South-Weſt from Vienna. 'Tis a neat Town, lies in a pleaſant and fruitful Country, and is ſo well fortified and defended, by a ſtrong Caſtle on a neighbouring Hill, that 'tis reckoned almoſt impregnable. Here is a ſtately Palace, with a good Library, and Chamber of Rarities, that belonged to the ancient Dukes. 'Tis now the Reſidence of the Governour, as it was formerly of Archduke Ferdinand, before he was choſen Emperor. The Jeſuits have a College here, richly endowed, and well frequented, where they give Degrees in all Faculties.

2. Pettaw, on the Drave, 35 Miles South-Eaſt from Gratz. 'Tis thought to be an ancient Roman Colony, and is the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Saltzburg, who is Lord of the greateſt Part of the Town.

3. Marchpurg, on the Drave, 25 Miles Weſt from Pettaw. A well built Town, noted for many Roman Monuments, is Capital of its County, and was formerly ſubject to Counts of its own.

4. Rackelsburg, on the Meur, 20 Miles Eaſt from Pettaw. 'Tis very ſtrong, and was a great Bulwark againſt the Turks, when they poſſeſſed the neighbouring Country, which is very fruitful and abounds with Vines. The Burghers have a Right to buy all the new Wines from Michaelmas to St. Catherine's Day, and then the Peaſants may ſell to whom they pleaſe. Cuſtoms are paid here for Goods that come from, and go to Hungary.

5. Leibnitz, on the Meur, about 20 Miles South-Eaſt of Gratz, is a fair Market-Town, and the uſual Reſidence of the Biſhop of Seccau, hence called Biſhop of Leibnitz. He is Suffragan of Saltzburg, and has his Mannor at Seccau in Upper Stiria.

6. Lutemberg, a Market-Town on the Meur, about 10 Miles South-Eaſt from Rackelsburg, on the Frontiers of Hungary. 'Tis noted for the beſt Wine in thoſe Parts, and Baths much frequented becauſe of their temperate Heat.

7. Cilley, Capital of its County, at the Conflux of two Rivers which fall into the Save. Lies 30 Miles South-Weſt from Pettaw, near the Frontiers of Carniola, in a pleaſant fruitful Country. The Numbers of Roman Coins, Medals, and other Antiquities daily found in and about this Place, prove it to be ancient. Here is the Ruins of a vaſt Marble Pillar, of which each Stone is above a Waggon-Load. The Town is regularly fortified, and defended by an ancient Fort without, and a Caſtle within. It held out a remarkable Siege againſt the Turks in 1492. Here are ſeveral fair Monaſteries, and that of the Minorites, has the Monuments of the ancient Counts, who were Independant Princes of the Town and County, till it was ſeized by the Houſe of Auſtria, in 1456.

VI. CARNIOLA Dutchy,

LIES South from Stiria and Carinthia, and North from Iſtria; has Part of the Venetian Dominions on the Weſt, and Croatia on the Eaſt; is about 110 Miles Eaſt and Weſt, aud 45 South and North. 'Tis mountainous, but has many large Valleys, that abound with Corn, Wine and Oyl. The Inhabitants are a Mixture of Germans, Italians, and Sclavonians, and their Language the ſame; but in Towns, and Courts of Judicature, they uſe High Dutch. 'Tis divided into Upper and Lower.

Places of Note are,

1. Lack or Biſhops-Lack, becauſe it belongs to the Biſhop of Freyſing in Bavaria, and is the Seat of his Deputy. It lies in Lat. 49. Lon. 15. Is well built, and fortified; its Diſtrict is 40 Miles round, and contains 200 Villages.

2. Crainburg, on the Save, over which it has a good Bridge. The Town is 7 Miles North of Biſhops-Lack, has a ſtrong Caſtle, 3 Churches, and a Capuchin Monaſtery in the Suburbs. By Coins, Medals, and other Monuments, it ſeems to have been a Roman Colony. It gave Title of Marquis to the ancient Family of Bavaria. Ratſmondorf, near it on the North Side of the Save, has alſo many Roman Antiquities, and gives Title to a noble Family in Stiria.

3. Lawbach, on a River that falls into the Save, lies 20 Miles Eaſt of Biſhops-Lack, is Capital of the Dutchy, well built, populous, and has a large Caſtle and Garriſon, but is not ſtrong. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop who now depends on the Pope, but was formerly Suffragan to the Patriarch of Aquileia.

4. Goritz or Goritia, Capital of its County, formerly reckoned Part of Friuli. The Town lies 35 Miles South-Weſt from Biſhops-Lack, on a River that falls into the Gulph of Venice. 'Tis ancient, divided into Upper and Lower, and is the Reſidence of the Governour and others of Quality. The Citizens ſpeak a corrupt Latin, which reſembles the French more than the Italian; but in the Courts of Judicature, they uſe High-Dutch. It belonged formerly to the Venetians, but is now ſubject to the Houſe of Auſtria, and tolerably ſtrong. The Diſtrict belonging to it is 35 Miles long, and 15 broad, and contains ſeveral leſſer Towns and Villages.

5. Idria, on the ſame River, 20 Miles North-Eaſt from Goritz, among Mountains. 'Tis noted for Mines of Quickſilver; the Entrance to which is in the Town, and their deepeſt Pit is about 120 Fathoms. Here is Virgin-Quickſilver, which diſcovers it ſelf without Help of Fire, falls down in ſmall Drops, and ſometimes ſtreams out in good Quantities. Here is a coarſer Sort, that is ſeparated from the Earth by Water, in a Sieve, and needs no Extraction by Fire. And a third ſort, that is extracted by the Furnace. The Tranſactions of our Royal Society give an Account of thoſe Mines. Vol. I. p. 21.

6. Czirnitz, a ſmall Town of 300 Houſes, 20 Miles South-Eaſt of Laubach. 'Tis noted chiefly on account of the Lake, from it called Czirnitzer-Sea, 18 Miles long, and 8 broad, encompaſſed with Mountains and Foreſts, at ſome Diſtance, and on the Eaſt, has a Foreſt of Pear-Trees. The Water ſinks under Ground every Year in June, thro' a great many large Holes in the Bottom, and returns in September with ſuch Violence, that it ſoon riſes to the Height of a Pike, and covers all the Ground again; after the Retreat of the Water, it affords good Paſturage to Cattle, and the Deer from the neighbouring Hills and Foreſts, and ſome part of it produces Corn. It abounds with Carps, Eels, Tench, and other Fiſh, which none muſt catch without Licenſe of the Prince of Eckenburg, who is Lord of the Place, till the Water retires, when every one has leave to take what he can, and the Peaſants catch great Numbers. The People of the Neighbourhood can give no Reaſon for this ſtrange Phenomenon of Nature.

The Province of WINDISMARCK lies in the South-Eaſt Corner of this Dutchy, but was formerly of a much larger Extent. 'Tis mountainous, and for moſt part barren; the Inhabitants are thought to be a Branch of the Venedi: Their Language is a Mixture of Sclavonic and German.

Places of Note are,

1. Rudolphſwerd or Newſtat, 20 Miles South from Cilley; was a Roman Colony, is well fortified, has large Privileges, the beſt Wine in thoſe Parts, and a good Bath at four Miles Diſtance much frequented.

2. Landſtraſſe, 8 Miles North-Eaſt from Newſtat, a ſtrong little Town, almoſt encompaſſed by the River Gurk. It has Juriſdiction over the Neighbouring Hills and Valleys; formerly a Wilderneſs, but of late Ages well inhabited, and the Valleys improved into Meadows and Paſturage, by a Company of Wallachians who ſettled here, call themſelves Uſcocken, are of the Greek Church, pay the Emperor no Tribute, but own him for Sovereign, and furniſh him with Men in Proportion to their Numbers.

3. Mettling, on the River Culp, and the Frontiers of Croatia, 15 Miles South-Eaſt of Rudolphſwerd, in a pleaſant fruitful Country. The Town is ſtrong, was ſeveral times taken by the Turks, but recovered. A large Foreſt of Cheſtnuts, and another of Oaks belong to it, where they have great Herds of Swine that bring them much Profit.

KARSTIA Province is alſo reckoned Part of this Dutchy, and formerly belonged to Friuli. 'Tis about 35 Miles long, and 20 broad, and remarkable for a good breed of Horſes, with which moſt of the Italian Nobles furniſh their Stables.

Places of Note are,

1. Aquileia, in the South-Weſt Corner of the Dutchy, near the Gulph of Venice, Lat. 46. Lon. 16. Famous for its Antiquity, was the Seat of the Præfectus Prætorio, and of Auguſtus, and Tiberius's Courts, noted for the Defeat of Maximinus the Tyrant, and for being the Metropolis of Italy in the Time of the Weſtern Emperors, and the Seat of a Patriarch; but ſince 'twas ruined by the Huns, and the Patriarch's Seat removed, 'tis become a poor Fiſher-Village.

2. Trieſte, on a Gulph of the ſame Name, at the North-Eaſt Corner of that of Venice, 30 Miles Eaſt of Goritz. 'Twas a Roman Colony, built from the Ruins of ancient Tergeſtum, and is the only Harbour the Houſe of Auſtria has in this Country, but not good. The Town is ſmall, but well peopled and fortified, and is the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Aquileia. Here are great Quantities of Salt made and exported, and the neighbouring Country produces good Wine.

3. Proſeccio or Proſeg, 7 Miles North-Weſt of Trieſte, ſo famous for its Wine in the Days of Auguſtus, that his Wife Livia, uſed no other Cordial when 70 Years of Age. 'Tis ſo ſtrong, that it keeps a Man's Life-time, and yields the Houſe of Auſtria a great Revenue.

4. Wipack, on a River of the ſame Name, 25 Miles Eaſt of Goritz, famous alſo for ſtrong Wine, and Horſe-Fairs, which yield the Houſe of Auſtria great Profit.

5. St. Veit lies on the other Side of the Peninſula of Iſtria, 40 Miles Eaſt of Trieſte, and is the only Town in Iſtria that belongs to the Houſe of Auſtria. The Town is well fortified, defended by a Caſtle on a Hill, and has a ſmall Harbour but not ſafe. In the Suburbs lies a Capuchin Monaſtery, where a Peace was concluded betwixt the Emperor and Turks in 1618. Auſtrians of Quality ſend their Children hither to learn Italian, which is ſpoke here in Purity.

VII. CARINTHIA Dutchy.

LIES South from the Archbiſhoprick of Saltzburg, South and Weſt from the Dutchy of Stiria, and North from the Dominions of Venice and Dutchy of Carniola. Is 118 Miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 50 where broadeſt from South to North. 'Tis cold, mountainous, and for the moſt part barren, has many Lakes, Corn enough for the Inhabitants, but no Wine. The Lakes and the Drave, furniſh them with Fiſh. It had anciently Dukes of its own, whom the Peaſants inveſted thus; He was clad like a Countryman, with a Shepherd's Hook in his Hand, and went to a Meadow, where a Peaſant getting up on a Marble-ſtone, preſented him with two Beefs, one fat, and the other lean; asked him if he were a Judge, and Nobleman? if he ſought the Good of his Country? if he was a Perſon of Merit, a Chriſtian, and a Defender of the Faith? If he anſwered, yes, the Peaſant gave him a gentle Blow on the Cheek, and recommended Juſtice to him. Then the Duke mounted the Stone, laid aſide the Shepherd's Hook, drew his Sword, and promiſed Juſtice to the People; went to a Church, near the Place, put on his Princely Habit, returned to the Meadow, and received Homage from his Subjects. The Peaſants obtained this Privilege becauſe they embraced Chriſtianity before their Nobles, who were induced to it by Charlemain. Upper Carinthia belongs to the Archbiſhop of Saltzburg, and Biſhop of Bamberg; and Lower Carinthia, to the Houſe of Auſtria.

Places of Note are,

1. Clagenfurt, on the Glan, Lat. 46. 50. Lon. 14. 50. the Metropolis, and Seat of their Dukes; a ſquare, neat Town, with a good Wall, and in the middle of the Market-place there is a noble Fountain, with a Statue of Hercules, in Stone, knocking down a monſtrous Dragon. Æneas Silvius ſays, in his time, they uſed to hang a Man, if violently ſuſpected of Theft, tried him three Days after, if found guilty, let the Corps hang till it rotted, if otherwiſe, took him down, buried him at the publick Charge, and prayed for his Soul.

2. St. Veit, 10 Miles North of Clagenfurt, formerly a Biſhop's See, and Metropolis of the Country. It ſtands in a fruitful Valley, at the Conflux of two Rivers. In a neighbouring Meadow, where the Duke was inveſted as abovementioned, there are Stones placed Back to Back, reſembling two Elbow-Chairs, with Roman Inſcriptions upon them. They are made uſe of by the Peaſant and the Prince at the Inveſtiture, when the Peaſant gets up upon that behind the Prince's Back, obliges him to reſtore the fat Beef preſented him, and allows him to keep the lean. Theſe Stones are ſuppoſed to have been brought from the Ruins of the ancient City of Salla, where many Roman Coins, and other Monuments of Antiquity are found.

3. Gurck, about 8 Miles North-Weſt from St. Veit, a Market-Town, and the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Saltzburg. The Emperor has the Nomination of two Biſhops to this Place ſucceſſively, and the Archbiſhop names the third. The Biſhop reſides at Straſburg, on the River Gurck, ſwears Fealty to the Emperor, for his Temporals, and Canonical Obedience to the Archbiſhop, for Spirituals.

4. Frieſach, 8 Miles North from Gurck, in a fruitful Soil; well fortified, and defended by a ſtrong Caſtle on a Rock. Wild Boars abound in the neighbouring Mountains, where were formerly Mines of Gold, but now exhauſted.

5. Villach, 20 Miles South-Weſt from Clagenfurt, on the Drave, over which it has a Bridge. 'Tis a Thoroughfair betwixt Italy and Germany, belongs to the Biſhop of Bamberg, who appoints the Governour once in three Years, and the Emperor names him the other two. 'Tis noted for the Retreat of the Emperor Charles V. hither, when he was almoſt ſurpriz'd by the Proteſtants, at Inſpruc, in 1552. About a Mile from hence there are ſeveral good Baths, two of them ſulphureous, moderately hot, and of an acid Taſte.

6. Gemund, 17 Miles Weſt from Gurck. A fortified Town which has a noble Hoſpital. This Town, and its Territory, belongs to the Archbiſhop of Saltzburg.

7. St. Andrews, 22 Miles South-Eaſt from Gurck, a neat Town, and the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Saltzburg, who is Lord of the Town and Territory. The Biſhop calls himſelf Flaventinenſis, becauſe this was the Colonia Flaviana of the Romans.

8. Lavamund, 13 Miles South-Eaſt from St. Andrews, at the Mouth of the River Lavant; is a handſom Town, and the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Saltzburg.

VIII. TIROL County.

HAS Carinthia on the Eaſt, Swiſſerland on the Weſt, Part of Swabia and Bavaria on the North, the Biſhoprick of Trent, and Part of the Dominions of Venice on the South. 'Tis about 140 Miles where longeſt, from Eaſt to Weſt; and 70 where broadeſt, from South to North. 'Tis equal to moſt Dutchies in Europe, for Riches, Number of Inhabitants, and Plenty of Proviſions. Here are many Mines of Silver and Copper, in the Mountains, but much ſhort of what they were formerly; when one of their Copper Mines at Schwatz, continually employed 30000 People, but now not 2000. The Country abounds with Wine, Fiſh, Veniſon, Wood, and all other Neceſſaries for Life; and tho' the rocky Mountains, perpetually covered with Snow, make a ſorry Appearance to the Eye, the Valleys, eſpecially about Inſpruc, are very fruitful. 'Tis divided into many Provinces, which we cannot inſiſt upon. It had formerly Princes of its own, but has been ſubject to the Houſe of Auſtria ſince 1363.

Places of Note are,

1. Inſpruc, which has its Name from a Bridge over the River Inn. It lies in Lat. 49. Lon. 12. about 50 Miles South from Munich. The Town is well built, eſpecially the Suburbs, where there are many ſtately Houſes. It is ſo well defended on the Eaſt Side, by the Town of Halle, and the ſtrong Caſtle of Ombra, that it has no Fortifications on that Part, but the other Sides have Walls and Ditches, which ſeem deſigned rather for Ornament than Strength. The chief Structures are, 1. The Palace, which is convenient and large, but not very regular or beautiful, having been built at ſeveral times: it has many fair Gardens, Groves, and Walks, and here is a noble Collection of Rarities, among which are ſeveral Lumps of Virgin-Gold and Silver dug out of Mines here, and in other Parts of Germany; the Arms of the Houſe of Auſtria curiouſly repreſented in Diamonds, and other precious Stones; and a large Crucifix of Coral. The Cathedral is a noble Fabric of hewn Stone, with a ſumptuous Monument of the Emperor Maximilian I. on the top of which is his Statue of Alabaſter, of a very large ſize, and round it 28 Statues of Braſs, larger than the Life, of exquiſite Workmanſhip, repreſenting the Emperors and Empreſſes of the Family, &c. The Chancery is a curious Structure, the Porch of it cover'd with gilt Plates of Braſs, overlaid with thin Plates of Gold, or other gilt Metal: It was erected by the Archduke Frederic, when he return'd from his Exile, and is about 15 Foot ſquare. The Citizens have a good Armory, with Weapons, as they ſay, for 30000 Horſe and Foot. They have a Train of 50 large Pieces of Cannon; one of them has 7 Barrels that may be diſcharged ſeverally; and they have 2 others with very large Bores, and each Barrel 16 Foot long.

About a Mile Eaſt from the City lies the above-mention'd Caſtle, named Ombra, becauſe it was deſigned for a ſhady Place of Retreat in the Summer. There was a large Book printed here in 1601, with an Account of its Pleaſures, and the Collection of Rarities in the Apartments: Among others, there is the Armour of Charles IX. of France, and the Statue of Francis I. on Horſeback, which repreſents him exactly as he was taken at the Battel of Pavia. Here is likewiſe the Armour of ſeveral Emperors, Kings, and Princes, with the Picture of each Prince drawn to the Life by their Armour. We cannot inſiſt on Particulars, but there is one extraordinary Phænomenon in Nature, viz. the Trunk of an Oak, in which there is the entire Body of a Deer incloſed. The Philoſophers here ſuppoſe this Animal to have periſhed in the Snow, and upon a Thaw brought down by a Torrent from the neighbouring Hills, and covered with Mud, over which they ſuppoſe this Tree to have grown, and to have incircled the Deer with its Roots, which gradually forced it up into the Trunk. In an adjacent Gallery, there is the Effigies of many Princes on Horſeback, all in Armour, and the Spoils and Arms taken from the Turks, particularly of two Baſha's repreſented on Horſeback, with the magnificent Habits and Harneſs in which they were taken, embelliſh'd with Gold, Silver, and precious Stones. On one of the Cielings Noah's Rainbow is ſo admirably painted, that the Great Duke of Tuſcany offer'd 100000 Crowns for it. Here is alſo a noble Library. On the South ſide of the Town, at a little diſtance, is the famous Monaſtery of Wiltheim, where the Monks pretend to many Antiquities, particularly the Grave of Haymon their Founder, a Gigantic Prince, 12 Foot and a half high, who, they ſay, kill'd a monſtrous Dragon that threw down as much of his Monaſtery by Night as his Men built by Day; and they pretend to ſhew its Tongue, which is 3 Spans and a half long. There is a Pillar before their Gates, with an Inſcription giving an Account that the Road from Italy towards Augsburg lay croſs the Field where this Monaſtery ſtands, and that it was repaired for near 100 Miles together, in the Time of the Emperor Septimius Severus.

Inſpruc, among other things, is noted for the Detention of the Princeſs Sobieski there by the Emperor's Order, when going to marry the Pretender in Italy; but at laſt ſhe found means to eſcape from her Confinement, in 1719.

2. Halle, 8 Miles North-Eaſt from Inſpruc, famous for its Salt-pits, which employ 1000 Men conſtantly. Their chief Pits are in the Mountains, 4 Miles from the Town, where they dig the Salt like Ore out of Mines, throw it into great Trenches of ſweet Water, let it ſtand a Month, till the Salt be diſſolved, and carry the Water to be boil'd in the Town. The Elector of Bavaria took this City, with Trent, and other Places, in 1703; but was ſoon obliged to quit them.

3. Meran, 55 Miles South-Weſt from Inſpruc, formerly the Metropolis of the Country, and the Reſidence of its Dukes. It ſuffer'd much by a Flood in 1419, which drowned 400 People. 'Tis a pretty Town, and a Place of good Trade.

4. Tirol, about 5 Miles North-Weſt from Meran; 'tis a little Market-Town, with an ancient and fair Caſtle, remarkable for giving Name to the Country. Here are ſeveral other Towns, not worth inſiſting upon. The Mountains Brenner or Venner, which run thro' this Country, and may juſtly be reckon'd a Branch of the Alps, are almoſt continually cover'd with Snow.

The Biſhoprick of BRIXEN, lies in the South-Eaſt part of this County, and is by ſome reckon'd a diſtinct Principality, becauſe the Biſhop is a Prince of the Empire; but there lies an Appeal from him to the Count of Tirol's Court, and 'tis by the Matricula placed in the Circle of Auſtria.

Places of Note here are,

1. Brixen, on the River Adige, 40 Miles Eaſt from Meran, and 40 almoſt South from Inſpruc. It lies at the Foot of the Mountain Brenner, and the Biſhop is Suffragan of Saltsburg. The Houſes are well built, almoſt of an equal Size, and curiouſly painted on the Outſide. There are Vaults which go from one ſide of the Street to the other, and in theſe are the beſt Shops. Here are 3 very fine Churches joined to one another, and form one ſide of a fine Square, as the Biſhop's Palace doth another. 'Tis a ſquare Structure, encompaſſed with a Ditch, and the Entry defended by 4 Braſs Guns. The chief Trade of the Place comes from their Red Wine, which they export to other Countries, and from their Mineral Wells, much frequented by Strangers.

2. Braneck or Bruneck, on the ſame River, 10 Miles North-Eaſt from Brixen, is a conſiderable Fortreſs, and belongs to the Biſhop, who has alſo the Lordſhip of Velder in Carniola.

The Biſhoprick of TRENT lies South from Tirol, North-Weſt from the Dominions of Venice, and Eaſt from the Country of the Griſons. 'Tis 80 Miles Eaſt and Weſt, and near 50 where broadeſt from South to North.

Places of Note are,

1. Trent, on the River Adige, Lat. 46. Long. 18. 48 Miles South-Weſt from Brixen. The Latins call it Tridentum, from three ſharp Rocks of the Alps which hang over the Town, and reſemble Teeth. 'Tis very ancient, was formerly ſubject to the Princes of Lombardy, afterwards to Counts of its own, and then made an Imperial Town, but now ſubject to its Biſhop, who is the Emperor's Vaſſal, as Count of Tirol. 'Tis encompaſſed with unpaſſable Hills, unleſs from Tirol on the North, and Verona on the South. The Rays of the Sun darted from the Rocks of Flint, which almoſt ſurround it, make the Heat almoſt intolerable in Summer, and the Cold is as violent in Winter; but in Spring and Autumn the Air is temperate. They have Plenty of Wine, Oil, and Fruit, but little Corn in the Neighbourhood. Their Wine is ſtrong, of a pale red, and well taſted. The Inhabitants ſpeak Italian and High Dutch very well, and are very obliging to Strangers. The Biſhop is a Prince of the Empire, of which ſeveral other Princes as well as of Italy, pay Homage to him for part of the Eſtates they hold of this See, particularly the Duke of Mantua, and the Emperor, as Count of Tirol, pay him annually a certain Quit-Rent; and many Earls and Barons do the like. When the Biſhop dies, the Emperor ſends a Governour, who preſides till another be choſe by the Chapter, who are all Perſons of Quality. The Biſhop was Suffragan to the Patriarch of Aquileia, but ſince the Treaty of Munſter, to the Archbiſhop of Saltsburg. The Town is not large, but pretty populous, is defended by an old Caſtle, has many ſtately Palaces, and ſeveral beautiful Churches. The Cathedral is a fine Piece of Architecture, with Marble Pillars extraordinary high and thick. The Church of St. Mary Major is noted for the Council held here from the 4th of January 1545, till 1563. The Repreſentation of that Council is finely painted in the Walls of the Church. 'Tis alſo noted for an Organ, which counterfeits all ſorts of Muſical Inſtruments, the crying of Beaſts, and the ſinging of Birds, ſo naturally, as 'tis hard to diſtinguiſh them. While the Council ſate here, there were 4000 Perſons of public Character, among whom were 29 Miniſters from Princes, 22 Cardinals, 3 Patriarchs, 33 Archbiſhops, 235 Biſhops, 18 Abbots, 12 Generals of Orders, and 148 Doctors of Divinity, 18 Proctors, 3 Officials, 9 Chanters, 4 Notaries, and 2 Couriers from the Pope, who, with all their Attendants, were accommodated here. The firſt 18 Years they did nothing material; but towards the Concluſion, the Pope and the Cardinals at Rome got the Aſcendant ſo much, that every thing they reſolved on was approved by the Council; which gave occaſion to that bitter Sarcaſm by the Hungarian Biſhops who attended it, that the Holy Ghoſt was ſent hither in a Cloak-bag from Rome. The beſt Account of this Council is that writ by Father Paul, a Venetian, and M. du Ranchin, a French Courtier.

The City ſtands on a flat Rock of coarſe white and red Marble, which furniſhes Materials for Building, is only fortified by a ſingle Wall, and is very ſubject to Inundations from the River and neighbouring Brooks, which tumble great Pieces of Rocks along with them into the Town.

2. Bolzano or Poſen, on the Frontiers of Tirol, about 26 Miles North from Trent, noted for its 4 annual Fairs of a Fortnight each, much frequented by Merchants from moſt Parts of Europe, who during that time are allowed Magiſtrates and Judges of their own, diſtinct from thoſe of the Town; and none is allowed to trade without being enter'd in the Judge's Book, and a Certificate of the Entry under the Seal of the Corporation. There are ſeveral other Market-Towns, and fortified Places in this Biſhoprick, but of no great Note.

The Hiſtory of the Houſe of AUSTRIA.

WE paſs by the fabulous Accounts of thoſe who derive it from Julius Cæſar, or one of the Scipio's, and their yet more fabulous Origin from the Egyptian Oſiris; for the Family is ſo illuſtrious, that it needs no Romance. The beſt modern Authors, and among others, the Atlas Hiſtorique, derive them from the Counts of Altenburg and Hapsburg in Swiſſerland, a very ancient Family. The firſt of them who came to be Emperor was Count Rodolph, elected in 1273. From this Prince the Atlas Hiſtorique derives the preſent Family of Auſtria, the King of Great Britain in a double reſpect, both as deſcended from that of Denmark, by Anne Queen to King James I. of Great Britain, and from the Family of Brunſwic; the Kings of France and Spain, the Kings of Denmark and Sweden, the King of Portugal, the King of Pruſſia, and all the Branches of the Family of Brandenburg; the Families of Savoy, the Palatinate, Bavaria, Saxony, Heſſe, Lorrain, Holſtein, Wirtemberg, Mecklenburg, Baden, Anhalt, Ottingen, and Schwartsburg, and the ancient Kings of Bohemia and Hungary, to whom the Family of Auſtria has now ſucceeded. That Author reckons in all 31 illuſtrious Families to have proceeded from the Emperor Rodolph's, among whom there have been 19 Emperors, 46 Kings, 31 Electors and Electreſſes, and 190 Dukes and Dutcheſſes, Princes and Princeſſes, Counts and Counteſſes.

He has alſo a Genealogical Tree, by which it appears that all the above-mentioned Royal, Electoral, and Princely Families are deſcended a ſecond time from the Houſe of Auſtria by the Emperor Ferdinand I. and to theſe he adds the Families of Mantua, Parma, and Courland.

He likewiſe derives from the Family of Auſtria the ancient Emperors of the Families of Saxony, Franconia, Swabia, and Luxemburg: By all which it appears, that the Family of Auſtria is now the moſt illuſtrious Family in the World.

They have ſucceeded to the Imperial Crown by Election ever ſince 1438, that Albert the Magnanimous, Duke of Auſtria, was choſen Emperor, which is 281 Years.

The Privileges which they have received as Archdukes, from the many Emperors of the Family, are many and great; for as ſuch they can create Gentlemen, Barons, and Counts, throughout the Empire: Nor can the Emperor deprive them of their Poſſeſſions. The Archduke is firſt Privy-Councellor of the Empire, and his Lands are not ſubject to Contribution. When he is inveſted in the Lands he holds in Fee, he pays nothing for the Inveſtiture. He wears a Royal Robe, an Archduke's Cap, and is not ſubject to the Juriſdiction of the Empire. In Dyets, &c. he takes place on the Emperor's Right Hand, after the Electors, and before the Eccleſiaſtical Princes. If challenged to a Duel, he may ſend a Champion, tho' that Privilege is denied his Adverſary: And if the Male Iſſue fail, the eldeſt Daughter inherits all the Eſtates, Titles, and Privileges, and brings them to her Husband.

Having

Having thus finiſhed the Geography of the Empire, we ſhall give a brief Account of its Conſtitution, and Military Power.

The Imperial Dignity is Elective, the Perſon is choſen by the Electors; and at his Coronation, ſwears to maintain the Laws of the Empire, and the Privileges of its Electors, Princes, and States, according to the Golden-Bull, &c. The Electors have Power to dethrone the Emperor, when they judge it neceſſary for the Good of the Empire, they have alſo Power to make and annul Laws for the Empire, without his Conſent, and the Chamber of Spire is obliged to ſubmit to their Deciſions, in difficult Caſes, tho' againſt Common-Law. Their Subjects ſwear Allegiance to them, and the Electors pay only the Acknowledgment of Vaſſals to the Emperor, as firſt Perſon of the Empire. They make War and Leagues with foreign Powers, without his Conſent, and treat with him as their Equal, never ask him Pardon for Acts of Hoſtility, but in ſuch Caſes an Act of Amneſty is agreed on both Sides. The Emperor cannot aſſemble a Dyet of the Empire, without their Conſent under Hand and Seal; nor can he make Leagues or War, with a Prince of the Empire, or put any Perſon into the Ban, without their Concurrence. They pay nothing for their Inveſtitures, and have the ſame Honours paid 'em as to crowned Heads. They are obliged to elect in a Month after taking the Oath, on pain of having nothing but Bread and Water while they Delay: But to elude this, they diſtinguiſh betwixt their Deliberations about the Election and the Election it ſelf, ſo that they never pretend to meet about the Election, till they have agreed on the Perſon; and then appoint a Day to elect, tho' it be rather to name him. The King of the Romans, which is the Title given to thoſe that are to ſucceed, is choſen in the ſame manner.

The Golden-Bull contains the Fundamental Laws of the Empire, and has its Name from the Gold Seal affixed to it; it was ſo called from the Bulla or little gilt Picture, which the young Romans, during their Commonwealth, hung about their Necks, till they were 14 Years of Age. It has on the Face the Picture of the Emperor Charles IV. on his Throne, with the Imperial Crown on his Head, the Sceptre in one Hand, and the Globe in t'other, the Arms of the Empire on the Right, and thoſe of Bohemia on the Left. The Inſcription is, Carolus Quartus Divina favente clementia Romanorum Imperator, ſemper Auguſtus, & Bohemiæ Rex. On the Reverſe, a Caſtle with two Figures, under which are the Words, Aurea Roma; and in the Circumference this Inſcription, Roma Caput Mundi, regit Orbis frena rotundi.

The Bull is writ on 24 Sheets of Parchment, divided into 30 Chapters, and 41 Articles, beſides the Imperial Capitulation that the Emperor ſwears to when Crowned; but the Electors add to, or alter the Articles as they ſee Occaſion.

The other Laws of the Empire conſiſt of the Acts of the Dyets, and the Civil-Law, which is followed in all Caſes that are not provided for by the Acts of the Dyet, and thoſe of particular Princes and States, in their reſpective Juriſdictions: For they have Power to make their own Laws, provided it be without Prejudice to the Empire, or other States of it.

The Civil and Military GOVERNMENT of the EMPIRE.

IT was adjuſted by Maximilian I. in 1500, and enlarged and confirmed by Charles V. in 1522, at the Dyet of Nuremberg, and called the Matricula of the Empire. Its Origin was thus: The Empire being obliged to furniſh 2000 Foot, and 4000 Horſe, to attend the Emperor when he went to be Crowned at Rome; thoſe that could not raiſe Troops, were to pay 4 Florins for a Footman, and 12 for a Horſeman, according to their Proportions, but the Prices of Things increaſing, they were to pay 12 for a Footman, and 60 for a Horſeman; and this Tax was called Roman Months, which not being altered ſince, the States augment the Number of thoſe Months, as the Caſe requires, and appoint the Time of Payment. On this Occaſion, the Empire was divided into Circles; every Circle has one or two Directors, who ſummons the States of it to meet, acquaint them with the Cauſe, and then they take neceſſary Orders for the publick Welfare, and good Adminiſtration of the Circle. They chuſe a General for their Troops, who is to take care, that all things relating to War, be managed for the Good of the Circle: He liſts the Men, regulates their Quarters and March, and puts the Ban of the Empire in Execution: They chuſe 5 Aſſiſtants, at leaſt, who are his Lieutenants, and perform the Office if he be abſent, or negligent: They alſo chuſe a Treaſurer, who ſuperintends the Money; another who receives what the States of the Circle pay toward the Imperial Chamber, or chief Court of Judicature, and gives Acquittances for it; and they have a Secretary who attends the Directors. Sometimes all the Circles meet together in a general Aſſembly. Thoſe that lie neareſt meet every Year, to regulate the Affairs of Money, Correſpondence, and Commerce, and are called the correſponding Circles. They are divided into three Claſſes: The firſt, are thoſe of the Upper Rhine, Lower Rhine, and Weſtphalia. The ſecond, thoſe of the Upper and Lower Saxony: And the third, thoſe of Swabia, Franconia, Bavaria, and Auſtria. The General Aſſemblies of a Circle, appoint Particular ones, and the Directors give Notice of the Time and Place. They treat about Coin, Peace, Public Defence, rectifying the Matricula, putting the Emperor's Order in Execution, and appointing Counſellors for the Chamber of Wetzlar. They alſo give orders about the Records, Treaſury, Arſenals, Magazines, Fortifications, and Frontiers, and make Laws, but muſt take care they be conſiſtent with the Conſtitution of the Empire.

The Military Force of the Empire, according to the Matricula, which appoints what the Princes and States of each Circle ſhall raiſe, or pay, according to their reſpective Rates; is as follow,

	Horſe.	Foot.	Florins.
The Circle of Auſtria	174	907	5714
The Lower Rhine	190 2/3	885 1/12	5828

Lower Saxony	321 1/3	1053 1/2	8992
Burgundy	180	831	5484
Total	2707 1/4	13292 1/12	82891

We have mentioned already that the Circles, double or tripple this Proportion of Men, Horſe, and Money, as they think fit, or as the Neceſſity of the Empire requires.

Therefore it is no Determination of the Military Strength of the Empire, or a Limitation what each Prince or State ſhall raiſe; but only a Rule to adjuſt their Proportions.

The following Scheme, from the Atlas Hiſtorique, of what the Empire is able to raiſe with Eaſe, when Neceſſity requires, gives us a better View of its Military Force.

The

The Seven United PROVINCES.

THESE Provinces, including what is call'd Dutch Brabant, lie betwixt Lat. 51 ½. and 53. 26. ſo that the Extent South and North is 126 Miles. The Breadth is very unequal, being indented on the Eaſt and South by a Part of Germany. The greateſt Extent Eaſt and Weſt from the Mouth of the Maeſe to the Frontiers of Munſter is 105. They are call'd the United Provinces, becauſe of the Union, or rather Confederacy they enter'd into at Utrecht, for Defence of their Liberties againſt the Spaniards in January 1579.

The Country in general, eſpecially the Provinces of Holland and Weſt Frieſland, is ſo full of Marſhes, that they are cut thro' with innumerable Ditches and Channels to drein off the Water, and the Roads thro' thoſe Grounds are planted with Rows of Trees, which make 'em very pleaſant. Their Paſtures are very rich, and mix'd with great Quantities of ſweet Trefoil; ſo that they feed vaſt Herds of Cattel, eſpecially Cows, which give more Milk than in other Countries. One of them, in ſome Parts of Holland, gives three great Pailfuls in a Day; ſo that they abound with Butter and Cheeſe, in making and preſerving of which, they excel moſt Countries, their beſt Cheeſe being reckon'd equal to Parmeſan. The Landlords take great care to improve their Lands, and oblige their Tenants by Articles to apply certain Portions to particular Uſes, not to feed above ſo many Cattel in ſuch a number of Acres, to ſcower the old Ditches, and to make new on occaſion, to let the plow'd Fields lie fallow once in ſo many Years, and to cultivate them well with Dung, &c. which makes the Boors ſtrive to outvie one another. Some Years their Corn-Fields are much infeſted with Mice, and likewiſe with Caterpillars, and another ſort of Inſect. The Husbandmen make Trenches, or ſet Water-pots in the Corn-Grounds, to intercept and drown the Mice; and the other Inſects are uſually deſtroyed by the Heat of the Sun, when the hot Seaſon comes early. The Dutch are fond of Orchards and Gardens; ſo that there is ſcarce any Tree, Herb, or Flower, but what they plant here. Some time ago they doated ſo extravagantly on Flowers, eſpecially fine Tulips, that the Roots of 'em have been ſold for 2 and 3000 Florins apiece. It was look'd on as a Diſeaſe, and therefore call'd Tulipomania, or Tulip-madneſs; ſo that the Government was forced to reſtrain it. The meaner People were ſoon cured of this Frenzy, when they found it turn'd to no Profit; but thoſe of Faſhion are ſtill very curious and expenſive this way: But in the Province of Holland, where they have not much Ground to ſpare, their Gardens and Orchards are not commonly ſo large, unleſs it be ſome belonging to Perſons of Quality, which are curiouſly adorned with long Walks, Wilderneſſes, Mounts, Waterworks, Arbors, and Orangeries; but they want ſuch Gravel as ours, which very much leſſens the Beauty of their Walks.

They have no Minerals, and their chief Foſſile is a Bituminous Earth, of which they make their Turfs: In ſome Places where they dig it, they find great numbers of Trees under Ground, ſuppoſed to have been overturn'd by Tempeſts and Inundations, and in Proceſs of Time cover'd over with Earth. In ſome Places they rake up Mud from the bottom of the Water, which they carry out in Boats, ſpread upon the Ground, lay Boards upon it, tread it, and when the Water is ſqueez'd out, cut it in Form of Bricks, and dry it for Fuel. The Earth from whence they dig their Turf fills up again in a few Years, which affords the middling ſort of People conſtant Fuel; the poorer in many Places uſing Cow-Dung, which they dry up in the ſame manner; but the better ſort generally uſe Sea-coal. All the Salt they have of their own is what they collect in ſmall Quantities out of the Sea Water. They are excellent at boiling and purifying what is brought to them from France, and other Countries; and tho' they uſe more than any Nation in Europe, yet have enough to ſupply other Countries. Their common Grain is Summer and Winter Wheat, of which they have the beſt and whiteſt in Zealand, Buck-Wheat or Beach-Wheat, very much uſed by their Brewers, and another ſort reſembling Barley in the Ear. They have alſo Barley, Oats, Peaſe, Beans, Rye, Colewort-ſeed, Rape-ſeed, Madder, Hops, and great Quantities of French Beans.

The wild Beaſts here are, a few Boars and Wolves, and ſuch numbers of Foxes, that the States pay a Price for every one that is taken. They have multitudes of Hares and Rabbets, but only the Nobility are permitted to take them. They have but few Deer. In ſome Parts of Drente they have a Creature of a middle Nature, betwixt a Hog and a Bear. They have vaſt Numbers of Squirrels and Hogs, which they feed with Whey, and the like waſhy Nouriſhment, which makes them but indifferent Meat; yet they ſalt a great deal of Pork every Year for the Eaſt Indies. They have Store of good Horſes, ſeveral Villages contributing to keep a good Stallion, to which every Man of the Neighbourhood is obliged to bring his Mare. They purchaſe many Thouſands of Black Cattel in a Year from Holſtein, Eaſt Frieſland, &c. fatten them up in their own Paſture, and ſell them off in October. They have great numbers of Sheep, but the beſt are in Zealand, where they feed upon Graſs and Herbs, that abound with Salt. In other Provinces they feed much upon ſweet Broom, and excellent Cheeſe is made of their Milk.

They have multitudes of Storks, which build their Neſts in the Chimneys as well of their Towns as Villages, and are the more favoured becauſe they devour the Frogs, which are very numerous in this Country: they fly with their Young about the beginning of Auguſt, as ſome think to Africa, and return about the End of February. They have vaſt numbers of wild Ducks from Norway and the Baltic, which come to feed in their Channels and Marſhes about the End of Autumn. They have large Flocks of wild Geeſe, Herons, which build without Diſturbance about the Houſes of the Gentry, wild and tame Swans, kept at the public Charge in Moats and Ditches, with Officers to look after them, great numbers of Partridges, Snipes, Water-Hens, Quails, Lapwings, whoſe Eggs they count a Dainty, Larks, Thruſhes, and Pigeons, which they allow no Man to ſhoot. They have likewiſe Plenty of all the other ſorts of domeſtic Fowl. About Martinmaſs they have particular Markets for ſelling Geeſe, when the pooreſt among them is ſure to buy one; the Origin of which is aſcribed to the peculiar Reſpect they formerly paid to St. Martin Biſhop of Tours.

Their River-Fiſh are Salmons, which abound moſt in the Mouths of the Maeſe and Leck, Pikes, Mullets, Perches, Trouts, Shadfiſh, and abundance of Eels, many of which they ſalt up. In ſome places none but the Nobility have the Liberty to fiſh; and in ſuch Places where 'tis free for every one, there are Officers to keep the People within due Bounds. The Fiſh upon their Coaſts are Hubardine, Haddocks, great numbers of Soles, Rays, Sturgeons, Sea-Crabs, Pollards, Congers, Mackrel, Smelts, and Herrings; but the latter not being good, are ſold very cheap to the Poor. They have plenty of Shell-fiſh, but no Oyſters. There are many Sea-Dogs on ſome of their Coaſts, which the Fiſhermen take thus: When thoſe Fiſh come out of the Water, they diſguiſe themſelves in Beaſt-skins, dance, and play antick Tricks before them, to draw them from the Shore, where they place Nets, and then throwing off their Diſguiſe, purſue them till they are entangled.

The Flatneſs of the Country ſo expoſes it to Inundations and high Tides, that they are forced to have great Banks and Dykes; the making and repairing of which conſtantly employs a vaſt number of Hands: the chief Material in them is the common Sea-weed, which, faſten'd with a thin mixture of Earth, yields a little to the Force of the Waves, and returns to its Poſture as they give back. Their Dykes are uſually about 7 Ells high, and 17 broad at bottom, made of the tougheſt Clay, fenced on the Landſide with Wood and Stone, and on the other with Ruſhes, ſtaked down as high as the Tide generally riſes, or elſe with Sea-weed, which hinders the Water from undermining them; and in North Holland, when the Weather is very ſtormy, they clap Sails on the Outſide of 'em. The North-Weſt Wind makes the higheſt Tides on theſe Coaſts, and commonly the greateſt Inundations, of which Hiſtory gives many diſmal Accounts. We ſhall only inſtance in the following. Novemb. 5. 1530, the Sea overflow'd great Part of Zealand. Octob. 31. 1568, it broke ſome Banks, and overflow'd others, cover'd ſome Iſlands of Zealand, great part of the Coaſt of Holland, and almoſt all Frieſland, ſwallowed up 72 Villages, and in Frieſland alone deſtroyed above 20000 People, whoſe Bodies floating upon the drowned Lands, with their Cattel, Houſhold-ſtuff, &c. was to thoſe that eſcaped, a natural Repreſentation of Noah's Flood. Many People got up to the tops of Trees and riſing Grounds, where they muſt have famiſhed, if they had not been brought off in Boats by the care of the Magiſtrates. In November 1665, they had another Inundation, which exceeded that in 1568, for the Sea broke in with ſuch incredible Violence betwixt the Texel and the Helder, that it carried part of the Village of Huysduynen quite away, and laid all the Country between Wiring and Zyp under Water, broke the Dyke near Horn, ſo that the Water came to the Gates of Medemblick, overflowed many Villages, turned a large Tract of Country into a continued Sea, and deſtroyed many People and Cattel. The Dyke of Muydenburg was then alſo broke down, ſo that all the Country round Naerden, Muyden, and Weſop, as far as Loren in Goyland, and Balecorn in the Province of Utrecht, was under Water: the Gates and Ramparts of Naerden were ruined; and the ſtrong Rampart of Stone, call'd the Aſſes Back, built to repel the Waves, was hurried away, leaving a Hole where it ſtood of 36 Foot deep: the Newen-Dyke in Amſterdam, with the Street upon it, and the neighbouring Market-place was quite overflowed, and that betwixt Amſterdam and Haerlem was broke in the middle for the Breadth of 30 or 40 Rods; ſo that there was about 33 Foot Water in thoſe Parts. Many other Dykes had the ſame Fate. The Country in many Places, and particularly a great part of Water-Land, was entirely ſwallowed up. Several Dykes in Frieſland had Breaches made in them of 30 and 40 Rods long, ſo that a great part of thoſe Coaſts ſeemed to be irrecoverably loſt. The ſame Tempeſt did an incredible Damage in Zealand and Flanders; yet after the Storm was over, the Dykes were repaired by the incredible Induſtry of the People, in February following, and made ſtronger than before. They had another Inundation which did vaſt Damage in Frieſland, &c. on Decemb. 25, 1717, which is freſh in every one's Memory. Their Banks, eſpecially thoſe of the Rivers, often ſuffer much by Shoals of Ice, as happen'd in 1638, when the Ice of the Rhine broke down the Iſſel-Dyke near Utrecht, and laid moſt of the Province of Holland under Water; but the Dyke was ſpeedily repaired, and the Waters drein'd by the Wind-mills, of which there are great Numbers placed conveniently for carrying off the Winter Rain and Snow-Waters, which about the beginning of February, if the Froſt do not hinder, are forced up by the Mills to vaſt Currents, and drove in to particular Channels; ſo that the Earth becoming dry in a little time, it begins to look green about March, when their Cattel are put out to Graſs.

On the other hand, the Flatneſs of their Country, and the Softneſs of their Soil, has given them the great Advantage of cutting numerous Canals with little Trouble, which makes Paſſage and Carriage eaſy and cheap from one Town to another. Both Paſſengers and Goods are brought to the ſet Stages at the time appointed, in their Treck-Schuyts, which are drawn by Horſes, and they are ſecured from Rain, &c. the Boats being cover'd by a Deck above, and having Windows in the ſides to let in the Air, and Proſpect of the Country. The overflowing of their Country in the Winter, does alſo enrich their Soil; and when the Froſts come, it gives them not only the Opportunity of diverting themſelves upon the Ice, but likewiſe of travelling expeditiouſly peditiously about Business with their Skates, by which some of 'em will make above 18 Miles an Hour, if the Ice be smooth; and they have likewise Sledges loaden with Goods, which the Men drive before them on Skates, and carry long Poles upon their Shoulders to support them if the Ice should break.

The GEOGRAPHY.

I. FRIESLAND, has the Zuyder-Sea on the West and South, Groningen and Part of Overyssel on the East and South, and the Ocean on the North. 'Tis near 40 Miles from North to South, and 33 from East to West. Some say it was much larger formerly, and that the Islands on the North of it were separated from it by Inundations. Tho' the Country lies low, yet the Air is purified by frequent Winds. In the Winter the Fields are so full of Water, that there is no travelling but on Banks; yet in many places there is good Pasturage, and Arable Land, especially in Oestergo. Westergo is more level and fenny, but abounds with Fish and Fowl. There is a Bituminous Earth here, which, Guiccardine says, did formerly take Fire of itself, near the Zuyder-Sea, and could not be stopped till it had burnt two Leagues in length, and as much in breadth, when it was extinguished by the Eruption of Subterraneous Waters, which formed that Lake called the Jonkermeer. Becanus says, The like happened in Brabant in 1541, and in the Province of Utrecht in 1567. The Inhabitants are Fair, Tall, Stout, great Lovers of Liberty, Frugal, Affable, and Modest, but when provoked, are outragious: Few of them marry young, which is thought to be the Cause of their strong and healthful Constitution, and of the Vivacity of their Children. They are reckoned very chast, and Adultery, when discovered, is severely punished here: They are of a Martial Discipline, especially their Gentry, who had rather follow the Sword, than Commerce, and will scarce marry to Citizens Daughter. The Women of Quality are generally good Housewives, and careful of their domestic Affairs, while their Husbands follow the Court or Camp. The Gentry affect splendid Apparel, Equipage, and Ritinues. Both Sexes generally follow the French Dress. The meaner Sort feed much on Salt, Smoak'd Flesh, Bacon, Barley-Broth, Cheese, and Butter; but affect good Tables on Sundays. They are good Companions, carouse in Wine and Ale, and take it ill if they be not pledged. The Language comes nearer the old English than any other. Sir William Temple is of Opinion, that part of the Saxons, who conquered England, came from hence. The Men were so much noted formerly for Strength and Courage, that it became a Proverb, As strong as a Frison. The Province is divided into Oestergo, Westergoo, and the Seven Wolden, or Provinces. Oestergo lies in the North Part, is divided into 12 Jurisdictions, contains 2 Cities, 127 Villages, and had formerly 21 Monasteries; besides Castles and Noblemens Houses. Westergo lies on the West Side of the County, contains 9 Towns, 8 Jurisdictions, 127 Villages, and had formerly 24 Monasteries. Seven Wolden is the South East Part, divided into 9 Jurisdictions, is in some Places Moorish, in others Sandy; has no Towns, but 77 Villages: In some Parts there is good Corn, but little Pasturage: The Inhabitants live hard, and are reckoned the best Soldiers in the Province.

Places of Note are,

1. Dockum, Lat. 53. 31. Lon. 6. 12. It lies in a good Country that abounds with Corn and Pasture, good Villages and Gentlemens Seats. It is very ancient, as appears by Medals, and lies on the River Ea, by which it has a Communication with the Sea, Leeuwarden, and by Canals, with other Towns, and the Sea on both Sides. The Houses are neat, and well furnished. The Guild-hall is a handsome Structure. The Stone-Bridge near it is so broad, that it serves for a Market, and the Arch is so large and high, that Vessels pass under them. They have two other Bridges, one of which draws up with Chains, to let Vessels pass. The River, where it enters and goes out of the Town, is commanded by Blockhouses, and has a strong Boom open by Day, for the Passage of Ships, and shut up by Night. On each Side of the Channel there is a beautiful Street, with a Bank neatly paved and faced with Stone, to keep in the Water.

2. Leeuwarden, on the same River, 12 Miles South-West from Dockum, Lat. 53. 24. near Long. 6. The largest, richest, best built, and most populous City in the Province; 'tis square and well fortified, and by its navigable Canals, has a good Trade with Holland, Hamburgh, Bremen, and Embden. The Canal which lies West of the Zuyder-Sea, is commanded by strong Sluices. The Streets are cleanly, their Houses splendid, the Bridges well paved, their Gardens pleasant, the Churches, the Provincial Court, the Governour's Palace, and the Houses of the Nobility, are fine Structures. Here are two Hospitals, one nobly endowed, for 100 poor People of both Sexes, with good Accommodations for the Aged, Sick, and Lunatic, and for entertaining poor Strangers two Nights at a time. The Town chuses its own Magistrates, has very good Laws for Government, admits no military Men into the Magistracy, nor any but of the Established Religion, and competent Estates. It lies in a fruitful Country, and is plentifully supply'd with all all Necessaries.

3. Franeker, 7 Miles West from Leeuwarden, is an ancient City, well fortified, and the Air so good, that many of the neighbouring Gentry have built stately Houses here. On the West Side there is a strong Castle which commands the City, and was formerly the Residence of their Governour. It has many Canals, two of which run the Length of the Town, and by communicating with others, make it very pleasant, and advance its Trade. It consists but of one Parish, and they have a large Church, with a tall handsome Steeple. They have an Hospital for 30 Orphans of both Sexes, who are taught Reading, Writing, and Handicrafts, and the Girls, when Marriageable, are provided with competent Portions. The Fields on the North-West lie high, and produce good Corn; but those on the other Side are low, and covered with Water in Winter. The Channel which comes from Leeuwarden, runs thro' this City, is Navigable, and has high Banks for the Conveniency of Passengers, and of Horses that draw their Boats, when the Wind is contrary. They have an University which was founded in 1584, where they have 14 Professors endowed by the Revenues of the old Monasteries, and the Students, besides other Immunities, are exempted from Taxes on Wine and Beer. The Rector Magnificus is chosen annually out of the several Faculties by Turns, and has the Cognizance of Civil Causes, but the Criminal are referred to the Court of the Province. Here is also a Grammar-School. This and Leeuwarden are the only Towns in the whole Province that chuse their own Magistrates.

4. Harlingen, 4 Miles West from Franecker, at the Mouth of the Canal, and on the Bank of the Zuyder-Sea. It was fortified by Prince William of Orange, about 1579, and by means of its Sluices, can overflow the Country in an Hours time. Tho' the Harbour is large and much frequented, yet Ships of great Burthen must lie out a good Distance at Sea, or unload Part of their Cargo before they can get in. Their chief Trade is in making Sails, and in importing and exporting Corn, Pitch, Tar, Fir-Trees and Deal. On the South Side there was formerly a Castle, the Residence of Albert the Saxon, and other Tyrants, who so plagued the Country, that the Inhabitants demolished it. It has a Grammar-School, and two Hospitals, and is governed by its own Magistrates, appointed out of a Number presented to the Provincial Council.

5. Bolswert, at the End of a Canal about 8 Miles South-East from Harlingen. 'Tis an ancient City, stands on a rising Ground, encompassed with good Pasture and Arable Land. It had formerly a considerable Trade by Sea, but now deals chiefly with the neighbouring Towns by Canals. 'Tis one of the Hans Towns, is populous, well built, and has several Channels which run through it, that carry small Vessels. It has five Gates, four Sluices, a small Market-place, a Town-house, a Church with two Ministers, a Grammar-School with three Masters, two Monasteries, now converted to other Uses, and Hospitals for the Poor and Orphans. 'Tis governed by its own Magistrates, and encompassed by a good Ditch and Rampart.

6. Sneeck, 6 Miles South-East from Bolswert, is an ancient, populous, neat and well fortified Town. Its chief Trade, which it carries on to the neighbouring Towns by Canals, is in fresh Fish, with which it is well supplied from the neighbouring Lakes. Here is a Public School, which for the Salaries of the Masters, and Number of Scholars, is the best in the Province, next to that of Leeuwarden. The adjacent Country has good Pasture, but lies so low that it is not fit for Corn.

7. Worcum, lies on the Sea, 7 Miles South-West from Sneeck, in a rich Soil. The Harbour is choaked up with Sand, but it drives a good Trade with the Country by Canals, and is well supplied with Fish from the neighbouring Lakes. 'Tis also governed by its own Magistrates.

8. Stavern, upon the Zuyder-Sea, in the South-West Corner of the Country, about 18 Miles South-West from Sneeck. It is very ancient, said to have been the Seat of their Kings, and a great Emporium. It has still great Privileges, but the Harbour being choaked up, its Trade is decay'd; and the old Town has been destroy'd by Inundations, the Ruins of which are to be seen at Low-Water. 'Twas formerly the third of the Hans Towns, and so powerful, that it waged War with Hamburg and Lubec. It is neat, well fortified, governed by its own Magistrates, trades in Fishing, and gets Money by Passage-Boats over the neighbouring Pools and Lakes. There was a Forest here, that in 1250, reached almost to Enckhuysen in North-Holland, but is now a Road for Ships, which shews that the Zuyder-Sea has been enlarged by Inundations.

The Islands of Ameland and Schwermonikooge on the North of this Province, are inconsiderable, and have only 6 or 7 Villages.

II. GROENINGEN, lies East from Friesland; has the Sea on the North, the Gulph of Embden or Dollert on the East, and Overyssel on the South. 'Tis about 42 Miles South-East and North-West, but the South-East Part is only a narrow Slip of Land; the greatest Breadth from East to West is about 38. The Air is sharp and purified by continual Breezes, so that People live here to a good Age. Here is little Wood, so the most of their Fewel is Turf. They have good Pastures, and large Herds of great and small Cattle; are well supplied with salt and fresh Water Fish. The People are much of the same Temper with those of Friesland, but reckoned more industrious and cautious. The Country is divided into Groeningen and the Ommelands; each of which has their Subdivisions.

Places of Note are,

1. Groeningen, Lat. 53. 30. Lon. 6. 50. at the Conflux of the Aha and Hunnisius, which form a Channel capable of many Ships. The Aha is received, and let out of the City, by several large Arches under the Fortifications, which are so good that 'tis reckoned almost impregnable. The City is large and populous, and has a great Trade by the Conveniency of its Canals, and its Communication with the German Sea, and the River Ems. Within the City there is a large Bridge over the Aha. Here are three Parish-Churches, nine more which belong to Monasteries and Hospitals being now put to other Uses: Those of St. Mary, and St. Walburg, have very high Towers. The first is a strong round Structure, and has a Fountain that springs continually. St. Walburg's Friery is now the Residence of the Governour of the Province. Here are three large Market-places, and 27 spacious Streets, several of them adorned with fine Buildings; and most of the Houses have Gardens and Orchards, that yield them both Profit and Pleasure. 17 of the Streets centre in the Ox and Fish Market, and 6 of them run in a Line to so many Gates. Those in the Old Town are so neatly paved, that People may walk safely in the Dark, without any Danger. This City has great Privileges, and was formerly one of the Hans Towns, had the Liberty of Coinage, the Benefit of a Staple, and was exempted from appearing before any other Tribunal. They have still many particular Laws advantageous to the Citizens. They made such a brave Resistance against the Bishop of Munster in 1672, that he was forced to raise the Siege after the Loss of 10000 Men, for which they have had a double Vote ever since in the Council of State of the United Provinces. There was a long Controversy betwixt them and the Ommelands, over whom they claimed Jurisdiction; but the Prince of Orange, and the States General decided for the latter. The Citizens are reckoned haughty, Lovers of Liberty, and profuse in Habit and Diet, which has occasioned a Law to regulate Expences at Weddings, and other Solemnities. They are zealous Calvinists, but tolerate Lutherans and Anabaptists. An University was founded here in 1614, and well endowed with the Revenues of the dissolved Monasteries. There is a Settlement for 40 Scholars, who pay only 45 Crowns per Annum, and the reſt of the Charge is borne by the States. Their firſt Rector was the famous Ubbo Emmius. In their Library there is an Inſcription atteſted by credible Perſons, that a Soldier lived here 16 Days after a Wound in the Right Ventricle of his Heart. Here is alſo a publick School, well endowed with 7 Maſters for the Languages. The Prince's Palace is on the North ſide of the City, with fine Gardens, and in the Gallery the Pictures of all the Princes of Orange, and Counts of Naſſaw. The Stadthouſe ſtands near it. Their Government is by 4 Conſuls, and 12 Senators, who continue for 2 Years, and are choſen by Ballot. The 24 Jurats, who elect them, are choſen in the ſame manner. The Conſuls and Senate have the Sovereign Power; but in matters of Peace and War they take the Advice of 8 Senators that went out laſt, and the Jurats, who repreſent the Corporations of the City; and on extraordinary Occaſions call for the Aſſiſtance of ſome other Citizens of the beſt Rank. They have another Council, into which none is admitted but ſuch as have been Conſuls: They have Juriſdiction over the Territory of the City and the Ommelands, from whence 3 Members are admitted, who preſide in their Turns. This City gave Birth to thoſe two great Scholars Rodolphus Agricola, and Weſelius.

2. Winſchotten, 12 Miles South-East of Groningen, a Fortreſs, noted for the Defeat of the Spaniards near it in 1568, by Count Lewis of Naſſaw, being the firſt Battel which the Dutch fought for their Liberty againſt them.

3. Bolling-wolder-Schans, 11 Miles South-East from Winſchotten, a ſtrong Fort, that commands one of the chief Paſſes into Weſtphalia, and has Sluices, by which they can drown the neighbouring Country.

4. Bourtangerfort, 7 Miles South-East of the former, encompaſſed with unpaſſable Moraſſes. It was built by the Prince of Orange in 1593, who repulſed the Spaniards there before it was finiſhed.

5. Langaker-Schans, on the South end of Dollert Bay, 7 Miles East of Winſchotten, a very ſtrong Place; 'twas taken by the Biſhop of Munſter in 1672, but retaken by the Dutch next Year, with all the Plunder he had laid up there. There are other Forts in the Neighbourhood, which, with thoſe already mentioned, make a ſtrong Frontier on the ſide of Embden and Weſtphalia.

6. Delfzyl, on Dollert Bay, 12 Miles North-East of Groningen, a very good Harbour, better than that of Embden, and the Fortifications ſo large, that it reſembles a great Town. The Dutch East-India Fleet of 14 Ships, with a Cargo valued at 16 Millions Sterling, being cloſe purſued by the Engliſh Fleet, eſcaped hither in 1672, as they came North about.

III. OVERYSSEL, has Groningen on the North, Part of Frieſland and the Zuyder-Sea on the Weſt, the County of Zutphen on the South, and part of Weſtphalia on the East; 'tis 80 Miles where longeſt South-East and North-Weſt, and 48 where broadeſt East and Weſt. 'Tis more expoſed to Invaſions from Germany than any of the other Provinces, being ill provided of natural Fortifications of Rivers and Foreſts on that ſide. In many Places there are Sands, Heaths, and Marſhes; but in others good Corn and Paſturage. 'Tis the worſt inhabited, and has the leaſt Trade of any of the Provinces, owing to the Barrenneſs of much of the Soil, and the Inconveniency of its Situation. In the County of Drent, the North part of it, there are Stones of ſo prodigious a Bulk, which not being the Product of the Country, fills Spectators with Amazement how they came hither: Some of 'em lie upon the top of others, with room for a Man to creep thro'. The Natives ſay, they were Heathen Altars, and that the Men ſacrificed to their Idols were forced to creep thro' thoſe Places, all beſmeared with humane Ordure. The Country has its Name from the River Yſſel, of which it lies East, and is divided into the Yſſel-land, which lies on that River, Drent, and Twente. The Province in the whole contains 9 Cities, 5 Fortreſſes, 10 large open Towns, and 210 Villages.

Places of chief Note are,

1. Valter-Schans, Lat. 53. 5. Long. 7. 12. ſo ſtrong a Fortreſs, that 'tis able to reſiſt the greateſt Army.

2. Schans-ten-hole, another Fortreſs, 7 Miles South-Weſt from it.

3. Coevorden, 5 Miles South-Weſt from thence, Lat. 52. 59. Lon. 7. 7. one of the ſtrongeſt Fortreſſes in Europe by Art and Nature; 'tis defended on one part by unpaſſable Moraſſes and Fens, and all the Roads to it, but that from Groningen, ſo narrow, that an Army can't march in this Country but with great difficulty. 'Twas ſeveral times taken and retaken during the Wars betwixt the Dutch and Spaniards, and betrayed to the Biſhop of Munſter in 1672, but ſoon after ſurprized by the Dutch. The Biſhop block'd it up again in 1673, and by cooping up the Waters with a high Bank, brought it to Diſtreſs; but as the Garriſon was preparing to cut thro' the Bank, it was broke down by a Storm, which relieved the Town, and drowned part of the Biſhop's Troops. Here is a Caſtle where the Governour of the Province reſides.

4. Aſſen, a ſmall City, about 21 Miles North of Coevorden, where there is a Court of Judicature. The reſt of the Country is divided into Diſtricts, which have their proper Judges choſen annually out of the Gentry and Peaſants, who meet weekly to diſtribute Juſtice, and all together three times a Year, for Cauſes of a high Nature; but there lies an Appeal from them to the ſupreme Court of the Province.

5. Steenwyck, 27 Miles North-Weſt of Coevorden, a ſmall ſtrong Town, that held out a Siege of 3 Months againſt the Spaniards in 1581, when the Engliſh under Colonel Norris obliged 'em to raiſe it. The Spaniards took it again, but it was retaken by Prince Maurice of Orange in 1592, after a ſharp Siege, when the Spaniſh Governour ſaid, he was dug out like a Fox. 'Twas ſurrendered to the Biſhop of Munſter in 1672, who baſely ruined the Fortifications, tho' he had the Money he demanded to ſpare them; but it is now refortified; and the adjacent Country has good Paſtures and arable Lands.

6. Blockzyl, on the Zuyder-Sea, 7 Miles South-Weſt from Steenwyck, a Place of good Trade, very populous, and well fortified.

7. Vollenhove, 3 Miles South of Blockzyl, on the Zuyder-Sea, a neat fortified Town, Capital of its Diſtrict, and formerly the Seat of the King of Spain's Grand Council in this Country, where the Magiſtrates pronounced Sentence without Appeal, in Preſence of the Governour of the Province, who generally reſided here. Many of the Nobility of the Province have Houſes in the Town; and 'tis noted for a great Market of Corn from the Baltic.

8. Swartſluys, 5 Miles South-East of Vollenhove, a very large and ſtrong Fort, taken by the Biſhop of Munſter in 1672, and with difficulty retaken by the Dutch afterwards.

9. Haſſelt, 2 Miles South-East of Swartſluys, on the River Vecht, a pleaſant City, of good Trade.

10. Camp or Campen, about 7 Miles South-Weſt of Haſſelt, on the Weſt ſide of the Yſſel, about 2 Miles above where it falls into the Zuyder-Sea, a large neat City, in the middle of pleaſant Fields, from whence came the Name. It has ſpacious Churches of curious Workmanſhip, a noble Guild-hall, a Cuſtom-houſe of fine Architecture, and ſo large, that they lodge and entertain Princes, and others of Quality in it. Here is a long wooden Bridge over the Yſſel, defended by a ſtrong Fort. The City is encompaſſed by a thick Wall, with many high Towers; but the chief Strength is in its Situation. The French bargained for 80000 Livres to ſpare the Town and its Fortifications, when they quitted it in 1673, but deſtroyed part of 'em. The Town has Liberty of Coinage, and other large Immunities, and had formerly a conſiderable Trade, but 'tis now decayed, becauſe the Harbour is ſo choak'd up with Sand, that it is not capable of large Veſſels.

11. Zwoll, 6 Miles South-East of Campen, an ancient City, on a Stream of the Vecht, which runs thro' the City, contributes much to its Neatneſs, and mixing with others, forms a Channel without the Town to the Zuyder-Sea, from whence the Tide flows up and advances its Trade, which is chiefly in Timber, Cattel fatted in the neighbouring Paſtures, Wool, Corn, Butter, Cheeſe, and Benthem Stones. 'Tis ſtrongly fortified by 4 good Fortreſſes, 3 of 'em ſo large that they reſemble Towns, beſides a double Ditch, 10 good Baſtions, and 24 Towers upon the ancient Walls, and 3 large ſtrong Gates that open into the Suburbs, which are equal to good Villages. Here is a Court where Appeals from others in the Province are determined. The Provincial States meet here, at Deventer, and Campen by Turns. They have a College, where there are uſually 500 Students: It has bred many learned Men. The famous Thomas à Kempis was Prior of Mount Agnis in the Juriſdiction of this City, to which alſo belong'd the Monaſtery of Winſem, that had 70 Convents under it. St. Michael's Church here is a large Structure of good Architecture, has a wonderful high Steeple, and harmonious Bells. Their Guild-hall is noted for Antiquity. The City is very pleaſant by fine Walks within and without, where there are many Orchards and Meadows. The Inhabitants are reckoned courteous to Strangers, and charitable to the Poor, for whom they have ſeveral Hoſpitals. Here is a large Granary, and a good Arſenal. There are 18 large populous Villages in the Juriſdiction of the Town. It was betrayed to the Biſhop of Munſter in 1672, and ſent Deputies in the Name of the Provincial States to the other Towns of the Province to ſubmit to him; for which Treachery they were deprived of the Power to chuſe their own Magiſtrates, without the Prince's Conſent. 'Twas quitted by the Archbiſhop of Cologne in 1674, to whom it was given by the French and the Biſhop of Munſter, his Confederates; but he ſent the Magiſtrates to Maeſtricht, as Hoſtages for 10000 Crowns he demanded of the Town.

12. Ommen, about 11 Miles East of Zwoll, a walled Town.

13. A Fort call'd Ommer-Schans, 3 Miles North.

14. Hardenberg, a walled Town, about 8 Miles North-East.

15. Gramsberg, 3 Miles North-East from Hardenberg, an ancient Caſtle, famous for the brave Defence made by its Garriſon of 36 Men in 1672, againſt 900 of the Biſhop of Munſter's Troops: they ſtood out two Storms, and yielded at laſt upon honourable Terms, but were impriſoned, contrary to Capitulation. The Biſhop fortified it ſtrongly afterwards, but was obliged to quit it.

16. Deventer, on the Yſſel, Lat. 52. 25. Long. 6. 26. 18 Miles South of Zwoll, a large, ancient, neat, populous, and well fortified City, whoſe Inhabitants are addicted to Learning and Traffick. 'Twas formerly an Imperial and Hans Town, and See of a Biſhop. It revolted with the reſt of the Province from the Spaniards, to whom it was betrayed in 1587, by Sir William Stanly, a Papiſt, who was made Governour by the Earl of Leiceſter; but retaken by Prince Maurice in 1591, and its Fortifications enlarged. It lies in a pleaſant Country, that abounds with Paſtures and arable Land. It has a large Market-place, with a Houſe where ſome of the Citizens always keep Guard. It has the Power of Coinage, weekly Markets, and 5 annual Fairs, a Cathedral, 2 other Churches, 6 Hoſpitals, one of 'em for Orphans, a ſpacious Guild-hall of ancient Architecture, and a Schola Illuſtris, with Profeſſors of Law, Philoſophy, Divinity, and the Languages. Eraſmus had part of his Education here; and it has bred other learned Men. The Town has 6 Gates, ſome of 'em of fine Architecture, particularly the Brink Port, adorned with Statues and Inſcriptions, and among others that of the Emperor Charles V. for defending the Town in 1544. The Tower of Noremberg, adjoining to the Gate of that Name, is their ſtrongeſt and neateſt Structure. The Town was baſely betrayed by ſome of the Magiſtrates in 1672, to the Biſhop of Munſter, and delivered to him by Night, without conſent of the Burghers or Garriſon, who together made up 10000 reſolute fighting Men. It fell to the Share of the Archbiſhop of Cologne, one of the Confederates, who quitted it in 1674, for 42000 Crowns, to ſpare their Fortifications and Guns.

17. Oldenzyl, 33 Miles East of Deventer, near the Frontiers of Germany, a fortified Town, but of no great Bulk or Strength, frequently taken and retaken in the Wars with Spain, and at laſt by the Biſhop of Munſter in 1672; but retaken by the Dutch in 1674.

IV. DUTCH GELDERLAND, where longeſt from South to North is 60 Miles, and where broadeſt from East to Weſt about 70, including the County of Zutphen; but the Breadth is very unequal, being much indented by the other Provinces and the Zuyder-Sea, which, with part of Overyſſel, lies on the North of it; Utrecht, and part of Holland, lies on the Weſt; part of Cleve and Munſter on the East; and part of Holland and Dutch Brabant on the South. The Air is much better than that of Holland and the other Provinces, becauſe of its higher Situation. Part of it is full of Heaths, Woods, and barren Hills; but other Parts are fruitful in Corn and Paſturage; ſo that great Droves of Cattel are annually brought hither from Denmark and Frieſland to be fatten'd. The People have been always noted for their Courage, and their Cavalry particularly. The continual Wars betwixt their ancient Dukes and and their Neighbours, and the Barrenneſs of ſo much of their Country, made them apply themſelves chiefly to Arms. Charles V. being ſenſible of this, did, in order to abate their Military Genius, and ſecure to his Family the Poſſeſſion of this Country, to which the Duke of Cleve had the better Title, exclude them from his Armies. The common People are reckon'd courteous and induſtrious, and much reſemble the Lower Germans. They were great Aſſertors of their Liberties, and had the Privileges of arming againſt their Prince, if he invaded them. 'Twas divided into the Quarters of Nimeguen, Ruremond, Arnheim, and Zuphen; and when the Subjects of any of thoſe Quarters were wrong'd by the Prince, they complained to the Magiſtrates of the chief City of their Quarter, who were to demand Redreſs, and if not obtained in two Months, had Power to ſeize on the Prince's Revenues in that Quarter; and if he proved obſtinate, the other Cities were to join them. The Quarter of Ruremond belongs to Spaniſh Gelderland.

The Quarter of ARNHEIM, or the VELUWE, is the North, and largeſt Part of the Country, is about 40 Miles long, and 24 where broadeſt.

Places of Note here are,

1. Elburg, on the Zuyder-Sea, Lat. 52. 36. Long. 6. 5. 8 Miles South-Weſt of Campen. 'Twas one of the Hans Towns, is walled, of a ſquare Figure, has 3 Gates, a ſmall River runs thro' it, over which there are 5 Stone Bridges, upon one of which they keep their Market for Fiſh, which is their chief Trade.

2. Harderwyck, on the Zuyder-Sea, 10 Miles South-Weſt of Elbing. 'Tis a walled Town, and built after the Faſhion of Hamburg and Lubec. The Church of St. Mary is a ſtately Structure of good Architecture, and has an exceeding high Steeple, ſeen at a great diſtance by Land and Sea. Here is an Univerſity, that has a good Library of excellent Books in Latin, Greek, and the Oriental Tongues, with ſeveral Volumes printed in Chineſe. The Rector is the ſupreme Magiſtrate, and is annually choſe by the 6 Curators. It has bred many great Men, and among others the famous Lawyer Gerard Boetius, and Albertus Leoninus, who are ſaid to have formed the Model of the preſent Dutch Commonwealth here. This City was formerly a Hans Town, but ſuffer'd much by Inundations that ſwallowed up a Church and Village, with Meadows on the South ſide, which obliges them to ſecure that Part with Dykes and Fences. It was taken by the French in 1672; they burnt and diſmantled moſt of it in 1673, and demanded 12000 Guilders to ſpare the reſt. It has never ſince recover'd its ancient Luſtre.

3. Arnheim, Capital of the Veluwe, lies on the Rhine, Lat. 52. 4. Long. 6. 11. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be Tacitus's Arenacum. It is ſtrongly fortified, is the Seat of the ſupreme Council of Gelderland, was formerly a Hans Town, and has great Immunities. It has 5 Gates, ſo ſtrong, that they anciently ſerved as Fortreſſes; but 'tis now fortified after the modern way. 'Tis overlook'd by a Hill on the North ſide, from whence flows a large Current of Water, which fills their Ditches, and turns their Mills. From this Hill there is a fine Proſpect of the City and neighbouring Country. Near the Rhingate, which is the chief, there is a ſtrong Bulwark, and a Bridge of Boats over the River. The Dukes of Gelder had a noble Palace here, moſt of which was blown up by Accident in 1589. The Church of St. Martin is a noble Structure, with a ſtately Tower. Here is an Hoſpital for ancient and poor Citizens, nobly endowed, and two others of leſs Note. The Government is by a Judge, who has Juriſdiction over the City, and a great part of the Veluwe. They have alſo two Burgomaſters choſe out of their 12 Echevins, and 6 Maſters of Corporations, choſen out of a certain Number preſented to the Conſuls and Eſchevins by their Fraternities, and 48 Jurats choſen in the ſame manner, to aſſiſt in the Management of publick Affairs. This City was taken by the French in 1672, when they began to enlarge its Fortifications, and erect a Magazine; and when they left it, forced the City to pay them 170000 Guilders. About 2 Miles Eaſt from it there is a Fort on the Yſſel, call'd Yſſel-oort.

4. Wageningen, on the Rhine, about 9 Miles South-Weſt from Arnheim, thought to be the Vado of Tacitus, ſo ſtoutly defended by Julius Brigantius againſt his Unkle Civilis the famed Batavian General. It ſtands in a mooriſh Ground, which adds to its Strength. On one ſide there is a Heath above 5 Leagues broad, and on the other good Paſtures and arable Land. This Place was alſo taken by the French in 1672, but quitted ſoon after.

5. Loo, 17 Miles North from Arnheim, a noble Country Seat that belonged to the Family of Orange. It ſtands on a riſing Ground in the middle of a large Plain, where there is good hunting. The Palace is of modern Architecture, with fine Gardens, ſhady Walks and Grotto's, admirable Fountains, eſpecially one call'd the Baſin of Venus, and two noble Caſcades, where the Water falls ſo gently from one Baſin into another, that the whole reſembles a broad Mirror.

The Quarter of NIMEGUEN conſiſts chiefly of the Betuwe, ſuppoſed to be the ancient Batavia, and the chief Seat of the gallant Batavi, who make ſuch a Figure in the Roman Hiſtory. The preſent Extent of it Eaſt and Weſt is about 40 Miles where longeſt, and the greateſt Breadth South and North about 18; but the ancient Batavi extended their Juriſdiction Eaſt into Lower Germany, and Weſt as far as the Sea. They are ſuppoſed to have been of German Extract, and to have come from Heſſe, where Battenberg and Battenhauſen ſeem ſtill to have ſomething of their Name. This Country in general is fruitful, and well watered.

Places of chief Note are,

1. Nimeguen, the Capital, Lat. 51. 54. Long. 6. 6. 8 Miles South-Weſt from Arnheim. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be Tacitus's Batavorum Oppidum, which is very probable from the Roman Antiquities found in and about it. Smetius, in his Antiquitates Neomagenſes, printed here in 1678, gives a very particular and learned Account of 'em, his Father and he having made a noble Collection of them. His learned Explications tend very much to illuſtrate the Roman Hiſtory in this and other Parts of the World. Several of the Inſcriptions upon Stones, &c. are fix'd on the Wall of the Town-houſe. The Caſtle is aſcribed by ſome to the ancient Batavi, and by others to Julius Cæſar, which was particularly aſſerted in an Inſcription on Marble fix'd to the Wall, which took notice of its being repaired by the Emperor Frederic Barbaroſſa in 1155. Charlemain did alſo repair it, and he and following Emperors frequently reſided, and held Aſſemblies of the States here: But whoever built the Town and Caſtle, they are certainly very ancient. The Town mentioned by Antonin as a famous City in his Time, and the Caſtle is mentioned as a Princely Palace of incomparable Architecture by Aſchaſnaburgenſis in 1046. The Town had great Privileges granted by ſeveral Emperors, as the Right to determine all Cauſes in the Juriſdiction of their Appeal. They were not obliged to march out of their City but under their Conſul, and no farther than to be able to return at Night. They were exempted from all Taxes throughout the Empire, and are ſtill free from Tolls upon the Maeſe. The Citizens have always been tenacious of their Liberty, as appears by an Inſcription upon the Gate of the Town, on the North-Weſt ſide of the Caſtle, which is thus; Pes Imperii, huc uſque jus Stavriæ. Melior eſt Bellicoſa Libertas quam Servitus Pacifica: i. e. This is the Border of the Empire, ſo far reaches the Right of Stavria. 'Tis better to have Liberty with War, than Slavery with Peace. Stavria, here mentioned, was an Impoſt from which they were exempted. They retained the ſame Spirit of Liberty in 1566, when they were ſo much enraged at the King of Spain's Proclamation to ſeize all Perſons ſuſpected of Hereſy here, without reſpect to their Privileges, that they immediately demoliſhed all the Statues and Images in their Churches, and eſtabliſhed the Proteſtant Worſhip. This City is well fortified, and lies in Form of a Creſcent upon the Fronts of 5 little Hills on that Branch of the Rhine call'd the Waal or Wahal, from whence there is a very fine View of the Town and Caſtle. The Houſes are well built, for moſt part of Brick, and ſlated. It has 5 Gates towards the Land, and as many towards the River. Before the War with Spain, they had many Churches, and other religious Buildings, but now they have only 10, adorned with ſtately Towers: the chief is St. Stephen's, a ſumptuous Stone Structure, ſupported by 35 Pillars of extraordinary Architecture, and has a magnificent Tower: In part of this Church their Archives are kept, incloſed with Iron Grates; and in the Choir there is a magnificent Tomb of a Dutcheſs of Guelderland with her Image in Braſs, and 16 Coats of Arms expreſſing her Lineage. Near this Place ſtands the Public School for Languages and the Liberal Arts: 'tis a princely Structure, has the Images of the Apoſtles, and a noble Repreſentation of the laſt Judgment. The Town-houſe is a magnificent Fabric, with the Statues of ſeveral Emperors their Benefactors. The Seats of their Magiſtrates are beautifully adorned, and over the Heads of their Conſuls hangs a naked Sword, as an Emblem of Juſtice. Here, as a Monument of the Spaniſh Tyranny, they keep the Sword by which the Counts Egmont and Horn were executed at Bruſſels. Here are two Hoſpitals for the Education of Orphans, two for old poor Citizens, and two for the Cure of Diſeaſes. The Town was formerly Imperial. The Caſtle ſtands upon a high Hill adjoining to the River, is encompaſſed with high Stone Walls, conſiſts of three large Courts, and has two Chapels, the largeſt ſupported by eight Pillars on each ſide, and abounds with ancient Inſcriptions, and other Roman Monuments, of which Smetius gives a particular Account. From the middle Tower of this Caſtle there is as fine a Proſpect as is to be ſeen almoſt any where in Europe. Here is an Arch of a prodigious Bigneſs, with the Ruins of other Arches and Pillars, that amaze the curious Beholders. The Remainders of the old Gates reſemble Triumphal Arches, and the old Walls, eſpecially the outer, are exceeding high built with Brick, and guarded by ſtrong Towers. In the higher part of the City there are three large Ponds, fed with hidden Springs; and thro' the whole Town there are many deep Wells, which riſe and fall as the River Maeſe does, tho' 6 Miles diſtant. The Government is by two Conſuls choſen annually, 12 Echevins, and a Council of 24. The Conſuls, after the Expiration of their Office, are made Captains of the City-Companies. The Citizens are addicted to Trade, War, and Learning; and ſeldom infranchiſe Strangers, but ſuch as are like to adorn their Community. Their chief Trade is in brewing Beer, and feeding Cattel in their Paſtures. 'Twas ſurrendered by Treachery to the French after 6 Days Siege in 1672, and the Garriſon made Priſoners of War. The French knowing the Importance of it, employed 5000 Men daily in building a Citadel, and other Fortifications. They made it the Receptacle of their Plunder; and when they abandoned it in 1674, threw a Shipload of Arms into the River, and forced 82000 Crowns from the Town. A Treaty of Peace betwixt France and the Confederates was concluded here in 1678 and 1679. The French had well nigh ſurprized it in 1702, but it was ſaved by the happy Retreat of the Earl of Athlone towards it, and his obliging the Enemy to march off with Loſs. Here is a Bridge of Boats over the Waal, and a large Harbour for ſecuring their Veſſels in Winter, well fortified; and there is a Canal for Veſſels croſs the Betuwe to Arnheim, about 8 Miles long, built at the Charge of thoſe two Cities.

2. Knodſenburg lies over againſt it on the other Side the River. It has a Fort raiſed by Prince Maurice in 1590, to curb the Spaniſh Garriſon of Nimeguen, and galled them ſo much with its Cannon, that the Duke of Parma laid Siege to it, but was obliged to raiſe it with Shame, Part of his Troops being defeated by the brave Sir Francis Vere, and Count Solms, after which the Dutch ſoon took Nimeguen.

3. Schenken-Schans, 10 Miles Eaſt from Nimeguen, upon the Point of the Betuwe, where the Rhine is divided into the greater Branch, called the Waal, and the Leſſer, called the Rhine. It was built by Martin Schenk, for the Dutch, in 1588, and he did ſo much gall the Places ſubject to Spain from it, that when he was drowned at the Attack of Nimeguen, they made publick Rejoicings for ſeveral Days; and when the Town was ſurrendered to Prince Maurice, he did ſo much Honour to his Memory, that tho' he was born but of mean Parents in Nimeguen, he ordered his Corpſe to be buried in the Sepulchre of the Dukes of Guelder there. This Place is ſo ſtrong by Situation, that the Prince of Parma would never attempt it. It is very well fortified, commands both Branches of the River, and the Windmills and Ditches, which prevent the Betuwe from being overflowed. It bounds upon the Dutchy of Cleve, and is one of the Keys of the Netherlands.

4. Tiel, on the South Side of the Waal, 10 Miles Weſt from Nimeguen, a ſtrong Town, Capital of its Diſtrict, has a Marſh on the North Side, was attacked in vain by the Emperor Charles V. in 1528, but betrayed to the French in 1672, tho' they were afterwards forced to quit it.

5. Buren,

5. Buren, 5 Miles North-West of Tiel. 'Tis a walled Town, hath an ancient Caſtle, and is Capital of a County which came to the Houſe of Orange by Marriage.

6. Bommel, on the North Side of the Waal, 10 Miles South-West of Tiel, is a very ſtrong pleaſant Town, with broad regular Streets. It ſtands on a marſhy Ground, and has Sluices by which it can drown the Country betwixt the Maeſe and the Waal. 'Tis a Capital of its Diſtrict, which is an Iſland betwixt the Maeſe and the Waal, about 15 Miles long, and 5 where broadeſt.

7. Fort St. Andrew, 5 Miles Eaſt from Bommel. 'Tis very ſtrong and well fortified after the modern Way. It was one of the ſtrongeſt the Spaniards had in this Country, but taken from them by Prince Maurice in 1599, with 3000 Men, while the Spaniards attempted its Relief with 9000.

8. Fort Voorn, 2 Miles further, near a Canal which joyns the Maeſe and the Waal. It was built by Prince Maurice, after taking Fort St. Andrew, and reckoned impregnable.

The Quarter of ZUTPHEN, lies in the Eaſt Part of the Province, and was reckoned a diſtinct County. It has the Quarters of Arnheim and Nimeguen on the Weſt, Overyſſel on the North, Cleve on the South, and Munſter on the Eaſt. 'Tis about 31 Miles from South to North, and about 30 where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. It has good Paſturage, but not much Corn, the Ground being low and mooriſh.

Places of Note are,

1. Zutphen, which gives Name to the Country. It is in Lat. 52. 15. Lon. 6. 30. about 8 Miles South from Daventer. 'Tis a rich populous City, and one of the ſtrongeſt in the Seven Provinces. 'Tis divided by the River Yſſel, into the Old and New. The Buildings are fair and neat, and many People of Quality live here. There are 2 Bridges which joyn the old and new Towns. The chief Structures are, 1. St. Peter's Church, a very ſumptuous Building, with an exceeding high Steeple: It has a large Font of Braſs of curious Workmanſhip, and a noble Monument of its ancient Counts, and in this Church they have a public Library. Here it a curious Brick-Tower, built in the Form of a Quadrangular Pyramid, is a great Ornament to the City, and from hence there is a pleaſant Proſpect over the neighbouring Country. The Air of the Town is healthful, and the People courteous. The Monaſteries within the Town are turned into Hoſpitals for aged ſick People, and Orphans. It revolted from the Spaniards, with the reſt of the Provinces, was afterwards taken, and the Inhabitants cruelly uſed. The famous Sir Philip Sidney died of a Wound he received in the Siege of this Place. The Dutch retook it afterwards by Surprize. It was betrayed to the French in 1672, tho' reckoned impregnable. They abandoned it again in 1674. Here is a Court which determines Appeals from inferior Courts in the County. It had formerly a Mint, and was one of the Hans Towns.

2. Grol, about 18 Miles South-Eaſt from Zutphen. It lies on the River Slink, was fortified by Charles V. becauſe it lies on an important Paſs, betwixt Germany and the Netherlands, and afterwards made ſo ſtrong by the Spaniards that it was reckoned impregnable, but taken by Prince Maurice in 1627, after a remarkable Siege. He added ſo much to the Fortifications, that 'tis reckoned one of the ſtrongeſt in the Seven Provinces. 'Twas betrayed to the Biſhop of Munſter in 1672, but afterwards recovered by the States.

3. Doesburg, on the Yſſel, 8 Miles South-Weſt from Zutphen. 'Tis ſuppoſed to have been built by Druſus the Roman General, becauſe it lies near the Place where he cut his Ditch to bring the Rhine into the Yſſel. 'Tis very ſtrong by Situation, being acceſſible only by a Neck of Land, but was betrayed to the French in 1672, who in 1674 left and diſmantled it ſo, that it has never recovered its ancient Beauty.

4. Breevord, 17 Miles South-Eaſt from Doesburg, and 10 South-Weſt from Grol. It is ſo encompaſſed by Marſhes and Fens, that there is no Acceſs to it, but by a narrow Paſs; and the Soil is ſo ſpungy and moiſt, that it is not eaſy to be drained. It is alſo well fortified. Prince Maurice beſieged it, and attacked it in 1597, by ſwimming Machines; but loſt ſo many Men before it, that when his Men ſtormed, it he could not reſtrain them from Plunder and other Diſorders, they were ſo enraged; they found a vaſt Booty in the Place, becauſe the People of the adjacent Country had brought all their beſt Effects hither, as to an impregnable Fortreſs.

V. The Province of UTRECHT has Holland on the Weſt, the Zuyder-Sea on the North, the Quarter of Nimeguen on the South, and that of Arnheim, on the Eaſt. The greateſt Extent from South to North is about 25 Miles, and from Eaſt to Weſt about 30, but it is much indented both Ways. It contains 5 Cities, 65 Villages, and 64 Gentlemens Seats. The Air is much better, the Ground higher and fitter for Cultivation than that of Holland. It abounds with Gardens and Orchards, except on the Borders of Guelderland, where it is barren and heathy. The Inhabitants appear, by Hiſtory, to have been of a warlike Diſpoſition, but loſt much of their Reputation by their eaſy Submiſſion to the French in 1672, which ſome aſcribe to the Decay of their military Genius by a long Peace, and others to Treachery. However, this occaſioned a great Alteration in their Government in 1674, when by way of Puniſhment, the Stadtholder had a much greater Power given him by the Provincial States, in the Government of that Country than in the other Provinces. The People are moſt like Germans in Diſpoſition, and leſs inclinable to Trade than thoſe of the Maritime Provinces. The Common People are courteous and hoſpitable, which is owing to the great Numbers of Gentry, that the Goodneſs of the Air has invited to live among them.

Places of Note are,

1. Amersfort, Lat. 52. 14. Lon. 5. 40. on the River Eems. 'Tis an ancient Town, was frequently the Retreat of the Biſhops of Utrecht, when expell'd their Capital. 'Tis about a League round, but not ſtrong, being commanded by a neighbouring Hill. 'Tis divided into the Old and New Towns; the Buildings of the former are very neat. Here are two Churches, one of them a large and ſtately Fabric, ſeveral good Hoſpitals, and a Public School, where divers Perſons of Eminence have had their Education. They had formerly a great Trade in Beer, but ſubſiſt chiefly now by Husbandry, and feeding Cattel, there being good arable Land and Paſtures in the Neighbourhood.

2. Utrecht, about 12 Miles South-Weſt of Amersfort, Lat. 52. 8. Long. 5. 20. 'Tis an ancient Town, ſuppoſed to have been the Roman Antonina, and the Trajectus Rheni, or Paſſage of the Rhine, mentioned in Antonin's Itinerary. Dagobert King of France is ſaid to have given it to St. Willebrod an Engliſhman, its firſt Biſhop, who, Bede ſays, died about 636. The Dioceſe was enlarged by Pepin and Charlemain, ſo that it reached over moſt of the Old Batavia, and its Biſhops were ſo powerful, that they made War on the Counts of Holland; and it continued to be a conſiderable Principality, till reſigned to the Emperor Charles V. by their Biſhop Henry of Bavaria. It lies on the Channel of the Old Rhine, is large, populous, the Houſes of Brick, and many of 'em ſtately. Their Churches are magnificent; the chief is that of St. Martin, is uſually called the Dome, and has a Tower of 460 Steps, from whence there is a fine Proſpect of the adjacent Country, and of 51 walled Towns within a Day's Journey of the Place. Here are ſeveral noble Monuments, and among others, that of the Baron Van Gaunt, who commanded the Dutch Fleet that came up to Chatham, and burnt ſome of our Men of War there, in the Reign of our Charles II. The Church of St. Mary, commonly called the Engliſh Church, is partly founded on a Quagmire, which putting the Workmen to a Stop, an ignorant Fellow named Fuſo undertook it, but demanded ſuch an exorbitant Reward, that the Biſhop would not give it, but employed Fuſo's Son to pump out the Secret, which was, to cover the Quagmire with Bulls Hides, and ſo the Work proceeded. Fuſo being incenſed at this, ſtabb'd the Biſhop. Whatever there be in that part of the Story, there is an Inſcription on a Pillar here, aſſerting it to be ſo founded, and is thus;

Accipe Poſteritas, quod poſt tua ſecula narres,
Taurinis cutibus fundo ſolidata Columna eſt.

Over this Inſcription there are odd ancient Characters, which are ſuppoſed to contain the Date of the Year. In this Church there is a ſmall Library, with ſome old Books and Manuſcripts, and among others, a Bible of the old Tranſlation, in ſix Volumes, finely written in an ancient Character. Here are alſo ſome Pagan Idols, and other Curioſities, given them by ſeveral Emperors. Before the Reformation there were ſeveral large Monaſteries and Religious Houſes in and about this City, now turned to other Uſes. The Biſhoprick being ſecularized, and its Revenues poſſeſſed by Gentlemen of the Province, 8 Delegates are choſen out of the 4 great Chapters of the Town, and make a third Member in the States of the Province, with the Deputies of the Nobles and Towns.

The Streams which run thro' ſeveral of the Streets contribute much to the Beauty and Neatneſs of the Town and Suburbs, which are large, and equal the Number of its Gates. Thoſe called the Vaert and New Gracht, are the principal Channels that run thro' the City The Houſes on each ſide the latter are very ſplendid, and there are 35 arched Bridges of Brick over both. The City is well fortified, which made its Surrender to the French in 1672, the more ſuſpected of Treachery. The French made it the Store-houſe of their Plunder from the reſt of the Provinces, and took 14 Days to carry it off when they quitted the Town in 1673; and after the French King had made it his Head-Quarter for a Year and half, he gave the Citizens no other Reward for their Treachery than the exacting 2 Millions and 268000 Guilders from them during that Time. He had prepared Materials to build a Citadel there, of which the Duke of Luxemburg laid the firſt Stone with the French King's Arms upon it; but the unexpected Succeſs of the Prince of Orange, (afterwards our King William) then a young Man, baffled all his Deſigns. A Public School was erected here in 1459, which the Provincial States turned into an Univerſity in 1634. It has flouriſhed much ſince, and produced many learned Men. Their Library has more printed Books, but fewer Manuſcripts, than that of Leyden; nor is their Phyſic-Garden equal to that of the latter. The Market-place or Piazza is very fair, and the Centre of ſeveral long Streets. The Painter's Hall abounds with fine Pieces; and the Pall-mall without the Town, with 5 Walks of tall Trees on each ſide, is very pleaſant; and there are fine Walks about the old Walls. The Government is managed by two Scouts and four Burgomaſters, two of whom are choſen annually, and they are aſſiſted by a Council of Forty. This City will always be famous in Hiſtory for the Union of the Seven Provinces agreed on here in 1579. And will always be remember'd for the Treaty of Peace concluded here betwixt the late Queen Anne of Great Britain, and Lewis XIV. of France, &c. April 1. 1713.

3. Wick-te-Duerſted, on the Rhine, about 14 Miles South-Eaſt from Utrecht, ſuppoſed to be the famous Batavodurum of the Ancients. Here the middle Branch of the Rhine leaves its ancient Channel, and falls into the Lech. 'Tis mentioned by Tacitus in his fifth Book, where, he ſays, a Body of Germans attempted to break down the Bridge here. 'Tis conveniently ſituate for Trade, is neat, and a pretty rich Town.

4. Rhenen, a walled Town upon the Rhine, 5 Miles Eaſt from Wick-te-Duerſted, is very ancient, and ſuppoſed to be the Grinnes of Tacitus. Moſt of the Turf which ſerves the neighbouring Country is dug in the Neighbourhood.

5. Montfort, on the Yſſel, 7 Miles Weſt from Utrecht, is Capital of its Territory, and a neat well fortified Town.

VI. The Province of HOLLAND and WEST-FRIESLAND, is from the Iſland of Schelling, which lies at the Entrance of the Zuyder-Sea, to the Frontiers of Dutch Brabant, about 122 Miles South and North; but the Breadth very diſproportionable, being much indented on the North by the Zuyder-Sea, and towards the South by the Province of Utrecht; ſo that the greateſt Breadth of South Holland is from the Mouth of the Maeſe to the Quarter of Nimeguen in Guelderland, about 45 Miles; and the greateſt Breadth of North Holland, from the North Coaſt to Enckhuyſen on the Zuyder-Sea, is about 28. We begin at the North Parts.

1. North Holland. 'Tis ſo call'd in reſpect of its Situation, and was named Weſt-Frieſland, becauſe anciently the Seat of the Friſii Minores, and the moſt Weſtern part of the Country which they inhabited.

Places of Note here are,

1. The Iſle of Schelling, Lat. 53. 32. Long. 5. 20. It lies at the Mouth of the Zuyder-Sea, is 10 Miles long, and 3 where broadeſt. It has has five Villages and two Churches. The chief Village which contained about 1000 Houſes, was burnt, with 100 Merchant-Ships, by Sir Robert Holmes with a Squadron of Engliſh Men of War, in 1666.

2. Flielandt, another Iſland, South-Weſt from Schelling, is about 7 Miles long and 2 broad, has only two Villages, and is chiefly remarkable for the vaſt Quantity of Muſcles found here. The Paſſage for Ships called the Flie lies betwixt this Iſland and Schelling.

3. The Texel, South-Weſt from Flielandt, is about 6 Miles long and 4 where broadeſt. 'Tis defended from the Sea by Sand-Hills and ſtrong Banks, and beſides ſeveral fair Villages, has a large Town on the Eaſt Side, called Burch, that enjoys the Privileges of a City. Here is ſome Corn-Ground, but moſt of the Iſland is applied to feed Sheep, of which they have great Flocks, and the Cheeſe made of their Milk vies with Parmeſan. The Inhabitants apply themſelves to Herring-Fiſhing; and the States, knowing the Importance of the Place, have built a ſtrong Fortreſs here, where they have always a large Garriſon.

4. The Werings, a number of little Iſlands further within the Coaſt of North Holland. The largeſt of them lies within the Zuyder-Sea, about 8 Miles North-Weſt from Medenblick: 'Tis 5 Miles long, and 2 broad, has ſeveral good Villages, a rich Soil, and large Flocks of Sheep.

Theſe Iſlands lying along the Mouth of the Zuyder-Sea, do, with the Banks of Sand, break the Rage of the Ocean, and form two good Harbours at the Texel and Flie. The firſt being a noted Station for Ships bound to the South, and the other for thoſe bound to the North.

I. NORTH HOLLAND, properly ſo called, is divided from South Holland by a Branch of the Zuyder-Sea, called the Y, that runs 15 Miles Weſt thro' the Country, and then turns about 6 Miles North. A great Part of North Holland conſiſts of drained Lands, called firſt the Zype, in the North-Weſt Part of the Country. It was firſt drained and ſecured by Banks in 1552, but the Sea broke in upon them in 1570; after which it was drained again, and ſecured by a Mole of a prodigious Height and Bulk, proof againſt all Attacks, ſo that 'tis now a very fruitful Soil. The Mole is ſupported by large Beams of Timber drove into the Ground, and faſtened together, the Diſtance between them being filled up with large Stones that reſemble Rocks. The Noiſe of the Waves which break upon it, reſembles that of a Pack of Hounds, from whence it is called the Houndſwood; and the Mole is alſo ſtrengthened by three vaſt Banks caſt up againſt it.

About 10 Miles South-Eaſt, lie other drained Lands called the Waert and Scher-Mer; and further to the South-Eaſt lie thoſe called the Bremſter, the Wormer, and Purmer, all drained and ſecured by Banks in like manner.

Towns and Places of Note here, are,

1. Schagen, on the South-Eaſt Side of the Zype, 10 Miles North-Eaſt from Alcmaer. 'Tis a large rich Village, which gave Title to a Count, and the adjacent Soil is thought to be the richeſt in Europe; Land here is ſold at double the Rate of any other in Holland, there having been Trees upon it, one of which yielded the Owner as much Fruit at once as brought him 10 l. and there is the Picture of a Sheep, bred here, hung up in the Shambles at Amſterdam, where it was ſold for the like Sum.

2. Alcmaer, Lat. 52. 48. Long. 4. 50. a very ancient City, ſtrong, beautiful, and one of the beſt built in this Country: It has large Priviledges, is encompaſſed with pleaſant Gardens and rich Paſtures, and from the Milk of their numerous Herds of Cows, make vaſt quantities of Cheeſe and Butter, which enriches the Town. It held out againſt the Spaniards, and repulſed them in a Siege, but is not now ſo ſtrong ſince the neighbouring Marſhes were drained. There is a large Grove of Trees regularly planted without the Walls, which adds much to the Pleaſantneſs of the Place. It has produced ſeveral learned Men, and among others Cornelius van Drebbel, who pretended to the Invention of a perpetual Motion, and of Optic Glaſſes, by which he could make himſelf appear in all Shapes and Habits, as Hegenitius informs us.

About 4 Miles North-Weſt from Alcmaer, lies Egmont, a noble and well built Village, which gave Title to that Great Family that made ſuch a noble Stand for their Liberties at the Revolt of the Provinces from Spain. It had formerly a fine Caſtle and a large Monaſtery.

3. Enkhuyſen, about 23 Miles Eaſt from Alcmaer on the Bank of the Zuyder-Sea. 'Tis about a League and a half round, is very ſtrong by Art and Nature; and the Steeple of their Church is admired for its extraordinary Height. Here is an excellent Harbour within the City, where they build many Ships, drive a great Trade in Herring-Fiſhing, and ſend out large Fleets to the Baltic, and other Places; Cardinal Bentivoglio ſays, that in his time, it exceeded all the Towns of this Country, in Number of Ships, and skilful Mariners, and was the firſt Town in North Holland which revolted from Spain. It has alſo a great Trade in Daniſh Cattle and refining French Salt. The Cloſet of Rarities collected here by Paludanus a Phyſician, is much commended by Hegenitius.

4. Medenblick, lies on the Zuyder-Sea, about 8 Miles North-Weſt from Enkhuyſen, was formerly the Seat of the Friſon Kings, and is reckoned the oldeſt Town in North Holland. 'Tis ſmall but has a noble Harbour, capable of 300 large Veſſels, and has the largeſt and ſtrongeſt Dykes againſt the Sea of any Town in this Country.

5. Hoorn, about 8 Miles South-Weſt from Enkhuyſen, on a Bay of the Zuyder-Sea, and 12 Miles Eaſt from Alcmaer. 'Tis a pleaſant large and rich Town, encompaſſed with ſo many broad Dykes and Channels, that 'tis reckoned impregnable. The Inhabitants are alſo noted for Courage. On the Land-ſide there are rich Paſtures, fine Gardens, and pleaſant Walks. They have a conſiderable Trade by Sea, in building Ships and ſelling Daniſh Cattle. Here is an annual Fair in May, where vaſt Quantities of Butter and Cheeſe are ſold.

6. Beverwick, near the Y, about 11 Miles North from Alcmaer. 'Tis ſurrounded with pleaſant Incloſures, and has a good Harbour at the Mouth of the Wicker-Meer, and was formerly noted for Pilgrimages.

7. Purmerend, ſo called becauſe it ſtands near the Purmere, about 11 Miles North-Eaſt from Beverwick. It belonged to the Family of Egmont, who ſold it to the States in 1590. It has been fortified and grown very rich ſince the draining of the Beemſter-Lake, which has added a fruitful Tract of Land to it. It contains 10000 Acres, including the Dykes and Highways that ſurround and croſs it. It coſt four Years Labour in draining, and is ſo full of Gardens, Orchards, Rows of Trees, and fruitful Incloſures, that Sir William Temple ſays, it makes the pleaſanteſt Summer Landskip he ever ſaw.

8. Edam, about 4 Miles Eaſt from Purmerend. It has its Name from a great Dyke to keep out the River, and 'tis about a Mile and a half from the Zuyder-Sea, and on the Weſt Side has the Purmere formerly a Lake 5 Miles long and 2 broad, now a very rich Soil. The chief Trade is in building Ships, and making Cheeſe, reckoned as good as any in Holland.

9. Saerdam, on the River Saren, 8 Miles Weſt from Monnikendam. Tho' a Village 'tis populous and large, and ſo full of ingenious Ship-Carpenters, that they commonly ſay, they can build as many in a Year as there are Days in it; be that as it will, 'tis the chief Trade that has enriched the Town. 'Tis divided into the Old and New Towns. The latter has been added by a long Row of Houſes on both Sides to the old one, which ſtands below the Dam of the River, over which Ships are hawled out of the River upon Rollers.

10. Monnikendam, on the other Side the Pampus, 6 Miles North-Eaſt from Amſterdam, and 6 North from Muyden. It has its Name from the little River Monnick which runs thro' it. 'Tis an ancient City, mentioned in the Dutch Annals of 1236, is well fortified with Walls, and a Rampart and has a Monk for its Arms.

II. SOUTH HOLLAND, is ſo called becauſe it lies South from the other. It contains,

1. AMSTERDAM, the Metropolis of the United Netherlands. Lat. 52 ½. Long. 5. 23 Miles North-Weſt from Utrecht. It takes its Name from the Dam on the River Amſtel, that runs thro' it into the Branch of the Zuyder-Sea, called the Y, which lies on the North Side of the Town, and ſerves as a Port to it. 'Tis ſcarce mentioned in Hiſtory before 1299, it being then only a Village of Fiſhermen. It ſtands on a mooriſh Ground, ſo that the Foundations were laid upon Maſts and other large Pieces of Timber, drove into the Earth, by a vaſt Force and at a prodigious Expence.

In 1482, Mary of Burgundy encompaſſed it with ſtrong Brick-Walls, which, except two Gates only, have been ſince pulled down for its further Enlargement, and the whole is again incloſed with new Walls of Brick, Gates of Stone, and a large Ditch, which gives it the Form of a Semi-Circle. Above 70 Years ago it was reckoned to contain 54000 Houſes, which was more than Paris; and 50 Years ago it was reckoned full as big as Venice, and half as big as London, ſince which it has received ſuch Additions and Improvements, that 'tis juſtly reckoned one of the greateſt and fineſt Cities in the World. 'Tis divided into the Old and New Towns, of which Sir William Temple ſays, that the latter is moſt ſpacious, ſumptuous and beautiful. The City is exceeding neat and populous. The Streets are large, with Canals of Water in the middle, over which are many Timber and Stone Bridges with Iron Rails and Balluſters. The Houſes are all of Brick or Stone, and very beautiful, eſpecially thoſe in the Streets of the new Town, called the Lords, Kings, and Emperors Grachts or Channels, where there are many Houſes of Free-ſtone, adorned with Columns and Chapiters of the Corinthian Order; thoſe three, together with the Haerlem and Cinghel Streets, are the chief in the City. Upon the Approach of the French, in 1672, the Citizens agreed to ſpoil their fine Gardens for raiſing new Fortifications, and a Dyke being cut on the Land Side, at the ſame time, they had freſh Water conveyed into the Town, which they very much wanted.

The moſt noted Buildings are, 1. The Old Church, a large Majeſtic Structure of the Gothic Order, founded in 1360. 'Tis adorned with a fair Steeple, which was finiſhed in 1566, and a Monument erected by the States to the Memory of Admiral Heemskirk (who lies buried here) for having defeated the Spaniards in the Streights in 1607, but loſt his Life in the Action. 2. The New Church founded about 1414, burnt down in 1645, but ſoon rebuilt with much greater Splendor. At the ſame time 6334 tall Trees were drove into a Plat of Ground 100 foot ſquare, to raiſe a Tower for it of an extraordinary Height, but the Foundation was not reckoned ſtrong enough, therefore the Tower was not raiſed above 40 foot high. In the Windows of this Church the Emperor Maximilian is repreſented receiving a large Sum from the City, for which he gave them, in 1490, an Imperial Crown as a Creſt to their Arms, being three St. Andrew's Croſſes. Admiral de Ruyter lies buried here, as does alſo Admiral van Galen, who beat the Dunkirkers, the Barbary Pyrates, &c. and have ſumptuous Monuments erected for them by the States. Before the Chancel there is a Skreen of caſt Braſs kept very bright; and here is a very fine Organ on Marble Pillars, with a vaſt Number of Pipes, which imitate melodious humane Voices; there's is a Pulpit valued at 1000 l. 3. The Weſt Church, another magnificent Structure, with a beautiful Tower and a large Imperial Crown of Copper on the Top, 260 foot from the Ground. 4. The South Church, with a Steeple 237 foot high. There are ſeveral other neat Churches. 5. The Stadthouſe, the nobleſt Structure in all this Country, if not in Europe: 'Tis built of Free-ſtone, 110 Paces in Front, which is more than St. Peter's Church at Rome, 81 deep, and 116 foot high. 'Tis adorned with Pillaſters, Chapiters, and Corniſhes, of the Corinthian Order, and built upon 13659 great Piles of Timber drove into the Ground, Mr. Ray ſays, the very Foundation coſt 100000 l. and ſome compute the Charge of the whole at 3 Millions Sterling: 'Tis adorned on the outſide with Statues and Hiſtories in Relievo; at the Entrance is the Hall where the Malefactors receive Sentence, adorned with Marble Statues hanging down their Heads, as if they bewailed their Fate: The Floors are Marble, and the Roofs finely carved, painted and gilt: The great Hall is adorned on all Sides with fine Marble Pillars of the Corinthian Order, the Roofs finely painted, and the Floor of Marble of ſurprizing Workmanſhip, for the Stones, without any other Lines but the joining of them, repreſent both the Celeſtial and Terreſtrial Globes. The Ground-Rooms which are uſed for the Officers belonging to the Bank, and the Priſons, &c. are 20 foot high, and the firſt and ſecond Stories 30 foot high each. The Gallery and Door-Caſes are adorned with Marble exquiſitely carved, and all the Chambers have Marble Floors with curious Painting on the Cielings and Chimney-Pieces. Over the middle of the Front there is a Bevel above the Corniſh, the Face of which is Marble, with a Baſſo Relievo of curious carving, a large Statue of Braſs on the Top, and more on the Sides repreſenting Juſtice, Fortitude, titude, and Plenty. Behind them there is a handſom Tower in Form of a Pavillion, ſupported by Pillars, in which there is a fine Chime of Bells. On the back Front there is another Bevel with Baſſo Relievo, and on the top a large Atlas in Braſs, bearing a Copper Globe of ten Foot Diameter. This noble Structure was begun in 1648, and ſcarce finiſh'd yet, at leaſt as to the Paintings, and other Ornaments. The Magiſtrates firſt met in it April 23. 1655. Here is an Image of the Virgin Mary on a Pedeſtal of black Marble, with a Latin Inſcription importing that the firſt Stone was laid October 28. 1648. when the War which they had carried on above 80 Years for their Religion and Liberty, againſt three Philips of Spain, by Sea and Land, was happily concluded, and their Liberty aſſerted, ſuch and ſuch Perſons being Conſuls. Here are kept the Courts of Judicature; and 'tis remarkable, that when the City Tenants do not pay their Rent at the Day appointed, their Doors are brought hither and detained till they have made Satisfaction. In a Vault under the Stadthouſe is the FAMOUS BANK of Amſterdam, ſuppoſed to be the greateſt Treaſure in the World. Sir William Temple ſays, there is conſtantly an Appearance of infinite Riches in it, as Bars of Gold and Silver, Plate, and numberleſs Bags, ſuppoſed to be full of the like Metal. The Burgomaſters alone have the Inſpection of it; and no Account being ever taken of what paſſes in and out, 'tis impoſſible to gueſs at the Proportion between the real Treaſure, and Credit of it, which is not to be valued, being the ſame with that of the whole City, whoſe Stock and Revenue equals that of ſome Kingdoms; and they are bound to make good all the Money brought into it. 6. The Exchange, a very ſtately Structure, like that at London before the Fire, but of an oblong Form; 'tis built of Brick, with 46 Stone Pillars, and has Galleries above, where vaſt Quantities of Goods of all ſorts are expoſed to Sale: 'Tis frequented by an incredible Number of People and Merchants of all Nations: 'Tis 200 Foot long, and 120 broad. 7. The Spin-houſe, for Correction of Night-walkers, and other looſe Women. Sometimes the Citizens ſend their own Daughters hither to be chaſtiſed, for which they have particular Chambers allotted. 8. The Houſe of Correction for idle Men, eſpecially Youth, which was formerly the Nunnery of St. Clara, and converted to this Uſe in 1595, as was that of St. Urſula for correcting of Females in 1596. At the Entrance there are two Lyons bridled, with this Inſcription:

Virtutis eſt domare quæ cuncti pavent.

Such as come hither are forced to earn their Bread by raſping Brazil Wood, and if Blows won't make them work, they are put down into a Cellar, where Water is gradually let in upon them, which they muſt pump out or drown. Some are put into this Houſe for their Lives, and others for a certain time, according to the Nature of their Crimes. Such as draw Knives to ſlaſh one another, which was once a very common Practice, muſt pay down 100 Livres, or work three Months in this Houſe. 9. Their Hoſpital for Children, where 600 Orphans are well educated. 10. Their Dolhuys, which is like our Bedlam. They have two other Hoſpitals, where above 2400 Children are maintained, and taught to read and write. They have two more, one for decrepid or old Men, and another for 300 poor old Women; beſides an Hoſpital for the Sick; a Peſthouſe, a ſtately Building, founded in 1631, and another Hoſpital, where all poor Travellers are lodged and entertained for three Nights, and no longer. To defray the Expence of ſo many charitable Foundations, beſides the Contributions of well diſpoſed People, they impoſe ſeveral little Taxes; as a Penny upon every one that paſſes thro' the Gates after Candle-light, half the Money received at the Playhouſe, which is computed at 80000 Guilders a Year; and at all public Clubs they have Boxes to put in Forfeitures from thoſe who do not keep their Time: There is ſcarce a Window without a Box with Remember the Poor on it; and at every Bargain there is ſomething reſerved for that Uſe, which is collected Quarterly by the Pariſh Officers, who alſo on the firſt Wedneſday of every Month collect the Peoples Charity at their Doors; and the Officers of the Hoſpitals do the ſame twice a Week. The Mountebanks, Rope-Dancers, and Muſic-Booths pay the third Penny: By all which, and what is collected in Churches, and the appropriating ſome Revenues of former Monaſteries, they maintain 20000 Poor every Year; and their Hoſpitals are ſo large, that they contain, ſome 500, others 1000, and ſome 1500 Perſons. 11. Their Public Pawn-Office or Lumbard-Houſe, which prevents Extortions and Thefts; and as all forfeited Goods are expoſed to public Sale, ſo the Owners may buy their Goods again. Fraudulent Bankrupts are forced to pay Fines, and undergo bodily Puniſhment, and if found guilty of Perjury, they are put to Death. Creditors are obliged to maintain their Debtors in Priſon; and 'tis a capital Crime for the Debtors to defraud them. Dr. Northleigh blames the Government of this City very highly, for tolerating Muſic-Houſes, where Men and Women make lewd Bargains, in which they outdo Rome itſelf. 12. A Schola Illuſtris, where in the Summer ſix Profeſſors read Lectures in their ſeveral Faculties: It was formerly the Church of St. Agnes's Monaſtery, and converted to this Uſe in 1631. Here is alſo a ſmall Anatomical Theatre. 13. Their Eaſt-India Houſe, is a very large and noble Structure, and contains a vaſt Store of Spices, and other Indian Commodities. 14. Their Magazine or Admiralty-Houſe, a ſtately large Brick Building, by the Water-ſide, in the North-Eaſt part of the City: It is three Angles of a Square, in the middle of which there is a Yard for building Men of War. The Front is 220 Foot long, and the Wings 200. There are ſeveral Chambers, in which their Rigging, Stores, and Arms are kept, in very good Order. 'Twas built in 1655, encompaſſed with a Ditch; and on the top of it, as on moſt others of Note in this City, there is a Ciſtern to receive Rain, Spring-Water being very ſcarce here. 15. The Eaſt-India Company's Magazine of thoſe Wares which they have not room for in the Eaſt-India Houſe; 'tis a ſtately Row of Brick Buildings, a little Eaſt from the former: Behind it there is a Yard with Docks for building Ships, a Rope-Yard, and Shops for Anchor-Smiths, and others concerned in Ship-building. 16. Sluices, of prodigious Expence and Art, to prevent the overflowing of their Cellars, and lower Stories, which frequently happened when a ſtrong North-Eaſt Wind drove the Water out of the Zuyder-Sea and the Y out of their Canals: They are built at the Mouth of the four Channels that open to the Y, are of ſolid Brick-work, 10 or 12 Foot thick, from the bottom of the River to the Surface of the Earth, and built croſs the Channel, leaving only a Paſſage for Ships, which are afterwards ſhut up with ſtrong Flood-Gates. 17. Their Weſt-India Houſe, a ſtately Structure. 11. The Jews Synagogues, who live richer here than any where, and are reckoned about 20000: They have two here, the worſt of which is more ſumptuous than thoſe at Rome and Venice; and they have Schools for their Youth. There is a Convent of Nuns here, call'd Beguines, conſiſting of Maidens and Childleſs Widows, who are admitted upon a Certificate of their good Behaviour, and of having a Competency to maintain themſelves alone, or in Society with the Siſterhood, Miſſon ſays, that when he wrote, there were about 130 of 'em. The Convent is built like a little Town, with a Wall and Ditch round it, and a Church within. They wear an odd black Habit, pay one another formal Viſits, and may quit the Convent when they pleaſe. The City being founded on Piles of Wood, no Coaches are allowed here but to Phyſicians, and Strangers of Note, the reſt uſing Sleds, made like Coaches, but ſlow and uneaſy. Miſſon reckoned the Number of Inhabitants at 200000. Their ſtanding Militia conſiſted ſeveral Years ago of 8250 Men. None but thoſe of the Eſtabliſh'd Religion are allowed Steeples or Bells. Near the Jews Quarter there is a Phyſic-Garden, well ſtored. Bleau ſays, that in his Time the Presbytery or Conſiſtory of Amſterdam conſiſted of 15 Miniſters, 16 Elders, and 24 Deacons, one half of the two laſt being changed every Year. The Air of the City is reckoned unwholſome in Summer; the Rows of Trees planted on the ſides of the Canals, before the Houſes, yield a delightful Shade and Proſpect, ſo that nothing can be more charming than the Viſto from ſome of their Bridges, from whence one may ſee four Canals at a time, with Veſſels in the middle, and ſtately Houſes reſembling Palaces, with Rows of Trees betwixt them and the Canals.

The Engliſh Presbyterians have a Church here, with two Miniſters, maintained at the Charge of the States. Thoſe of the Church of England are alſo allowed the public Exerciſe of their Worſhip, but have no Church, nor any Allowance from the States.

The Government of this City is by a Senate of 36 Men, who adminiſter Juſtice, are for Life, and were anciently choſen by the Votes of all the Freemen, but to avoid Tumults, becauſe of their Numbers, 'twas agreed about 150 Years ago, that they ſhould be choſen by the Senate for the time being; and when any of 'em dies, the reſt chuſe a new one. Their Example was in a ſhort time followed by the other Towns of the Province, but with different Numbers, according to their Extent. They levy Money in what Proportions they pleaſe, as occaſion requires, chuſe the Deputies which are ſent from the City to the States of Holland, and they likewiſe chuſe the Burgomaſters and Echevins. The Burgomaſters are four; three are choſen annually, and one continues two Years, and preſides the firſt three Months of the ſecond, after which the other three, call'd the governing Burgomaſters, preſide by Turns. They are choſen by the Majority of thoſe in the Senate, who have been Burgomaſters or Echevins. They repreſent the Dignity of the Government, do the Honours of the City on all occaſions, diſpoſe of vacant Offices, and pay the Money out of the Treaſury for public Occaſions, as they judge neceſſary. They keep the Keys of the Bank, which is never open'd except one of them be preſent: They likewiſe inſpect the Stadthouſe, Fortifications, and public Buildings. This Office is of the greateſt Truſt, Authority, and Dignity; yet their Salary is but 500 Guilders per Annum each; only it paves the way to more gainful Employments. Tho' they have Offices at their Diſpoſal, they never take any Money for them, becauſe that would ruin their Credit, and prevent their being choſen to other Places of Profit; but they may beſtow Vacancies upon their Relations or Friends if capable. They are obliged to no extraordinary Expence in their Habits, Attendants, or Tables; but on all public Occaſions are waited on by the City Officers; and the Charge of the Entertainments they give to Princes, and Foreign Miniſters, is defrayed out of the Treaſury, and proportioned at their own Diſcretion. At other times they appear with all the Plainneſs and Modeſty of private Citizens; and when their time expires, they are put into other Offices of Profit, except they be guilty of Miſmanagement. The Echevins are nine, of which ſeven are choſen annually, and two of the preceding Year continue. A double Number is named by the Senate, out of whom the Burgomaſters chuſe whom they think fit. Theſe Echevins are Sovereign Judges in all Criminal Cauſes; but they pronounce Sentence of Death upon none till they firſt adviſe with the Burgomaſters, tho' they are not obliged to follow their Opinion; but this Precaution is thought neceſſary, to ſhew their Tenderneſs for the Lives of the Subjects. Under theſe Sovereign Magiſtrates are, 1. The Treaſurers. 2. The Scout, who takes care of the Peace, ſeizes Criminals, and ſees Juſtice executed. 3. The Penſionary or Secretary, who is always a learned Civilian, verſed in the Cuſtoms, Privileges, and Records of the City, concerning which he informs the Magiſtrates, to whom he is Servant, delivers their Meſſages, makes their public Harangues, and is generally one of their Deputies to the States General. After this manner all the other Cities in the Province are governed; ſo that we need not repeat it in our Account of 'em.

The Revenues of this City ariſe from a conſtant Exciſe upon all ſorts of Commodities bought and ſold within their Precinct; from the Rents of Houſes or Lands that belong to their Stock; from certain Taxes upon every Houſe, for charitable Uſes, Repairs, and Ornaments of their public Buildings and Fortifications; from extraordinary Levies agreed to by the Senate, for their Quota of the public Charge, laid on by the States of the Province, or by the Deputies of the States General, for Support of the Union: And all theſe Payments are made into the common Treaſury. Some compute the Revenues of this City at 50000 Guilders, or near 5000 Pounds Sterling per Day. Sir William Temple ſays, he has heard it affirm'd by good Hands, that Amſterdam pays above 1600000 Pounds Sterling per Annum, for the Uſe of the City, the Province, and the Union. The Author of the Hiſtory of the United Provinces ſays, that in 1650, the Exciſe upon Beer, Fleſh, and Corn, alone, was farm'd here at 1600000 Guilders, beſides the Exciſe on Wine, Turf, &c. and the Taxes upon Houſes and Weights, for which latter there are three noble Buildings, in different Parts of the City, one of which, before the Stadthouſe, brings in 100000 Guilders per Annum.

2. Haerlem,

2. Haerlem, 12 Miles West from Amsterdam. 'Tis large, populous and pleasant, the Houses of Brick, many of them splendid, and all of them neat. The Streets are large and even, and some of them have Canals. The Town is well fortified with strong Walls and a broad Ditch; and it would be stronger still, were not the neighbouring Sand-hills so high that they cannot be drowned with its Sluices. 'Twas burnt down in 1340, but rebuilt and enlarged in 1400, and in 1559 made a Bishop's See. It had formerly a strong Castle, in which they besieged the Lord of the Place for his Tyranny, which had cost him his Life, but that his Lady capitulated to surrender, on condition that she should be allowed to bring out as much of her best Goods as she could carry; upon which she brought him out on her Back, saved him from their Fury, and left the House to their Mercy. Their chief Trade is in weaving Damasks, Velvet, Sattin, Taffeta's, with other Silks and Stuffs, and the finest and whitest Linnen in the Province; Thread, Tape, and Whitening of Cloth, the Water of their Lake being the best for it of any in the Country. 'Tis famous for a Siege held out against the Spaniards for ten Month in 1573, when they were reduced to such Streights as to eat Leather, Grass, and the vilest of Animals. One Comava, a Woman of the Town, commanded a Regiment of her own Sex, assisted in defending and repairing the Breaches, and frequently sallied on the Spaniards. They were forced at last to surrender, on promise of being secured from Plunder and Violence, for which they paid 34000 l. Sterling; notwithstanding which, 2000 of them were murdered in cold Blood, contrary to Capitulation, and among them 900 of the Garrison, who by their brave Defence had been reduced from 4000 to 1600. The Citizens have been always noted for Bravery. In the twelfth Century they had their Arms given them by the Emperor Frederic and the Patriarch of Constantinople; which are, a Sword between four Stars, and a Cross over the Point, with this Motto, Vim vicit Virtus; i. e. Valour overcomes Power. The Occasion was thus: Damiata being besieged by the Christians during the Holy War, their Fleet could not approach it because of Chains drawn across the River, and fastened to strong Towers on both sides. Upon which the Haerlemers in the service arm'd the Keels of their Ships with sharp Saws, sail'd up the River with a strong Gale, and cut the Chains, which made way for the rest of the Fleet, and occasioned the taking of the Town, and the setting at liberty the Count of Holland, who was Prisoner there. They were presented with as much Corinthian Brass as made two Bells, which are still in the Tower of their great Church, where, in remembrance of this Exploit, there are three Ships hung up with Saws at their Prows; and there is the Picture of another such, in the Prince's Palace in the Wood. The Youth of this City make also an annual Procession about the Streets with little Ships and Saws at their Prows. The Great Church is a noble large Structure, and the most beautiful of its kind in the Province; has several sets of Organs, and the Stalls of many Princes, and other great Men, who have been Knights of the Golden Fleece, with their Arms painted upon them. In the Town-house, which is a fine Structure, they keep the first Book that was ever printed, in a Silver Case, wrapt up in Silk, where they have also the Statue of Lawrence Koster, one of their Burghers, who printed this Book, and to whom they ascribe the Invention of the Art. There was a Latin Inscription over his Door, importing, that he invented it in 1440, and his Statue stood by it; but both were removed by a late Proprietor, because they drew so many Spectators to his House. Meyerus and John Gerard of Leyden say, that in 1403, a Mermaid was cast ashore by a Tempest near this City, was brought to eat Bread and Milk, taught to spin, lived many Years, could never speak, but made a confused Noise, frequently pulled off her Cloaths and ran towards the Water, but was carefully watched to prevent it. She had learned to make the Sign of the Cross, and was buried in the Churchyard when she died. Gerard, one of the Authors of this Account, says, he had it from one who saw her.

Without the Walls there is a large pleasant Wood, where the Citizens divert themselves. Here stands that called the Prince's Palace, built by Florence V. Earl of Holland, where are all the Pictures of the Earls of that Country very well done. Here are many other excellent Pieces by other Hands, but the best are those done by Cornelius of Haerlem. In this Town there are two Hospitals, well endowed, for sick and aged People. From this City that called the Haerlem Mermeer takes Name. It reaches from the neighbourhood of Leyden to that of Amsterdam, is reckoned 20 Miles long, and about 8 where broadest. Vessels ply continually upon it with Passengers and Goods, betwixt Amsterdam, Haerlem, Leyden, &c. Some are of opinion, that it might easily be drained; but those of Leyden will not consent to it, because the Water from hence refreshes their Canals; except the old Channel of the Rhine to the Sea were cleared; and those of Amsterdam will not agree to this, lest it should bring a Trade to Leyden by Sea, and injure their own Commerce.

3. Muyden, 6 Miles East of Amsterdam on the Bank of the Zuyder-Sea, at the Mouth of the River Vecht. 'Tis a pretty small Town, but so well fortified, that 'tis reckoned one of the strongest in Holland. It has also a Castle, and a Sluice, by which they can drown the neighbouring Country.

4. Wesop upon the same River, 3 Miles South-West, is so well fortified, that it held out against the French in 1672, and is noted for good Beer called Flemish Physick.

5. Naerden, 6 Miles South-East of Muyden on the Bank of the Zuyder-Sea. 'Tis the Capital of Goyland, and very strong, being surrounded with Marshes. The old Town of that name was swallowed up by the Sea, and its Ruins are still to be seen at low Water. The Town surrendered to the Duke of Alva's Son in 1572, who by his Father's Order barbarously murdered all the Inhabitants, which prov'd fatal to the Spanish Affairs, made other Towns hold out, and the whole Nation resolve to lose their Lives, rather than come again under the Spanish Yoke. It was betrayed to the French in 1672, but bravely retaken by the Dutch next Year, for which Lewis XIV. condemned the Governour to perpetual Prison, and cashier'd all the Officers of the Garrison, but one, who protested against the Capitulation. The States have since made it as regular a Fortification as any in the Country; so that 'tis a great Security to Amsterdam, from whence it lies 12 Miles South-East. Naerden Meer, or Lake, lies about 2 Miles West from the Town.

6. Leyden, Capital of the District of Rhinland, 16 Miles South of Haerlem, and 22 South-West of Amsterdam, 8 North-East of the Hague, and 15 of Rotterdam. 'Tis one of the neatest and pleasantest Cities in Europe; the Houses are for most part beautiful and stately, the Streets large and clean, its Channels many and commodious, and planted with rows of Trees on each side; but the Water not having a good Current, the Channels are apt to stink in Summer. The Mouth of the old or middle Channel of the Rhine, which runs thro' it, being choak'd up with Sand, occasions the Water to stagnate, and it would be worse, were not their Canals refreshed by the Haerlem Meer. 'Tis encompassed by large Cities and Villages, with which it has a Communication by Canals. 'Tis mentioned by Ptolomy and Antonin by the name of Caput Germaniarum, i. e. the Head of the German Provinces in these Parts. It has been four times enlarged since the Twelfth Century: The last time was in 1644, and their Bridges and Gates have been lately rebuilt and beautified. Bleau says, it has 23 Wards, subdivided into 90 lesser Partitions, called Neighbourhoods; has 30 Islands, 24 Canals, 180 Streets, 95 Bridges, on one is their Corn, and on another their Fish-market; and here are 40 Turrets on the Walls. Every Ward has four Magistrates, who take care of Instruments to extinguish Fire. Each Neighbourhood has a Master and two Assessors to compose Differences betwixt People, and to see that Funerals be decently solemnized. St. Peter's, or the chief Church, is a very handsome Structure, and has Monuments of many considerable Persons. That of St. Pancras is very stately, and by the Foundations has been designed to exceed St. Peter's at Rome in Bulk. St. Mary's, now called the French Church, is a neat Structure, and has, among other Monuments, one for the great Josephus Justus Scaliger, erected in the place where he used to hear Sermon. There's another for their famous Herbalist Clusius, a Member of the University, who died here in 1609, aged 84, and under the Inscription this Distich:

Non potuit plures hic quærere Clusius herbas,
Ergo novas campis quærit in Elysiis.

That is,

Since no more Herbs this World to Clusius yields,
He's gone a Simpling to th' Elysian Fields.

Here's also a new Church of a Circular Form, much admired for its Workmanship, especially within. The English Presbyterians have a Church here, and their Minister is maintained by the States. The Hospitals here are, 1. That of St. Catharine; it consists of seven distinct Buildings, has 144 Beds for the Sick and Decrepit, a great number of Pallets for the Cure of the diseased, a particular Apartment for the Venereal Distemper, one for entertaining poor Travellers for three Nights, another of 68 Beds for such as are distracted or infected with the Plague. 2. St. Elizabeth's, for Women, it has 84 Beds, and an Apartment for poor Travelling Females for three Nights. 3. That of Saint James. 4. That of St. Barbara, both made use of now for Clothiers. 5. One for 900 Orphans. All these Hospitals are well governed, and carefully looked after. Here's also an Almshouse, where 12 Almoners distribute at times, Bread, Firing and Money to the Poor, according to the Number and Condition of their Families. They commonly relieve 20000 Persons within the City. Here are 13 other Tenements for Accommodation of the poorer sort. They have two great annual Fairs, when no Man can be arrested for Debt. The Citizens divert themselves by Archery some part of Ascension Fair; and they have a Hall for the Archers, on the Windows of which all the Earls of Holland are curiously painted. The chief Manufacture here is Camblets and Cloth; and there is a magnificent Structure for examining and sealing the latter, of which 100000 Pieces have been made here in one Year. The Townsmen make also great Profit of their Gardens, their Parsnips, &c. being much esteemed thro' all the Country. The Gardens have four or five Crops a Year from the same Ground; so that they sell them for 250 and 300 l. an Acre; whereas their best Arable Land yields but 200, and their Meadows and Pastures but 140 l. per Acre.

Here are three Boats that go every day to Amsterdam, eight to the Hague, and as many to Delft, at set Hours; and the like number comes hither from those Places. They have also constant Passage-Boats to Haerlem and Utrecht.

The other remarkable Structures here are, 1. The Great Court, a large stately Pile, with Apartments for three Courts of Justice, one for the Town, another for the University, and a third for the Affairs of the Rhineland; and over them are Apartments for the Magistrates and other public Officers. In the City Court are many excellent Paintings, and the famous Siege of the Town by the Spaniards in 1574, curiously wrought in Tapestry. The Draught of the Last Judgment by Luke of Leyden is so finely done, that Emperor Rodolph II. offered them as many Hungarian Ducats of Gold for it as would cover the whole. In that called the Rhineland Court, the Dykegrave and his Assistants meet to take care of the Dykes, Sluices, Banks, and Channels, to prevent Inundations in the Rhineland, which takes in much of the Province of Holland, and was so called from the middle Branch of the Rhine, which runs through the Country. The Inhabitants of this District are obliged by Laws agreed on among themselves to contribute to the Charge of this; and there are several Councils composed of a Dykegrave and seven Assistants, to take care of these things, and are sworn to the faithful Execution of their Trust. There are also Lands set apart for this Charge, which to every one that has travell'd this Country, must needs appear immense. 2. The Burg, formerly built for Defence, but now only an Ornament. It stands near the middle of the City, in an Angle made by the Channels of the Old and New Rhine. Some think it to have been a Roman Garrison; and others, that it was erected by Hengist, as a Trophy for his Conquests in England. 'Tis a strong round Fortification of Stone, with an Ascent of 50 Steps, is encompassed by a Wall 21 Foot high, and the Circuit within is 610 Foot. It has a deep dry Pit in the middle, supposed to be the Entrance to a Passage under Ground from hence to Catwick on the Sea, which is about 4 Miles. From the top of this Burg there is a fine Prospect of the City, the neighbouring Country, and the Haerlemer Sea. Over the Gate are the Arms of the City, being Cross Keys, and a Lion Rampant Gardant, with a Sword in his Right Paw. The Motto on one side is, Pugno pro Patria, I fight for my Country, alluding to the Lion; and that on the other is, Hæc Libertatis ergo, These are the Marks of my Liberty; alluding to the Keys.

The City was besieged by the Spaniards in 1574, when knowing its Strength, they encompassed it with 60 Forts, in order to starve the Inhabitants.

Inhabitants, the Siege was carried on above five Months, with great Vigour, and above 10000 of the People died by the Sword, Hunger, and Fatigue, but conſidering the Barbarity of the Spaniards, to thoſe of Haerlem and Naarden, they rejected all Summons, and anſwer'd, that they would not yield while they could fight with one hand, and eat with the other; at laſt being reduced to Extremity, they cut down, by the Prince of Orange's Advice, the main Banks of the Yſſel and Maeſe, betwixt Gouda and Rotterdam, which overflowed the Country and drowned 1500 of the Spaniards, before they could retire: The firſt Relief they had, was on the 3d of October, which they keep as an Anniverſary Thankſgiving. In 1573, the States General founded an Univerſity here, to reward the Citizens for their Bravery: It has bred many great Men, and had 2000 Students at a Time: It has 12 Profeſſors, being 3 of each Faculty, who, beſides what they get from the Students, have from 200 to 300 l. per Ann. a piece from the States. The Univerſity has great Privileges, a noble Phyſic Garden, a good Library with many valuable Manuſcripts, an Anatomy Theatre, better than that of Padua, with abundance of Curioſities, for which we refer to Dr. Northleigh's Deſcription of the United Netherlands. The Chirurgions and Apothecaries here, have each a Hall, and without the City there is a large Peſthouſe well endowed, from the neighbouring Sand-Hills there is a charming Proſpect of 57 Villages and Gentlemens Houſes, with pleaſant Walks, and numerous Canals.

7. Brittains Houſe, or Caſtle, 5 Miles North-Weſt of Leyden, and 1½ from Calwyck, on the Sea. It lies within the Sea-Mark, and was diſcovered above 300 Years ago, upon the retiring of the Ocean from the Mouth of the Old Rhine, but more in 1550 and 1552, when the Sea retired, ſo that the Sands were left bare for 20 Days. It has been a Square of 960 Roman foot in Compaſs. At that time many Roman Veſſels, and Coins of ſeveral Metals, were dug up here. Some think it was built by Agricola for a Granary of Corn brought out of Britain, and as a Trophy of his Conqueſts there.

8. Goudeſluice, 7 Miles Eaſt of Leyden, on the Canal that comes from Gouda, is a ſtrong Fortification, and ſtopped the Incurſions of the French in 1672.

9. Bodegrave, 10 Miles South-Eaſt of Leyden, a very fine Village till burnt by the French in 1672. 'Twas afterwards fortified by the Dutch, and noted for the Prince of Orange's Camp, where he covered the Country againſt the French, at that time, after they had committed ſuch Barbarities at Bodegrave and Swammerdam, as are ſcarce to be met with in Hiſtory.

10. Woerden, 7 Miles Eaſt from Bodegrave, noted for having been the Cauſe of bloody Wars betwixt the Provinces of Holland and Utrecht, that formerly contended for it. The French took and fortified it ſtrongly in 1672. 'Twas in vain attacked by the Prince of Orange, tho' he routed a Body of French before it, they quitted it in 1673, demoliſhed part of the Fortifications, and made the People pay 16000 Guilders to ſave their Houſes from being burnt.

11. Sevenhauſen, about 6 Miles Weſt from Gouda, a Village remarkable for a pleaſant Grove, half a League long and a Furlong broad, with a Channel in the middle. Abundance of wild Fowls are bred here, the Profit of which, and the Grove, is ſo conſiderable, that 'tis let for 300 l. Sterling, per Ann. Great Numbers of People flock from the neighbouring Parts, to ſee the young Birds taken by ſhaking the Neſts down from the Trees. Our King James I. is ſaid to have had two Veſſels with young Birds from hence every Year. The chief of them are Shags, reſembling Cormorants, Lepelars or Spoon-bills, Quacks or Night-Ravens, which make a Noiſe in the Night like one a vomiting; Herons, Wood-Pigeons, and Turtles.

12. Gouda or Tergou, about 5 Miles South of Bodegrave, and 10 North-Eaſt of Rotterdam, on the Conflux of the Yſſel and Gouwe in a mooriſh Soil, and by its Sluices, can drown the neighbouring Country, in which Caſe it is unacceſſible, except by a Bank on each Side the Yſſel, ſo well fortified that no Enemy can approach it. The Town is alſo encompaſſed by a broad deep Ditch. The Market-place is very large, the Town Houſe ſtands in the middle, and near it the Great Church, which exceeds the Cathedral of Cologne for Bulk, and the Painting of its Windows is ſcarce to be equal'd. This Town has ſuffered frequently by Fire, but has been well rebuilt; the Houſes are neat, the Streets kept clean by a Number of Canals and ſmall Currents, cleanſed by the Tide. 'Tis encompaſſed with Gardens, and the Generality of the Inhabitants, are ſuch as have retired from Buſineſs to live in Eaſe. The Cheeſe made in its Diſtrict is much eſteemed. There are Paſſage-Boats which go from hence to Amſterdam and Leyden.

13. The Hague, 8 Miles South-Weſt from Leyden, 6 North-Weſt from Delft, and 12 from Rotterdam. The Dutch call it S. Graven Hague, which ſignifies the Earl's Wood, becauſe it was formerly the Seat of the Earls of Holland, and has a Wood in the Neighbourhood. 'Tis reckoned the largeſt Village in Europe, and ſurpaſſes many Cities in fine Buildings and Extent. 'Tis not walled, but encompaſſed with Ditches; and there are Booms on the Canals to hinder Veſſels from coming in by Night. It has all the Privileges of a City, except ſending Deputies to the States. The Streets are many, long, and generally wide; the Houſes well built; and here are fine ſhady Walks, eſpecially that call'd the Voorhout, which has ſtately Buildings on both ſides, and a pleaſant Walk railed in and planted with Trees, at the Eaſt end of which is a large Square, with ſtately Houſes on each ſide, and the Square finely ſhaded with Trees, where the Inhabitants divert themſelves; and thoſe of Quality make the Tour of the Voorhout in their Coaches. The chief Structures here are, 1. The Great Church in the Market-place, a noble ancient Pile, with a lofty ſquare Tower. Here are the Monuments of ſeveral conſiderable Perſons; among others, a ſtately one for Admiral Opdam, with an Account of his great Actions, and particularly that with the Engliſh, wherein he fell, having blown up his own Ship, rather than he would fall into their Hands, as his Epitaph bears. 2. The New Church, lately built, of a round Figure, very lofty, but without Arches, and is ſo contrived, that every one may ſee the Miniſter while he preaches: The Outſide is very beautiful, and ſcarce to be match'd in the Netherlands. The Scots and Engliſh Presbyterians have a Church here, and their Miniſter is maintained by the States. 3. The Prince's Palace, at the North end of the Town, is a handſome large Structure, with a Front and Wings of good Architecture, large Princely Stair-caſes and Apartments, and ſpacious fine Gardens, a handſome Court to the Street, and a large one behind. 4. The Old Palace, call'd the Hoff van Holland, founded by William II. Count of Holland, and King of the Romans, in 1250, when he removed the Court hither from Graveſand; part of the old Buildings ſtill remain, particularly a large Hall ſomething like ours at Weſtminſter, but not near ſo long and wide: Here ſome of the Courts of Judicature are held, Trophies taken from Enemies are hung up; and 'tis fill'd with Stationers and Toyſhops. It ſtands at one ſide of a large Square, call'd the Binnen Hoff or Inner Court, ſurrounded with ſtately Buildings, which contain noble Apartments that belonged to the Prince, a Piazza, over which are fine ſpacious Apartments, where the States General and Provincial meet; and the Chamber of Treves, where they or their Deputies confer with Foreign Miniſters. All thoſe Apartments are richly cieled, painted, and gilt, and adorned with fine Pictures of the Princes of Orange, &c. On one ſide of this Square, adjoining to thoſe Apartments, there is a ſtately Church, where the States and Court go to worſhip. And at a ſmall diſtance from hence, without the Eaſt Gate, ſtands Prince Maurice's Palace, a large modern Structure, of fine Architecture, where Ambaſſadors are ſometimes entertained. The Foot-Guards are drawn up, and attend in this Square when the States meet. This Place is encompaſſed with a Ditch, and Bridges that may be drawn up on occaſion, and Centinels always placed at the Gates. On the Weſt ſide of this Square there is a much larger one, call'd the Outer Court, where the Horſe-Guards have their Station when the States meet; 'tis encompaſſed with fine Buildings, where the Nobility have Houſes. On the Eaſt ſide of it there is a large Pond, where Fire-works are commonly played on ſolemn Occaſions; and there are ſtately Walks of Tile-trees on its North Bank. Every City which ſends Deputies to the States, has a Houſe here for their Deputies, and that of Leyden is reckoned the fineſt. Here is alſo a ſumptuous Foundery for Cannon, built when the States had War with England. Here is a fine Hoſpital, built by a Woollen-draper, for 60 Widows, and a Garden to each Apartment.

Near the Eaſt End of the Town there is a large Wood incloſed, with Game of all ſorts, and pleaſant Walks, where the Inhabitants take the Air: It abounds with Oaks, of which there are none any where elſe in the Province. In this Wood there is a noble Houſe, built by Counteſs Amalia of Solms, for a Place of Retreat after the Death of her Husband Prince Henry-Frederic of Orange, as appears by an Inſcription in Gold Letters round the Gallery. At the Entrance on the Right, there are white Marble Statues of William I. Founder of the Commonwealth, and Prince Maurice; and on the Left, thoſe of Prince Henry-Frederic, and William II. The Hall is floored with Cedar, and hung with Arras, repreſenting the glorious Actions of Prince Henry, &c. In ſhort, the Paintings here are reckoned equal to the beſt in Italy. The Lantern on the top has a Gallery for Muſick; and on the Cieling there is the Picture of Princeſs Amalia in Mourning, curiouſly done. Here are ſeveral fine Apartments, and rich Furniture, particularly a Bed of State railed in, which was wrought by our late Queen Mary, when Princeſs of Orange, who delighted much in this Place, and its fine Gardens.

14. Scheveling, 2 Miles North-Weſt from the Hague, formerly a Town of good Note, till moſt of it was waſhed away by the Sea; but tho' reduced to a Village, its Privileges continue, one of which is, that no Malefactor can be condemned at the Hague, except the Schepens of this Town pronounce Sentence. 'Tis chiefly noted now for Fiſh, with which it ſupplies the Hague, and the neighbouring Country. Here is kept a ſailing Chariot, made by Stevinus, a great Mathematician, for Prince Maurice: It ſailed from Scheveling to Putten, which is 42 Miles in 2 Hours, with 28 Perſons in it, and tho' the Wind was ſtrong, it was not felt by the Paſſengers, the Chariot ſailed ſo ſwiftly. It reſembles a Boat in form, moves upon four Wheels of an equal Size, has two Sails, is ſteered by a Rudder placed behind the hindermoſt Wheels, and ſtopped by letting down the Sails or turning it from the Wind; ſo that it ſeemed to exceed, for Art, the Chariots uſed by the Chineſe in their Champain Countries. Grotius made ſeveral fine Epigrams upon this Machine and its Author, which Bleau gives an Account of at large. They have alſo Ice-Sledges here, which holds two Perſons, and are made ſo like a Boat, that if the Ice ſhould break, the People are in no danger. There is a Road cut out, thro' the Sand-Hills, from hence to the Hague, at vaſt Expence; it is ſtrait, well paved, and planted with Trees on both Sides. There is a Gate at the End next the Hague, where all Paſſengers, except the Fiſhermen of Scheveling, pay ſome ſmall matter towards keeping it in repair. 'Tis very pleaſant, capable of three or four Coaches in Breaſt, and much frequented by thoſe of the Quality in their Coaches, for taking the Air. There are Ways on the Sides, and Reſting Places for thoſe who walk on foot, and ſeveral Gentlemen's fine Seats and Gardens on the Weſt-ſide of it. The Atlas Hiſtorique takes notice, that in 1672, when the Engliſh and French deſigned to invade Holland by Sea, the Tide changed its uſual Courſe here, and tho' very regular at other times, ſtopped for 12 Hours, to the great Amazement of the Inhabitants, and next Morning the French and Engliſh Fleets were ſcattered by a dreadful Tempeſt.

15. Reſwic, 2 Miles South-Weſt from the Hague, is a noble Palace, with a Marble Stair-Caſe, Marble Floors, and Paintings by the beſt Maſters. It has a fine Terras, large and curious Gardens, and a noble lofty Front of Free-ſtone. It belonged to the Family of Orange, and is famous for the Treaty concluded here betwixt the Confederates and France, in 1697.

16. Loſdun, about 6 Miles North-Weſt from the Hague, is famous for the Tomb of Margaret Counteſs of Hennenberg, Daughter to Florence Count of Holland and Zealand, who in the 40th Year of her Age, meeting a poor Woman that had Twins in her Arms, upbraided her with Lewdneſs, and alledged that one Man could not get two Children at once, upon which the Woman being provoked, wiſhed the Counteſs might have as many Children as there were days in the Year, which they ſay came to paſs in 1276, when ſhe was brought to bed of 365 Sons and Daughters, that were all baptized by Guido Suffragan of Utrecht, all the Males being called John, and the Females Elizabeth. Guicciardin quotes Eraſmus and Ludovicus Vives for the Story. It is alſo mentioned by moſt Travellers, and in the Church there is a Table fixed fixed to the Wall with an Inſcription relating the Fact, and they ſhew two Braſs Baſons in which the Children were baptized, with this Latin Diſtich under them, importing, that ſuch a monſtrous Birth was never heard of ſince the Creation. The Inſcription mentioned by Guicciardin, Bleau, and Janſon, are different from what it is now, by which we may conclude, that there was certainly ſuch a monſtrous Birth, ſince it was told by ſo many Authors of Credit, but that it has been aggravated with many fabulous Circumſtances by the Monks.

En tibi monſtroſum nimis & memorabile factum,
Quale nec a mundi conditione datum.

16. Honſtaerdike, about 7 Miles South-Weſt from the Hague, is a noble Palace, belonging to the Family of Orange, with fine Gardens, beautiful Fountains and Statues, and among them ſome antique ones curiouſly done. Dr. Northleigh ſays, it is ſuperior to many of the celebrated Places in Italy, the lower Rooms are paved with fine Marble, thoſe above are very ſumptuous: Here are two Galleries full of excellent Paintings, and the Prince's Cloſet richly wainſcotted with fine Japan-Work: On the back Side there is a pleaſant Grove with ſeveral regular Plantations of Greens, which make a Square of half a Mile from each Angle to the Center; and beyond this there is a Place for foreign Birds and Beaſts, which are kept here in great Numbers.

17. Delft, 6 Miles South-Eaſt from the Hague, is a large neat and ſtately City, has long ſpacious Streets, with Currents of Water running thro' them. It is above 2 Miles round, fortified with a Wall and Ditch, after the ancient manner. It lies in a Plain, among pleaſant Meadows, which they can overflow at pleaſure by the Sluices. Moſt of it was burnt down in 1536, when, Hiſtorians ſay, the old Storks that commonly build in the Chimneys and Roofs of Houſes, in this Country, choſe rather to be burnt than leave their Young. In 1654 the States Magazine was blown up here by accident, beat down 200 Houſes, and killed and wounded many People, while others were miraculoſly ſaved under the Ruins. The Magazine and Armory is now nobly rebuilt, is very large, ſurrounded by a Ditch, has a great Foundery, and vaſt Numbers of Braſs Cannon piled up about it, beſides what are kept within, and there are two Pieces caſt for the States, at Lubec in 1669, which weigh 8000 lb. each, but the Magazine of Powder is at a conſiderable Diſtance, on the South-ſide of the Town, encompaſſed with a Ditch, planted with Trees, and always well guarded. This Town is alſo noted for excellent earthen Ware, in imitation of Porcelane. It formerly had a great Trade in Beer, and likewiſe in Woollen-Cloth, for which they ſtill value themſelves; but 'tis much decayed ſince the Engliſh Merchants, upon a difference with the Town, removed to Rotterdam. Bleau ſays, this City has produced many learned Men in all Faculties, but they are aſhamed of the blaſphemous Heretic David George, who was born here of mean Parentage, perſonated our Saviour, for which he was forced to fly, and dy'd under a Counterfeit Name at Baſle in Swiſſerland, in 1556, when his Corpſe was expoſed to public Diſgrace. This City has ſeveral fine Churches; that called the New Church is a ſtately Pile with a lofty Steeple, and is famous for the noble Monument erected in Memory of the great Hero William I. of Orange, who in 1584 was barbarouſly ſhot in this City, by Balthaſar Gerard, a Burgundian, hired to do it by the Spaniards. On the Monument there is this Inſcription:

D. O. M. Et æternæ memoriæ Gulielmi Naſſovij, ſupremi Auraſianenſium Principis. Pat. patriæ, qui Belgij fortunis ſuas poſthabit & ſuorum, validiſſimos exercitus ære plurimum privato bis conſcripſit, bis induxit. Ordinum auſpiciis Hiſpaniæ tyrannidem propulit. Veræ Religionis cultum, avitas patriæ leges, revocavit, reſtituit. Ipſam denique libertatem tantum non aſſertam, Mauritio principi, paternæ virtutis hæredi, filio, ſtabiliendam reliquit. Herois vere pij prudentis invicti quem Philip. II. Hiſpaniæ Regem Europæ timor timuit; non domuit non terruit, ſed empto percuſſore fraude nefanda ſuſtulit. Fœderat. Belg. provinc. perenni memor. monum. ſec.

That is,

To the Great and Good God, and to the immortal Memory of William of Naſſau, Sovereign Prince of Orange, the Father of his Country, who preferred the Proſperity of the Netherlands, to that of himſelf and his Family, did twice levy and bring in an Army, at his own Charge, repelled the Tyranny of Spain, under the Conduct of the States; recovered and reſtored the true Religion, and the ancient Laws of his Country, and left its Liberty, which he had almoſt fully compleated, to be eſtabliſhed by his Son Prince Maurice, the Heir of his Father's Virtues. The States of the United Netherlands, have erected this Monument to perpetuate the Memory of that truly pious, prudent and invincible Hero, whom Philip II. of Spain, the Terror of Europe, dreaded, but not being able to terrify or conquer, he hired an Aſſaſſin treacherouſly to murder him.

Over his Tomb there is his Effigy in Marble, and his Statue by it in Braſs, arm'd Cap-a-pee, and a Fame ſounding over him, with this Motto Te vindice tuta Libertas, i. e. You are the Champion and Preſerver of our Liberty: And another Emblem, of his going on ſteadily thro' Storms, with this Motto, Sævis tranquillus in undis; i. e. Eaſy in the midſt of Tempeſts. At his Feet there is the Repreſentation of a Dog that always followed him, and died of Grief when he was murdered. Dr. Northleigh ſays, this Monument is adorned with as good Braſs Statues and Marble, as any he ſaw in Italy. There are 4 other Princes and Princeſſes of this Family buried under it. In the old Church, which is alſo a ſtately Fabric, are the Monuments of their great Admirals van Trump, and van Heine, that were both killed at Sea. The Stadthouſe is alſo a very large noble Structure, with a Court of Juſtice, and other Apartments for the Magiſtrates. There is a ſpacious Square betwixt it and the new Church, encompaſſed with fine Buildings. Here is alſo a Church allowed the Engliſh Presbyterians, and their Miniſter is maintained by the States.

18. Delfſhaven, lies on the Maeſe, about 8 Miles South-Eaſt from this City, to which it belongs, and has a Communication with it by a Canal. It was given them by Albert of Bavaria for their good Services, when he was poſſeſſed of this Country. It has a Dock for building Ships, and has a ſtately Houſe belonging to the Eaſt-India Company. The Town is pretty large and neat, has a Court, and a Church pretty well built; has ſeveral Bridges over the Canal, ſo contrived as to let Ships paſs, and noble Sluices for letting them out and in, and to preſerve the Town and Country from being overflowed, for which end they have alſo 3 ſtrong Banks: but lying within 2 Miles of Rotterdam, to the Eaſt, it has little Trade, only it ſerves the Citizens of Delft for a Harbour, and ſending out Herring-Buſſes.

19. Graveſand. It lies near the Mouth of the Maeſe, about 8 Miles South-Weſt from the Hague, formerly a well fortified Town, the Seat of the Provincial States, and of the Court, from whence came the Name, which ſignifies the Count's Sand; but it ſuffer'd ſo much by Inundations, and by the Removal of the Court, that 'tis become a ſmall Village, and remarkable only for its high Steeple, which is a good Landmark to Sailors, and for the beſt Wheat and ſweeteſt Graſs in Holland, which makes its Cheeſe highly valued. It ſeems to have been a Roman Garriſon, for in 1546, upon digging up ſome old Foundations, ſeveral curious earthen Veſſels, ſuppoſed to be 1400 years old, were found here.

20. Maeſlandſluys, about 7 Miles further up the River; 'tis conſiderable for Herring-Fiſhing, and ſends out ſome hundreds of Buſſes annually for that end.

21. Vlaerding, 4 Miles further up the River, was formerly ſo conſiderable that it gave Name to the whole Province; but it ſuffered ſo much by Inundations, that its Trade is decayed and removed to Rotterdam and Delft. It is ſtill a handſome Town, and has a Church with a high Steeple.

22. Schiedam, about 2 Miles further up the River, is a very ancient City, lies at the Mouth of the River Schie, which gives name to the Diſtrict of Schieland, has ſome Villages under its Juriſdiction, but is chiefly noted for Herring-Fiſhing and making of Nets.

23. Rotterdam, lies at the Mouth of the Rotter, where it falls into the Maeſe, about 8 Miles South-Eaſt from Delft, and 12 from the Hague. 'Tis the chief City of Schieland, and very ancient. 'Tis ſo much increaſed of late, that next to Amſterdam and Leyden, 'tis the largeſt Town in Holland, and in Trade is ſecond to none but Amſterdam. The Maeſe here is very broad, and makes a good Harbour, tho' above 15 Miles from the Sea. By the deep Canals which run into the Heart of the City, Ships of great Burden lade and unlade at the Merchants Doors, where they lie ſafe from all Danger. The City is exceeding populous, and their Port frequented by more Ships from Great Britain than that of Amſterdam, becauſe more commodious. The Greatneſs of their Trade has occaſion'd them to enlarge the Town, and purchaſe new Privileges. The Streets are large and neat, eſpecially thoſe on the Canals. The Houſes are generally of Brick, and many of 'em magnificent, with Stair-caſes, and Floors of fine Marble, and Rows of Trees planted on each ſide the Canals. The Houſes on that call'd the Bombkeys, and the Herringfleet, are generally magnificent, ſeveral of hewn Stone, and look very ſumptuous. They have a conſiderable Trade in Beer, tranſported to Amſterdam, and other Places; and this Town is in a manner the Staple for Wine, both from France and Germany; the Wine, and other Goods of thoſe Countries being eaſily brought hither by the Rhine and the Maeſe, beſides what is brought from France by Sea. They have alſo a good Trade in refining Salt, and their Glaſs-houſe is one of the beſt in the Seven Provinces, where they make abundance of Glaſs Toys, and enamell'd Bowls, which they ſend to the Indies. Here are two Docks for building Ships; and they have a conſiderable Trade in Tobacco, imported from England; and by their Canals have a good inland Commerce, not only with all the Provinces, but by the Maeſe and the Rhine have a good Trade with Germany and the Netherlands, and the hither part of France. The chief Structures here are, 1. The Great Church, where are the Tombs of Cornelius de Wit and De Cortenaer, two of the Dutch Admirals, who were ſlain at Sea. The Steeple of this Church is very high, and gives a fine Proſpect of the City and Country. The new Church is alſo a fine Structure, and allowed to the French Refugees. The Engliſh and Scots Presbyterians have each a handſom Church here, with two Miniſters for each Congregation, maintained by the States. Here is alſo an Epiſcopal Church, which is a fine Structure: The Ground for it was obtained by the Duke of Marlborough, who was a great Contributor to the Building of it, and his Arms are curiouſly done upon the Front; but the States allow nothing to their Miniſter. The Stadthouſe, Eaſt-India Houſe, and Admiralty, are good Structures. Here is alſo an Exchange, which is well frequented by Merchants; and there is a noble Structure call'd the Boor's Stadthouſe. The ebbing and flowing of the Tide makes the Air of this City wholſom, and clears their Canals. The Town is ſtronger by Situation than Art, becauſe by their Canals they can lay the neighbouring Country under Water. The Guards are kept every Night by the Burghers, who are very expert in handling their Arms; and they have ſeveral Batteries of Braſs Guns for Defence of the City on the ſide of the Maeſe. There are many curious Walks about the City, and the Avenues to it are handſomly planted on both ſides. Here are Draw-Bridges over the Canals, ſo contrived as Ships may paſs up and down. Here is a ſpacious Market-place, with a large Stone-Bridge, where there is a ſtately Braſs Statue of Eraſmus their Townſman, in a Furr'd Gown, and a round Cap, with a Book in one Hand, and the other upon it, as if he were turning a Leaf. 'Tis ſo curiouſly done, that they have been offer'd great Sums for it. On the Pedeſtal there are ſeveral Latin Inſcriptions in Commendation of this great Man; and over the Door of a little Houſe near the Great Church, where he was born, there is another Statue, with this Diſtich:

Ædibus his ortus mundum decoravit Eraſmus,
Artibus ingenuis, religione, fide.

Importing that Eraſmus was born here, to adorn the World with Arts, Learning, and Religion.

Over-againſt this City lies an Iſland, form'd by the Old and the New Maeſe, call'd Yſſelmund, or Overmais. 'Tis about 12 Miles where longeſt, and 5 where broadeſt. It is equal to any part of the Province in the Fruitfulneſs of the Soil, contains ſeveral Gentlemen's Seats, good Farms, and Villages, of which that call'd Yſſelmund, about 3 Miles Eaſt from Rotterdam, over-againſt the Mouth of the Yſſel, where it falls into the Maeſe, is the chief. This Iſland was recovered out of the Sea, or rather from the Inundations of the River, by Charles the Warlike of Burgundy, is well fenced by Dykes, and has ſeveral Canals which drain the Soil, and promote the Commerce of the Inhabitants.

24. Scoonhoven, about 16 Miles Eaſt from Rotterdam, has the Name from its fine Gardens, and lies on the North ſide of the Lech, which is a Branch of the Rhine. There is a huge Bank caſt up betwixt this Town and Amerongen, which ſecures the Country from Inundations, and brings great Profit to the Town. Its Trade is advanced by a Branch of the Yſſel, which falls here into the Leck; and they have alſo a conſiderable Profit by Herring-fiſhing. The French were repulſed before it in 1672, with great Loſs; and its Fortifications have been ſo much better'd ſince, that 'tis reckoned impregnable. John Tates, a Man of a Gigantic Stature, was born here ſince 1660, and carried about moſt Parts of Europe for a Shew: A Man of a middle Stature might eaſily ſtand under his Armpit: From the end of his middle Finger to his Elbow was 26 Inches; and all his Limbs proportionable. Oliver van Noort, one of the firſt that ſailed round the World, is interr'd in the Great Church here. The famous Longolius, and other learned Men, were alſo Natives of this Place.

25. Yſelſtein, about 8 Miles North-Eaſt from Schoonhoven, is a well fortified Town, that belong'd to the Family of Orange. It lies in the middle of pleaſant Gardens and Incloſures, and has a conſiderable Trade in Cables, Cordage, and other Materials for Shipping.

26. Vianen, an ancient fortified Town, 10 Miles Eaſt from Schoonhoven, on the South ſide of the Lech. It enjoys great Privileges, is an Aſylum for poor Debtors, a neat Town, encompaſſed with pleaſant Fields, has a ſtately Tower, and the large Caſtle of Bateſtein, with fine Gardens in its Neighbourhood, formerly the Seat of the noble Family of Brederod, that were Lords of the City, but now extinguiſhed.

27. Gorcum, on the North ſide of the Maeſe, about 7 Miles South-Weſt from Vianen, and 11 North-Eaſt from Dort, is Capital of its Diſtrict, a neat well built Town, and ſo ſtrong by Nature and Art, that 'tis reckoned one of the Keys of Holland. The French attack'd it in vain in 1672, which, when ſo many other Towns were taken by 'em, ſeem'd to confirm the Inſcription over the Water-Gate, viz. Civitas in qua maximè Cives Legibus parent & in pace beata & bello invicta; i. e. A City happy in Loyal Inhabitants, bleſs'd in Peace, and unconquered in War. Here is a daily Market for Corn, Butter, Cheeſe, &c. brought down the Ling and the Maeſe, from the fruitful Country of Betuwe; which, with the Inhabitants applying themſelves to Navigation, has made the Town exceeding rich. Here is a large Church, with a high Steeple, from whence one may ſee 22 walled Towns, with an infinite number of Villages, a Proſpect that is ſcarce to be had any where elſe. Near this City they ſhew the Place where the German Hercules encamped, and gave Name to the Diſtrict of Arkel, and the Town of Hokelum, where he reſided. The great Philoſopher Henry of Gorcum, and other learned Men, were born here.

28. Worcum, on the other ſide the Maeſe, 2 Miles South-Eaſt from Gorcum; 'tis a very ancient Town, Capital of the Diſtrict of Altena. 'Tis ſtrong by Nature and Art, being ſituated on a Point of Land near the Conflux of the Waal and the Maeſe, and is reckoned one of the Keys of Holland.

29. Loeveſtein, 2 Miles Eaſt from Worcum, on the Point of the Iſland call'd Bommel waert, where the Maeſe and the Waal meet. 'Tis one of the ſtrongeſt Caſtles and Keys of Holland, noted for giving Name to the Loeveſtein Faction, whoſe Chiefs uſed to meet here, to contrive how they might leſſen the Power of the Princes of Orange, for which it was afterwards made their Priſon.

30. Heuſden, lies on the Old Maeſe, about 8 Miles South-Eaſt from Loeveſtein, is a very ancient and well fortified Town, with a ſtrong Caſtle, where the Governour appointed by the States reſides. It has ſeveral Villages, Lordſhips, and Forts under its Juriſdiction.

31. Crevecœur, 4 Miles Eaſt from Heuſden, on the ſame River. It had its Name, which ſignifies Heart-break, from its ſtrong Fortifications. 'Twas ſeveral times taken and retaken during the Spaniſh Wars, and was betrayed to the French in 1672, but they abandoned it next Year.

We return to the Coaſt on the South ſide of the Maeſe, where we have,

1. The Iſland call'd Voorn, on the South ſide of the Maeſe; 'tis ſeparated from that call'd Beverland by a Canal.

Places of Note here are,

1. The Brill. It is a neat, well built, and very ſtrong Town, lies over-againſt Maeſland-Sluys, on the other ſide the River, and about 12 Miles South-Weſt from Rotterdam. 'Tis the common Place where Packet-boats land from England, and our Ships that come from Rotterdam muſt clear here. The Streets are large and handſome. Their Great Church is a good Structure, and the Steeple a Land-mark to Sailors. There are pleaſant Walks of Trees on the Walls, and the Fortifications have been much enlarged of late; ſo that 'tis reckon'd impregnable. The Conveniency of its Port brings it a good Trade, and makes it populous. 'Tis chiefly noted for being taken by ſome of the Revolted Dutch, who being diſtreſſed by the Spaniards, retired with ſome Ships to England; but being forbid our Ports by Queen Elizabeth, came hither with the Prince of Orange's Commiſſion, took the Town by Storm in 1570, declared publickly for the Proteſtant Religion, renounced the Spaniſh Government, and ſwore Obedience to the Prince of Orange. This retriev'd the Affairs of the United Provinces, and brought on the Ruin of the Spaniſh Government there. It was one of the Cautionary Towns given to Queen Elizabeth by the Dutch, for the Aſſiſtance ſhe gave them. The great Sir Francis Vere was Governour of it for ſome time; but 'twas reſtored to the Dutch by James I. The neighbouring Country is very fruitful in Wheat, and other Corn.

2. Helvoetſluys, lies 3 Miles South from the Brill, near the other ſide of the Iſland, has a convenient Harbour, where the States have generally a Squadron of Men of War, belonging to the Admiralty of the Maeſe. The Packet Boat from England does alſo frequently put in here. It will be for ever memorable for the Prince of Orange's ſetting out from hence with his Fleet and Army in 1688, when he made the Deſcent upon England, then in Danger of being over-run by Popery and Slavery.

The Land of Putten makes Part of this Iſland, and is divided from the Territory of the Brill, and that call'd Byerland, by Channels and Dykes. The chief Town here is Geervliet, about 6 Miles South-Eaſt from the Brill, ſeated among fruitful Fields. The two Byerlands, which lie Eaſt of it, are alſo very fruitful in Corn and Graſs.

3. Dort, lies near the North-Eaſt Corner of the Iſland, 22 Miles Eaſt from the Brill, and 9 South-Eaſt from Rotterdam. 'Tis Capital of its Bailiwic, and the firſt Town in Dignity of the Province of Holland. This Bailiwic was made an Iſland in 1421, when a Tempeſt drove the Sea up the Maeſe and Meruwe, with ſuch Violence, that it overflow'd a large Tract of Land betwixt Dort and Brabant, with 72 Villages, and 100000 People, and form'd that Gulph or Lake Eaſt from Dort, now call'd the Bies-bos. It was then given out, that a wicked Boor, who hated one of his Neighbours, made a Hole in the Bank by Night to let in the Water to drown the Man and his Family, thinking afterwards to have ſtop'd the Hole; but the Wind being high, the Waves broke in with ſuch Force, that the Fellow himſelf was drowned, and the Deſolation above-mentioned occaſion'd. This City is very ancient, and ſo ſtrong by Nature, ſince that fatal Inundation, that it has little need of Art. It was formerly the Seat of the Earls of Holland, and the Place of their Inauguration. 'Tis a large, rich, and populous City. The Houſes are high, and of Brick, ſcarce inferior to thoſe of Antwerp for Beauty. The Engliſh Merchants have great Privileges here, with two Churches, and the French have one. It has the Staple of Wine, brought down by the Rhine and Maeſe, and good Cellars for ſtowing them; but Rotterdam has now a large ſhare in that Trade. Abundance of Salmon, and other good Fiſh are taken near this City. It has alſo the Privilege of Coining, it being the Place where the Counts of Holland had their Mint. 'Tis call'd the Maiden City, becauſe never taken by Force, tho' frequently beſieged. The Great Church is a noble Structure, and from its Steeple there is a fine and large Proſpect every way: It has 312 Steps. The Apartment where the Synod was held which condemn'd the Arminians in 1618, is very fair and large. Their Seats are ſtill preſerved, and viſited by Strangers; and the Manuſcript of their Tranſlation of the Bible is carefully preſerved in the Library of the Univerſity of Leyden. The Burgomaſter here is allow'd a greater Prerogative than thoſe of the other Towns in Holland, having a ſort of ſupreme Authority, and three Halbardiers to attend him conſtantly; but he continues only four Months, when another is choſe in his Place by the Senators.

We return again to the Coaſt, where we have,

1. The Iſland of Goeree, which lies over-againſt Helvoetſluys, is about 3 Miles long, and 2 broad. The Name ſignifies a good Road, and there is a Town upon it of the ſame Name, which was very rich, but the Harbour being of late choak'd up, its Trade is decayed. Here is a Tower that is a Land-mark for Sailors.

2. Eaſt from hence lies the Iſle of Over-flackee, about 12 Miles long, and 4 broad. It abounds with Corn and Paſturage, and has many Villages and Towns, the chief of which is Somersdike, on the Eaſt ſide of the Iſland. It had formerly a good Trade, but is now decayed.

3. Eaſt from hence lies that part of the Province of Holland which frontiers on Dutch Brabant.

Places of Note here are,

1. Williamſtadt, on the South ſide of the Channel, over-againſt Beveland, about 11 Miles South-Weſt from Dort. It was built in 1583, by William Prince of Orange, after whom it was called. 'Tis very ſtrong and well fortified, has a good Harbour, and lies conveniently to ſecure the Trade betwixt Zeland and Holland. The Town is ſmall, but neat; they have a good Market-place, Church, and and Common Hall, but the Moiſtneſs of the Air occaſions dangerous Fevers and Agues to Strangers.

2. Klundert lies 3 Miles South-Eaſt of Williamſtadt, and had formerly ſo conſiderable a Harbour, that the Earls of Holland had one of their chief Cuſtom-houſes here. 'Tis a ſmall Town, but neat, well fortified, and has a fine Church.

3. Gertruydenberg, lies 12 Miles North-Eaſt from Klundert, and 10 South-Eaſt from Dort, to whoſe Diſtrict it belonged, and was Part of the Patrimony of the Family of Orange. 'Tis ſituate on a Gulph of the Meruwe, and is of ſuch Importance, that the Province of Holland bound their Princes by Oath to keep it, and the States of Brabant obliged theirs by Oath to recover it. 'Tis very ſtrongly fortified, has the Meruwe on one ſide, and a Marſh on the other. It was taken by the Dutch from the Spaniards in 1573, betrayed again to the Spaniards in 1588, and beſieged by Sea and Land, by Prince Maurice of Orange, in 1595, in Sight of Count Mansfelt and the Spaniſh Army. This Prince, tho' young, did fortify his Camp ſo well, that the Spaniards could not attack him; and kept his Army in ſuch Diſcipline, that the Peaſants till'd the Ground within the Circuit of his Camp, without any Moleſtation. So that the Town was forced to ſurrender to him. 'Tis well ſupply'd by the neighbouring River, with good Salmon, Sturgeon, and ſuch Plenty of Shads, that 18000 of them have been taken near it in one Day. 'Tis noted for a Treaty betwixt the Confederates and France in 1709, but broke off by the latter.

VII. The Province of ZELAND, lies South-Weſt from that of Holland, conſiſts of 8 Iſlands, and taking in the Canals by which they are ſeparated, is 30 Miles Eaſt and Weſt where longeſt, and 18 from North to South where broadeſt. The Name is derived from its Situation, or as ſome think from a Body of Danes, who invaded it from Daniſh Zeland. The Air is ſharper, and not ſo healthful as that of the neighbouring Countries, ſo that Strangers here are very ſubject to Agues and Fevers; yet the Air of South Beveland and Walcheren, is reckoned milder now than formerly. The Soil is generally fruitful, has excellent Wheat, and abundance of Colworts, of whoſe Seed they make great Profit. Here is alſo ſtore of Madder for dying. They have good Paſture for Sheep, eſpecially on the Shores, which being often overflowed, the Graſs is thereby ſo impregnated with Salt, that their Mutton has a better Reliſh than in the other Provinces. The People are middle ſized, ſtrong, and well ſet. Hiſtory ſpeaks of a Woman man born here, and brought by the Counteſs of Holland, to the Marriage of Charles the Fair, of France, about 1323: ſhe was of ſuch a Bulk and Stature, that the talleſt Men look'd like Children to her, tho' both her Parents were of an ordinary Stature; ſhe was ſo ſtrong, that ſhe could eaſily lift up, with each Hand, a Barrel full of Hamburg-Beer, and could carry as much Weight as eight ſtrong Men. The better Sort here are courteous and liberal, but the Meaner, rough and boiſterous. They are the beſt Mariners in the Seven Provinces; and make the ſtouteſt Privateers. The Zelanders apply themſelves chiefly to Fiſhing and foreign Trade, and are very dextrous at refining Salt. In their Cuſtoms and Humours they reſemble the Brabanders and French, more than the Germans and Dutch. Their Women dreſs neatly. Their Iſlands are divided into four on the Eaſt, and four on the Weſt of the Scheld, and are under the Juriſdiction of 2 Treaſurers, that have the Power of Judges, take care of the Peace, and puniſh Offenders. Three of them being more expoſed to the Sea, than the reſt, the Inhabitants are at great Charge to ſecure themſelves by Dykes. This Province contains in the whole, 8 Cities, and 100 Villages.

We begin at the North; where we have,

I. The Iſle of SCHOWEN. It has Goeree and Overflackee on the North, is about 12 Miles long, and 5 where broadeſt. It was formerly larger, till diminiſhed by Inundations. It has many Gentlemens Seats, populous Villages, rich Farms and Incloſures.

Places of Note are,

1. Brouwers Haven, on the North ſide of the Iſland, Lat. 51. 45. Long. 4. 10. 'Twas ſo called from its great Trade in Beer brought from Holland, was formerly wall'd, has ſtill the Privileges of a City, but is much decreaſed, and ſubſiſts chiefly by Husbandry and Fiſhing.

2. Bommenee, 2 Miles North-Eaſt from Brouwer's Haven, ſo ſtrong, that 'tis reckoned impregnable by Land, and may eaſily be relieved by Sea.

3. Zirickzee, near the South ſide of the Iſland, about 5 Miles from Bommenee. 'Tis reckoned the oldeſt Town in Zeland, is large, and has ſeveral good Structures. Their Great Church is reckoned the beſt in the Province. The Fortifications are not very good, yet 'tis ſo ſtrong by Situation, and the Conveniency of its Sluices, to lay the Country under Water, that 'tis not eaſy to be attacked. Its Magiſtrates have the Juriſdiction of the whole Iſland. It has a good Trade in Salt and Madder.

II. Eaſt Duyvel-land, lies Eaſt from Schowen, is about 5 Miles long, and 3 broad, and abounds with Doves, from whence the Name. Moſt of it belongs to Zirickzee, to which it is now joined by a Dyke. It has only ſome Villages, but no Place of Note.

III. Tolen lies South from Duyvel-land, is about 5 Miles long, and 3 broad. The chief Town is of the ſame Name, on the South-Eaſt Corner of the Iſland. 'Tis pleaſant, lies in a fruitful Soil, is well fortified, and the whole Iſland ſo ſtrong, that 'tis capable to reſiſt a great Army. It has been augmented by the Addition of a great Tract of Ground belonging to the Family of Orange, called St. Martin's Dyke. The Town is govern'd by 2 Conſuls, 8 Schepens, a Bailiff, Syndic, and Secretary.

IV. North Beveland lies betwixt Schowen Iſland on the North, and Wolferſdike on the South, is 5 Miles long and 2 broad. 'Twas formerly reckon'd the Garden of Zeland, but it was overflow'd in 1532, and its chief Town, with ſeveral Villages were deſtroy'd, but great Part of it has ſince been recover'd.

V. Wolferſdike lies betwixt North and South Beveland, is near 6 Miles long, and 1 broad. It has ſome Villages and good Paſture. Part of it was ſwallowed up by Inundations, but ſince recovered; yet the Streams about it are ſo violent, as if they contended which ſhould firſt deſtroy it.

VI. Walcheren, the moſt Weſtern of all the Iſlands, is of a round Form, at the Mouth of the Scheld, 9 Miles long, and 8 broad. It has the Sea on the Weſt, South Beveland on the Eaſt, Schowen, with the Sea, on the North, and the Mouth of the Scheld on the South. It exceeds the reſt of the Iſlands in Number of Inhabitants, Splendor of its City, &c. and Trade.

The chief Towns are,

1. Midelburg, 40 Miles South-Weſt of Rotterdam, Lat. 51..34. Long. 3. 51. So called becauſe it ſtands on the middle of the Iſland. 'Tis large and populous, has many wealthy Merchants, ſpacious Streets, and 20 magnificent Churches, one with a ſumptuous high Tower, and a fine Clock and Dial, ſaid to have coſt 150000 Florins. Here is a noble Stadthouſe, adorned with Statues and Images. Before the Reformation it had very ſplendid Monaſteries, eſpecially that of St. Nicholas, whoſe Abbot repreſented the Clergy in the Meeting of the States. Philip II. made it a Biſhop's See, but the States have converted it to the Place for their own Meeting, a Chamber of Accounts, a College of Admiralty, and a Mint. This City is much enriched by the Staple of Wine, from France, Spain, and Portugal. In the laſt Century they purchaſed Arnmuyden, for the ſake of its Harbour, which being ſince choaked up, they cut a deep broad Channel from that Town, by which Veſſels of great Burden are brought into the City. 'Tis ſtrongly fortified with a Wall, encompaſſed by large Ditches, ſurrounded by another Wall. The Lutherans, Anabaptiſts, and Jews, have Places of public Worſhip here. Their Government is by 2 Conſuls, and 11 Schepens, choſen by a Council of XXIV. The new Church is Octagonal with a Cupulo; and the Piazza of the Town-houſe circular. They conſtantly maintain 3 Eagles, at the Entrance of the Town-houſe, in Conſideration of certain Privileges granted them by the Emperor.

2. Arnmuyden, the Harbour of Midelburg, lies about 2 Miles Eaſt from it, at the Mouth of the River Arn. The old Town, of this Name, was ruined long ago, and nothing of it left but a fair Church and a Hall. Above 100 years ago, the New Town exceeded Midelburg in Magnificence and Riches, and had a good Harbour, capable of Ships of 300 Tun. The Midelburgers purchaſed it from Philip of Burgundy, but their Harbour being ſpoiled by Sands, their Trade is decayed, and their chief Subſiſtence now is from refining Salt. 'Tis encompaſſed with Walls, and has its own Magiſtrates.

3. Ter Vere, or Camp Vere, about 3 Miles North-Eaſt from Midelburg, is well fortified with a broad Ditch, and 3 Bulwarks anſwerable to the Number of its Gates. It has a good Harbour, and the beſt furniſhed Arſenal in the Province. It has been the Staple of the Scots Trade ſince 1612, from which it has received great Profit. The Scots are allowed the old Pariſh Church here, their Miniſter it maintained by the States, but ſubject to the Church of Scotland. It has been frequently in danger by the Sea, which in 1630, overturned the Tower that ſtood on the North ſide of the Harbour. 'Tis governed by its own Magiſtrates, who are 2 Conſuls, 9 Schepens, aſſiſted by a Council of XXIV. but was ſubject to the Family of Orange. The noble Family of Vere, formerly Earls of Oxford, are ſaid to have had their Name and Origin from hence.

4. Fluſhing, or Vliſſingen, 3 Miles South from Midelburg, on the Mouth of the Scheld. About 300 years ago, 'twas only a Ferry to Flanders, but its good Port, brought it into ſuch Requeſt, that it increaſed apace, and was walled about, 160 years ago, by Adolphus of Burgundy. 'Tis of ſuch Importance, that Charles V. gave a particular Charge to his Son Philip to preſerve it. Here are ſeveral fine Structures, eſpecially the Stadthouſe, where they have the Pictures of all the Princes of Naſſau. The Houſes are generally well built, and the Town well fortified and rich. The Duke of Alva ordered a Citadel to be built here, but the Inhabitants hang'd his Engineer, and the Town was the firſt that revolted after the Revolters ſeized the Brill. 'Twas one of the Cautionary Towns given by the States to Queen Elizabeth, when the great Sir Philip Sidney was its Governour. 'Tis almoſt ſurrounded by Sea, and their Canals bear Ships of great Burthen, which makes it a Place of vaſt Trade. They built a Church for the Engliſh in Queen Elizabeth's Time, with a new Stadthouſe, and a Palace for the Prince of Orange. It belonged formerly to the Marquiſſes of Ter Vere, but was purchaſed, with the Marquiſate, by the Prince of Orange in 1581, when they ſwore Allegiance to him and his Heirs, and were ever after great Lovers of the Family.

5. Ramekens lies 2 Miles Eaſt from Fluſhing, is a ſtrong Fort built by Mary Queen of Hungary, when Governeſs of the Low-Countries, for Charles V. It ſtands pleaſantly encompaſſed with Villages, Meadows, and Fields, and on one Side has a Creek, which is a ſafe Harbour for Ships. 'Twas another of the Cautionary Towns given to Queen Elizabeth.

6. Weſt Capel, 6 Miles North-Weſt of Midelburg, lies on the Weſt Coaſt of the Iſland, was formerly a Place of great Trade, with a commodious Harbour, and is famous for the Maritim Laws uſed in the Seven Provinces, called by its Name, but was ruined by Inundations, and is now only a Village, yet it enjoys its ancient Privileges, and is govern'd by its own Magiſtrates.

7. Domburg, 5 Miles North-Weſt from Midelburg, was formerly a rich populous Town, with large Privileges, and abundance of Roman Antiquities have been dug up in the Neighbourhood.

VII. South Beveland lies on the Eaſt of Walcheren, and Weſt of Brabant, 20 Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and about 6 at the two Ends where broadeſt from North to South, but 'tis not half ſo broad in the middle. It has been very much diminiſhed by Inundations. In 1532, the Town of Borſales, and moſt of its Lordſhip, were ſwallowed up, and Rommerſwael divided from the reſt, and made an Iſland by itſelf.

The only Place of Note in the Iſland is,

Ter Goes, on the North ſide of the Iſland, Lat. 51 ½. Long. 4. It is neatly built, ſtrong and populous, has 6 Gates, 3 Market-places, a Grammar-School, and 3 Hoſpitals, all fine Structures. The chief Church is very ſtately. It has a Channel to the Sea, by which ſmall Veſſels come up to the Town. The Lordſhip of Borſales belongs to it. The Magiſtrates are, a Prætor, 2 Conſuls, and 9 Schepens. There are 31 Villages in this Iſland, moſt of which have high Towers that ſerve for Sea-Marks; and there are many Gentlemen Seats here moated about.

DUTCH FLANDERS

LIES South of Zeland, from which 'tis ſeparated by the Scheld, and is 31 Miles long, and 13 where broadeſt.

The chief Places are,

1. Sluys, Lat. 51. 25. Long. 3. 36. 11 Miles North-Eaſt from Bruges, and 19 from Oſtend. It has a Harbour large enough for 500 Ships, is one of the ſtrongeſt Frontiers belonging to the States, and had formerly a good Trade, which is now much decayed. 'Tis extremely well fortified, and has always a good Garriſon.

2. Aerdenburg, almoſt 3 Miles South-Eaſt from Sluys, was once the Capital of Maritim Flanders, but fell to Decay after the Removal of the Trade to Bruges. The Dutch took it in 1604, and have kept it ever ſince.

3. Cadſant, an Iſland in the Mouth of the Scheld, over againſt the Iſle of Walcheren in Zeland, which is 9 Miles long, and 4 broad. It has good Wheat and Graſs, and a Fortreſs of the ſame Name of great Conſequence to the Dutch, becauſe it preſerves the Communication between Zeland and Flanders.

4. Osburg, a fortified Town on the Canal which ſeparates Cadſant from the Continent.

5. Yſendyck, a little Town well fortified about 2 Miles South-Eaſt of the Iſland of Cadſant.

6. Biervliet, a little Iſland in the Mouth of a Branch of the Scheld, with a Town of the ſame Name, about 2 Miles Eaſt of Yſſendyck. It has a very important Fortreſs, which commands the Paſſage from that Part of the Country into Zeland.

7. Ter Neuſe, 7 Miles Eaſt of Biervliet, a well fortified Town on the Bank of the Scheld.

8. Philippyne, 10 Miles South-Weſt of Ter Neuſe, a Fortreſs which was built by Order of Philip II. of Spain, about the beginning of the laſt Century.

9. Sas van Ghent, a ſtrong Place among Marſhes, 5 Miles South-Eaſt from Philippyne, and 11 North from Ghent. It has Sluices, by which they can drown the Country.

10. Axel, 5 Miles Eaſt of Sas van Ghent. The Dutch fortified it during the Spaniſh War, and it has ſince continued in their Poſſeſſion.

11. Hulſt,

11. Hulſt, 5 Miles East of Axel, a ſtrong Town of good Trade, in that call'd the Country of Waes. It was taken by the Dutch in 1645, and confirmed to them by the Treaty of Munſter.

12. Liefkens, on the Bank of the Scheld, over-againſt Lillo, 10 Miles East from Hulſt, is a Fort built by the States to ſecure the Paſſage of the Scheld.

DUTCH BRABANT,

HAS Holland and Dutch Guelderland on the North, Spaniſh Brabant and the Biſhoprick of Liege on the South, Zeland and Dutch Flanders on the Weſt, and Part of the Dutchy of Cleve, and Spaniſh Guelderland on the East. It is 65 Miles where longeſt from East to Weſt, and about 34 where broadeſt.

The chief Places are,

1. Lillo, on the Scheld, 9 Miles North-Weſt from Antwerp. It is a ſtrong little Town, has a Right of demanding Toll upon the Scheld, and, with ſome other Forts in Poſſeſſion of the Dutch, curbs Antwerp. Betwixt this Town and Sanvliet lies a ſtrong Fort, for the further Security of Lillo, call'd Henry-Frederic.

2. Bergen-op-zoom, 12 Miles North of Lillo, on the River Zoom, has the Title of a Marquiſate. The Dutch took it in the beginning of the Civil War. The Duke of Parma endeavoured to recover it in 1588, but in vain, it was ſo ſtoutly defended by the Engliſh Auxiliaries. In 1622, Spinola beſieged it; but Prince Maurice obliged him to retire, with the Loſs of 12000 Men. The Dutch in 1628, made a Canal betwixt Steenbergen and this Place, which united the three Marſhes betwixt 'em. This Marquiſate, with its Appendances, was reſtored to the Count of Auvergne, by the Treaty of Nimeguen. It ſecures the Intercourſe betwixt Holland and Zeland, and opens the Way into Spaniſh Brabant. It has a commodious Harbour, with a Wall, Trench, and other ſtrong Fortifications, three Market-places, and neat Buildings; the chief of which are, St. Lambert's Church, and the Marquis's Palace, and an Hoſpital, formerly a Nunnery. Moſt of the adjacent Country lies low, and is defended from the Sea by Banks.

3. Steenbergen, 4 Miles North from Bergen-op-zoom, is a ſmall Town, well fortified, near the Sea, was taken by the Spaniards in 1622, and retaken ſoon after by Prince Maurice.

5. Breda, 17 Miles East from Steenbergen; 'tis large, well built, populous, and one of the ſtrongeſt Towns in the Netherlands: 'Tis encompaſſed with thick Walls and Mounts, and two Trenches full of Water, one of 'em very broad and deep, beſides a large Ditch round the Counterſcarp, a Ravelin betwixt each Baſtion, join'd to the Rampart on the Inſide of the Ditch, a good number of Half-moons and Horn-works, and a Parapet ſtrengthen'd with a double Row of Elms. It pays its ancient Quota towards ſupporting the Union of the Seven Provinces, but has no ſhare in the Government. The Lordſhip came to the Family of Orange by Marriage, above 300 Years ago, together with the Barony, which contains 17 Villages. The Town ſtands on the Rivers Had and Merk, in a pleaſant Country, abounding with Arable Lands, intermix'd with Meadows, Paſtures, and Copſes. There is a handſome Palace belonging to the Naſſau Family, with a fine Garden between the Body of the Town and the Works. Prince Henry built another in the Citadel, in form of a Caſtle, after the antique way, with a noble Portico, and handſome Gallery. It has alſo a fine Garden, with Box work, extremely curious. The Great Church and Tower are ancient ſtately Structures. In the Choir there is the Tomb of Prince Henry I. with his and the Princeſs's Effigies at length on a Marble Baſe, and a Marble Canopy over them, ſupported by four ancient Heroes kneeling, and Latin Inſcriptions at the Corners, comparing him to Julius Cæſar for Fortitude, and to Attilius Regulus for Magnanimity. There are ſeveral other Inſcriptions in the Church, relating to the Revolutions of the Town. 'Twas betrayed by ſome Popiſh Inhabitants to the Spaniards in 1581, but retaken in 1590, 80 Soldiers being conveyed into the Caſtle under a Load of Turf. 'Twas attack'd in 1624, by 30000 Spaniards under Spinola, who ſurrounded it with ſuch incredible Works, that 'twas not poſſible for Prince Maurice to relieve it; ſo that 'twas forced to ſurrender by Famine after a Year's Siege; during which, the Garriſon had raiſed ſuch Fortifications, as made it one of the ſtrongeſt Cities in the World. 'Twas retaken, after an obſtinate Defence, by Prince Frederic in 1637. The firſt Prince of the Houſe of Orange, who had Poſſeſſion of it about 1400, eſtabliſhed an Academy here, with Profeſſors of the four Faculties.

6. Boiſleduc, 20 Miles North-East from Breda. 'Tis commonly call'd Boſch. It lies on the Banks of the Dromele, where it receives the Aade and the Dieſe. It had its Name from a neighbouring Wood, where the Dukes of Brabant uſed to hunt. It ſtands on a riſing Ground, in the middle of Fens, which are of a great Extent, in many Places unpaſſable, and always overflow'd in Winter; ſo that there is no coming to it but by Cawſeys made on purpoſe, half a Mile long. 'Tis of a triangular Form, and has 7 large Bulwarks, which make it 7760 Paces in Compaſs. It has ſeveral Canals, which bring up Veſſels of good Burden into the City. 'Tis encompaſſed by a ſtrong Wall, and a deep Trench. The Avenues are commanded by ſeveral Forts, and the Citadel commands one ſide of the Town, and the Country towards Bommel; ſo that 'tis reckoned almoſt impregnable. There are 51 publick Stone Bridges, and 38 wooden ones, over their Canals, and as many more for the Uſe of private Families. There is a ſpacious Market-place, encompaſſed with fair Buildings; and there are 10 broad Streets which center in it. The Houſes in general are not ſo neat as thoſe in Holland; but they have a ſtately Town-Houſe, built after the Model of that of Amſterdam. St. John's Church, formerly a Cathedral, is ſplendid and ſumptuous: There are the Arms of many Knights of the Golden Fleece in the Choir, and over their Seats an Account of their Inſtitution, in ſubſtance thus; "The moſt High and Mighty Prince "Philip Duke of Burgundy, Lorrain, and Brabant, did, in 1429, in the "City of Bruges, in Imitation of Gideon, inſtitute to the Honour of "God, and the Virgin, and for the ſake of St. Andrew, Patron of Bur"gundy, a Society of Honourable Knights, into which might be re"ceived Emperors, Kings, Dukes, and other Perſonages, his own "Subjects or Foreigners, provided they were of Noble Blood, and "good Fame, to be call'd Knights of the Golden Fleece; and the lawful Duke of Burgundy, if poſſeſs'd of the Low-Countries, to be their "perpetual Chief." They were to be only 24 in Number, including the Chief, with a Chancellor, Treaſurer, Secretary, and King at Arms; but Charles V. made 'em 50. Their Badge is a Collar of Gold, with a Piece of Steel interlaced, which ſeems to ſtrike Fire out of a Flint, with this Motto, Ante ferit quam flamma micat; i. e. You muſt ſtrike before you can have Fire; and at the End of the Collar hangs a Golden Fleece, with this Motto, Pretium non vile laboris; i. e. A Reward not unworthy the Labour. This Town was the firſt in the Provinces that own'd their Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion, by countenancing the preaching of it, and ſeiz'd the Chancellor of Brabant, ſent by the Governeſs to hinder it; for which, in 1587, the chief Inhabitants were proſcrib'd, and upon the Prince of Orange's Retreat, forced to leave their Country. From that time they were oppreſſed by the Spaniards, till reſcued by the Germans. In 1576, they ſigned the Pacification of Ghent. In 1578, they ſwore the Peace of Religion, and next Year embraced the Union of Utrecht. 'Twas afterwards taken by the Prince of Parma, when the Proteſtants were again baniſhed. Prince Maurice beſieged it in vain in 1601, but Prince Henry-Frederic retook it after an obſtinate Siege. Marſhal Turenne inveſted it in 1672, but ſoon after raiſed the Siege. Their Government is by two Prætors, who are generally Perſons of noble Deſcent, the one for Civil, and the other for Criminal Affairs. They are aſſiſted by Echevins, and a Common-Council; but there lies an Appeal from this, and all the other Tribunals in Brabant, to the Tribunal at the Hague. The chief Trade of the Town is in making Needles, and excellent Knives, and in Woollen and Linnen Cloth. The Inhabitants are courteous, and of a more martial Temper than any of their Neighbours. This City has a large Juriſdiction, comprehending Campin, Peeland, Maeſland, the Diſtrict of Oſterwick, and the Towns of Helmont, Eindhoven, Megen, Raveſtein, and Grave.

7. Megen, a handſome Town on the Maeſe, 15 Miles North-East from Boiſleduc. It gives Title of an Earl, and has a large Juriſdiction.

8. Raveſtein, on the Maeſe, 3 Miles East from Megen, is a neat Town, with a good Caſtle, and a pretty large Juriſdiction. 'Twas formerly very ſtrong, but the Fortifications were demoliſhed by Agreement betwixt Charles V. and the Duke of Cleve.

9. Grave, 4 Miles South-East from Raveſtein. It is a neat pleaſant Town, ſtrong by Situation and Art, and commands an important Paſs upon the Maeſe, whoſe Waters fill its Ditches. On the other ſide there is a great Marſh, always full of Water, where the Town is inacceſſable. It is exceedingly well fortified, with Ravelins, a Counterſcarp, Paliſadoes, and a great Horn-work, ſecured by a Cover'd Way. In ſhort, 'tis reckon'd the ſtrongeſt, and eaſieſt to be defended in the Netherlands. The Lordſhip of it belong'd to the Family of Orange. It is Capital of the Earldom of Cuyck, which is 4 Miles long, and 1 and half broad, and contains 17 Villages. In 1586, it was, by the Governour's Cowardice, ſurrendered to the Duke of Parma, and in 1602, recovered by Prince Maurice. In 1672, it was treacherouſly ſurrendered to the French, who fortified it, and made it one of their Storehouſes for Plunder. In 1674, the Prince of Orange retook it, after a Siege of four Months, the Garriſon being reduced to eat Horſe-fleſh. Their Government is by a Judge and Scout, two Conſuls, and ſeven Echevins, that were annually appointed by the Prince of Orange. They have alſo a Common Council of Eight, whoſe Advice they take in matters of Importance. They are exempt from moſt Impoſts in the neighbouring Provinces, and enjoy other great Immunities. The adjacent Country is low, and conſiſts chiefly of Meadows and Paſture.

10. Boxtel, 7 Miles South from Boiſleduc: It is of great Importance, becauſe it commands the Sluices, which keep in and let out the Water all over the neighbouring Country.

11. Eindhoven, 7 Miles South-East from Boxtel, is a walled Town on the Dommel, and Capital of the Diſtrict of Campin. It has a Church dedicated to St. Catherine, and a College of Canons belonging to it.

12. Helmont, 8 Miles North-East from Eindhoven, is a good walled Town, Capital of that call'd the Peeland, and lies on the River Aa.

DUTCH LIMBURG.

IT lies on the Frontiers of Germany, and is ſeparated from Dutch Brabant by Part of the Biſhoprick of Liege on the Weſt and North-Weſt. It has Juliers on the East and North-East, and Part of Luxemburg on the South. It is about 17 Miles from North to South, and 30 East and Weſt.

The chief Places are,

1. Valkenburg, Long. 6. 20. Lat. 50. 48. 9 Miles North-East from Maeſtricht. It ſtands on the River Guel, is a large neat Town, was formerly well fortified, and had a ſtrong Caſtle. The French took it in 1672, and made it much ſtronger; but being obliged to reſtore it by the Treaty of Nimeguen, they diſmantled it.

2. Maeſtricht, Lat. 50. 50. Long. 6. 4. 9 Miles South-Weſt of Valkenburg, lies on the Frontiers, next the Biſhoprick of Liege, and is by ſome reckoned Part of Dutch Brabant. It ſtands on the Weſt ſide of the Maeſe, 12 Miles North-East from Liege, and has Name from its Paſſage over the Maeſe, which runs thro' it. It is a very ancient City. St. Servatius tranſported the Biſhop's See hither from Tongeren; and there is a Church here dedicated to that Saint, where they have many Reliques, and of which the Kings of Spain were formerly Canons. It has three Dutch Churches, and one in common to the Engliſh and French. The Town is about 4 Miles round, and has 2 Monaſteries of both Sexes for the Papiſts, who are tolerated here. The Bridge over the Maeſe is very beautiful, and has 9 Arches. It leads to the Eaſt part of the Town, call'd the Wyck, which tho' leſſer, is ſtronger than the other, and belongs to the Biſhop of Liege; but he leaves the military Government of it to the Dutch. The City has of late been much enlarged, and advanced in its Trade. The Streets are large, the Houſes of Brick, well built ſince it came into the Hands of the Dutch, but the old Buildings come ſhort of the modern. They have a neat Stadthouſe, modell'd like that of Amſterdam. The City is ſtrongly fortified, encompaſſed with a good Wall, Ditch, and Outworks, and a very high Baſtion on the South-Eaſt ſide, to cover the Town from a Hill, which would otherwiſe command it, and on the top of which Hill there is an old Caſtle.

THE SPANISH NETHERLAND
Commonly called FLANDERS
1710

Revised by I. Senex

Longitude 30 from London

It revolted from Spain with the reſt of the Provinces, and was beſieged by the Prince of Parma in 1579, when it made a brave Defence, and repulſed the Spaniards in two bloody Attacks; but at laſt the Garriſon being wearied out, the Spaniards ſtole over the Works by Night, kill'd the Guard, which they found aſleep, and ſo became Maſters of the Town, which, tho' then in Treaty with them, they almoſt depopulated; ſo that it was a long time before it could recover. It was retaken by the Prince of Orange in 1632, and continued in Poſſeſſion of the States till 1673, when it was taken by the French King in Perſon, after 13 Days open Trenches; which was chiefly owing to the Valour of the Engliſh and Scots then in his Service, under the late Duke of Monmouth. The French King added 6 Baſtions to its Fortifications. The Prince of Orange attack'd it with 36000 Men in 1676, but the French advancing with a greater Army, he was obliged to raiſe the Siege; ſo that it was not reſtored to the Dutch till the Treaty of Nimeguen. The French attack'd it in 1703, but were obliged to retire by the Confederates under the late Lord Auverquerque. There is a famous Quarry within Cannon-ſhot of the Town, to which the People retire with their beſt Effects, when Armies march that way: There is room in it for above 40000 People: It has thouſands of ſquare Pillars, in large level Walks, moſt above 20 Foot high, and others much higher, which the Quarriers have raiſed to ſupport the Earth over them, while they dig out the Stone; but they look rather like the Pillars of a Palace; and the multitudes of Turnings and Windings among them, give thoſe who retire thither for Safety an Opportunity to kill or knock down any that come to moleſt them. This Quarry lies in a Hill on the Bank of the Maeſe, where are 25 Fathoms of Rock and Earth over head. The Hill runs ſome Miles along the River towards Liege, and is about half or three quarters of a Mile broad. The Quarry has an Entrance towards the River, where Carts come with great eaſe, and unload the Stones for Tranſportation.

3. Dalem, on the Berin, which falls into the Maeſe, 8 Miles South-Eaſt from Maeſtricht. It is a ſmall Town, with an ancient Caſtle. It had formerly Earls of its own, who had a large Territory, that came afterwards to the Dukes of Brabant. The French took it in 1672, demoliſhed the Fortifications, and reſtored it to the Dutch by the Treaty of Nimeguen.

4. Rolduc, on the Eaſt ſide of the Country, lies on the Frontiers of Juliers, 19 Miles Eaſt from Maeſtricht. It is a ſmall Town, Capital of its County, and defended by an old Caſtle.

The Spaniſh, now the Auſtrian, Netherlands.

IT is ſo indented with other Dominions, that it is very difficult to give any exact Account of its Extent. It has Dutch Flanders, Dutch Brabant, and Dutch Guelderland on the North, France and Lorrain on the South, French Flanders and the Sea on the Weſt, and Germany on the Eaſt. The greateſt Extent North and South, from Dutch Guelderland to the Borders of Lorrain, including Luxemburg and Dutch Limburg, is 162 Miles, and the greateſt Extent Eaſt and Weſt, from the Sea to the Frontiers of Germany, is about 180; but it is much indented both ways.

Theſe Dominions belonged formerly to the Crown of Spain, but were conquered by the Confederates in the late War, and given to the Houſe of Auſtria by the Treaties of Utrecht, Raſtadt, and Baden. The Air of theſe Provinces is very cold, but healthful. They have no Wine of their own, but excellent Beer, and their native Fuel is Turf. They have Wood from the Foreſt of Soignes, and what they want more, from the Foreſt of Ardenne, which belongs to France, from whence, and from Germany, they are furniſhed with Wine.

La Forreſt ſays, the Inhabitants are call'd Flemings from one of the Provinces, but he does not ſay which.

The Men are for moſt part handſome, tall, ſtrong, well proportioned, great Talkers and Feaſters, Lovers of Novelty, and quarrelſome at their Carouſals, and make up their Differences at the next merry Meeting. Strada ſays, they are not much to be gain'd by kind Offices, which they are apt to forget, as well as Injuries, unleſs they think themſelves deſpiſed, and then are implacable. Grotius ſays, that as they lie betwixt France and Germany, they partake of the Virtues and Vices of both Nations, and their Cuſtoms are a mixture of both; but thoſe call'd Walloons, reſemble the French moſt, both in Language and Manners. Thoſe of Quality affect Spaniſh Titles and Pomp. The People in general are zealous Papiſts, and have a Court of Inquiſition; but it is more moderate than formerly, becauſe it occaſioned a Revolt. The Women are generally fair, and are reckoned chaſte, tho' as free in their Cups and Converſation as the Men. The Flemings lay Claim to the teaching of other Nations the way to make Cloth, Arras Hangings, Clocks, Watches, and the Perfection of the Mariner's Compaſs; which ſome allow, but others deny. They alſo claim the Invention of Chariots, Painting with Oil, Limning, making Glaſs, Worſteds, Says, and other Stuffs, which they taught the Engliſh, when drove from hence by the Duke of Alva's Perſecution. Their general Language is Low Dutch or Flemiſh, but in the Provinces next France, they ſpeak a corrupt French call'd Walloon. Thoſe of breeding ſpeak good French, and thoſe about Court affect Spaniſh.

The Government is by a Viceroy, aſſiſted by three Councils: 1. The Council of State, for Affairs of Peace, War, and Treaties, and for diſpatching Miniſters to Foreign Courts. It conſiſts of a Preſident, and as many Members as the Emperor thinks fit. 2. The Privy-Council, which conſiſts of a Preſident and 12 Counſellors, named by the Emperor, or the Viceroy by his Order. Their Preſident is Keeper of the Great Seal. Here they determine Appeals from other Courts, adminiſter Juſtice, grant Privileges, Pardons, and Edicts, determine the Boundaries of Provinces, and all Controverſies about the Right of Domain, with relation both to the Emperor and Subjects. Theſe two Councils upon occaſion adviſe with one another. 3. The Council of Finances conſiſts of three Superintendants, a Treaſurer, a Receiver-General, three Commiſſaries, two Secretaries, and inferior Officers. They take care of the Princes Domain, Taxes, Subſidies, and Fortifications, adjuſt the Charges of War, and farm out the Revenues. Subject to them is a Chamber of Accounts, conſiſting of a Preſident and ſeven Members, to whom all Treaſurers and Receivers of the Revenue give in their Accounts. All theſe Councils follow the Court, as does the Grand Provoſt, who carries a Red Wand for an Emblem of Juſtice. There are Provoſts under him in every Province. He, with the Aſſiſtance of a Comptroller, paſſes Sentence upon Robbers, Murderers, and Vagabonds. They uſe the Civil and Canon Laws, except where they are oppoſite to the Imperial Edicts, and the Laws of the Country. There is a Court of the ſame nature in every Province, with a Preſident, and 12 or 18 Counſellors, who paſs Sentence in their reſpective Provinces; but an Appeal lies from them to the Council of Malines, except in Brabant and Hainault, where the Sentence of their Courts is definitive. Every Province has a Governour appointed by the Emperor, but ſubject to the Viceroy, and their Power is limited with relation to the Affairs of the Countries, eſpecially in thoſe of War. Commiſſioners are diſpatch'd annually to the principal Cities of each Province, to inquire into all things relating to the Intereſt of the Prince; and in Brabant their Power extends, by a Privilege from the Pope, to Eccleſiaſtical Perſons. They have alſo an Admiral, who commands in Chief at Sea, has a Share of all Prizes taken in War, and without his Approbation, no Licenſe given by the Emperor or Viceroy to export and import prohibited Goods, is valid. They have all the Officers at this Court as are uſual at the Courts of any Prince in Europe.

Theſe Provinces are full of Nobility, ſeveral of whom have the Title of Princes, &c. Their chief Order of Knighthood is the Golden Fleece.

The chief Government is in the Convention of Eſtates, call'd by the Governour General or Viceroy, in the Prince's Name. When Money is to be levied, Laws enacted, or other great matters conſidered, they uſually meet at Bruſſels, which is the Seat of the Government; and the Brabanders, Luxemburghers, and Gueldrians are not to be ſummoned out of their own Provinces, unleſs on extraordinary Occaſions; therefore their States uſually meet at home. They are made up of the Clergy and Nobility, and the Deputies of the chief Cities, who meet ſeparately according to their Provinces. The Prince's Propoſals are made to them in very obliging Terms: If they refuſe to conſent, the Miniſtry uſe the beſt Arguments they can to prevail with them, and if they can't, the matter is referr'd to another Opportunity; for the Diſſent of any one City prevents any thing's paſſing into a Law. The Power of theſe Provinces was very great under the laſt Dukes of the Houſe of Burgundy; but ſince the Revolt of the Dutch, it is much leſſen'd every way.

The Auſtrian Netherlands contains,

I. FLANDERS. It has the Sea on the Weſt, Hainault and Brabant on the Eaſt, the River Scheld on the North, and Arras on the South. The greateſt Length South and North is about 78 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth Eaſt and Weſt about 50. Some account it the richeſt Province in Chriſtendom for its Extent, conſidering the Goodneſs of the Soil, the great number of Towns and Villages, and of Rivers and Canals, for the conveniency of Trade. It lies almoſt upon a Level, is hilly in a few Places, but mountainous no where. The Air is generally wholſome, but that in the South parts beſt, and the Country towards France and the Coaſt exceeds moſt of Europe in Fertility. That call'd Flemiſh Flanders, or the North Part, has no great ſtore of Wheat, but abounds with Rye, Oats, Beans, Peaſe, Vetches, Hemp, Flax, and good Fruit. That call'd French Flanders, or the South part, has ſtore of the beſt Wheat, Madder, Woad, and as rich Paſturage as any in Chriſtendom. The Inhabitants purchaſe great numbers of Colts from neighbouring Countries, which improve much in a little time by their excellent Air and Paſtures. It was part of Gallia Belgica in the Roman time, and when it came afterwards under the French Kings of the firſt Race, they appointed Officers to govern it, who were call'd Foreſters, the Country being then full of Woods, and theſe Foreſters by their Patents were to free the woody Parts of Robbers, and the Coaſt of Pirates. They came afterwards to have the Title of Earls, reckoned themſelves the firſt of the ſort in Europe, and therefore deſpiſed the Title of Duke, when neighbouring Princes aſſumed it. Many of 'em were conſiderable Princes, and made a great Figure in Hiſtory, which we can't inſiſt upon; but the Country came at laſt to the Family of Burgundy, and then to the Houſe of Auſtria by Marriage, and has frequently been a Scene of bloody Wars betwixt the ſaid Families and that of France.

Places of Note are,

1. Ghent, Lat. 51. 9. Long. 3. 56. It is ancient, Capital of Flanders, and the largeſt City in the Auſtrian Netherlands; it is ſituated at the Conflux of the Scheld, Lys, and Moerwater, all navigable Rivers. Julius Cæſar is ſaid to have founded it, becauſe of the conveniency of the Situation. It is remarkable for the Birth of our Duke of Lancaſter, ſo well known in Engliſh Hiſtory by the Name of John of Gaunt; and alſo for the Birth of the Emperor Charles V. It has undergone many Changes by Foreign Wars and Domeſtic Troubles, partly occaſioned by ſtanding up for its Liberties, and partly by the mutinous Temper of the Inhabitants, which has carried them to Extremes againſt their Sovereigns, particularly Margaret of Burgundy, her Husband Maximilian of Auſtria, and her Grandſon Charles V. They enter'd into the Union of the United Provinces againſt Spain; but the Popiſh Party prevailing, they afterwards broke off. This City had formerly a great Trade, but is much decayed since the Revolt of the Dutch, yet still they have a Staple for Corn, and other Grain, and carry on a considerable Trade, by the Scheld and other Rivers, and by Canals betwixt this Town, Bruges, Antwerp, and Sas van Ghent, on which latter are 6 or 7 Forts built by the Dutch, for the Security of their Canal. The Air of this City is good, and it has so many Streams running thro' it, that 'tis divided into 26 Islands, joyned by 98 large Bridges, besides several lesser ones. Their chief Trade besides Corn, is in Cloths, Stuffs, and Silks, which employs a third Part of their 50 Companies of Tradesmen. The Fortifications are 10 Miles round, and the Compass within is reckoned seven, but there are several Corn-Fields, and other wast Places, within the Walls. The Town was so powerful, in the Reign of Philip de Valois, that they sent 50000 Men to the Field, and there are still reckoned 30000 Burghers in it who live on their Rents. The Citadel is a regular Fortification, but much short of the modern ones of that Nature. This Town suffered much by the late Wars. 'Twas taken by Lewis XIV. of France, after 6 Days Siege in 1678, but restored by the Treaty of Nimeguen. The French seized it again, after the Death of Charles II. of Spain, and abandoned it after the Defeat of Ramillies, in 1706. It was betrayed to them in 1708, but retaken by the Confederates after a short Siege that same Year. 'Tis the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Malines, and the Seat of the Provincial Council of Flanders. The Town is well built; the Streets fair and clean; 'tis well fortified with Walls and Ditches. It has 7 Churches, and 55 Monasteries, of which that of the Jesuits is the fairest. Here is a Cloister for English Nuns. The Cathedral is a stately Edifice. The Tower is about 500 Steps high, with a gilt Copper Dragon on the Top, as large as a Bull; from hence there is a Prospect of the City and adjacent Country, which is very fruitful. It has a Bell of 12000 Pounds Weight, with very fine Chimes. The Abbot has a very considerable Tract of Ground, with some Marks of Sovereignty, and many Villages under his Jurisdiction. Here are several noble Tombs, and in the lower Church there is a Lady's Tomb of one entire Touchstone. St. Michael's Church is famed for its excellent Paintings; and that dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul is a very fine Structure. The Castle, formerly the Palace of their Princes, contains 300 Chambers. The Town-house is built of Stone, adorned with Sculptures and Pillasters, after the modern Way. Here are several large Market-places, and in one of them a noble gilt Statue of Charles V. On a Scaffold over-against that called Friday's-Market, there is a great Cannon mounted, with a larger Bore than any Mortar. On the Bridge called Dogebrack, there are two Statues in Brass, representing a Son beheading his Father: Both of them being condemned to dye a Pardon was offered to either of them that would execute the other: The Father perswaded the Son to accept the Offer; but as he was ready to give the fatal Blow, the Sword broke in his Hand; which being looked on as a singular Providence, and a Rebuke for the Barbarity of the Proposal, they were both pardoned.

2. Bruges, 22 Miles North-West from Ghent. 'Tis an ancient City, lies in a large Plain upon a Canal, and had its Name from its numerous Bridges. 'Twas once one of the greatest Emporiums in Europe, a Hans Town, and frequented by Merchants from all Countries, who were formed into 17 Fraternities, besides which they have 68 Companies of other Tradesmen and Artificers, with a Guild-hall for each. Antwerp was then subservient to it, but the Merchants removed thither in 1500, because of the Wars; so that their remaining Trade consisted in Spanish Wool, for which 'twas made their chief Mart by the English after we lost Calais in 1558. The first Decay of their Trade, happen'd by the Rigour of their Magistrates, which occasioned many of their best Weavers to retire to England. There is a Canal from hence to Sluys, about 8 Miles long, cut at a vast Charge by the Inhabitants of Sluys, and secured by Turnpikes from Inundations, so that Vessels of great Burden came up from thence to the Town; but after Sluys fell into the Hands of the Dutch, those of Bruges dug another Canal to Ostend, about 7 Miles long, which brings Ships of 2 or 300 Tuns to the City, and advances its Trade. Spinola, the Spanish General, cut a Canal betwixt this City and Ghent, of about 8 Leagues long, which he guarded with 200 Forts and Redoubts, as many Companies of Foot, and 6 Troops of Horse, during the War with the Dutch. This makes an easy Communication of Trade betwixt those two Cities. They have still a Trade in Spanish Wool, Manufactures of Cloth, Fustian, Stuff and Tapestry, &c. Here are abundance of Canals, with a Multitude of Bridges, and over one of those Canals stands the public Warehouse, where Vessels unload at the Door. This City is the second in Flanders, is populous, round, and about 4 Miles in Circuit. It has good Walls with Fortifications of Earth and deep Ditches. It has 6 principal Streets, that center in the Market, and lead to the principal Gates; most of them are streight and large; their public Structures sumptuous; most of the Houses well built, with 4 or 5 Stories, and some of them 6, high: From the Tops of them there is a fine Prospect of the City, and adjacent Country, which is fruitful and pleasant, and of their Ships in the Canals. Near the Market-place there is a Tower 343 Steps high, and near it the Palace called la Franche, nobly adorned with the Pictures and Statues of Emperors, Kings, and Archdukes; and the English of Note, are generally complimented here, in the House where our King Charles II. was entertain'd during his Exile; and there are several Houses erected with the Money given by our Royal Family, where the Citizens divert themselves with Bows and Guns; they are adorned with the Pictures of the three Royal Brothers, and other Monuments. This Town is the See of a Bishop, who is Suffragan of Matines, and Chancellor of Flanders. The Cathedral is a fine Structure, has several noble Tombs, and among others, that of the famous Johannis Lodovicus Vives. Here are 7 Parish-Churches, 60 Monasteries (2 of them English Nunneries) 3 Colleges of Canons, and a sumptuous College of the Jesuits, in whose Church there is a solid Fabric, representing the Holy Sepulchre, the Plan of which was brought hither by a Lord who went twice to Jerusalem on purpose, and lies entombed here. This Town was betrayed to the French during the last Wars, but retaken soon after with Ghent.

3. Damme, 4 Miles North-East from Bruges, on the Canal betwixt it and Sluys. 'Tis a small Town founded by one of the Counts of Flanders, but was ruined by those of Bruges, who were jealous of its Commerce. Spinola, the Spanish General, made it very strong during the Wars with the Dutch. The Duke of Marlborough took it in 1706. 4 Miles East from thence lies Fort St. Donas; 2 Miles further North lies Fort Isabel, over against Sluys; and 6 Miles North-West from thence lies Fort Blankenberg on the Coast, all which were taken by the Confederates in the last Wars. About 8 Miles West from Bruges lies Plassendael, which was fortified for Defence of the Sluice on the Canal to Ostend, but surrendered to the Confederates in June 1706, as did also Oudenburg, which lies on the Canal of Newport, over-against it. The French took Plassendal in 1708, but lost it again before the Year's End.

4. Ostend, on the Coast, 10 Miles West from Bruges. 'Tis Capital of the District called Free-Land, because it shook of the Superiority of Bruges, and extended its Jurisdiction over the said Territory, which contains many Villages. The Town lies in a mooriish Ground, betwixt several Canals, two of which do almost encompass it, and swell so at high Tide, that the Town seems to stand in the Sea. It is so well fortified, that 'tis reckoned one of the strongest Towns in the Netherlands. It has a large and safe Harbour, capable of Ships of great Burden, and well defended by Forts. The Houses are well built and uniform, but not high. The Streets are regular, streight, well paved and neat, the Town having been all re-built at once, after it was ruined by the famous Siege, begun by Spinola, the Spanish General, in 1601, when it held out 3 Years, 3 Months, 3 Weeks, 3 Days, and 3 Hours, and was taken at last not so much for want of Men or Provisions, because it was constantly supplied by Sea, but altogether for want of Ground, Spinola having gained it from the Garrison Foot by Foot, and dug them out, till they had not room enough left to defend it, and what remained of the Town was reduced to Ashes. It was so slightly fortified when the Siege begun, that Princess Isabella, then Governess of Flanders, is said to have swore that she would never shift herself till the Town was taken: Prince Maurice attempted to relieve it several times, but in vain, the Spaniards were so strongly intrenched. This Siege cost above 100000 Men, or as Puffendorf says, above 140000, on both sides, in which the Spaniards sustained the greatest Loss. They shot so many Bullets against the Sand-Hill Bulwark, where they stuck, so that it became a Wall of Iron, and dashed all the fresh Bullets in Pieces that struck it. Sir Francis Vere was Governour of the Town when the Siege began, and with the English under him, held it out bravely, and amus'd the Spaniards, by a Treaty, while he gained Time to better the Fortifications. Meteran, and some other Dutch Writers, did upon this account unjustly charge him with a Design to have betrayed the Town. The Dutch Garrison obtained honourable Terms, and retired to Sluys, where they were received, with as much Honour, by Prince Maurice, for their brave Defence, as if they had come from a Conquest; for besides the Loss which the Spaniards sustained in the Siege, he took from them the Towns of Sluys, Grave, and Rhinberg, while they lay before this Town. Cardinal Mazarine formed a Design to surprize this City, in 1658, when Marshal d'Aumont, who had the Conduct of the Enterprise, thought himself so sure of Success, that he sent the Cardinal word, 'twas effected, and the Cardinal wrote as confidently to Frankfort, where the Electors, who were met to chuse an Emperor, were so confounded for some time, that they suspended the Election; but when the contrary was known, and that the French Troops were entrapped, it very much exposed the Cardinal's Reputation and Politics. The French possess'd themselves of this Town after the Death of Charles II. of Spain, but were obliged to surrender it after a short Siege to the English and Dutch, in 1706.

5. Newport, on the same Coast, about 10 Miles South-West of Ostend, at the Mouth of a little River which makes a long and secure Harbour, but not capable of large Ships. The Town is well fortified, and the Streets broad and streight, but the Houses low built, and most of Timber. The chief Strength of the Town consists in its Situation, for by their Sluices they can in an Hour's time lay the neighbouring Town and Country under Water, for 2 Leagues. Betwixt the Town and the Sea there is a strong Fort which commands the Harbour. The Inhabitants subsist chiefly by Fishing. 'Tis the Place whither our Packet-boats go from Dover with Mails for Flanders. The Dutch besieged it in 1600, under Prince Maurice, when Archduke Albert coming to relieve it, received a remarkable Defeat by the Prince, who killed 6000 of the Spaniards, took 600 Prisoners, with 300 Colours, the Archduke himself was wounded and narrowly escaped being taken. The French possessed themselves of this Town during the last Wars, and by laying the Country under Water, interrupted the sending of our Convoys from Ostend to Lisle, when the Confederates besieged that Town in 1708, but they were obliged to surrender it by the Treaty of Utretcht. Here is a Canal that was dug by the Spaniards during their Wars with the Dutch: It goes to Offenburg and Plassendale, and opens a Communication with Bruges and Ghent, &c. The chief Design of digging it was for a speedy Conveyance of Troops and Ammunition from those Places, and to embark them for England, when the Prince of Parma was to have invaded us by Land, while their Armado was to do the same in 1588, by Sea.

6. Wynendale, 12 Miles South-East from Newport, remarkable for the Defeat of a great Body of French, by a much inferior Body of the Allies under General Webb, in 1708; which opened a Communication for sending Supplies from Ostend to the Confederate Troops before Lisle.

7. Furnes, about 6 Miles West from Newport, on the River Colm, is Capital of its Chatellany, and bears the Title of a Viscounty. The Territory is very fruitful. 'Tis a neat small Town, but not strong, and is one of the Frontiers betwixt Spanish and French Flanders. The chief Trade of the Inhabitants is in Linnen. It has been often taken and retaken by the French and Spaniards, was quitted to the French by the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle, taken by the English in 1692, retaken by the French the same Year, taken by the Confederates in the last War, and confirmed to the Emperor by the Treaty of Utrecht. There is a Canal betwixt this Place and Newport, and others betwixt it and Dunkirk, Wynoxbergen, and Loo, by which it has also a Communication with the River Yser, Dixmuyde, &c.

8. Dixmuyde, lies 17 Miles North-East from Winoxberg, and 8 South-East from Newport. 'Tis a very strong Place, has held out many remarkable Sieges, was taken by the English, and new fortified in 1692, retaken by the French that same Year, but was quitted to the Emperor by the Treaty of Utrecht. It has a Communication with Newport and Ypres by the Rivers Yser and Yper.

9. Fort-

9. Fort-Knocke, at the Conflux of thoſe Rivers, 4 Miles South-Weſt from Dixmuyde, a ſtrong Royal Fort, built by Lewis XIV. was attack'd in vain, but ſurpriſed by a Party of Confederates in 1712, and confirm'd to the Emperor by the Treaty of Utrecht.

10. Ypres, about 12 Miles South from Dixmuyde, has its Name from the River on which it ſtands. 'Tis Capital of its Chatellany, which is very large, and fruitful, has a Vote in the Provincial States, and the Title of a Viſcounty. 'Tis one of the greateſt and richeſt Towns in Flanders, and vends a great Quantity of Silks and Says at their annual Fair in Lent. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Malines. The Town is regularly fortified, and can drown the neighbouring Country by its Sluices. The Houſes are well built, but the Fronts of Timber. The Cathedral is a noble Structure, and has the Tombs of ſeveral Biſhops. The Jeſuits, and diverſe other Orders, have Convents here. The Reſurrection of our Saviour on the Altar-piece of the Jeſuits Church, is much admired as a fine Piece of Painting. In their Cloiſter they have the Pictures of all the Jeſuits that have ſuffered in England, repreſented as Martyrs. The Town-houſe is a ſtately Structure. They have a large Market-place, where there is an ancient Hall well built, which is the Storehouſe for their Wool. The Town was taken by the French in 1648, reſtored afterwards to Spain, but retaken by Lewis XIV. in 1678, was confirmed to him by the Treaty of Nimeguen, but taken by the Confederates in the laſt War, and reſtored to the Emperor by thoſe of Utrecht and Baden.

11. Menin, about 10 Miles South-Eaſt from Ypres, on the River Lys. 'Tis a ſmall Town, but was ſo well and regularly fortified by the French, as to be reckoned one of the ſtrongeſt Places in Europe. 'Tis noted for excellent Beer; was taken by the Allies after 18 Days Siege in 1706, and it was confirmed to the Emperor by the Treaties of Utrecht and Baden, together with Commines, the (Inheritance and Birth-place of the famous Hiſtorian and Stateſman Philip de Commines) Warneton, Warwick, Popering, Rouſſelaer, and other Places in the Neighbourhood.

12. Courtray, on the Lys, 6 Miles North-Eaſt from Menin. 'Tis divided by the River, reckoned one of the ancienteſt Towns in the Netherlands, and to have been a conſiderable Place in the Time of Cæſar. 'Tis noted for making good Diaper and Cloth, in which they have a great Trade. 'Tis ſtrong by Art and Nature, has a good Citadel, which was built by the French when they took it in 1646. The Spaniards retook it in 1647. The French took it again in 1667, and reſtored it by the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle. They took it afterwards, but 'twas retaken by the Allies in 1706, and remains in the Emperor's Hands.

13. Tournay, on the River Scheld, 14 Miles South-Eaſt from Courtray, and 24 from Ypres, is Capital of the fruitful and pleaſant Diſtrict of Tourneſis, and was the Seat of the chief Tribunal or Parliament for the French Conqueſts in the Netherlands. 'Tis a Biſhop's See, Suffragan of Cambray, is a very ancient Town, ſuppoſed to have been taken by Cæſar from the Parvij, and to have been the Reſidence of Childeric of France, becauſe when Workmen were digging up Ruins here in 1653, they found a Ring with that Prince's Name and Effigies. 'Twas taken from the French by Henry VII. of England, and the Emperors Maximilian and Charles V. to whom he was Confederate. Henry VIII. built a ſtrong Caſtle here, but it was given up again to the French by Cardinal Wolſey's Intrigues. The Prince of Parma took it from the French in 1581; but it was baſely ſurrendered to the French in 1667, after which Lewis XIV. made it ſo ſtrong, that it was reckoned impregnable. He built a Citadel with ſo many curious Mines, and ſo well contrived, that they looked like Terras Walks. In the Center of the Citadel there is a Well whoſe Water lies 50 foot deep, and above the Brink of the Well there are Balconies which lead to the Mines under Ground; but notwithſtanding all this Strength, 'twas taken by the Confederates in 1709, and the Garriſon, both of the Town and Citadel, were made Priſoners of War. The City is large, populous, and has a conſiderable Trade in Woollen-Cloth, but now much decayed. The Traders of the Town are divided into 72 Companies. The River divides it, has many Bridges, begins to be navigable, and has a good Key here. The Buildings in general are handſome. The Cathedral is a noble Pile, adorned with 5 Towers placed in form of St. Andrew's Croſs, and there are 17 other Pariſh-Churches. This Town, and its Diſtrict, was confirm'd to the Emperor by the Treaties of Utrecht and Baden.

14. Audenard lies on the Scheld, 18 Miles North-Eaſt from Tournay, and 14 from Courtray. 'Tis divided by the River, is Capital of its Chatellany, which contains 33 Villages; and is well fortified by ſtrong Walls, regular Outworks, and the Caſtle of Pamele joined to it by a Bridge. 'Twas taken by the Prince of Parma in 1582; by the French in 1658, but reſtored by the Pyrenean Treaty: They took it again in 1667, had it confirmed to them by the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle, but reſtored it by the Peace of Nimeguen: They beſieged it again in 1708, but were forced to abandon it, and were defeated near it with the Loſs of 4000 Men, and 8000 taken, after which the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene demoliſhed their Lines, and laid the French Country under Contribution a great way into Picardy.

15. Deynſe, on the Lys, 15 Miles North-Weſt from Courtray, and 8 South-Weſt from Ghent. 'Tis chiefly noted for the glorious Retreat of the Prince of Vaudemont, with part of the Confederate Army from hence in 1695, when almoſt ſurrounded by the French; upon which King William received him with as much Applauſe as if he had gained a Victory.

16. Aelſt, or Aloſt, on the Dender, 14 Miles North-Eaſt from Audenard, and 14 South-Eaſt from Ghent. 'Tis Capital of that called Imperial Flanders, and of a County that had formerly Lords of its own. The Territories ſubject to it are large, viz. the County of Aloſt, the Country of Waes, and thoſe called the Four Offices of Hulſt, Axtel, Bouchot, and Aſtemede, that comprehend above 150 Villages, and 4 Cities, which together made up that called Imperial Flanders, becauſe the Counts held it in Fee of the Empire. It was formerly noted for a Trade in Hops and Tapeſtry. The French King took it in 1667, but diſmantled and reſtored it by the Treaty of Nimeguen. He ſeized it again upon the Death of Charles II. of Spain, but his Troops abandoned it after their Defeat at the Battel of Ramilies in 1706.

17. Dendermond, at the Conflux of the Dender and Scheld, about 12 Miles Eaſt from Ghent. 'Tis Capital of its Diſtrict, and has a conſiderable Trade in Fuſtian and other Stuffs. 'Tis a Place of Importance becauſe of its Fortifications and Sluices by which it can drown the neighbouring Country. The French were repulſed before it in 1667. They ſeized it after the Death of Charles II. of Spain, but ſurrendered it to the Duke of Marlborough on Terms in 1706.

II. The Marquiſate of ANTWERP, or of the HOLY EMPIRE. It lies on the Eaſt ſide of the Scheld, is encompaſſed by Brabant, extends 35 Miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 25 South and North. It was made a Marquiſate by the Emperor Otho II. in 982, and from thence was call'd the Marquiſate of the Holy Empire. It is of leſs Extent than formerly, part of it, as Lillo, &c. to the North, being poſſeſs'd by the Dutch. It is a pleaſant fruitful Country, and contains,

Places of Note,

1. Antwerp, the Capital, on the Eaſt ſide of the Scheld, 26 Miles North-Eaſt from Ghent, Lat. 51. 18. Long. 4. 36. It is a very ancient City, and derives its Name from a Wharf on the River. It lies in form of a Creſcent upon the River, which is about a quarter of a Mile broad here, 22 Foot deep at low Water, and 34 at Tide; ſo that Ships of the largeſt Burden can unload at its Keys. Eight Channels from the River run thro' the Town, ſome of which are capable of 100 Ships. It was formerly one of the moſt conſiderable Towns for Trade in Europe. In 1550, their Stock was valued at 133 Millions of Gold, Flemiſh Money, beſides their Bank, as appears by their Records, which likewiſe mention one John Daens, a Merchant here, ſo rich, that having lent a Million of Gold to Charles V. upon Bond, he invited the Emperor to an Entertainment, made a Fire of Cinnamon in the Room, and threw the Bond into it. Guicciardin ſays, that in his time, when Antwerp was in its moſt flouriſhing Condition, there have been 2500 Ships lying together in the River; that 400 have come up with one Tide; that it was uſual for 500 to go and come in a Day; that 200 Waggons arrived every Day with Paſſengers from the neighbouring Countries; and 1000 in a Week from Germany, the Hans Towns, Lorrain, and France; that 10000 Country Carts uſed to be employed per Week in carrying Goods to and again; and that there were 500 Coaches for the Uſe of the better Sort; but the Duke of Alva's Perſecution, the Revolt of the Dutch, and their blocking up the Scheld, has ſo ſunk their Trade, that their Port is without Ships, their Exchange without Merchants, and moſt of their Trade is removed to Amſterdam, and other Towns in Holland; yet the City retains much of its ancient Beauty, and there are ſtill many rich Families in it. It was formerly an Imperial and Hans Town, and the Princes of Naſſaw were its Burgraves. The Streets are ſtreight and large, and the Buildings magnificent: They are built after a peculiar way, half of Brick, and half of Timber, with Battlements at the top, and very high Roofs, which make a handſome Appearance. Mr. Ray ſays, it excels Florence in Beauty. The Walls are 110 Foot broad at top, planted with ſeveral Rows of Linden Trees, where the Citizens walk. The Baſtions are not very large, but the Ditch broad and deep, and on the whole, the Fortifications are more beautiful than ſtrong. The Citadel conſiſts of 5 Baſtions, is one of the beſt Fortifications in the Netherlands, commands the City, and adjacent Country, and has been a Model for moſt of the Citadels that have been ſince built in Europe. It was begun by the Duke of Alva, and coſt above a Million of Crowns. There is a good Space of empty Ground betwixt this and the City. It is above a Mile round, has large Store-houſes for Ammunition and Proviſion, and convenient Lodgings for above 3000 Soldiers. There was formerly a Statue of Braſs of the Duke of Alva in compleat Armour, in the middle of the Place of Arms, with many inſolent Figures about it, triumphing in his Cruelty and Perſecution; but it was ſoon deſtroyed by the People, who hated him, and never ceaſed Tumults till he was recalled. The moſt remarkable Structures are, 1. The Church dedicated to the Virgin, a very magnificent Fabric: It was made a Cathedral by Philip II. and had 7 Towns, and 144 Villages aſſigned for the Verge of its See, which is 50 Miles long, and 30 broad. It has 66 Chapels and Altars, ſo curiouſly built, and ſo ſumptuouſly adorned with Statues and Pictures, as raiſe Wonder in the Beholders; and its Steeple is ſo finely carved, that Charles V. uſed to ſay, that it ſhould be put in a Caſe, and only ſhewn on Holidays. One of the adjoining Towers, from the Foundation to the top of the Croſs, is above 440 Foot high; ſo that Ortelius prefers it to that of Strasburg. It has 620 Steps, and the Top is 30 Foot higher, covered with Copper Pans, on which they kindle Fires to give Notice of an Enemy's Approach. From hence there is a Proſpect of a great Part of the Netherlands, and Zeland. It has 33 Bells, one of 'em of a wonderful Bigneſs, and never rung but on extraordinary Occaſions. They chime pleaſantly every Hour. The Paintings of the Altars, which are adorned with exquiſite Workmanſhip of Marble, are moſt of 'em by Ruben. The Portico, with its Marble Statues, is inferior to none in Rome. It has a Dean, and 24 Canons, and an Order call'd the Confraternity of the Circumciſion, who pretend to have our Saviour's Foreſkin, and make an annual Proceſſion every Trinity Sunday on that account, which they call the Feſtival of the Præputium. Several other Fraternities have their peculiar Chapels here. 2. The Jeſuits Church, reckoned to be the moſt magnificent on this ſide the Alps, but lately deſtroyed by Lightning. The Front was a noble Piece of Architecture, with the Statue of Ignatius Loyola on the top, and an Inſcription importing that it was built by the City in 1561, to the Honour of Chriſt, the Virgin, and St. Ignatius. The Pillars that ſupported the Galleries, and the upper Row which ſuſtained the Roof, were of the fineſt Marble, and the Wainſcot of the Walls and Roofs were painted by Ruben, and other great Maſters. The chief Altar was lofty and noble, of the moſt beautiful Marble, with the Aſcenſion of the Virgin, painted by Ruben, and God the Father repreſented putting a Crown of Gold on her Head, with this Inſcription, Veni coronaberis; i. e. Come and be crowned. The Jeſuits had a very good Library here, and a Chapel peculiar to themſelves, where their Saints were drawn by their beſt Maſters, with their Names in Capitals, the Days of their reſpective Feſtivals, and this Inſcription under them, Sanctus colitur; i. e. The Saint is worſhipped. 3. The Church of St. James, a very noble Structure, finely adorned within. Here the famous Ruben, who painted the Banqueting-houſe at Whitehall, is buried, in a Chapel of his own founding, and among other of his Pieces, there is one here of the Laſt Judgment, valued at 500 l. Sterling. 4. The Church of the Predicant Friers is one of the largeſt in the City, and beautified with excellent Pictures.

5. The

5. The Abbey of St. Michael, is vaſtly rich, and has a noble Church, in which there is a Tomb of one of the Family of Stuart, and the Statues of the Twelve Apoſtles round the Nave. It is alſo adorned with fine Paintings of Ruben. The Abbot has noble Apartments, and 50 white Veſtments. 6. The Senate-houſe is a ſtately old Piece of Architecture, of curious ſpeckled Marble. 7. The Eaſterlings Houſe is a ſtately Fabric, 97 Foot long, and 65 broad. 8. The Exchange, a noble Structure, ſupported by 43 ſtrong Pillars of white Marble: It is 180 Foot long, 140 broad, and lies in the Center of four large Streets. Our Royal Exchange of London was built after its Model, but much exceeds the Original. 9. The Houſe of the Tapeſtry Merchants is 280 Foot long, of a proportionable Breadth, and has 26 Warehouſes for that Commodity. 10. Plantin's Printing-houſe, one of the nobleſt of its kind in the World: It is a ſquare College, with Lodgings for Officers and Workmen, chiefly employed in printing Divinity. They had formerly 100 different Funds of Letter, 2 of 'em Syriac, 10 Hebrew, 9 Greek, and 47 Roman. 11. Their Hoſpital for educating Foundlings, and another for maintaining twelve Perſons of Note, of decayed Fortunes, are very remarkable. 12. Their Glaſs-houſe and Water-houſe are extraordinary in their kind. The Water of the Scheld being brackiſh, and the Fountains of the City not ſufficient to furniſh their Brewhouſes, they dug a Canal of 30 Miles long, which empties itſelf into a great Ciſtern, from whence 'tis conveyed by Engines into a Baſin, and thence by Pipes to the Brewhouſes. This City has 13 Gates, 8 of which lie towards the River. They have 74 Bridges over the Canals, 200 Streets, and 22 Squares. Their Government is by Nine choſen out of the Nobility, Nine named by the Præfects or Maſters of the Streets, and Eighteen others choſe among the chief Perſons of Note. All their Names are ſent to the Prince, who appoints one half of 'em for a ſtanding Senate, who chuſe two Burgomaſters, one of whom repreſents the City at the meeting of the States, and the other adminiſters Juſtice, having a Power with the Senators to decide all Cauſes. They have alſo a Scout, who apprehends and executes Criminals, a Sollicitor, who pleads Civil Cauſes, two Treaſurers named by the People, and a Receiver, propoſed by the Nobility, to manage the Revenue according to Order of the Senate, who likewiſe appoint a Council of Twelve from among the twenty-eight Companies of Trade, to aſſiſt in the Government.

This City has undergone many Changes, and ſuffered much both by War and Fire. It joined in the Revolt againſt Spain, and was poſſeſs'd by the Confederate States in 1566. It was almoſt ſurprized by the Treachery of the Duke of Alenſon, Brother to Henry III. of France, when he was choſe Governour of the Netherlands, but his Deſign was defeated, and moſt of his French kill'd or taken, the Grief of which broke his Heart. It was afterwards beſieged by the Prince of Parma, Governour of the Netherlands for the King of Spain: It was one of the moſt remarkable Sieges that till then had been heard of in Europe; nor could he have ſucceeded, had it not been for a ſtupendious Bridge which he laid over the Scheld, to carry it on. The Citizens prepared Fire-works of an extraordinary nature, to deſtroy the Bridge: they were Boats with Mines in the middle, incloſed with Brick and Lime, fill'd with Stones and Bullets, and other Materials fit to do Execution: they let them looſe above the Bridge, with a Train ſo contrived as to blow it up: but the Spaniards opening a Paſſage, all of 'em went thro' but one, which ſtopping near the end of the Bridge, the Mine blew up, and deſtroyed about 500 Spaniards: the Shock was ſo dreadful, that it ſhook the Earth for ſeveral Miles, and threw the Water of the River a great way beyond its Banks. This Deſign miſcarrying, and the rich Merchants being willing to ſave their Effects, they perſwaded the Garriſon to ſurrender in 1585, when Popery and the Spaniſh Government was re-eſtabliſhed here. After this the Spaniſh Garriſon mutinied for want of Pay, burnt down 500 Houſes, ſack'd the Town, and murder'd 7000 of the Inhabitants. The French hired one to betray the Citadel in 1674, but he was diſcover'd and hang'd. They ſeized it after the Death of Charles II. of Spain, but abandoned it after the Battel of Ramellies in 1706. They attempted it again by Treachery in 1708, when Ghent and Bruges were betrayed to 'em, but were diſappointed.

2. Eckeren, a League and half North from Antwerp, noted for a ſharp Battel betwixt the French and Confederates in 1703, when both ſides pretended to the Victory.

3. Hochſtraten, 20 Miles North-Eaſt of Antwerp, a large open Town, with the Title of a County, and ſeveral Villages under its Juriſdiction.

4. Lire, or Lier, 10 Miles South-Eaſt of Antwerp, on the River Nethe, a neat and pleaſant Town, ſtrong by Situation and Art, inhabited by Perſons of Quality, and rich Merchants, who have left off Trade. It has a noble Market-place, encompaſſed with ſtately Buildings, is noted for Manufactures, and for a Fair of Cattel one Day each Week, from St. John's-Tide to Martinmas. Here is alſo a fine Grammar-School, a magnificent Collegiate Church, and ſeveral Religious Houſes, that of the Carthuſians being the chief.

5. Herental, 18 Miles South-Eaſt of Antwerp, a pleaſant Town, well fortified, noted for the Birth of the celebrated Phyſicians Peter of Herentals, and his two Sons Peter and Theodore, famed for their Skill in the ſecret and ſpecifick Vertues of Plants.

III. The Lordſhip of MALINES, is a Diſtrict of 6 Miles long, and 6 broad.

Malines or Mechlin, the Capital, lies on the Dyle, 15 Miles North-East of Bruſſels, in a healthful Air, is one of the oldeſt and moſt conſiderable Towns in the Netherlands, divided into two Iſlands, joined by a conſiderable number of Bridges, has many Channels, and winding Currents, ſome formed by Art, and others by Nature: the Tide flows a League above the City, which enlarges its Trade. The Town has good Walls, but the chief Strength lies in its Situation, and the Sluices, by which they can overflow the neighbouring Country. It is divided into ſeven Pariſhes, each of which has a magnificent Church: The chief is that of St. Rumbold, made an Archbiſhop's See in 1559, and Metropolitan of the Netherlands, in favour of Cardinal Granvil their firſt Archbiſhop. Among other Monuments, here is one with a French Inſcription, but the Date worn out, ſignifying, that it is the Tomb of Margaret Daughter of Henry Stuart, by her Royal Highneſs the Dutcheſs of Orleans, Daughter to George Stuart, of the illuſtrious Houſe of Stuart and Lenox in Scotland, by Dame Mary de Baqueville, of the Family of Baqueville in Normandy. Here are ſeveral ſtately Friaries and Nunneries, and there was formerly a noble Magazine, well ſtored for Sea and Land Service. The Nunnery of Alexis, on the Road to Antwerp, formerly contained 1500 Women, who lived by ſpinning and making Cloaths, and might marry when they pleaſed, but was deſtroyed during the Wars with Spain. The Palaces of the Emperor, Hoogſtraet, Naſſaw, Egmont and Aremberg, in this City are now much out of Repair. The Tradeſmen are divided into 17 Companies, the chief of whom are the Bakers, Fiſhmongers, Dyers, Tanners, Brewers, and Butchers, out of whom 6 Schepens are annually choſen, who with other 6 choſen from among the Nobility, are the Magiſtrates. The Tanners were once ſo conſiderable, that they had one Quarter of the Town, ſtill inhabit three entire Streets, and have the ſame Privileges of Hunting and Hawking as the Nobility. Here were formerly 3000 Weavers, but having taken Arms againſt the City, they have loſt moſt of their Privileges. The chief Manufactures are Lace and Poynt, ſo famous all over Europe, excellent Beer, tann'd Leather, Linnen and Woollen Cloth, and founding of Bells and Guns. This City and its Diſtrict, makes one of the Ten Provinces of the Auſtrian Netherlands. The States conſiſt of the Magiſtrates of the City, and other Repreſentatives of the Common People. Here is alſo a Great Council, conſiſting of the Prince or his Deputy as Preſident, 16 Senators, 2 Graphiaries, 8 Secretaries and ſome Aſſiſtants: Appeals are brought hither from ſuch of the Ten Provinces as remain to the Houſe of Auſtria: this Court finally determines all Cauſes, but ſometimes a Reviſſen is allowed; and hither alſo the Knights of the Golden Fleece are ſummoned upon Miſdemeanours.

IV. AUSTRIAN BRABANT, has Dutch Brabant on the North, the County of Namur and Hainault on the South, Flanders on the Weſt, and the Biſhoprick of Liege on the Eaſt: It is about 60 Miles from South to North, and 38 from Eaſt to Weſt, where broadeſt, and formerly was much larger. The Air is temperate, the Soil for moſt part fruitful, except in the North, where 'tis ſandy or covered with Broom or Heath; but the Inhabitants have an extraordinary way of improving their barren Ground, by planting it with Flax, by which one Acre is ſaid to yield more than four or five of the beſt Corn Ground in the Country. Bleau ſays, that on the Road betwixt Antwerp and Ghent the Flax Ground yielded from 40 to 50 l. an Acre per Annum. When their Flax was gathered in, they ſowed Turnips, which yielded as much per Acre as the beſt Corn Land. In April following they ſowed the ſame Ground with Oats and Rye, and upon the Oats, Clover-Graſs Seed, which after the Oats were mowed down, grew up and afforded rich Paſture till Chriſtmas. Next Year it produced three Crops, ſo that it exceeded the beſt Meadows in the Country, and continued good for four or five Years without renewing the Seed. What Turnips they did not ſell, they waſhed and boiled, beat them together with the Leaves, and gave them their Cattel, which fattened and made them give much Milk. They alſo made conſiderable Profit by the Oil preſs'd out of the Turnip-ſeed and Flax. The States of this Country conſiſt of the Abbots, the Nobility and Gentry, and the Deputies of Cities. The Brabanders had greater Privileges than thoſe of their Neighbours, of which Guicciardin gives the following Account: 1. That neither their Perſons nor Eſtates could be arreſted or ſequeſter'd at the firſt Inſtance in any part of the Empire. 2. Their Duke could give no Gifts to the Clergy, or confer any Inheritance upon them, without Conſent of the Quarter, and of the Capital City where the Gift lay. 3. He could puniſh no Man without being legally tried. 4. He could admit no Strangers into public Offices. 5. He could not aſſemble the States out of their own Country; for he then poſſeſs'd Lorrain, and ſome other Dominions, and whatever they enacted elſewhere, did not oblige the People. 6. If he invaded their Privileges, they might proteſt againſt him, and if they were not redreſs'd, renounce their Allegiance, and provide for their own Security the beſt they could.

Antwerp was formerly reckoned one of its Quarters, and thoſe that remain are the Quarters of Louvain and Bruſſels.

The chief Places in the Quarter of Bruſſels are,

1. Bruſſels, which is the Capital, and Seat of the Auſtrian Government. It lies on the Saine, Lat. 50. 51. Long. 4. 33. 14 Miles South-Weſt from Louvain, and 25 South from Antwerp. It lies in a rich Country, abounding with all Neceſſaries; ſo that at one time it entertained ſeven Crown'd Heads, beſides the Dukes of Savoy and Lorrain, with 9000 Horſe belonging to their Retinue. The Foreſt of Soignies, a quarter of a League to the South, furniſhes them with Fuel, and the Court with Game for Hunting. The Town is encompaſſed with many Abbies and Monaſteries, and the neighbouring Country abounds with all ſorts of Fruit, and is water'd with pleaſant Fountains and Streams. The River runs thro' the Town, from whence to the Rupel, there is a navigable Channel, dug thro' a Mountain, the levelling of which, and making the Canal, coſt Charles V. and Philip II. 500000 Crowns. It is 5 Leagues long, has many Streams brought into it from the Country, and 5 large Sluices for collecting the Water, and letting it out, as occaſion requires, for the Veſſels which trade to Antwerp, and other Places. The City is large, and well built, is the Seat of the Vice-roy of the Auſtrian Netherlands, and of the chief Courts of Juſtice. The Government and Inhabitants have been fond of the Number Seven, in many chief things belonging to this City; as, Seven public Fountains; Seven principal Streets, that center in the great Market; Seven ſtately Houſes there, let out by the Senate for the Uſe of the Corporations; Seven Pariſh Churches; Seven Noble Families, diſtinguiſhed by their Antiquity and great Privileges; Seven public Gates of the Doric Order, remarkable for leading to ſo many Places of Pleaſure, and public Exerciſe. The City is encompaſſed with a double high Wall, that had formerly 70 Towers, but many of them now ruined. The Walls are ſo broad, that the Citizens walk on them for Diverſion. The Town lies on the Front of a Hill. Dr. Northleigh ſays, it is larger than Briſtol. Their chief Church is that of St. Gudula: It has two Towers with 500 Steps each, and a Chapel where they keep three conſecrated Hoſts, from which they pretend Blood did iſſue, when ſtabb'd by ſome Jews, in Contempt of our Saviour, about 400 Years ago. They have an annual Proceſſion in remembrance of this, when the Hoſts are expoſed as if they were ſtill bleeding. This Church is of Gothic Structure, and has the the Tombs of the Dukes of Brabant. The Jesuits have a noble College, with pleasant Gardens, a good Library, the Pictures of the chief Writers of their Society, and several Roman Antiquities: They have also a stately Church, which seems to have been the Model to that of Antwerp. They are Seventy in Number, and teach the Languages, and Philosophy. The Franciscans, and other Orders, of both Sexes, have several Monasteries. Here is one of the Order of St. Austin, for penitent Harlots. There is one for English Nuns, and another for 800 Beguins, who may marry at pleasure. Here is an Hospital for the cure of Sick, and for entertaining poor Strangers three Days. Here is also one for Lunatics, and another for Foundlings. The Palace is an ancient Fabric, in the Park, adjoining to that built by Charles V. with a curious Grotesk, and Water-works. It has Accommodations for the greatest Prince in the World, but tho' magnificent for the Time, comes short of our modern Structures. It has two Galleries, one with the Pictures of Emperors, Kings, Queens, Princes, and other Great Persons, and among them, two curious Pieces, both representing Archduke Albert and Archdutchess Isabella, upon different Views. The adjoining Park is very pleasant, adorned with fine Water-works, Grotto's, an Aviary, noble Walks, and is well stored with Deer. Dr. Brown says, one of the Water-works imitates the Sound of all Musical Instruments, by a kind of perpetual Motion, and that there is an Eccho which gives 15 distinct Replies. The Town-house is an ancient and noble Fabric: Its Front much exceeds that of Amsterdam. The Tower has a Brass Statue of St. Michael, their Guardian Angel, 15 Foot high. In the Hall there is Variety of Pictures, by the best Masters. The Palaces of Egmont, Alva, Orange, and Bourneville, are noble Structures. The Royal Stable is also worth a Traveller's View, having room for 127 Horses, with their Provisions, &c. and over it there is a Magazine for Arms, among which are the Sword of Charles the Bold Duke of Burgundy, which is used in creating Knights of the Golden Fleece, with other Curiosities that we can't insist upon. They have a Custom here, and in other Towns of the Netherlands, to harness three or four Mastiffs side by side, and make them draw Coaches, and little Carrs, with Provisions and Goods. The City is full of People of Quality, who take a Tour in the Lower Town every Night in their Coaches, the Men and Women in different Coaches and Circles. They have an annual Custom on the 19th of January, for the Women to undress their Husbands and carry them to bed, and their Husbands treat their Friends next Day. They assign two Reasons for it; the first, that the City once being obliged to surrender, the Women, who were allowed only to carry out what they thought most valuable, march'd out with their Husbands on their Backs; the second, that the Citizens having escaped in a Battel, came home in a Body, and were met by their Wives out of Town, who carried them home in their Arms. The Houses of the Citizens are for most part stately, well furnished with Springs and Gardens; and they doat so extravagantly on Flowers, that sometimes a small Plat is sold for 7 or 8000 Florins. There is a Marble Pyramid upon the Place where the Palace of Cullemburg stood, which was razed by the Duke of Alva, because the Confederate Lords, who protested against his Tyranny, met here; and there is an Inscription upon it in four Languages, giving an Account of the Occasion. The chief Manufactures here are Tapestry and Lace. The Citizens are reckon'd very courteous, especially to Strangers. The Tradesmen are divided into 52 Companies, and united into 9 larger Bodies, call'd Nations. The Armourers were formerly the most considerable, and noted for making Armour of Proof. The Townsmen have been accounted mutinous against their Nobility and Gentry, of whom their chief Magistrates consist; and the Weavers having been very active in those Mutinies, there is a Law which makes it capital for any of 'em to stay a Night in the City. The Government is by two Consuls, one chose out of the Nobility, and the other from the Commonalty. They have seven Echevins, chose annually by the Prince out of the seven ancient and noble Families of the City, and six Common-Council-Men chose out of the chief Artificers. This City has suffered much formerly by Plague, the Sweating Sickness, and Fire. It was for some time possess'd by the Nobility who revolted from Spain, but was reduced to Extremity, and forced to surrender to the Duke of Parma in 1585. It was bombarded by the French in 1695; but the Houses then demolished are since rebuilt in greater Splendor. It narrowly escaped being surprized by the Elector of Bavaria in 1708. There are two Towns of Note which depend on this City.

1. Nivelle, near the Head of the River, 15 Miles South, was formerly considerable, and well fortified. It still enjoys great Privileges, and has a famous Nunnery of 42 Nuns, who must be of noble and legitimate Extraction by Father and Mother, for four Generations. They chuse their Abbess by consent of the Prince, and the Pope's Approbation; and she has both spiritual and temporal Jurisdiction. This Town is noted for making fine Linnen, equal to that of Cambray.

2. Vilvorden, 6 Miles North from Brussels, on the same River. It is strong by Nature and Art, and was noted for several Encampments near it in the late Wars. The Records of the Province were formerly kept in the Castle here. In this Place the famous Mr. William Tindal, the first that translated the New Testament into English, suffer'd Martyrdom, contrary to the Law of Nations, because a Subject of England.

The Quarter of Louvain contains,

1. Louvain, the Capital, Lat. 50. 50. Long. 4. 59. 10 Miles East of Brussels, on the Dyle, which divides it into two Parts. 'Tis 6 Miles within the Walls, which inclose many Hills, Fields, and Gardens, that make it delightful and commodious. Bleau says, it contains 11 Market-places, 12 principal Streets, 140 of less Note, 14 Mills, 16 Bridges, 4 public Fountains, has 53 Towers on the Walls, 11 Gates built with curious white Stone, and 16 Drawbridges. 'Tis encompassed with large deep Ditches, and strong Walls. 'Twas formerly more populous and had a greater Trade than now. It has the Precedency of all the Cities in Brabant, because of its Antiquity, and that it is the Place where the Prince and People do first take the Oaths to one another. It has the first Vote in the Provincial States, except in raising Money, when Antwerp is preferred because of its Wealth, and larger Share in the public Taxes. 'Tis chiefly remarkable for its University, founded about 926. Becanus says, in his time it exceeded all the Universities in Europe: and Golnitz says, in his time it exceeded all but that of Paris, for Number of Students, and Neatness of Building. It consists of 43 Colleges, 4 of which called Pædagogies, are for the Instruction of Youth: There are 2 Professors of Philosophy in each, who read two Hours per Day; the Students write after them; and, when matriculated, must swear they believe all the Articles of the Romish Church: The Professors of these four chuse annually out of them 48 Scholars of 2 Years standing, and after Examination, 12 of them are appointed for Exhibitions: The other Colleges are for those of riper Years. They confer the Degrees of Master, Batchelor, Licentiate, and Doctor. The University is governed by a Rector and Senate, which consists of Superior Graduates of the five Faculties, of Divinity, Canon-Law, Civil-Law, Physic, and Arts, and chuse their Rector every half Year: his Office is the highest Dignity, and the Magistrates of the City give place to him; he is attended in State, on solemn Occasions, and has a Power of apprehending and punishing Criminals by Fines or Death, as Occasion requires, but in the Senate, who share the Supreme Authority with him, he is only President. If a Citizen sue a Scholar, the Cause is brought before the Rector; but if a Scholar sue a Citizen, 'tis brought before the Conservator, who is generally a Bishop or Abbot skilled in the Laws. The Students of Divinity constantly wear Caps and Gowns, but the rest only at public Exercises. Dr. Brown says, notwithstanding all these Privileges, Oxford vies with it for Situation, and exceeds it in Buildings and Endowments. Mr. Ray says, the Gentlemen-Students have a peculiar Form called Scammum Nobilium: All of them pay Fines when absent from Lectures and Exercises. The 12 appointed to Exhibitions, as abovementioned, have their Lodgings, Dyet, and Salary, in what College they please, chuse what Profession they think meet, and out of them the Professors are usually chosen: None can be a Licentiate in Divinity till after 11 Years Study; and the Degree of Doctor is seldom given to any under 50 Years of Age, unless they be Persons of extraordinary Ability. 120 Students of Divinity are maintained at the public Charge, in the chief College for that Faculty; and in the 4 Pædagogies 200 are maintained in like manner. This University is well frequented, and has had 1600 Scholars at a time. The chief Church here is that of St. Peter, it has 18 Canons and a Provost, who was formerly a Person of Quality, administer'd the Oaths to the Prince at his Inauguration, swore him to be Patron of the University, and had his Horse for his Fee. The Jesuits have a College here. The Dominicans, Franciscans, and Carthusians, have each a Convent, and the latter is so remote from other Buildings, that they seem to live in a Desart within the Walls of this populous City. Most of the Churches and Hospitals are fine Structures. The Town-house is a large Fabric of curious Architecture: Among other Laws hung up here, there is one which condemns those who are guilty of a Rape, or assist in committing it, to have their Heads cut off with a Saw. The Castle stands on a high Hill, surrounded with Vineyards, and has so delightful a Prospect, that their Princes commonly chose it for a Place of Residence, and the Emperor Charles V. and his Sisters were bred here during their Minority. Here is an extraordinary Sluice, which keeps in the Water of the Dyle, and lets it out on occasion. This Town was seized by the French, during the last War, but quitted by them in 1706, after their Defeat at Ramilies. About half a League from this City lies the ancient Palace of the Dukes of Arschot, formerly reckoned one of the stateliest in Europe, but now ruinous; it has still a noble Avenue, Park and Gardens.

1. Tilmont, Tirlemont, or Tenen, about 7 Miles East from Louvain, on the River Giase, formerly a Place of great Extent and Commerce, and one of the chief Cities in the Province. 'Tis still a League in compass, and retains its ancient Privileges, but suffered much by the French in 1675.

3. Leewe, on the Geet, 12 Miles East from Louvain, a small, but very strong Town, with considerable Privileges. It is neat, has Sluices which can drown the neighbouring Country, is noted for excellent Beer, and for a great Monastery of Augustines, whose Prior is one of the twelve chief Nobles of the Province. It was taken by the French in 1678, but restored by the Treaty of Nimeguen. They seized it again during the late Wars, but it was retaken by the Confederates after forcing the French Lines in 1705.

4. Landen, on the same River, 5 Miles South from Leewe, a small and ancient Town, noted for a dear-bought Victory by the Duke of Luxemburg over the Confederates, commanded by King William of Great Britain in 1693, at Neerwind near this Place.

5. Hannuye, a pleasant City, Capital of its District, which is rich and fruitful, 6 Miles South from Landen.

6. Ramellies, at the Head of the Giase, 5 Miles West from Hannuye, and 7 South from Judoigne, famous for the great Victory obtained here over the French by the Duke of Marlborough in 1706.

7. Gemblours, 10 Miles South-West from Ramellies. It is a walled Town, on a steep Hill, had formerly the Title of a County, but the spiritual and temporal Jurisdiction of the Place has for some Ages been in the Abbot of St. Hubert, a Benedictin Monastery. The Town is encompassed with Precipices, and deep Valleys, except on the East, where it is over-topp'd by the highest Point of the Hill. Near this Town lie the Ruins of one of those Causways which begun in Hainault, and led to the principal Towns in Gaul. It has been a Work of prodigious Expence. Some ascribe it to the Romans, and others to one Brunhault, who was a potent King in these Parts. Here is a famous Library of Manuscripts, of which Erasmus made great Use. Some of them are ascribed to St. Sigebert, who writ his Chronicle here. Don John of Austria obtained a great Victory over the Revolted States near this Place in 1578. It was also noted for several Encampments in the Neighbourhood during the late Wars.

8. Seneff, about 4 Miles South-West from Nivelle, noted for a Battel betwixt the Prince of Orange, afterward our King William, and the Prince of Conde, in 1674, when the Victory was claimed on both sides, tho' the Prince of Orange had visibly the Advantage.

9. Diest, on the River Demer, 12 Miles North-East from Louvain, Capital of a considerable District that belong'd to the Princes of Orange. It is noted for Manufactures of Linnen and Woollen, and has the Title of a Barony. It is also noted for the Birth of Clenard, the famous Linguist, who wrote the Greek Grammar that bears his Name, was very well versed in Arabic, which he studied at Fez in Morocco, and died as he was about to write in that Language against the Mahometans.

10. Aerschot, 7 Miles North-West from Diest, a small walled Town, with the Title of a Dutchy, and a Territory belonging to it.

V. HAINAULT, or HENNEGOW County, has Part of Flanders and Brabant on the North, France on the South, Part of Flanders and Artois on the Weſt, and Part of Brabant, Namur County, and the Biſhoprick of Liege on the Eaſt. It is 50 Miles where longeſt, South and North, and 50 where broadeſt, Eaſt and Weſt. The Air is clear, and the Soil fruitful, being watered by the Scheld, Sambre, Dender, &c. It abounds with Corn, Paſture, and Fruits of all ſorts: Their Wheat is excellent, and they have many Lakes, Ponds, Springs, Mines of Iron, Lead, Marble, Touchſtone, and Coal. It contains 24 walled Towns, 950 pleaſant neat Villages, and 26 Monaſteries; is divided into the three Principalities of Ligne, Chimay, and Brabanzon, 10 or 16 Earldoms, and 22 Baronies, 12 of 'em being Seigneuries, belonging to thoſe call'd Peers, which is the firſt Eſtate; the ſecond is the Prelates and Eccleſiaſtical Colleges; the third, the Gentry; the fourth, the Great Officers, as Marſhal, Steward, Great Huntſman, &c. and the fifth is the Magiſtrates of the chief Cities. It was formerly governed by its own Princes, but is now divided betwixt the Houſe of Auſtria and France. That belonging to the Houſe of Auſtria is divided into the Counties of Mons and Brachbant, or Burbant.

Places of Note are,

1. Mons, or Bergen, Lat. 50. 32. Lon. 4. 8. 22 Miles South-Eaſt from Tournay, and 28 South-Weſt from Bruſſels. It is Capital of the Country, one of the beſt and ſtrongeſt Cities in the Netherlands, is named from its Situation, on a riſing Ground, near the Conflux of the Trull and Hain, is fortified by Nature as well as Art, and can overflow the neighbouring Country by its Sluices. FRANCE

FRANCE

HAS the Britiſh Channel, Flanders, Hainault, and Namur on the North, Luxemburg, Lorrain, the Rhine, Swiſſerland, and part of Italy on the Eaſt, the Atlantic on the Weſt, Spain and the Mediterranean on the South. It lies betwixt Lat. 42. 35. and Lat. 50. 45. in the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Climates; ſo that the ſhorteſt Day is about 15 Hours, and the longeſt 16 Hours 45 Minutes. The greateſt Extent from the Frontiers of Catalonia on the South, to Calais on the North, is 560 Miles; but the Breadth is not equal, being very much indented on the Eaſt and Weſt. The greateſt Breadth that way from the Bay of Bréſt to the Frontiers of Lorrain, is about 428 Miles.

It will be ſeen by our Maps how far the Sanſons, and other Geographers, did formerly extend the Coaſts of France too much.

Brietius, La Forreſt, Du Pleſſis, Du Fer, the Atlas Hiſtorique, the Sanſons, and other French Authors give the following Account of this Country in general.

The Air is very healthful, the Soil productive of all ſorts of Corn, and excellent Wine, Hemp, Flax, Saffron, the beſt Salt in the World, and Mines of Iron. Their chief Commerce is in Wine, Brandy, Oil of Olives, Cloths, Camlets, Silk, and Woollen Stuffs, and, in ſhort, have all Things neceſſary for Life; ſo that they can eaſily be without the Commodities of other Nations, tho' few can be without theirs.

As to the People in general, they have a free Air, are of an agreeable and pleaſant Humour, the moſt polite in Europe, are remarkable for their Civilities to Strangers, tho' not much lov'd by them, are good Soldiers, love Arts and Sciences, and bodily Exerciſe, in which they ſucceed to Perfection. At the ſame time theſe Authors own, that the French diſcover a Levity in their Words, Geſtures, and Apparel, and change the latter ſo often, that a Venetian being order'd to paint a Frenchman, he drew him naked, with a Bundle of Cloth, and a Pair of Sheers, and this Motto, Ut voles; i. e. Make me what Faſhion you pleaſe. Thuanus, their famous Hiſtorian, owns the Character given their Anceſtors to be in a great meaſure applicable to them, viz. That at firſt Onſet they are more than Men, and at laſt leſs than Women: But Europe has felt, by dear Experience, that they are not ſo ready to abandon their Conqueſts as their Anceſtors were, and that they are capable of rallying, and make good Retreats when worſted, as well as other Nations. The meaner People have naturally a great Reſpect for thoſe of Quality, and their Grandees are reſpected in the ſame manner, ſays Thuanus, by thoſe of inferior Degrees: but as the Temper of the Nation can't bear Contempt, the Great Men acquire more Authority by their Civility to Inferiors, than by their Power. The Nobility value themſelves ſo much on Points of Honour, that they will ſacrifice all to it, which many times ruins their Families, makes them deſpiſe Merchandiſe and Trade, or to match with thoſe that follow them. This makes them fond to obtain Offices, and Poſts of Honour, which are many times procured by Bribery, and occaſions the taking Bribes from others, and frequently the Advancement of Perſons of low Birth and Qualifications, if they have Money enough to purchaſe Poſts and Titles from Favourites. He taxes their Youth with being too free in their Reproaches, Inclinations to Amours, Licentiouſneſs, and Tumults. He charges the People in general with being too apt to quarrel for Triſles, eſpecially abroad; and ſays, that by their Law-Suits at Foreign Tribunals they bring an Odium upon the Nation, as being of a litigious Temper; and the ſame Humour has frequently occaſioned their taking ſides at home, for almoſt nothing, to the great Effuſion of Blood. Yet Barclay ſays, that thoſe Faults which are too common in their Youth, are more than made up by the Wiſdom and other good Qualities of thoſe of riper Years, and their being courteous to all Men, which has made France ſo long to be accounted the Theatre of good Breeding.

This Kingdom was very populous before the late Perſecution in the laſt Wars. Brietius ſays, that in Charles the Ninth's Time, the People were computed at 20 Millions; and that Paris alone was able to raiſe 200000 fighting Men. Cardinal Richlieu computed, that in his Time they were able to raiſe 600000 Foot, and 150000 Horſe, who in 15 Days time might be taught the Uſe of their Arms. peal, 17000 Arpents of Vineyards in full Property, and 10000 from which they have one third and one fourth, each Arpent containing 100 Perches, each Perch 22 Foot, and each Foot 12 Inches of Paris Measure. The whole of the Ecclesiastical Revenues he computes at 312 Millions of Livres.

The State of their Learning and Civil Government.

HERE are 17 Universities, viz. Paris, Tholouse, Bourdeaux, Poictiers, Orleans, Bourges, Angers, Caen, Montpellier, Cahors, Nants, Rheims, Valence, Aix, Perpignan, Doway, and Besançon, in which they teach Law, Physic, the Liberal Arts, and give Degrees; and the Sorbonne is their chief College for Divinity. They have likewise several Academies for improving polite Learning at Paris, Arles, Soissons, Ville Franche, Nismes, and Angers. The chief of those are, 1. The French Academy founded by Lewis XIII. to improve their Language. They have great Privileges, are 40 in number, meet in the Louvre, and every two Years on St. Lewis's Day, have Gold Medals presented to those who carry the Prize for Poetry and Eloquence. 2. The Academy of Sciences for improving Mathematicks and Natural Philosophy: It was founded in 1666, under the Direction of M. Colbert: It has two Presidents, and twenty Fellows, three for Astronomy, three for Mathematics, three for Geometry, three for Anatomy, three for Chymistry, and three for Botany, who have each 1500 Livres per Annum. The two others are Candidates for vacant Fellowships by the King's Order, and under them are twenty Eleves, or Proficients, and ten Honorary Academics. They have a noble Observatory for those who study Astronomy. This Academy meets twice a Week in an Apartment of the King's Library. 3. The Academy of Inscriptions of Medals. They meet twice a Week in the Louvre: It was founded in 1667, by M. Colbert. Their Business is to invent and explain Emblems, to make emphatical Inscriptions, to adorn the King's Buildings, contrive Medals, and transmit his Actions to Posterity. They consist of eight Honorary Fellows, two of which are the President, and Vice-President, ten Pensionaries, ten Candidates, and nine Proficients. 4. The Academy of Architecture, founded in 1671, by the Direction of M. Colbert: They consist of an Inspector and eight Members. 5. The Academy of Sculpture and Painting: It consists of a Chancellor, Director, Rectors, and many Members. It was much improved by M. Colbert, and meets in the King's Closet of Pictures, and in Apollo's Gallery in the Louvre, where they have every Day naked Men to draw by.

The CIVIL GOVERNMENT consists of Sovereign and Subaltern Jurisdictions: The latter are call'd by several Names, according to the Customs of the Provinces, viz. Bailiwics, Seneschausses, Provostships, Vigueries, Elections, &c. From those there lies an Appeal to the Presidial Courts, the chief Judges of which are call'd Presidents. From them there lies an Appeal to the Parliaments, or Sovereign Courts, which decide Causes finally. These Parliaments are held at Paris, Thoulouse, Roan, Grenoble, Bourdeaux, Dijon, Aix in Provence, Rennes, Pau, Metz, Besançon, Tournay, Perpignan, Brisac, Colmar, and Arras: They are composed of one President, seven other Presidents à mortier, so call'd from a Cap they wear, ten Ecclesiastical, and nineteen Lay Counsellors. This is call'd the Great Chamber of Parliament. There are five Chambers of Inquiry, which consist of two Presidents, and twenty eight Counsellors each. There is also a Criminal Court, which consists of four Presidents à mortier, and eighteen Counsellors; and a Civil Court, which consists of four Presidents, and twenty six Counsellors. These Parliaments were first constituted on pretence of doing Justice to the Subjects, but really to deprive the States General of the Kingdom of their Power by degrees, which Lewis XIV. fully effected in his Reign; nor has there been any such Assembly, that could properly be so call'd, since 1614. The King being thus become Absolute, the Government is managed by the following Councils: 1. That call'd the Grand Council, whose Jurisdiction extends over the whole Monarchy, and determines all Causes without Appeal. 2. The Council of War. 3. The Council of State. 4. The Privy-Council. 5. The Council of the Finances, or Exchequer. 6. The Council of Dispatches. 7. The Courts of Aids. 8. The Chambers of Accounts. 9. The Courts of the Generalities or Intendancies, established in certain great Towns; and under them are the Elections, which are Subaltern Courts depending on the Courts of Aids of the Provinces. These Courts of Intendancy are held at Paris, Orleans, Chalons, Amiens, Roan, Caen, Bourges, Tours, Poictiers, Rion, Bourdeaux, Thoulouse, Montpellier, Lyons, Aix, Grenoble, Dijon, Nantes, Limoge, Moulins, Soissons, Montauban, Alençon, Metz, Lisle, and Rochel; and each of them has so many Parishes subject to its Jurisdiction. We come now to

The GEOGRAPHY.

I. FRENCH FLANDERS, or NETHERLANDS, has the Sea on the North, Picardy on the West and South, and the Spanish Netherlands on the East. The greatest Extent South and North, is about 60 Miles, and East and West, taking in Artois, 'tis about 50.

Places of Note are,

1. Dunkirk, on the Coast, 10 Miles North-East from Gravelin, 20 North-East from Calais, 10 South-West from Furnes, 15 from Newport, and 20 from Ostend. It is an ancient Town, had its Name from a Church on the Downs, had Lords of its own of several Families, who possess'd the Town and Chatellany, which afterwards came to the House of Austria, who made it very strong. It was frequently an Occasion of War betwixt them and France, and was taken by the English and French in 1658, garrison'd by the former, but sold to Lewis XIV. by our Charles II. in 1662, and made so strong, that 'twas reckon'd impregnable either by Sea or Land. The French King laid out immense Sums on the Fortifications of the Town, built one of the most regular and strongest Citadels in Europe, and designed to make it a Harbour for his Navy, made a Basin capable of 150 Men of War, and was at a prodigious Expence in building Galleries and Forts a great way into the Sea, for Defence of the Harbour and Canal up to the Town; so that had not the Mouth of it been choak'd up by Sand, notwithstanding the Flood-gates and Sluices he form'd to clear it by Flashes of Water from the Country, he must soon have been Master of the British Channel. His Frigats and Privateers here were very troublesome to our Trade during the late Wars, when we attack'd it in vain; but he was obliged by the Treaty of Utrecht to put it into the Hands of the English, and demolish the Citadel and Harbour; wherein he proceeded very slowly, till King George came to the Crown, and insisted upon his doing it. The Town is about the Size of Oxford, the Streets large, and regular, and the Houses neat. Here is a large handsome Church, with a lofty Steeple, a noble Altar, and fine Paintings. Here are two English Nunneries, and several other Monasteries in the Town. It grew very rich by Privateering, and being the Port of Lisle; but is never like to recover its ancient Lustre.

2. Mardike, 2 Miles South-West from Dunkirk, on the Bank of the Sea, noted for sustaining several remarkable Sieges. It was taken by the English and French in 1658, and quitted to the latter by the Treaty of the Pyrenees. Lewis XIV. had very far advanced a Harbour and Canal here, which had a Communication with Dunkirk, and would have been more capable of large Ships, and by consequence more dangerous to the Safety and Trade of Great Britain than that of Dunkirk ever was; but since King George's Accession to the British Throne, the French have been obliged to demolish their Works, and desist from that Enterprize.

3. Gravelin, on the Coast, 10 Miles South-West from Dunkirk, in a Plain cut with several Canals, which, with the Fortifications, make it inaccessible by Land: It is also strongly fortified towards the Sea. The Town is small, and ill built, and was quitted to the French by the Pyrenean Treaty.

4. Bourbourg, 3 Miles South-East of Gravelin, an ancient Town, Capital of its Chatellany, one of the most fruitful in Flanders, is noted for its free Fairs, and was quitted to the French by the Pyrenean Treaty.

5. Cassel, or Mount Cassel, 12 Miles South-East of Dunkirk, Capital of its Chatellany, which contains 500 Villages, is noted for several Victories in the Neighbourhood, one by the Flemings over Philip the Fair of France, another by Philip de Valois over them in 1328, and for a third by the late Duke of Orleans over the Prince of Orange in 1677.

6. Armentiers, 12 Miles South-East of Cassel, noted for its Trade in Cloth, and Strength: It was frequently taken and retaken by the Spanish and French, and quitted to the latter by Treaty in 1668.

7. Lisle, or Ryssel, about 12 Miles West from Tournay on the Deule, has its Name from its Situation among Marshes, that made it an Island, but are now drain'd. It has been often taken and retaken by the French and Spaniards, is Capital of a Chatellany, and of French Flanders. Lewis XIV. of France took it in 1667, enlarged it with a Suburb, made it one of the strongest Places in Europe, and order'd the following Inscription to be put upon the New Citadel he built here in 1673, Gentes laudabunt te, & Reges terræ gloriam tuam; i. e. The Nations shall praise thee, and the Kings of the Earth thy Glory. And, In Sole posui tabernaculum meum; i. e. I have placed my Tent in the Sun. The Town is large, populous, and well built, especially the new Streets. It has a spacious Market-place, a handsome Town-house, and several stately Churches. It was the Staple of Commerce betwixt France and the Netherlands; and many of the Inhabitants were concern'd in the Shipping at Dunkirk. They had a considerable Trade in Linnen, Camblets, Silks, &c. There is a Canal betwixt the Town and the Lys, and a Causey 20 Miles thro' the Marshes, betwixt this Town and Ypres. The Invention of Painting in Oil, and making Says, and other Worsted Stuffs, is ascribed to this City. The Town and Citadel were taken by the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene in 1708, but left to the French by the Treaty of Utrecht, together with Orchies and La Basse in the Neighbourhood, the latter a strong Place, and the former Capital of its Chatellany, noted for Woollen Stuffs.

II. ARTOIS Province, has the Sea on the North, Picardy on the West, French Flanders, and the Diocese of Cambray on the East. It has several times been a Subject of War betwixt France and the House of Austria. The former seiz'd it in 1640, and had it confirm'd by the Pyrenean Treaty. The Air is mild and temperate, the Soil fruitful, and produces excellent Wheat. It had formerly 12 walled Towns, 854 Villages, and was divided into 9 Chatellanies.

Places of Note are,

1. Arras, the Capital, on the Scarp, 14 Miles West of Lisle. It is large, divided into two Towns, formerly separated by a Wall. It is very well fortified, and the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Cambray. There is a good Library in the Cathedral, well stored with Manuscripts of Divinity; and they have several Reliques, particularly a Wax Taper, and a Pot of Manna, both which they pretend came down from Heaven. The House of Austria fortified the Town so well, that they put an Inscription over one of the Gates, importing, that the French should never take it till the Mice devoured the Rats. The Streets are broad, the Market spacious, the Churches stately, the Houses well built, with large deep Cellars, for Security of the Inhabitants during a Siege. It is noted for making Says, and that sort of Tapestry, from hence call'd Arras.

2. Lens, about 8 Miles North-East from Arras, on the Road to Lisle. It has a large Jurisdiction, but has suffer'd much by the Wars, being several times taken and retaken by the French and Spaniards, and is noted for a Victory obtained over the Spaniards in the Neighbourhood by the Prince of Conde in 1648.

3. Doway, on the Scarp, 9 Miles North-East from Arras, a large, strong, and rich Town, noted for a Seminary of English Papists, founded by Philip II. of Spain in 1569, from whence, about 20 Years after, they were forced to remove, and went to Rheims in France, where they publish'd that Translation of the Bible, known by the Name of the Rheimish Version: But another English Seminary has been settled here since. The Town was taken, after a short Resistance, by the French King in 1667, who fortified it, and caused a Fort to be built about a Cannon-shot below, on the Scarp, with Sluices, by which they can drown the adjacent Country. Here is an annual Fair in September, where are sold great Quantities of Worsted Camblets. The Town was taken by the Duke of Marlborough in the Close of the last War, but retaken by the French in 1712.

4. Bethune, 11 Miles North of Arras, a well fortified Town, noted for its Fairs, and great Quantities of excellent Cheese. The French took it in 1645, and had it confirm'd by the Treaty of the Pyrenees. The Allies took it in the last War, but it was restored to the French by the Treaty of Utrecht.

5. Aire, or Arien, 13 Miles North-West from Bethune. It ſtands in a Moraſs, which makes it almoſt inacceſſible, and is alſo ſtrongly fortified after the modern way. It has been ſeveral times taken and retaken by the Spaniards and French; the latter took it in 1676, and had it confirm'd by the Treaty of Nimeguen, as 'twas again by that of Utrecht, the Allies having taken it during the laſt War.

6. St. Omers, on the River Aa, 7 Miles North-West of Aire, an ancient Town, which had its Riſe and Name from Audomar, who built the Monaſtery here in 660. The Reputation of his Sanctity drew many People hither; ſo that in time it was made one of the moſt important and ſtrongeſt Places in Flanders. It is the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Cambray, well fortified by Nature and Art, has a Canal to Gravelin, which makes it a Place of Trade, has ſeveral Abbeys, and a Seminary for Engliſh Jeſuits. There is a Lake with floating Iſlands in the Neighbourhood, that afford Paſturage for Cattel, and Shelter for Fiſh. It was taken by the French in 1677, and left to 'em by the Treaty of Nimeguen.

III. The Archbiſhoprick of CAMBRAY, lies East from Artois, is 25 Miles East and West, where longeſt, 12 where broadeſt, and in ſome Places not above 4. It was long a Bone of Contention betwixt the neighbouring Princes, but was ſeiz'd by the French in 1677, who have ſince kept it. It abounds with Corn, and other Fruits, but has few Vines.

Places of Note are,

1. Cambray. It lies about 20 Miles South-East from Arras, is large, neat, well built, and reckon'd one of the ſtrongeſt Towns in Europe, being defended by two Citadels, and other regular Fortifications. Moſt of the Streets center in the great Market-place, where there is a Town-houſe, with a famous Clock. It lies conveniently on the Scheld, and has Sluices, by which they can drown the adjacent Country. It was formerly an Imperial Town, and the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Rheims, but made an Archbiſhoprick in 1559. It has 9 Pariſhes, 3 Abbeys, many other Religious Houſes, Hoſpitals, and other public Buildings. The Chapter conſiſts of 48 Canons, and 95 other Eccleſiaſtics. The Cathedral is a fine Structure, with many Statues and Tombs of Saints in curious Marble: The Choir and Nave of the Church are ſeparated by Rails of Braſs of curious Workmanſhip, and they have a Clock which repreſents our Saviour's Paſſion when it ſtrikes. Dr. Northleigh ſays, he met a Frenchman here, who, after 15 Years Labour, had made an artificial Head, that by Springs and Clock-work utter'd whole Dialogues diſtinctly with a human Voice, laugh'd, and expreſs'd ſome other Affections, but at laſt was ſtole from him. This Town is noted for a fine Manufacture of Linnen, from hence call'd Cambric. The Archbiſhop has both temporal and ſpiritual Juriſdiction, is call'd Duke of Cambray, and Earl of Cambreſis. It was taken by the French in 1677, and left to them by the Treaty of Nimeguen.

2. Chateau Cambreſis, 11 Miles South-East, formerly a Town of Note, but ruined by the Wars. It is famous for a Treaty in 1559, betwixt France and Spain, by which the French yielded up 198 conſiderable Places for St. Quintin, Ham, and Chatelet, then in Poſſeſſion of the Spaniards.

IV. PICARDY, has the Sea on the North and West, Artois on the East, Normandy on the West, the Iſle of France on the South, Cambray and Hainault on the North, and Part of Champaign on the East. The greateſt Extent South and North is 86 Miles; but the North Part is only a narrow Slip betwixt Artois and the Sea, about 10 Miles broad. The greateſt Extent East and West is 94. It is fruitful in Corn and Paſturage, but produces no Wine, which is aſcribed to the Neglect of the Inhabitants. It is for moſt part plain, has many pleaſant Woods, that afford Plenty of Game, and is well ſupplied with Fiſh by the Sea and Rivers. It is populous, abounds with Forts, Caſtles, and fortified Towns, and is one of the richeſt Provinces of France. The Inhabitants are inferior to none for Courage, are free, civil, and courteous, but choleric. Here are many noble ancient Families. We can't inſiſt on its Subdiviſions, but ſhall deſcribe the chief Places as they lie in the Map.

1 Calais, on the Coaſt, 10 Miles South-West from Gravelin, and 22 South-East from Dover. It is an Old Town, Capital of its Diſtrict, call'd the Reconquer'd Country, becauſe recovered from the Engliſh. It was ſurrender'd to our Edward III. after a long Siege, in 1347, at Diſcretion, when ſix of the chief Citizens were obliged to bring him the Keys, bare-headed and bare-footed, with Ropes about their Necks, but he did 'em no hurt. He peopled and garriſon'd the Town, which continued in Poſſeſſion of the Engliſh till 1558, that the French retook it, which broke Queen Mary's Heart. The Spaniards took it in 1596, but reſtored it to France by the Treaty of Vervins. It is one of the Keys of France, of difficult Acceſs by Land, becauſe of Moraſſes, thro' which there is a Cauſey. It is ſtrongly fortified, has a good Citadel, and a Fort which defends the Harbour. Lewis XIV. began a Mole to make it capable of great Ships, but deſiſted. Our Packet-Boats from Dover land here. The Town is ſmall, but pretty well built and peopled. The Great Church has a ſtately Dome. The other remarkable Structures are, the Town-houſe, the Bailiffs Palace, the Watch-Tower, and ſome Churches. It has Sluices, by which they can drown the neighbouring Country.

2. Guiſnes, in a Moraſs, 4 Miles South from Calais, a fortified Town, with the Title of a County: It was alſo poſſeſs'd by the Engliſh, and afterwards by the Duke of Burgundy, but ſeiz'd by Lewis XI.

3. Ardres, another ſmall fortified Town, with the Title of a Principality. It lies in a Moraſs, 4 Miles South-East from Guiſnes, and is famous for an Interview in 1530, betwixt our Henry VIII. and Francis I. to ratify a Treaty in a neighbouring Field, where the two Courts appeared ſo ſumptuous, that it is ſtill call'd the Field of Gold.

4. Boulogne, on the Coaſt, at the Mouth of the Liane, 14 Miles South-West of Calais. It is very ancient, and ſuppoſed to be Cæſar's Iccius Portus. It was formerly the common Landing Place from England, till the Harbour was ſpoil'd. It is Capital of its County, which is 14 Leagues North and South, and 7 East and West. It is divided into Upper and Lower, the former is well fortified, defended by a ſtrong Citadel, has ſeveral Squares and Fountains, and a Court for Juſtice. The Cathedral is a conſiderable Structure, where the French Kings, upon their Acceſſion to the Crown, preſent the Virgin with a Golden Heart weighing 2000 Crowns. The Biſhop is Suffragan of Rheims. Here are two Pariſh Churches, an Abbey, and ſome other Monaſteries. The Lower Town is not ſo much inhabited by Gentry, but lying along the Harbour, has more Trade. Our Henry VIII. took this Town in 1544; but quitted it by Treaty in 1546, on Condition of having 80000 Crowns in 8 Years.

5. Ambleteuſe, a Village with a good Port, 7 Miles North of Boulogne, where our James II. landed when he abdicated in 1688.

6. Monthulin, a Fortreſs with a good Citadel, 9 Miles East of Boulogne.

8. Monſtreuil, 16 Miles South of Boulogne, on a River which brings up large Boats from the Sea. It is divided into Upper and Lower, is well fortified, defended by a Citadel, and has two Benedictine Abbeys, one of Monks, the other of Nuns.

9. Crecy, a Village 15 Miles South of Monſtreuil, famous for a great Victory by our Edward III. over Philip de Valois of France, in 1346, when he loſt 30000 Foot, and 1200 Horſe, with 80 Colours, and the Flower of his Nobility, among whom were John of Luxemburg, King of Bohemia, the Count of Alençon, one of the French King's Brothers, the Dauphin of Viennois, the Duke of Lorrain, and the Counts of Flanders, Harcourt, and Sançerre. La Forreſt ſays, this was the firſt time Cannons were ſeen in France, of which the Engliſh having 6 Pieces, it contributed much to the Victory.

10. Abbeville, Capital of the County of Ponthieu, lies 19 Miles South from Monſtreuil, is very ſtrong by Situation, and call'd the Maiden Town, becauſe never taken by an Enemy. It is large, has 13 great Pariſhes, ſeveral Monaſteries, and a College of Canons. It is the Seat of a Bailiwic, and of a Preſidial Court. Veſſels come up to it from the Sea, and it has a conſiderable Trade in Linnen, Cloth, Wool, and Corn. It has produced many great Men, and among others, Brietius, the two Sanſons, and Du Val, all learned Geographers.

11. Amiens, 20 Miles South-East of Abbeville, an ancient, large, pleaſant, and well fortified Town, the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Rheims, the Houſes beautiful, the Streets large, and there are 2 Squares, where 7 fair Streets center: The Cathedral is one of the fineſt and largeſt in France. The River Somme enters the Town by 3 Channels under 3 Bridges, and they unite at the other End of the Town, near St. Michael's Bridge. Here is a Preſidial Court, &c. and its Juriſdiction extends 10 Leagues East and West, and 20 North and South. The chief Trade here is in Stuffs.

The chief Places under its Juriſdiction are,

1. Pecquigny, 10 Miles North, noted for the Murder of William Longſword, Duke of Normandy, in 941, and for a Defeat given to the Engliſh.

2. Dourlens, 18 Miles North from Amiens, an ancient well fortified Town, divided into Upper and Lower.

12. Peronne, 22 Miles North-East of Amiens, Capital of the Diſtrict of Santerre, lies on the Somme, is encompaſſed with Moraſſes, and one of the ſtrongeſt Towns on the Frontiers. It is noted for holding out ſeveral Sieges, and for the Death of Charles the Simple, kept Priſoner here 6 Years by Rudolph Duke of Burgundy, who aſſumed the Crown; and alſo for the Impriſonment of Lewis XI. by Charles the Hardy of Burgundy, who was perſwaded by Commines to ſet him at Liberty.

Other Towns under its Juriſdiction are,

1. Albert Encre, or Ancre, 14 Miles South-West, which gave Title of Marquis to Conchini, an Italian, Favourite to Mary de Medicis, and chief Miniſter during Lewis the XIIIth's Minority: He became ſo inſolent, that the Princes of the Blood kill'd him in the Louvre with the King's Conſent in 1617.

2. Neſle, 12 Miles South-West of Peronne: Charles the Hardy, Duke of Burgundy, took it by Storm in 1472, hang'd ſome of the Inhabitants, cut off the Hands of others, and put all the reſt to the Sword, tho' they fled to the Altars for Refuge, becauſe they kill'd one of his Heralds when ſent to ſummon them, and cut off 2 of his Men during a Truce.

3. Mondidier, on the Road to Paris, 12 Miles South-West of Neſle, and by ſome made the Capital of Santerre: It is a ſtrong Town, and noted for holding out ſeveral Sieges againſt the Spaniards.

4. Moreville, 10 Miles North of St. Didier, another ſtrong Town, that frequently repulſed the Spaniards.

13. St. Quintin, Capital of Upper Picardy, 16 Miles South-East of Cambray, noted for the brave Defence Admiral Coligny made here, with a ſmall Garriſon, againſt a ſtrong Army of Spaniards in 1557, tho' it was but ill fortified; and for the Defeat of the Great Conſtable Montmorency, who came to relieve it, when 5000 Men were kill'd on the Spot, he himſelf taken, with 2 Dukes, 1 Mareſchal, 10 Knights, 300 Gentlemen, and 5000 Soldiers: This Victory being on the 10th of Auguſt, St. Lawrence's Day, Philip II. of Spain dedicated his Palace of the Eſcurial to that Saint. The Town was reſtored to France 2 Years after by Treaty.

There are ſeveral Towns under its Juriſdiction, but none of Note except Ham on the Somme, 14 Miles South-West from St. Quintin. It is very ſtrong by Nature and Art, was garriſon'd by the Spaniards and Leaguers in 1595, but taken by Henry the IVth's Generals, and all the Garriſon put to the Sword.

14. La Fere, 14 Miles South-East from Ham, Capital of the Diſtrict of Tirache, on the River Oyſe, is very ſtrong by Art and Nature, and was taken from the Leaguers by Henry IV. in 1597.

2. La Capelle, 14 Miles North-East from Guiſe, a very ſtrong Place, that has been ſeveral times taken and retaken by the Spaniards and French.

3. Vervins,

3. Vervins, 10 Miles South-East from Guise, noted for a Treaty of Peace betwixt Henry IV. of France, and Philip II. of Spain in 1598.

V. The Government of the Isle of France. It has Picardy on the North, Orleanois on the South and West, Normandy on the West, and Champaigne on the East. It is so indented by these Provinces, as makes it very unequal in Breadth and Length. The greatest Extent from South to North is about 88 Miles, and from East to West 90. The Name comes from its being almost encompassed by Rivers. It is the least Government in France, but most considerable, because the Seat of the Government. The Air is mild and temperate, and the Soil abounds with Corn, Wine, and Fruits. The Capital of this and the whole Kingdom is

Paris, Lat. 48. 46. Long. 25. 127 Miles South from Calais. It is very ancient, and mentioned by Cæsar under the Name of Lutetia, which some derive from the Latin Word Lutum, because of the marshy Soil. Cambden says, the Name in the Old Gaulic or British Language, signifies a fair Tower. It was at first a small Town upon the Island in the River Sein, but the Conveniency of its Situation soon made it increase, and become the Seat of the Government. Julius Cæsar made it his Seat, and built a Palace and Baths here; and Gratian, the Son of Valentinian, made it the Place of his Abode. Clouis, their first Christian King, removed the Seat of the Government hither from Tours, since which it has always been reckon'd the Metropolis, and the Place of Councils, Synods, Meetings of the States, and the Seat of the Sovereign Courts, &c. It was made a Bishop's See early after the Conversion of France, and an Archbishoprick in 1622. It was first wall'd by Philip Augustus. It is divided into the Town, University, and City. The Town contains the Suburbs of St. Anthony, the Temples, St. Martin and St. Dennis, encompassed with the Sein on one side, and Walls on the other. The City lies on the Island in the Sein, and is join'd to the other Parts by Bridges. The University lies on the South side the River, on a rising Ground, and contains the Colleges for promoting Learning, and the Suburbs of St. Germains, St. Michael, St. James, St. Marcel, and St. Victoire. The Suburb of St. Germain has the best Palaces and Colleges. The City is divided into 16 Quarters, or Wards. The Palace of the Louvre stands in the Town, is reckon'd one of the stateliest in Europe, and was for most part built by Lewis XIV. He also built the Palace of the Thuilleries: That call'd the Palace Royal was built by Cardinal Richlieu. Dr. Northleigh says, that were the Louvre finish'd according to the first Design, it would certainly exceed all the Structures in the World; but there are only two sides compleated. Philip Augustus laid the Foundation, Francis I. raised a great part of the Fabric, and 'tis supposed Lewis XIV. did not finish it, because this City took Part with the Leaguers against him during his Minority. Dr. Northleigh says, that one third of the Charge employed at Versailles, would have made it as magnificent a Structure as ever the World saw. On the Porches there are several lofty Distichs in Commendation of the Palace, and flattering Lewis XIV. of which the three following are the most remarkable:

Non Orbis Gentem, non Urbem Gens habet ullam, Urbsve Domum, Dominum, nec Domus ulla parem.
Rex, Regnum, atque Domus, tria sunt Miracula Mundi;
Rex Animo, Regnum Viribus, Arte Domus.
Louvre Domus, Dominus Ludovicus, Regia Rege
Digna suo, Cœlo est hæc minor ille Deo.

The Fronts of the Palace are finely adorn'd with Pillars and Carv'd Work. The inner Front is of the Corinthian Order, with a noble Cornish, and fine Carvings. The Gallery built by Henry IV. along the River, is reckon'd the finest in Europe. Under it is the King's Printing-House, and the Apartments of his Painters, Carvers, Gravers, &c. The West Part has a large Pavilion, in Form of a Dome, over the Gate, supported by two Ranks of large Columns, of the Doric Order; and the Architecture of the Front of the Court has fine Sculptures. The East Front, erected by Lewis XIV. has the chief Gate, and a Terras supported by 40 Columns of the Corinthian Order detaché. The best Antiquities and Paintings were carried from hence to Versailles.

The Thuilleries is a Part of the Louvre; the Front towards the Garden is a long beautiful Fabric, has a Pavilion at each end, and a Dome in the middle. It has three Courts before it, and the Gardens behind it are scarce inferior to those of Versailles; and here is an exceeding noble Theatre. That call'd the Royal Palace consists of two fair Courts, with a noble Garden behind, and a Theatre built by Cardinal Richlieu. The other remarkable Structures are, 1. The Town-house, founded by Francis I. and finish'd by Henry IV. It has a noble Way leading to it, a handsome Gothic Front, a Spire over the Gate, Pavilions at each end, a spacious Hall, and other Apartments within. 2. The Bastille, not unlike the Tower of London, is surrounded with a plain Wall, and 8 antique Turrets: It was built at first for Defence of the City, but now made use of as a Magazine and Prison for Criminals of State. There are two smaller Castles built for the same end, where the Provost and others keep their Courts. 3. The Arsenal stands near the Bastille, consists of three large Courts, with a Garden behind, and the Portal is supported by Cannon instead of Pillars, with this Inscription:

Ætna hæc Henrico Vulcania tela ministrat
Tela Gigantæos debellatura furores.

Alluding to the great Design that Henry IV. who built it, had in View when he was murdered.

4. The University founded by Charles the Great, to whose Memory they keep an Anniversary. It has 24 Colleges, but not above 8 or 9 at present where public Exercises are perform'd. It was formerly exempted from the Civil and Criminal Jurisdiction of Paris, but that Privilege is not much regarded now. The chief Studies here are Divinity, Physic, Law, and the Liberal Arts, for each of which they chuse a Professor 4 times a Year. The Sorbonne is most considerable for Divinity, had the Name from its Founder in the Reign of St. Louis. 'Twas repair'd and made very Magnificent by Cardinal Richlieu. The Professors and Students have Apartments round the Great Square, and a handsome Library, much enlarg'd by that Cardinal, especially with Manuscripts distinguish'd by his Arms. Among other Curiosities they have 2 large Manuscript Volumes of a French Translation of Livy, in the Reign of King Charles V. embellish'd with Paintings in Miniature on Vellum, an Art that has been lost above 200 Years. The College of Navarre is next in Rank, was founded for Noblemens Sons, but now all Sorts are admitted. They have 4 Divinity Professors, and the Bishop of Paris is President. The College of Du Plessis is a Nursery for the Sorbonne. The College of the 4 Nations has a double Court, and a good Library given by Cardinal Mazarine their Founder, which is free for every Body at certain Hours of the Day. Here they Study Canon, and Civil Law, and School Divinity, and there is a Faculty of Arts for the same 4 Nations, of a different Foundation from the College. They have peculiar Houses alotted them, and each of them chuses a President annually for their own Nation. The College-Royal for Law, Physic, Mathematics, and the Oriental Languages, was founded by Francis I. independent of the University, and the Professors have their Salaries from the King. 5. The Royal Physic-Garden, maintain'd at the King's Charge, where there are Lectures of Botany during the Season. Here's a good Anatomy-School, well furnish'd with Skeletons of Animals. Every Body is admitted to see the Operations in the King's Laboratory, and the Medicines made here are given to the Poor. 6. The Hospital-General lies near it, is a vast Pile, contains near 6000 Poor employ'd in several sorts of Works, and when Sick are well look'd after. 7. The Hotel-Dieu, or chief Hospital for the Sick in Paris, is very large, but neither handsome nor convenient, the Houses being too close about it, for the numerous Patients there being seldom fewer than 4000. The Nuns of St. Augustin are obliged to look after them, and are frequently carry'd off by their Male Patients. 8. The Hospital of Charity, where the Friers of St. John attend the Patients. It is large, and each Room has 3 Rows of Beds. 9. That call'd the Incurable, because none are admitted there, till they be thought past Cure. 10. The Hotel Royal des Invalides, or the Royal Hospital for maim'd, aged, and disabled Soldiers, founded and built by Lewis XIV. It consists of 5 Squares, viz. a large one in the middle, and flank'd with 2 others on each side, with Piazzas and Galleries round them all. The whole Fabric being of hewn Stone, makes a very noble Appearance. In the Refectory, where the Soldiers eat, most of the late Sieges are painted on the Walls: The Apothecary's Shop belonging to it, is well contriv'd and furnish'd: The Soldiers are attended by the Sisters of St. Lazarus. 11. The Gobelins, in the Suburb of St. Marcel, formerly noted for making and dying the best Scarlet-Cloth, is now us'd for the King's Workmen, employ'd in making the finest Tapestry, Plate, Mosaic, Iron, Copper, Brass Works, Statues, Sculptures, Embroideries, &c. of which the King reaps the Profit. 12. The Palais, formerly the Residence of their Kings, but now appropriated for the Parliament of Paris: The great Hall is very spacious, arch'd with Stone, supported by Pillars; and the Courts of Justice are kept in the neighbouring Apartments. The Parliament opens always on St. Martin's Day, when the Members attend in the Great Hall in their Scarlet-Robes. In St. Louis's Chappel here, they pretend to several Reliques, as the entire Purple-Robe, with which our Saviour was cloath'd, tho' they pretend to shew a Piece of it at Rome with great Assurance. 13. The Observatory for Astronomical Observations: 'Tis a vaulted Fabric 3 Stories high, without either Wood or Iron-Work; underneath there's a Cave, which one descends by 200 Steps into little Alleys, from whence there is a Prospect through the very Top of the House to the Sky, in order to observe the Stars by Day; but this Contrivance falling short of Expectation, they imputed it to the not passing of any Stars through the Zenith of Paris. 14. The Pont-Royal, a strong, plain Stone-Bridge, built by Lewis XIV. a-cross the River to the Thuilleries. A Bag of Medals is lodg'd in the Masonry of it, to perpetuate his Memory, inclos'd in a Cedar-Box, with arrogant Motto's: One of 'em is, Justit quiescere; i. e. He commanded Peace. Another represents Jupiter, with this Motto, Vibrata in superbos fulmina; i. e. He darts his Thunderbolts against the Proud. 15. Pont Nostre Dame, or our Lady's Bridge, upon which are Houses like that of London, but not near so large. 16. Pont neuf, or the New Bridge, a curious Fabric finish' by Henry IV. whose Statue on Horseback stands upon it, much exceeding the natural Size: The Workmanship is excellent, with Inscriptions of his Memorable Actions, and several of his Battles in Basso Relievo on the Pedestal. 17. A noble Monument of Lewis XIV. erected in the Square of Victory while he liv'd, reckon'd the best Piece of Statuary in Europe; and according to the French, exceeds any that were ever erected by the Greeks or Romans for their Emperors. The King's Statue is of Massy Brass, 13 Foot high in his Robes, with a Victory behind him of the same Bulk and Metal, putting a Crown on his Head, pois'd with his Foot on a Globe, and underneath a three-headed Cerberus, to represent Lewis XIV. his triumphing over the Triple League, and this Inscription, Viro Immortali: To the Immortal Man. It was cast all at once, and weighs above 30000 Weight. The Pedestal is 22 Foot high, which with a massy Piece of Mould the Statue stands on, makes the whole near 40 Foot high. On the Pedestal there are 4 Slaves of Brass, with Basso Relievos, of his Battles and Conquests. The Square it stands on is very spacious, and to make it more uniform, they pull'd down a great many Houses. There's an Inscription on the Pedestal in Latin, which is very arrogant, and in English thus,

"To Lewis the Great, the Father, and always successful Leader of "his Armies; for having subdued his Enemies, protected his Allies, "conquer'd mighty People, built impregnable Castles to defend his "Frontiers, joyn'd the Ocean and Mediterranean, clear'd the Sea of "Pirates, reform'd the Laws, abolish'd Calvinistical Impiety, forc'd "the remotest Nations to revere his Name; and having settled all "Things at home and abroad by his great Prudence and Valour, this "Statue is erected, dedicated and consecrated, to perpetuate his Memory."

There are also Verses upon the Pedestal, relating to his Actions, equally fulsome, alledging, that he gave Laws to the World, and to himself: One of 'em against the Genoese is thus:

Vane Ligur frustraq; animis elate superbis,
Justitiam mentis dixe & non temnere Divos.

18. The Place Royal is a magnificent Square, almoſt as large as Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, inclos'd with Piazza-Walks, and the Platform with Iron-Rails: Lewis XIIIth's Statue on Horſeback, with Inſcriptions in French and Latin, ſtands in the middle. 19. Another Place Royal, a vaſt Square. The Duke of Vendoſm's Palace, and a Convent of Capuchins were pull'd down to make way for Lewis XIVth's Statue on Horſeback, ſet up there on a lofty Pedeſtal in 1699. The Ceremonies perform'd at ſetting it up, reſembled the Worſhip demanded by ſome of the Heathen Emperors to their Statues. The Duke de Geſvres, with the Magiſtrates of Paris on Horſeback, in their Formalities, and the chief Citizens attended by the Guards, made a Proceſſion round it, with their Heads uncover'd, and bow'd as they paſs'd by the Front.

Here are abundance of Noblemen's Houſes, which they call Hotels, that are very ſtately, but we can't inſiſt upon them. The chief of their Churches, Abbies, and Monaſteries are, 1. The Cathedral of Noſtre Dame, an ancient Gothic Structure, more remarkable for its Strength than Architecture. In the Choir there are many fine Paintings, with rich Tapeſtry, and ſtore of Silver and Gold Plate for their Altars. It is built in form of a Croſs, has a ſmall Spire in the middle, and at the upper End, 2 large ſquare Towers, 399 Steps high, flat at Top with Balluſters, which makes the Front look ſpacious and noble. On the three Weſt Gates there's a Row of Niches, with the Statues of 28 Kings. The Church is 66 Fathom long, 24 broad, and 17 high. The Roof is ſupported by 120 great Pillars. It was founded in 522, and has 50 Canons belonging to it. 2. The Church of St. Genevieve, with its College of Canons, founded by the firſt Chriſtian King Clouis, whoſe Tomb is here, and has been newly embelliſh'd. Here's a good Library, with a curious Collection of Coins, Medals, and other Antiquities. 3. The Abbey of St. Germain, noted for the Sepulchres of many Kings, and among them thoſe of Chilperic, with a Latin Inſcription, praying that his Bones may never be remov'd. Here are alſo Tombs belonging to the Family of Douglaſs in Scotland. The Library of this Monaſtery was formerly reckon'd the beſt in Paris, and ſtill exceeds all of them for Manuſcripts, except the King's Library. 4. The Church of Val de Grace, and the Nunnery founded by Queen Anne, upon what they call the miraculous Birth of her Son Lewis XIV. after ſhe had been marry'd 22 Years, without a Child. The Altar and Cupola are exceeding fine; and on the Portal are theſe Words, Jeſu Naſcenti Virginiq; Matri; i. e. To the Infant Jeſus, and the Virgin Mother. The Nuns are all of noble Extraction, and chuſe a Lady Abbeſs once in three Years. 5. The Jeſuits Church, with an Inſcription on the Front of their College, calling it that of Lewis the Great; upon which one wrote a Sarcaſtical Epigram, alledging, that they had forſaken Jeſus, and choſe the King for their Patron. Their Library is well ſtor'd with Books and Manuſcripts. They have 2 other Colleges in this City, with Churches of curious Architecture.

This City has 20 Gates, the moſt remarkable of which are thoſe of St. Anthony, St. Bernard, St. Dennis, and St. Martin, all of fine Architecture of a great height, reſembling Triumphal Arches, with Baſſo Relievos, Trophies and Inſcriptions, of Lewis XIVth's Actions. In this City are reckon'd 43 Parochial Churches, 42 Abbies and Convents, 40 Nunneries, 30 Hoſpitals, 48 Colleges, and 17 Chappels. The Houſes are of white Free-Stone, look very handſome, and have generally Saſh-Windows. They are for moſt part 6 or 7 Stories high. They are reckon'd about 40000 in Number, and the Inhabitants 700000. The Circumference of the City is eaſily ſeen from the Towers of the Church of Notre Dame. It appears to be much leſs than London, but more Circular. Dr. Northleigh thinks it nothing ſo populous. He ſays the Coaches are not ſo numerous here as in London, tho' ſome think otherwiſe. It is reckon'd 3 Engliſh Miles long, and 2 ½ broad. Sir William Pettit computed that London contain'd above 100000 Inhabitants more than Rouen and Paris together. If it were ſo when he wrote, London muſt be much more populous and large now, for it has increas'd prodigiouſly ſince that time; which cannot be ſuppos'd of Paris, conſidering the great Numbers baniſh'd thence by the Perſecution, and what it muſt likewiſe have ſuffer'd by Famine and War. M. de Souligne, a Refugee of Quality, and a Perſon of Learning, who knew Paris very well, publiſh'd an Account, wherein he aſſerted that London, Weſtminſter, Southwark, &c. take up twice as much Ground as Paris and its Suburbs, and has ſix times more Shop-Keepers. Paris is govern'd by a Magiſtrate, call'd the Provoſt of the Merchants, ſomewhat like our Lord-Mayor, 4 Eſchevins, or Aldermen, 26 Counſellors, 70 Serjeants and Under-Officers; and for adminiſtring Juſtice, there's a Provoſt, 3 Lieutenants, with a Judge, and Conſul of Merchants. The Court always takes Care of the Choice of the Provoſt, becauſe his Authority over the People is ſo great, and the Revenue of the Town-Houſe, of which he has the Charge, is ſo conſiderable. He and the Sheriffs are reckon'd Noble by Office. They have under them for preventing of Tumults 16 Quarterniers, or Ward-Officers, with their Commiſſaries and others, 120 Archers, or Watchmen, 60 Croſs-bow Men, and 100 Musketeers, with a Guard of Foot and Horſe, that go the Rounds every Night, commanded by a Captain, call'd the Chevalier de Guet, or Knight of the Watch.

There's a Mountain on the South, that abounds with wholeſome Springs, and the Townſmen preſerve their Water in Ciſterns. The adjacent Country is full of Stone-Quarries, which furniſhes Materials for Building. On the North they have Pits, from whence they dig their Plaiſter; and on the Banks of the Sein and Marn there are pleaſant Woods. The Plain on the North abounds with Corn, and the Hills as far as Poiſſy, and ſeveral of the neighbouring Territories, abound with Vineyards. The Country is water'd with innumerable Streams, which fall into the Sein and Marn, and make the Tranſportation of Commodities to this City very eaſy.

The moſt remarkable Places in the Neighbourhood, are,

1. The Foreſt of Vincennes, about 3 Miles South-Eaſt from the City. Here's a ſtrong Caſtle, with a ſpacious Court, a ſtately Chappel, and pleaſant Walks: Several Kings choſe it for a Place of Retreat, and the Citizens divert themſelves here by Walking, and other Exerciſe.

The Church is 300 Foot long, 200 wide, and 80 high, ſupported by 60 Pillars, and has Copper Gates. The Tombs and the Treaſure belonging to them are of ineſtimable Value. They boaſt of multitudes of Reliques, and of ancient Medals and Jewels of great Value. The Abbot keeps the Regalia, and ſends them to the Place where the Kings are crown'd. Part of the Revenues were given to the Nuns of St. Cyr, by Lewis XIV.

3. Montmorency, now call'd Enguien, ſince it was given to the Family of Conde. 'Twas a Barony belonging to the Family of Montmorency: the oldeſt in the Nation, who were made Barons by Clouis I. becauſe one of them at the Battle of Tolbiac took ſeveral Standards bearing the Roman Eagle, which was given that Family for their Arms.

4. Verſailles, 11 Miles South-Weſt from Paris, a ſmall neat Town in a Champaign Country, that abounds with Game, but was moſt noted for the magnificent Palace built here by Lewis XIV. which for Statelineſs, fine Architecture, and noble Structure, Gardens, Canals, Water-Works, &c. exceeded moſt in the known World. We cannot inſiſt on Particulars, but Dr. Northleigh ſays, it ſurpaſs'd all that cou'd be imagin'd ſumptuous and excellent: The Roof glittering with Gold, afforded a glorious Proſpect, and the Gardens for Statues, Canals, Groves, Grotto's, Fountains, and every Thing delightful, far ſurpaſs'd any Thing in Italy. The Royal Cabinet for Medals, Coins, and Paintings, had the Choice of what Italy cou'd afford. The Utenſils of the King's Lodgings, even to the Balluſters, Bedſteads, and Rails, were all of Maſſy Plate. Here is a large Canal, in which the Court ſometimes diverted themſelves in Yatchts and Gallies; and on the other ſide of it there's another ſtately Houſe, call'd Trianon, which the King us'd as a cool Retreat, after Walking in the Parks. The Furniture of this Palace was alſo very ſumptuous. The Corniſhes and Cielings of the Hall were all adorned after the Chineſe Way, the Floors pav'd, and the Walls lin'd with China; but 'tis now neglected.

After that Prince was taken Priſoner at Pavia, and carry'd to Madrid, he agreed with Charles V. to come and pay his Ranſome there; upon which he built this Palace, and carry'd his Ranſome thither, and alledg'd by this Piece of Equivocation, that he fulfill'd his Treaty.

The Engliſh and Burgundians attack'd it in vain, and for the noble Reſiſtance againſt the Latter, its Privileges were enlarg'd, and the Women having ſignaliz'd themſelves in that Siege, they are allow'd to walk before the Men at an annual Feaſt. 'Tis a fine, well built and ſtrong City, has Sluices to let the Water out and into the Ditches from the River Therin. This City is large, but not well inhabited, there being ſeveral Meadows and Corn-Fields within the Walls. It is the See of a Biſhop, whoſe Cathedral was founded by Henry II. of England, and finiſh'd 200 Years after: It is a ſumptuous Edifice of ſquare Stone. The Black Prince, Son to Edward III. of England, with 12000 Men defeated King John of France in the Neighbourhood, and took him Priſoner, tho' his Army conſiſted of 50000: This was chiefly owing to the Inſolence and Pride of the French, who relying on their Numbers, would hear of nothing but his ſurrendring on Diſcretion, when he offer'd to retire to Bourdeaux with his Army, and to make good the Damage he had done them. This City has alſo an Univerſity, next in Fame to that of Paris. It is the Seat of a Court of Juſtice, a Court of Finances, a Generality, and Chamber of Accounts. The Collegiate Church of St. Hilary in this Town is immediately ſubject to the Pope, and the King is Abbot. They pretend to a Stone which conſumes dead Bodies in 24 Hours, and to the hollow Trunk of a Tree, where Madmen being put, recover their Senſes: from whence roſe that Proverb, when one is call'd a Madman, that he ought to be ſent to St. Hilary's Cradle. Here are 24 Pariſh Churches, 5 Abbeys, and ſeveral other Monaſteries. The Mayor has the Title of Governour, and the Privileges of a Nobleman. It is the largeſt City for Compaſs next to Paris, is impregnable on one ſide, becauſe of Marſhes and Ponds, but is commanded on the other by Rocks. Of the Vipers formerly mentioned, is made the Trochiſque of Poictiers, ſo much eſteemed. About a Mile from the Town there is an erected Stone call'd Pierre Levée, which all Strangers go to ſee: It is 25 Foot high, 17 broad, and 60 round, with this Diſtich upon it:

Hæc Lapis, Ingentem ſuperat gravitate Coloſſum
Ponderis, & graudi ſidera mole petit.

But they don't ſay on what Account it was ſet up.

16. Chatelherault, 21 Miles North-Eaſt from Poictiers, upon the ſame River, Capital of a Dutchy, formerly given to a Son of France, and afterwards ſettled on James Earl of Arran, Regent of Scotland during the Minority of Queen Mary, upon the Match concluded betwixt her and the Dauphin of France. It was enjoyed by the Family of Hamilton, except during the time of War, till after the Peace of Utrecht, when they ſold it to the French King. There are many Lordſhips and Villages in the Dutchy, which, with the Town, were poſſeſs'd by Proteſtants, till expell'd by Lewis XIV. The City is remarkable for its Bridge, one of the fineſt in France: It has 9 Arches, is 230 Paces long, and 66 broad. The Town is ſtrong, repulſed the Duke of Anjou in a Siege during the Wars for Religion, and has Stones in the Neighbourhood, which being poliſh'd, look almoſt as well as true Diamonds, and are therefore call'd the Diamonds of Chatelherault.

17. Loudun, about 30 Miles Weſt from Poictiers, Capital of its Diſtrict, the Seat of a Court of Judicature, and has the Title of a Dutchy. It is a pretty Town, and remarkable for a Statue of the Virgin in the Carmelite Monaſtery, call'd our Lady of Recovery, becauſe the Monks ſuborn'd ſome Nuns to counterfeit their being poſſeſs'd by the Devil, and deliver'd by this Statue: The Cheat was diſcover'd by a Secular Prieſt, who ſuffer'd much on that account; but the Parliament of Paris put an end to the Impoſture. The Prince of Conde held out this Town for the Proteſtants, and repulſed the Duke of Anjou in a Siege. It is alſo remarkable for the laſt Proteſtant National Synod held here in 1658, with the King's Conſent.

18. Richlieu, 6 Miles Eaſt from Loudon: It was made a Dutchy and Peerage by Lewis XIII. for Cardinal Richlieu and his Heirs, Male or Female, and the Inhabitants have great Privileges. It is the Seat of a Seneſchal, and ſtands in a pleaſant Country, abounding with Corn, Fruit, Wine, and Game. The Cardinal founded an Univerſity here in 1640. It is a ſquare Town, with a Market at each Corner, and a large one in the middle, where there is a ſtately Church, enrich'd with a great Quantity of Plate. The Streets are ſtraight, and center in the five Markets. The Houſes are uniform, and the Town adorned with public Halls, Fountains, Walks, Gardens, fine Walls and Towers, and encompaſſed with deep large Ditches, where are great numbers of Swans. The Caſtle is very regular, adorned with the fineſt Tapeſtry, Paintings and Statues, and encompaſſed with fine Avenues, Parks, Orchards, Gardens, Fountains and Grottos, which make it one of the moſt charming Places in France.

19. Fontenay le Comte, Capital of Lower Poitou, 45 Miles South-Weſt of Poictiers, on the River Vande, which begins here to be navigable. It has a Court of Judicature, and two annual Fairs, which make it one of the moſt conſiderable Towns in the Province.

20. Rochel, on the Coaſt, about 62 Miles South-Weſt from Poictiers: It is Capital of the County of Aunis, and has its Name from the Rocks on which 'tis built. It is the Seat of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Bourdeaux, of a Sovereign Court that inſpects the Salt-pits on the Ocean, of a Generality, and a Chamber of Money. It was long poſſeſs'd by the Engliſh, taken from them by Lewis VIII. reſtored to them by Treaty in 1360, as one of the Conditions of ſetting King John of France, whom they had taken in Battel, at Liberty. About 10 Years after, the Inhabitants revolted, for which the King of France gave them great Privileges, and among others, that they ſhould be governed by 100 of their chief Burghers, one of whom they annually choſe Mayor. It embraced the Reformation in 1567, and was beſieged by the Duke of Anjou, Brother to Charles IX. in vain. Hiſtorians obſerve, that the Town being preſs'd with Famine during this Siege, Shoals of ſmall Fiſh, never ſeen there before, came into the Harbour, to the great Relief of the Inhabitants; and as ſoon as the Siege was raiſed, they went off, and were never ſeen more. Moſt of the chief Perſons concern'd in the Maſſacre of Paris were kill'd at this Siege, particularly the Duke D'Aumale and Marſhal Coſſiens, who were the firſt that enter'd the Great Admiral Coligny's Chamber, and murder'd him. The Papiſts loſt ſeveral other great Officers, Lords, and Gentlemen in this Siege, with 20000 Soldiers, and were forced to raiſe it with Ignominy. This City was again beſieged in 1628, by Lewis XIII. prompted by Cardinal Richlieu, to take it from the Proteſtants, as being their chief Bulwark. They were promiſed Help by Charles I. of Great Britain, who ſent the Duke of Bucks to relieve it, while at the ſame time ſome Engliſh Men of War, lent the French King, were employed againſt the Town, and did the greateſt Miſchief to the Proteſtants. The Duke landed in the Iſle of Rhee, where he was repulſed with Loſs and Diſhonour; and his Conduct being violently ſuſpected, he was ſtabb'd by Felton at Portſmouth, when going a ſecond time to attempt the Relief of the Town with a Fleet. They proceeded however, but without neceſſary Proviſions; nor could they approach, becauſe of a Mole the French King had built acroſs the Harbour; ſo that the Town was taken Octob. 29. 1628, after 7 Months Siege, during which the Citizens ſuffer'd ſo much by Famine, that they eat Dogs, Cats, Rats, Mice, Horſes, Hides, and Leather; of 15000 People, not above 4000 eſcaped, and thoſe reduced to meer Skeletons. This laid the Foundation of the Ruin of the Proteſtant Intereſt in France. The French King took away their Privileges, and perſecuted the remaining Proteſtants, contrary to the Edict of Pacification. Lewis XIV. built a ſtrong Cittadel, and other Works here in 1689, to keep the Town and new Converts in Awe, and prevent a Deſcent by the Confederates. The Town is 3 Miles round, and the Harbour a Canal of a Mile long, and half a Mile broad, where Ships ride ſafe, which advances its Trade.

The Iſle of Rhee lies before it, 4 Miles from the Coaſt, abounds with Wine and Salt, has ſeveral Villages, and a ſtrong Fort at Le Pree on the North-Weſt ſide, with Baſtions, and other Outworks; and there is another at St. Martins. The Diſtrict abounds with Corn, Wine, Paſtures, and Saffron. Bleau mentions a River call'd Peruſa here, which flows in April, May, and June every Year, and drys up afterwards. The People know the time of its flowing by the filling up of a certain Well. He alſo ſpeaks of the dark Caves of Rançon in this Diſtrict, which he reckons one of the greateſt Wonders. The Entrance is very ſtrait; and when People come in with Lights, they find noble and large Apartments.

ments, Statues of tall Men to the Life, Figures of ſeveral Animals, Columns curiouſly engraved, Altars, Cloaths, and all ſorts of Houſhold-ſtuff, curiouſly repreſented. He ſeems to think this a Work of Nature, but it looks more probable to be the Effect of Art.

The Town and Diſtrict was an Appanage to the Sons of France, to whom it gave Title of Duke. It is reckoned one of the ancienteſt in the Kingdom, is the Seat of a Præſidial, and of a Biſhop, who is Suffragan of Bourdeaux, a Baron, and chief Chaplain to the King in Aquitain. They have large Woods and Paſtures, and abundance of Cattle; ſo that they furniſh their Neighbours with Milk, Butter and Cheeſe. It is encompaſſed on all ſides by Branches of the Pyrenees, and is liable to Tempeſts of Hail. The People are brave, and their Nobility courteous and liberal. The Reformation was brought in here by the famous Queen Jane; her Son Henry the Great, after he turn'd Papiſt, allowed the Roman Catholicks their Liberty; but on a Petition of the Inhabitants, he excluded the Jeſuits, and they continued ſo, till Lewis XIII. repealed the Edict againſt them, tho' they had murder'd his Father Henry IV. The Proteſtant Religion continued here till Lewis XIV. Dragoon'd them in 1684. There are ſeveral Mines of Iron, Lead, Copper, Silver, Quarries of Marble, Medicinal Fountains here, and a Spring of Salt Water, which makes good white Salt.

3. Ourtez, on the ſame River, 20 Miles North-Weſt from Pau, is an ancient Town, has a ſtrong Caſtle, and a Seneſchal's Court. Here is a Bridge of a prodigious Height over the River. 4. Navarreins, about 41 Miles North-Weſt from Pau, a ſtrong Town, where the Proteſtants held out two Sieges, but 'twas taken by Lewis XIII. in 1620.

5. Oleron, 10 Miles South-Eaſt from Pau. It is the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Auch, who has the Title of Baron of Bearn. Here is alſo a Seneſchal's Court.

The County of BIGORRE, lies Eaſt from Bearn, is divided into Mountains and Plains, well water'd, has good Paſturage, abounds with Cattle, Rye, Millet, and other Grain, and has Quarries of Marble, and ſome Jaſper.

4. St. Lizier, 40 Miles Eaſt from St. Bertrand, is Capital of the Diſtrict of Conſerans, the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Auch, and has a Court of Judicature, depending on Tholouſe. It is defended by Walls, and a Stone Bridge over the River, with a ſtrong Tower in the middle, where is a conſtant Guard. Bleau ſays, St. Fregeu, a Town not far from hence, ſtands on ſo high a Mountain, that 'tis ſcarce to be reach'd by ones Eye: It is very ſteep, but full of Vines and other Trees, among which there is a noble Nunnery. He mentions People in this and ſome other Parts of Gaſcony, named Cagots, ſuppoſed to be of Gothic Original: they are of a pleaſant Countenance, but their Hair and Breath ſtink ſo intolerably, that the other People avoid them as Lepers; ſo that they live apart by themſelves, and have ſeparate Places in Churches.

XIII. The Government of LANGUEDOC, has the Lyonnois on the North, part of Spain and the Gulph of Lyons on the South, Guienne on the Weſt, and Dauphiny and Provence on the Eaſt. The Figure of it is ſo irregular, that 'tis hard to give its Dimenſions, 'tis ſo much indented by the neighbouring Governments; the greateſt Extent Eaſt and Weſt is about 185 Miles, and the greateſt South and North along the Rhone 115; but it is far from being equal either way.

It is divided into many Diſtricts, and reckon'd the fineſt Province in France, for Pleaſure and Fruitfulneſs. The Air is temperate and healthful. It abounds with Corn, and excellent Fruit of all ſorts, Wine, Olives, Oil, Honey, Wax, Saffron, Silk, Salt, Cattle, good Paſtures, Metals, Minerals, Mineral Waters, Quarries of Marble and Alabaſter, all ſorts of Sea and Freſh Water Fiſh, and Veniſon; nor is any Country better provided with Simples for Phyſic, which renders the Faculty of Montpellier ſo famous. Here is alſo abundance of Dying Herbs, Materials for making excellent Glaſs, Azure, Verdigreaſe, Vermilion, Soap; and in the Sand of many of the Rivers there is a mixture of Silver and Gold. The Women are comely, and the Men for moſt part ingenious. This Province is well water'd by abundance of Rivers, particularly by the Garonne on the Weſt, and the Rhoſne on the Eaſt. It is famous for the Royal Canal dug thro' it by Lewis XIV. betwixt the Garonne and the Gulph of Lyons, which opens a Communication betwixt the Ocean and the Mediterranean, ſo that Goods may be conveyed in 15 Days time, without any Danger, from the Bay of Biſcay to the Gulph of Lyons, by the River Garonne and this Canal, which was begun in 1666, and finiſh'd in 1681. It begins at Blaguac on the Garonne, 4 Miles above Tholouſe, and falls into the Gulph of Lyons at Marſeillan, about 5 Miles above Agde, and is 92 Miles long, in a direct Line, beſides Turnings and

Windings:

Windings: The whole computed at 63 French Leagues; and it is every where 30 Foot broad. The Work is ſurpriſing and ſtupendious: the Courſes of many ſmall Rivers are alter'd to form it; and there are abundance of large Reſervatories or Baſins, to keep in and let out the Water at pleaſure. The chief Baſin is that of Ferreol, about 2000 Fathom round, and 90 Foot deep. It receives the Waters from the Black Mountain, which are kept in by a Cauſway and 3 ſtrong Walls. The Waters of this Baſin fall into that of Naurouſe, which is 200 Fathom long, 150 broad, and faced with Free-ſtone. This Baſin lies in the higheſt Place of the Canal, ſo that the Water can be let out on both ſides, and runs contrary ways. The Bridge over the ſmall River Repudre is very conſiderable; the Canal which runs over it being 7 Foot deep, and carrying large Boats, while at the ſame time the River runs under it. The Arch of Malpas is ſtill more ſurpriſing, being a Rock cut thro' 80 Fathom long, 4 broad, and 4 and a half deep, with ways cut out on both ſides, for the Horſes to draw their Boats.

Places of Note are,

1. Tholouſe, Capital of the Tholouſan, and of the Government. It lies on the Garonne, about 42 Miles South-Eaſt from Auch, and 26 South from Montauban. It is reckoned one of the largeſt and fineſt Towns in the Kingdom, and famous in Antiquity, having been the Metropolis of the Tectoſages, who made ſuch Conqueſts in Europe and Aſia, under the Conduct of Brennus. The Romans made it Capital of a Colony, and adorned it with ſtately Buildings, and particularly a Capitol, dedicated to Jupiter, which continued till the 13th Century, when it was uſed as a Town-houſe, from whence their Eſchevins were named Capitouls, and had formerly Power of Life and Death. Aulus Gellius ſays, this City was plundered A. R. 685, by Q. Servilius Cepio, a Roman Conſul, who found, according to Valerius Maximus, 15000 Talents in Silver. Oroſius ſays, it was 100000 Pound Weight of Gold, and 110000 of Silver. Juſtin makes it 110000 of Gold, and 50 Millions of Silver. He ſent it to Marſeilles, but order'd the Convoy, and the other Captains to be murder'd, that he might enjoy it alone; but when he was defeated by the Cimbri, the Romans confiſcated his Eſtate, and he himſelf died a miſerable Exile, whence Aurum Toloſanum became a Proverb, to ſignify an ill gotten and unproſperous Eſtate.

This City was ſo populous in the Time of Auſonius, who was educated here, that he ſays, it ſent out 4 Colonies, which were not miſs'd. The Romans ſolemnized Flora's Games in this City, attended with very diſhoneſt Spectacles A Remembrance of them is ſtill kept up for the encouragement of Poeſy and other parts of Learning, under conduct of their Parliament and Magiſtrates, who diſtribute Prizes annually, of 3 Golden Flowers, worth about 14 l. Sterling each, to thoſe who perform beſt. The Parliament here, is the ſecond in the Kingdom; and their Univerſity, one of the moſt flouriſhing in France. 'Tis likewiſe the See of an Archbiſhop, and the Seat of a Seneſchal's Court and Viguery. Their Government is by 10 Eſchevins. The City is divided into 2 Parts, by the River, and into 8 Wards, govern'd by their reſpective Capitouls. The firſt Ward is Dourade, ſo called from a Church formerly dedicated to the Sun, and now to the Virgin. This Ward contains ſeveral Churches, Monaſteries, Colleges, a Peſt-houſe, the Suburb of St. Cyprian and the great Hoſpital of St. James. The ſecond Ward is St. Stephen's, ſo called from the Cathedral, a magnificent Structure, with a very high Tower, and a Bell ſo large, that they dare not ring it, leaſt the Tower ſhould fall. Round the Choir of this Church are 14 vaulted Chappels; and in the Market-place before it, there's a ſtately Fountain, adorn'd with a fine Obelisk. In this Ward are alſo the Archbiſhop's Palace, the Arſenal, ſeveral Convents, Colleges, Churches and Chappels, and the Town-Houſe, one of the fineſt in France, adorn'd with Repreſentations of the Entrance of their Kings into this City, and the Pictures of the Capitouls in their Robes. The third Ward, is that of the Old Bridge, of Gothic Structure: But the New Bridge vyes with that of Paris. Here ſtand the Exchange, the Court of the Provoſt and of the Conſuls of the Merchants, and the Cage into which Blaſphemers are ſhut, before they are caſt into the Garonne. The fourth Ward is call'd La Pierre, but has nothing conſiderable. The fifth, is that of D'Albaud; ſo called from a Church where ſate the Court of Inquiſition, ſo infamous for their Cruelties againſt the Albigenſes. Near this ſtands an old Caſtle, thought to be part of the ancient Capitol. In this Ward is the Iſland of St. Anthony, form'd by the River, and inhabited by Tradeſmen. The ſixth Ward, is called S. Pierre de Cuiſins: It has ſeveral Churches and Monaſteries, one of which belongs to the Franciſcans, is more ſumptuous than the reſt, and noted for a Vault under it, which, they ſay, preſerves dead Corpſe from Conſumption without any Art. Other remarkable Places in this Ward are, 1. The Univerſity. 2. The College of Foix, founded by the Cardinal de Foix, who gave them a Library of printed Books, and another of Manuſcripts. 3. The College of Narbonne, and that of Equille, founded by one of the Counts for the Study of the Learned Languages. 4. The Corn-Mills of Baſacle, and the Caſtle, which have each of them 16 Mill-ſtones, and great numbers of Engines for currying Leather, which are eſteemed among the greateſt Curioſities of this City. The ſeventh Ward, is St. Bartholomew's: Here ſtands the Caſtle, formerly the Reſidence of the Counts of Tholouſe, and now the Place where the Parliament meets. The Exchequer, and other Courts of Juſtice, the Mint, and chief Priſon, are alſo here. The eighth Ward, is that of St. Sernin, or Saturnin, ſo call'd from an ancient Collegiate Church, on the top of which are Guns, ſo placed that the numerous Pillars which ſupport the Structure, can't cover the People from their Shot. The reaſon of this Precaution is, to preſerve the vaſt Treaſure kept here, where, among other things, there are 50 Gilt Silver Skreens, beſides the Jewels and Ornaments of the Church, and the rich Tombs of their ancient Counts, Prelates, and Nobles.

2. La Vaur, 18 miles North-Eaſt from Tholouſe, the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Tholouſe.

The Town is noted for a Manufacture of Crape, and has ſeveral Churches and Monaſteries. There was a Tribunal half Papiſts and half Proteſtants here, according to the Edict of Nants, but aboliſhed by Lewis XIV. Within 2 Leagues of this City there is a great Rock in a River, under a Bridge, which ſhakes when touch'd by one's Hand or Finger, but ſtands immoveable when Carts and Coaches go over the Bridge. This is aſcribed to its being equally poiſed on another Rock, upon which it ſtands. Betwixt this City and Carcaſſon, there is a Mountain call'd Priapus, with Stones ſhaped like the Genitals of both Sexes. Sir Theodore De Vaux, one of our Charles IId's Phyſicians, preſented one of them to that King, and another to the Royal Society, of which he was a Fellow.

12. Narbonne, Capital of its Quarter, 40 miles South Eaſt from St. Papoul, near the Gulph of Lyons, on a Canal drawn from the River Aude. The Romans call'd it their Bulwark againſt the Gauls, made it the Capital of their firſt Colony, and the Reſidence of their Proconſul. Some derive the Name from Q. Martius Narbo a Roman, who founded it 116 Years before Chriſt. It had large Privileges, and was beautified by the Romans with an Amphitheatre, and a Capitol of Marble, the Ruins of which are ſtill to be ſeen. Sidonius Apollinaris commends it for its healthful Air, fruitful Territory, Walls, Circuit, Inhabitants, Taverns, Gates, Galleries, Temples, Mint, Baths, Arches, Granaries, Shambles, Bridges, Wealth, Meadows, Fountains, Iſlands, Saltpits, Ponds, and the River belonging to it. It is strong, defended by a Citadel, is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Narbonne, has an University, one of the best in Europe for the Study of Physic. Mr. Ray says, there were above 130 Apothecaries here, who lived for most part by selling Cypress Powder, Sweet Bags, Cassolets, Treacle, Confection of Alkermes, of Hyacinth, and Hungary Water. It is also noted for Waxworks, Essences, Perfumes, Manufactures of Silk, and Oil of Olives. Here are many stately Buildings and sumptuous Churches without the City. They have Baths, Medicinal Waters like those of the Spaa, and a Royal Garden of Simples extraordinary well furnished and kept. It was one of the Cautionary Towns given to the Protestants by Henry IV. taken from them by Lewis XIII. and the Protestants here were dragoon'd by Lewis XIV. It is 7236 Foot long, 90 broad, and has 22 Arches, under which Boats pass with incredible Swiftness. Passengers land above the Bridge, and take Boat again under it, because of the Danger. Here is a strong Citadel to defend the Bridge, because the Pass is important.

The CEVENNES and VIVARESE lie in the North part of this Province, have Mines of Lead in their Mountains, but they are not improved for want of Hands. The Protestants, who were very numerous in this Country, and with their Brethren on the South side the Loire, were, as La Cross says, 2,000,000, designed to have stood in their Defence in 1683, against Lewis the Fourteenth's Edict for pulling down their Churches, imprisoning their Ministers, and forbidding their Worship; but the Inhabitants of the wealthy Cities were against it; so that only some part of the Protestants in the Cevennes and Valleys of Dauphine, stood upon their Defence; which gave Lewis XIV. a handle to treat them as Rebels, and occasioned a great Insurrection during the late Wars, which might have put an end to his Persecution had they been duly supported by the Protestant Powers. The Mountainous Parts abound with Flocks of Cattle, and produce some Rye and Wine; and the Plains along the Rhosne abound with Corn, Fruit of all sorts, and excellent Wine.

3. Collioure, a well fortified Town, with a good Harbour, 22 miles South-East from Perpignan.

4. Ville Franche, or Villa Franca, Capital of the Viguery of Conflent, 22 miles North-West of Perpignan.

5. Mont Louis, a Fortress in French Cerdagne on the Frontiers of Catalonia, built by the French to cover Roussilon, about 22 miles West of Ville Franche.

XV. The Government of DAUPHINE has part of Burgundy on the North, Provence on the South, Part of Lyonnois and Languedoc on the West, and Savoy and Piedmont on the East. The Form is irregular, being much indented by the neighbouring Governments. The greatest Extent from East to West is about 100 miles, and South and North about 95. It had formerly a Prince of its own, who was called Dolphin, because he took that Fish for his Device in a Tournament. The last of them being without Issue, and that he might be protected against the Duke of Savoy his mortal Enemy, quitted it to Philip de Valois, King of France in 1349, on condition that the Eldest Son of France should bear the Title, quarter his Arms with those of France, that the People should enjoy their ancient Privileges, and that the Province should never be annexed to France.

That Part of it which lies on the Rhosne is fruitful, has excellent Wine and Wheat, but in most other Places it produces only Rye, Barley and Oats, good Pasture for Cattle, and admirable Simples for Physic. Their Woods abound with Deer, Chamoys, or Wild Goats, and other Game; Pheasants, Partridges, Hares, and large Warrens of Rabbets. In the North Parts they have all the usual sorts of Fruit, and in the Lower, plenty of Olives, Oranges, and Citrons. Here are likewise Salt Springs and Mines of Iron. Authors mention abundance of remarkable Things in this Country, and, among others, six which they call Wonders. 1. A Tower, where venemous Creatures die immediately as soon as they are brought. 2. The Manna of Briançon, gathered in August from the Leaves of a Tree called Melesos. 3. The Precious Stones of the Mountain Sassenage. 4. Tubs cut in the Rock there, which they pretend are empty all the Year till the sixth of January, and as they are more or less full, they take it for an Omen of Plenty or Scarcity. 5. The inaccessible Mountain, called the Needle, which rises in form of a Pyramid inverted. The History of the Royal Academy for 1703 says, it stands as it were on its Top or Point, is a mile round below, and two miles above. Some who climbed it by order of Charilles VIII. in 1492, found Wild Goats in a Meadow on the Top. The Way the Men climbed up was a League and half. On the Platform of the Mountain there is a Natural Pyramid, whence it was called a Needle. 6. The Cave of our Lady of Balm. The same History says, that is betwixt 4 and 5 Fathom broad, and from 5 to 8 high. At the bottom of the Entrance there is a small Stream which falls into the Rhosne. The Cave branches into two Parts, and from the Sides of both, Water drops, which form a large natural Bason, under which are several lesser ones that make a pleasant Cascade. At the Bottom of the Cave there's an Opening into the Rock, and at the lower End of that a Place of about 20 Fathom long, where the Water stagnates about a Foot deep. It grows narrow at the farther End, and the Water that falls from the Rocks makes a great Noise. The Courtiers who viewed it, fixed Lights upon Boards, which quickly disappeared, so that they durst venture no farther.

The Country is divided into Upper and Lower, and these again subdivided into lesser Districts. The Inhabitants are industrious and strong, but generally poor, as well as their Gentry, who are very numerous. The Protestants were Masters of this Province during the Civil War, but have been since ruined by Persecution.

Places of Note are,

1. Grenoble, on the Isere, Lat. 45. 12. Long. 5. 20. It is Capital of the Province, very ancient, was enlarged and beautified by the Emperor Gratian, who called it Gratianopolis, from whence the present Name. It lies in a fruitful Plain, at the Foot of a Mountain, which produces excellent Wine. It is divided by the River, is very large, and one of the pleasantest Towns in France. It is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Vienne, who has the Title of Prince. Here is also a Mint, a Chamber of Accounts, a Generality and a Bailiwic. The Structures of chief Note are, the Cathedral and the Palace, where the Parliament meets, which with the Governour's House are worth a Traveller's View. The Bishop presides in the Assembly of Estates, and takes Place of his Metropolitan. Here are several Remains of Roman Antiquities. There is a Valley in the District of this City, which runs 6 Leagues betwixt two Mountains, in which there are 100 Gentlemens Seats, so that it looks like a pleasant Garden. A League East from the Town there is a noted Cascade which falls from a Rock as high as a lofty Steeple, and being conveyed by Pipes into a neighbouring Garden, spouts with incredible Violence to the Tops of the highest Trees.

2. La Grande Chartreuse, 7 miles North from Grenoble. It is the chief Monastery of the Carthusian Order. It lies in a Desart, surrounded by steep Rocks, was founded by one Bruno in the Eleventh Century, is a magnificent Structure, and the Monks are accounted the richest of all others, except the Jesuits. Delegates of the Order from all Nations have a General Meeting in the Chapter-House, where every one has a distinct Seat and Cell. They are about 3000, under a Prior General, who must not go out of the Monastery after he is chosen. He has 200 Monasteries under him. The Directors of the House entertain Visiters civilly; but the Monks are allowed to speak to no body, except at certain certain Hours, being enjoined Silence on pretence of hearing God ſpeak to their Hearts. They never eat together but on Sundays and Feſtivals, and pretend to great Mortification.

3. Les Eſcheles, 17 miles North from Grenoble, is ſo called from the Publick Way cut out thro' the Rock. Some take it to be the Place which Hanibal cut with Iron and Vinegar, to make his Way into Italy.

4. Fort Barreaux, a Fortreſs 20 miles North-Eaſt from Grenoble, is a very ſtrong Place on the Frontiers of Savoy, and one of the Keys of France on that ſide.

5. The Valley of Trieves, 5 or 6 Leagues South from Grenoble, is noted for Gentlemens Seats and ſeveral Towns; but more for a burning Fountain, where the Water boil'd up with great Waves covered with Flames, tho' it be as cold as that of another Fountain, which above 60 Years ago ceaſed to flame; but ſtill the low Ground about it ſends out Smoak and Flames, without any Hollowneſs in the Ground, or appearance of Combuſtible Matter, and is the more remarkable becauſe Caſar mentioned it in his Time. At Night, when the Weather is cold, or during a moderate Rain, the Flames appear ſenſibly; but in the Heat of the Day, or after a great Rain, there is only a Smoak, which being ſet on Fire by lighted Straw, draws out other Vapours, and the Flame laſts a conſiderable time.

6. Die, Capital of its Diſtrict, which abounds with Corn, Wine and Paſture, and is noted for the Birth of the Roman Hiſtorian Trogus Pompeius. The Town lies 35 miles South-Weſt from Grenoble, is the See of a Biſhop, who has the Title of a Count, and was formerly the Seat of a Roman Colony. The Town is ſtrong, and was formerly held out by the Proteſtants, who were very numerous there during the laſt Perſecution.

7. Lebuys, Capital of that called the Barronnies, which produces good Wine, Figs, Oranges, and Pomegranates. The Town lies 28 miles South from Die, was formerly ſtrong and populous, but is much decayed ſince the Expulſion of the Proteſtants.

8. Nions, a very pleaſant Town, 28 miles South-Weſt from Die, but in a decaying State. It is noted for a large Rock, with a Cave in the Neighbourhood, from whence comes a Wind, inſenſible to thoſe at its Mouth, but very violent at 30 Paces Diſtance, and cools the Air, that would otherwiſe be inſupportably hot in Summer.

9. Reillianette, 12 Leagues South from Die, noted for an inacceſſible Mountain called Ventoux, or The Windy, 3 Leagues round, well furniſhed with Fountains and Ciſterns, and has a Plain on the Top, which produces Corn and Wood enough for the Garriſon.

10. Gap, Capital of its Diſtrict, which is mountainous, but has all Neceſſaries for Life. Here is that called the trembling Meadow, reckoned one of the Wonders of Dauphiny, upon which Horſes and Carriages dare not venture, for fear of ſinking. The Town lies 17 miles Weſt from Ambrun, is the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Aix, who has the Title of Prince. It was taken and burnt by the Duke of Savoy in 1692, but ſince rebuilt.

11. Ambrun, Capital of its Diſtrict, 17 miles Eaſt from Gap. It is the See of an Archbiſhop, Metropolitan of the Maritime Alps, who has the Title of Count and Prince. He is joint Lord of the Town with the King, and appoints the Magiſtrates alternately. It was formerly Imperial, and gave Title to the Dauphin's Eldeſt Son. It ſtands on a Rock, and is reckoned the higheſt Town in France. It is defended by Rocks on the Weſt, and Walls and Towers on the other ſides. The Chapter conſiſts of 29 Canons, of whom the King is one, and ſeveral French Kings have officiated as ſuch. It has 7 Pariſh Churches, and a fine Jeſuits College. The Duke of Savoy took it in 1692, obliged the Townſmen to ranſom themſelves from Plunder, and ſoon after quitted it.

12. Briançon, Capital of its Diſtrict, 22 miles North-Eaſt from Ambrun, at the Conflux of two ſmall Rivers. It lies at the Foot of a Rock, has a Caſtle reckoned impregnable, and by ſome reckoned the higheſt Town in Europe. It ſuffered much by War and Fire. It was formerly richer and ſtronger than now. About 2 Leagues from hence lies a Rock called Pertuis Roſtan, or the Pierced Rock. Some think it was cut through by Cæſar to open his Way into Gaul; others aſcribe it to Hanibal, and ſome to Cottyus, one of the Gallic Princes, who defended his Country ſo well by the Rocks and other Strengths, that the Romans took him into their Alliance. There is an Inſcription upon the Gate in the Front, D. Cæſari Auguſto dedicata ſalutate eam; this Prince having erected the Emperor's Statue upon it. In this Country lies the Valley of Hours, which being barren for want of Water, the ancient Inhabitants cut through a Mountain, and brought Springs from Piedmont to the top of it, from whence they frequently water the Valley, which is about 7 Leagues from it.

13. Exilles, 15 miles South from Briançon, a ſtrong Fortreſs on the Frontiers of Piedmont, was taken by the Duke of Savoy in 1708.

14. Feneſtrelles, 19 miles Eaſt from Briançon, another important and ſtrong Place on the Frontiers of Piedmont, taken then alſo by the Duke of Savoy, to whom this and Exilles were ſurrendered by the Treaty of Utrecht.

15. Vienne, Capital of Lower Dauphiny, 14 miles South from Lyons. It is a very ancient Town, has many Roman Antiquities, and was ſometimes the Reſidence of Julius Cæſar, who erected Magazines for Proviſions and Arms here. It was enlarged, and had great Privileges from him and other Roman Emperors, and called the Moſt Noble Metropolis in Gaul. It had then an Univerſity, frequented by Men of the beſt Genius from all Parts of the World. Some alledge, that Pilate was born and died in a Tower here: Others, that this Story was occaſioned by a Miſtake, becauſe of the Seat of Pilate, Secretary to the laſt Dauphin, in the Neighbourhood, which the Vulgar call Pilate's Houſe. It is much ſhort of what it was formerly. 'Tis the See of an Archbiſhop, and ſuffered much by the Wars with the Proteſtants. Their Cathedral is a noble Structure: it has 10 Parochial, 3 Collegiate Churches, an Academy of the Jeſuits, and ſeveral Monaſteries of both Sexes. It is about a mile long, and not quite ſo broad. It is noted for a Manufacture of Paper, Sword Blades, and other hard Ware.

16. Pont de Beauvoiſin, 35 miles Eaſt from Vienne, on the Frontiers of Savoy, a Paſs of great Importance, divided by the River Gier, over which it has a Bridge. The Inhabitants make a conſiderable Profit of the Vipers they take in the neighbouring Country.

17. Romans on the Iſer, 27 miles South-Eaſt from Vienne, reſembles Jeruſalem ſo much in ſituation, and has a Hill ſo like Mount Calvary, that Francis I. founded a Sepulchre upon it in imitation of that call'd the Holy Sepulchre at Jeruſalem.

18. Valence, near the Rhoſne, 12 miles South-Weſt from Romans. It is Capital of the Valentinois, is very ancient, having been firſt a Greek and then a Roman Colony. It is the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Vienne, who has the Title of Count. Here is an Univerſity for Civil and Canon Law, and ſeveral Courts of Judicature. The Cathedral is a noble Structure, as are the Collegiate Church of St. Felix and the Monaſtery of St. Ruff. Here are ſeveral Monuments of Roman Antiquity, 9 or 10 Monaſteries; and in the Dominicans Church, there is the Picture of Buard, a Giant, whoſe Bones were dug up in this Monaſtery; by which it appears he was 15 Cubits high, and 7 broad. The Town is divided into 2 Parts; and defended by a Citadel.

19. Montelimar, 25 miles South from Valence, was one of the firſt Towns that declared for the Reformation, and ſuffer'd much during the Wars of Religion. The Learned Chamier, ſo famous among the French Proteſtants, was Miniſter here. The Town is large, well built, and populous, and noted for excellent Wine produc'd in the neighbourhood.

20. Tricaſtin, or St. Paul de Trois Chaſteaux, 11 miles South of Montelimar, is Capital of its Diſtrict, and the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Arles, who is a Count, and Joint Lord of the Town with the King.

XVI. PROVENCE has Dauphine on the North, the Sea on the South, Languedoc on the Weſt, and Piedmont on the Eaſt. The greateſt Extent Eaſt and Weſt is about 118 miles, and 'tis about 100, South and North. It had its Name from the Romans, who call'd it Provincia, becauſe it was the firſt Country they ſubdued on this ſide the Alps. The North Parts are cold and mountainous, and produce little Corn or Wine; but on the Coaſt 'tis ſo fruitful and pleaſant, and the Air ſo mild, that Cæſar ſaid there was not a finer Country in all his Empire. It abounds with Corn, delicious Mines, and excellent Fruits of all ſorts, Citrons, Oranges, Limons, Pomgranats, Figs, Prunes, Almonds, Apricots, Mulberries, Saffron and Olives, which make the beſt Oil in the Kingdom. Here is Store of Vermilion, Cork, and Roſin. Their Waſtes are cover'd with Thyme, Hyſſop, Lavender, Roſemary, Sage, Juniper and Myrtle Trees. There is abundance of Salt on the Coaſt, and they have Aſhes of which they make Glaſs and Soap. It had formerly Princes of its own, but fell to the Crown of France by Marriage and Will. It is divided into Upper, Middle, Lower, and the County of Venaiſſin, each of which have their Sub-diviſions.

Places of Note are,

1. Vaſon, 14 miles South-Eaſt from Tricaſtin, formerly a very conſiderable Town, but now only noted for being the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Avignon.

2. Orange, Capital of its Principality and Dioceſe, 13 miles South-Weſt from Vaſon. It was a Roman Colony, and has the Remains of an Amphitheatre and other Antiquities. It was the Seat of a Parliament, founded by Prince William of Orange Chalons in 1470. It embraced the Reformation with their Prince, turn'd out the Popiſh Biſhop and Canons, and allow'd no Popiſh Worſhip there; but in 1672 the French King ſeized the Principality unjuſtly, and in 1687 forced the Proteſtants to retire, and changed it into a Viguery. King William recover'd the Principality by the Treaty of Ryſwic, and reſtored the Proteſtants; but after his Death the French King ſeized the Principality, and turn'd them out again. Here is a Court of Finances, a Mint, and an Univerſity, the latter founded by Raymund V. Prince of Orange, in 1364. Its ſtrong Citadel and Fortifications were demoliſhed by the French King in 1660, contrary to Agreement. It is a Biſhop's See, Suffragan of Arles, and lies near the Rhoſne, in a pleaſant fruitful Country, but liable to frequent Winds. The Principality was formerly much larger, and extended a conſiderable way into Languedoc and Provence.

3. Carpentras, 12 miles South-Eaſt from Orange, is Capital of the County of Venaiſſin, and the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Avignon, has a Court of Judicature, and Chamber of Finances, is well built, and has good Walls.

4. Avignon, lies on the Rhoſne, 15 miles South-Eaſt from Orange. It is Capital of its County, and the See of an Archbiſhop, Vice Legat of the Pope, was the Seat of the Popes during the Schiſm, has a Court of Inquiſition, a Mint where Money is coined with the Pope's Arms, and a Court of Juſtice, from whom there lies an Appeal to Rome; but the Magiſtrates determine Suits for ſmall Sums, without an Appeal. The Pope's Palace is old, but magnificent: The Walls of the Town are of fine hewn Stone; their Churches very ſtately, and the Avenues of the Town pleaſant. It has ſeven Pariſhes, ſeven Monaſteries, ſeven Hoſpitals, ſeven Colleges, ſeven Palaces, ſeven Markets, and ſeven Gates; upon which, and conſidering that it was the Seat of ſeven Popes, and three Antipopes, during the Schiſm, ſome made this pleaſant Remark, That Seven being the Number of the Heads of the Beaſt mentioned in the Revelations, it was as applicable to Avignon as to Rome. The Cathedral, dedicated to the Virgin, is a noble Structure: all the Canons are clad in Scarlet, and their Chaplains in Purple. The Jews have a Synagogue here, and are obliged to wear yellow Hats, to diſtinguiſh them from the other Inhabitants. The City is joined to the New Town by a Bridge of 300 Paces over the Rhoſne. The Pope purchaſed the Town and Dioceſe illegally from the laſt Heireſs, without Conſent of the Guardians appointed by her Father's Will, about the Year 1300.

5. Taraſcon, on the Rhoſne, about 13 miles South-Weſt from Avignon. It has a Communication with Beaucaire by a Bridge of Boats. Of late Years a Paſſage under the River betwixt the two Towns was diſcover'd by a Maſon digging in a Cellar: It was Vaulted, and had an Iron Gate at each End. They pretend here to have the Reliques of Martha, Lazarus's Siſter, which they keep in a rich Shrine, and ſay the Town had its Name from a Dragon ſhe kill'd here.

6. Cavailon, 12 miles South-Eaſt from Avignon, is only noted for being the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Avignon.

7. Salon, 12 miles South-Eaſt from Cavailon, has the Title of a Principality, depends on the Archbiſhop of Arles, and is noted for the Birth of the famous Aſtrologer Noſtradamus.

8. Apt, 19 miles North-Eaſt from Cavailon, an ancient Roman Colony, and has ſeveral Monuments of Antiquity. It is the See of a Biſhop, Suffra-

Suffragan of Aix, who has the Title of Prince, and presides in the States of the Province. They pretend to have the Body of St. Anne, Mother to the Blessed Virgin, and say it works Miracles. There were many other considerable Places in this Dioeese before the Massacre of the Vaudois, by Order of Francis I. of France, who was basely imposed upon by the Monks, that with the Pope's Troops in 1546, murder'd above 3000 People, and sent 600 to the Galleys, as Maimburg confesses, but others make the Number much greater. The King falling ill soon after, order'd his Son Henry II. to punish that barbarous Murder of the honestest People in his Kingdom, as he express'd it. He attempted it accordingly, but was prevented by the Power of the Popish Clergy; so that none but the Advocate General, who prompted the Massacre, was beheaded for it; and the President, who commanded the Troops, died a most painful Death, tho' he escaped human Justice, says Thuanus.

9. Ries, 23 miles East from Apt, is Capital of its Diocese, the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Aix, and Lord of the Town, which is small, but well built.

10. Aix, about 18 miles South-East from Salon, is Capital of Middle Provence, very ancient, supposed to have been built by the Romans, and had its Name from the hot Baths, and other Springs in the Neighbourhood; the old French Word Aix, being a Corruption of the Latin Word Aquæ. It is the See of an Archbishop, and the Seat of an University, of which he is always Chancellor. It is also the Seat of a Parliament, and other Courts of Justice. It is one of the pleasantest, and best built Towns in France. The Cathedral is a noble Structure. Here are two Parish Churches, several Monasteries, and a College of Jesuits. The Houses are stately, the Streets broad, and the Piazzas handsome. Nostredamus is buried in the Cordeliers Church, with an Inscription importing, that by his Skill in Astrology, he had foretold whatever should happen most remarkable in the World.

11. St. Maximin, a small Town 21 miles South-East from Aix, noted for a Convent of Dominicans, who pretend to a Holy Bottle like that of Rheims, and the Body of Mary Magdalen in a Gold Shrine, form'd like a Woman, with a Gold Crown set with Diamonds, and supported by two Angels, which brings a great number of superstitious People hither. Nine miles West from hence, in the middle of a thick Wood, there is a spacious Cave, 500 Foot high, under a Rock of white Marble: Here they pretend she lived a Penitent 33 Years, being miraculously brought in a rotten Ship without a Pilot from Palestine, being accompanied by Lazarus, Martha, and the young Man that was born blind, whom our Saviour cured.

12. Brignole, 33 miles South East from Aix, is very ancient, as appears by Roman Inscriptions found here. It has several Courts of Justice, is noted for its fine Fruit, and particularly Prunes, which are exported in great numbers.

13. Marseilles, Capital of Maritim Provence, lies 17 miles South from Aix, is very ancient, said to have been built by a Colony of Greeks about 586 Years before our Saviour's Birth, and was noted for a famous Academy, where Greeks, Romans, and Gauls learn'd the Sciences in their own Tongues. It has undergone many Vicissitudes and Sieges, is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Aix, has an University, several Courts of Judicature, and is one of the largest, finest, and best built Cities in France. It is a Free Port, the best and safest in the Mediterranean, and the usual Station of the French Galleys. It is capable of 500 Ships, but of none above 600 Tun. The Entrance is narrow, cover'd by two Rocks, and has a Boom, which they lay down at Nights. Lewis XIV. fortified the Town after the modern way, built a strong Fortress on a neighbouring Hill, and planted Beacons for 60 miles on the Coast, to alarm the Country on the Approach of an Enemy. The Arsenal, Citadel, Markets, Churches, Monasteries, Seminaries, Hospitals, Fountains, and the College of the Fathers of the Oratory, are worth a Traveller's View. The Cathedral has noble Columns of the Doric and Corinthian Order, that belong'd to the Temple of Minerva in this City. Here are 14 Monasteries, besides other Convents of both Sexes, 4 Parish Churches, besides Priories and Chappels. The Inhabitants are reckon'd 120000. There are several fortified Islands in the Gulph, which defend the Harbour: The first is Chateau d'If, an Island encompassed with steep Rocks, 7 miles West from the Town. The second is Ratonnau, which has a Fortress over-against that of Chateau d'If. The third is Pomegues, East from the former, defended by a strong Tower. The adjacent Country abounds with pleasant Meadows, Gardens and Orchards, and has above 15000 Villages, many of which lie so near the City, that they look like another.

14. Martigues, a Town with the Title of a Principality, 20 miles West from Marseilles, at the Entrance of the Canal, which forms a Communication betwixt the Lake of Berre and the Sea. 'Tis divided into three Parts, one of which lies upon an Island, and they communicate by Bridges. There is a good Harbour at the Mouth of the Gulph, and several Canals cut from the Town to the Sea, navigable by large Barks. Here is a great Fishery of Mullets.

15. La Cioutat, 16 miles South-East from Marseilles, at the bottom of a Bay, is one of the richest Towns on the Coast, has a great Levant Trade, and is noted for good Wine and Mariners.

16. Toulon, 34 miles South-East from Marseilles, of which it was a Colony. It is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Arles, has one of the best Harbours in the Mediterranean, is well fortified after the modern way, 2 Royal Bastions, and two Moles of 700 Paces each, almost cover the Harbour. The City is not large, but well built, and adorned with many stately Churches, Monasteries, and other Publick Edifices. The most Remarkable Things here are, 1. The Rope-Yard, where there are three Arches, under which the Galleys enter, so long that a man can not see from one End to the other; and over them are the Places where Cordage for Ships is prepared. 2. The School for the Marine Guards, where they are taught all that belongs to that Profession. 3. The Hall of Arms, a noble Structure, where all sorts of Arms for Men of War are made. Adjoining to them are the Places where all Utensils belonging to the Great Guns and Gunners are laid up. The Places where the Joiners, Coopers and Smiths for the Navy, work, are of a vast Extent. 4. The Park for their Artillery is surprizing for the vast numbers of Canon, Bombs, and Ammunition which are laid up in excellent Order. It is encompassed by a Canal, the Banks of which are covered with Anchors. 5. The Hall where the Rigging of the Ships lies, is of a prodigious Length; and underneath it they Pitch their Cables. 6. A large and noble Foundery for Cannon. 7. The Royal Bakehouse, with a surprising Multitude of Ovens. 8. The Field of Battel under the Wall of the Arsenal, where the Marine Guards exercise. 9. The Machine for putting the Masts in Ships, fills the Beholders with Admiration. When the Allies came before it in 1707, there were reckoned here 567 Brass Guns, 3036 of Iron, 16 First Rates, 8 Second, 24 Third, 6 Fourths, 4 Fregates, &c. 5 Bomb-Galliots, 8 Fireships, and 17 other Vessels. There were 300 Cannon on the Batteries and Lines, besides Mortars and other Batteries at convenient Distances. The Town and Fleet suffered much; but how the Design miscarried, is a Secret must be left to Time.

17. Hieres, 11 miles East from Toulon, is one of the strongest Places on the Coast, the Seat of a Court of Justice, and gives name to the Isles which lie off of it, several of which are fortified and well inhabited. They were formerly called Stockades, or the Golden Islands, and are so fruitful, that the Knights of St. John would have settled there after the Loss of Rhodes, if the French King had given them leave.

18. Frejus, 48 miles North-East of Toulon, formerly a Roman Colony, a Station for their Ships, and Place for their Magazines; noted now only for being the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Aix; and some Remains of Antiquity.

19. Grasse, 15 miles North-East of Frejus, a rich populous Town, the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Ambrun, and Seat of a Viguier.

20. Antibes, 11 miles East of Grasse, formerly a Colony of Marsilians, and adorned with fine Roman Structures, the Remains of which are to be seen. It is still a pretty Town, with a Harbour and good Citadel. On the Coast South of it lie the Islands of St. Margaret and St. Honore; the former defended by a Fortress on a steep Rock, the other by a strong Tower. 'Tis noted for a Benedictine Abbey, that has furnished many Prelates to the Dioceses of Provence.

21. Vence, 14 miles East of Grasse, the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Ambrun. It is very ancient, and well built.

22. Glandeves, 18 miles North-West of Vence. 23. Senez, 22 miles West of Glandeves. And, 24. Digne, 10 miles North-West of Senez, are all Sees of Bishops, Suffragans of Ambrun. The latter is strong, and noted for its hot Baths.

25. Sisteron, 16 miles North-West of Digne, a large, strong, well built City, defended by a good Castle. It is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Aix, and one of the most important Places in the Province.

26. Forcalquier, 21 miles South-West of it, has a Collegiate Church, Concathedral with that of Sisteron, a Court of Justice, and formerly gave Title of Counts to the French Kings.

SWISSERLAND

HAS Alſace and Swabia in Germany on the North, Italy on the South, French County on the Weſt, and Tyrol on the Eaſt. It is 125 miles South and North, and 207 Eaſt and Weſt, including the Griſons Country, with the Allies of the Swiſſers, and the Subjects of thoſe Allies; but ſo indented, that neither Breadth nor Length are equal. It lies betwixt Lat. 45. 40. and 47. 50. Long. 24. 50. and 29. 40. in the 7th and 8th Climates. The longeſt Day in the North is 16, and in the South 15 Hours and a half.

This Country lies the higheſt of any in Europe, which makes the Air thin and wholſome; but 'tis mountainous, eſpecially towards the South, and in moſt parts barren: Yet ſeveral of their Vallies are fruitful in Corn, and good Wine, and feed abundance of Cattle, which furniſhes 'em with Milk, Butter, and Cheeſe, that are much eſteem'd. Their Foreſts abound with wild Beaſts and Fowls. The principal Lakes are thoſe of Geneva, Conſtance, Zurich, Neuf-Chattel, and Locarne. The chief Rivers are, the Rhine, the Rhoſne, the Inne, the Teſen, the Aar, the Adda, and the Ruſs, which have all their Riſe here.

It was anciently call'd Helvetia, and reckon'd part of Gaul, and at laſt of Germany. The modern Name came from Schwitz, the firſt of its Towns which ſhook off the Auſtrian Government, becauſe of its Tyranny, in the beginning of the 14th Century, when that Town joining with thoſe of Ury and Underwald, animated the reſt to league with them at different times, in Defence of their common Liberty. Lucern join'd them in 1332. Zurich in 1351. Zug and Glaris in 1352. Bern in 1353. Friburg and Soleure in 1481. Baſle and Schafhauſen in 1501. and Appenzel in 1513. Theſe Towns, and their Diſtricts, form ſo many Cantons and Republicks, and with their Allies, make up the Helvetic Body, which is very powerful. Some of 'em are govern'd by an Ariſtocracy, as Zurich, Bern, Lucerne, Friburg, Soleurre, and Schafhauſen; others by a Democracy, as Ury, Schwitz, Underwald, Glaris, Zug, and Appenzel.

The People are of a good Shape, very ſtrong, brave, gallant Soldiers, eſpecially for Foot Service. They are reckon'd very truſty and frank, but cholerick, and many of 'em given to Idleneſs and Drink. They look ſomewhat rough, but are judicious, underſtand their Intereſt well, love their Liberty, and hate new Impoſts.

The Cantons of Zurich, Bern, Baſle, and Schafhauſen, are Proteſtants, and their Church Government Presbyterian. Thoſe of Glaris and Appenzel, are partly Proteſtants, and partly Papiſts; and thoſe of Lucern, Friburg, Soleurre, Ury, Schwitz, Zug, and Underwald, are of the Church of Rome; but the Proteſtants are by far the moſt powerful and numerous. They generally ſpeak German and French, and in ſome Parts Italian.

This Republick is divided into four Parts, viz. Swiſſe Proper, the Allies of the Swiſſers, the Subjects of the Swiſſers, and the Subjects of thoſe Allies. Swiſſe Proper is divided into 13 Cantons, viz. Zurich, Bern, Lucern, Ury, Schwitz, Underwald, Zug, Glaris, Baſle, Friburg, Soleurre, Schafhauſen, and Appenzel. Their Allies the Abbot and Town of St. Gall, the Griſons, the Valais or Biſhoprick of Sion, Mulhauſen in Alſace, Bienne, Geneva, the Counties of Neuf-chatel and Valengin, and the Biſhoprick of Baſle. The Subjects of the Swiſſe are, the County of Baden, the Bailiwics of Bremgarten and Mellingen, the Provinces or Free Governments of Turgaw, the Rheintal, the County of Sargans, the County and Town of Rapperſchweil, the four Bailiwics of Italy, &c. The Subjects of their Allies are, the Valteline, the Counties of Chiavenna, Bormio, Teggenburg, and Lower Valais. We ſhall deſcribe them according to the above-mentioned Order.

I. The Canton of ZURICH, is Proteſtant, has part of Swabia in Germany on the North, Zug and Swiſſe on the South, Baſle and Lucern on the Weſt, and Appenzel and St. Gall on the Eaſt. It is divided into ſeveral Bailiwics, and ſo populous, that it can raiſe 50000 Men in 24 Hours. The Capital, Zurich, lies on the North End of a Lake of the ſame Name, 17 miles South of the Frontiers of Swabia, is the moſt populous Town in Swiſſerland, rich, and has a good Trade, eſpecially in Crapes, which is their Manufacture. The Churches and other publick Buildings are ſumptuous, and many of the private Houſes ſtately. It is divided by the River Limagus, over which there are 3 Bridges. The Town is well fortified after the modern way, as is their Arſenal, which is well furniſhed with Arms; and they have a noble Library, good Schools, and fine Printing-houſes. The Lake is 24 miles long, and 2 or 3 broad, has a Communication with the Rhine, and advances their Trade. Its Banks are full of Vineyards, Orchards, Meadows, Green Fields, Villages, and Gentlemens Seats. The Governours of the Bailiwics are choſen out of the Council of the Town. Every Bailiwic has its Capital, but they are not conſiderable.

II. The Canton of BERN, is Proteſtant, has part of Burgundy and Baſle on the North, is reckon'd one third of Proper Swiſſerland, has 450 Pariſhes, divided into Bailiwics, is able to raiſe 40000 Men on common, and 100000 on extraordinary Occaſions. The Bailiwics are divided into German and French: The latter live about Lake Leman, in 150 Pariſhes; but their Language is rather Savoyard than French. The Country produces Barley, Oats, Rye, and all Neceſſaries; but the Soil is too cold for Wheat. Here are Woods of Firs and tall Pines. Their Lakes and Rivers abound with Fiſh and Fowl; and they have Red and White Wine from Lake Leman, where many of the Citizens of Bern have Country Houſes. The People are robuſt, induſtrious, and good Soldiers. This is reckon'd the richeſt Canton in Swiſſerland.

Bern, the Capital, ſtands in a ſort of Peninſula on the River Aar. It is a pretty Town, built for moſt part with Free-ſtone. There are Piazzas on both ſides the Streets. The River, which is very deep here, encompaſſes it on three ſides, and contributes much to its Strength, there being no Paſſage to it but on the Weſt ſide, which is very well fortified. The chief Church, Town-houſe, Court of Chancery, Arſenal, and public Library, are noble Structures; and in the Arſenal there is the Statue of William Tell, who founded the Republic. Upon the Perſecution of the Proteſtants by Lewis XIV. the Magiſtrates erected a Work-houſe for their Reception.

2. Arau, on the River Laur, 30 miles North-Eaſt from Bern, noted for being the Place of Meeting of the Proteſtant Dyets.

The Pais Roman, or Country of Vaux, is ſubject to this Canton. It begins near Geneva, and the Boundary is mark'd by a Stone with the Arms of Bern upon it, and reaches near Morat, where 'tis ſeparated from Swiſſerland. It lies along Lake Leman. Bleau makes it 6 German Leagues long, and 6 broad, and ſays, it abounds with Vineyards, Corn Fields and Paſtures.

Places of Note are,

1. Lauſanne, 40 miles South-Weſt from Bern, and half a League from the Lake of Geneva. Its chief Structures are, the College, and the Cathedral. It was an Epiſcopal See, which after the Reformation was tranſlated to Friburg. The Town is divided into two parts. The Old Town has Power of Life and Death, was formerly Imperial, and noted for an Univerſity.

2. Avanches, or Wiffleſpurg, near the Lake of Morat, 8 German Leagues North-Eaſt from Lauſanne, was formerly the Capital of Helvetia, is now only a ſmall Town, but noted for Roman Coins, and other Monuments of Antiquity.

3. Iverdun, almoſt 20 miles North of Lauſanne, at the South-Weſt End of the Lake Neuenburg. It is well built, has neat Streets, and a ſtrong Caſtle in the Suburbs, with pleaſant Gardens, and has a conſiderable Trade, eſpecially in Wine, the Lake being very convenient for tranſporting their Commodities.

4. Morat, or Murten, on the South-Eaſt ſide of the Lake Morat, a League North-Eaſt from Avanches. It is noted for a great Victory obtained here by the Swiſſers over Charles the Terrible of Burgundy, in Remembrance of which, a Chappel was built on the Field of Battle, where the Bones of many Thouſand Men kill'd, are ſtill to be ſeen.

5. Granſon, a League North of Iverdun, is alſo memorable for another great Victory obtained there over the ſame Duke, by the Swiſſers, in 1476.

6. Orbe, a Bailiwic, with Eſchallens, a large, well built, trading Town.

III. The Canton of LUCERN, is Popiſh, has that of Bern on the Weſt and South, Solothurn on the North, and Zurich, Zug, and Underwald on the Eaſt. It is 48 miles South and North, and 32 Eaſt and Weſt. The People are very hoſpitable and courteous. Their chief Revenues conſiſt in the Eſtates of the extinct Nobility; and they have a conſiderable Profit by being a Thorowfare to Italy. Here are 12 Bailiwics, which can raiſe 15 or 16000 Men.

Places of chief Note are,

1. Lucern, the Capital, 38 miles Eaſt from Bern, on the River Ruſs. It is the Metropolis of the Popiſh Cantons, and the uſual Reſidence of the Pope's Nuncio and Spaniſh Ambaſſador. It lies in a plain Ground, encompaſſed with Mountains on 2 ſides, and is defended by Walls and high Towers upon thoſe Mountains. Here are 4 Bridges on the River, which are cover'd over Head, and very neat. The Great Church is a very lofty Structure: It has 2 Steeples, and is well beautified within. Here is a large Market-place, a ſtately Town-Houſe, and Jeſuits College. The neighbouring Lake is reckon'd 20 miles long, 9 where broadeſt, and from 120 to 130 Fathom deep.

2. Hapsburg, or Hapspurg, Capital of a County of the ſame Name, 28 miles North-Weſt from Lucern. Rodolph I. Founder of the Houſe of Auſtria, was Count of this Place, before he was Emperor.

3. Surſee, on a ſmall Lake, 15 miles North from Lucern. This Town has a Council of their own, who determine all Cauſes, and the Preſident gives Oaths to the Inhabitants of Lucern.

IV. The Canton of URI, has that of Switz on the North, and Bern on the Weſt. They have Plenty of Wood, Fiſh, Black Cattel; and thoſe of beſt Faſhion live upon the Flocks they maintain on their own Grounds. The Canton contains about 20000 Men, who are reckon'd brave, and therefore there is a greater Proportion of them than of the other Cantons hired out to Foreign Service. They admit no Strangers, leſt it ſhould occaſion a Change in their Democratical Government. Here is no Town of Note but Altorf, about 20 miles South-Eaſt from Lucern, which is a large, handſome, but open Borough. There are many Gentlemens Seats and Gardens in the Neighbourhood. The Town ſubſiſts chiefly by the Courts of Juſtice. It is ſurrounded with Mountains, ſo that there is no coming at it but by the Lake of Lucern, or the dangerous Paſſes of Mount St. Gothard.

V. The Canton of SWITZ, has thoſe of Zurich and Zug on the North, Uri and part of Glaris on the South. It is ſmall, but the Inhabitants are brave. They have very little Trade, but have the Honour to give the Name of Swiſſers to the whole Helvetic Body, becauſe they were among the firſt who ſhook off the Auſtrian Yoke. The chief Town is Switz, formerly an Imperial Town, but now only a large Village, about 16 miles South-Eaſt from Lucern. It lies in a Valley, ſurrounded with Hills, for moſt part cover'd with Snow.

VI. The Canton of UNDERWALD, has Switz and Lucern on the North. It abounds with pleaſant Paſtures and Woods, and their chief Subsistence is from their Cattle and Fish. The chief Town is Stantz, on the South side of the Lake of Lucern.

VII. The Canton of ZUG, is encompassed with those of Lucern, Zurich and Switz. It is small, the chief Product is Wine, and they have plenty of Game in their Woods. The Capital, Zug, is on the East side of the Lake of that Name, and strong by Situation, but remarkable for little else.

VIII. The Canton of GLARIS, has Uri and Switz on the West. It is pleasant, well water'd, and abounds with Fish. The Inhabitants being Protestants and Papists, no Cause is decided here, except two thirds of the Judges be of the Defendant's Religion. The chief Town is Glaris, on the River Linz, 21 miles East from Switz.

IX. The Canton of BASIL, has part of Swabia on the North, and Solothurn on the South. It abounds with Corn, Wine, and Grass. The Inhabitants have a good Character, are Protestants; their chief Revenues arise from secularized Abbeys, and Imposts on Goods carried thro' their Country to and from France, Italy, and Germany. Basil, or Basle, the Capital, is on the Rhine, about 2 miles and a half South of Hunningen. It is reckon'd the handsomest and richest Town in Swisserland, and is famous for its Commerce, University, Printing-House, and a General Council held here in 1431. It lies in Form of an Amphitheatre on both Sides the River, over which there is a fine Stone Bridge. It was the See of a Bishop before the Reformation, who being then laid aside, has since lived at Porentru in Alsace; he is allowed no Jurisdiction in the City, nor to lodge in it one Night. Erasmus lived the latter part of his Time, and died here in 1536, aged 70. He founded a College for Students of Divinity, and his Library is kept in the Great Church, with his curious and valuable Collection of Paintings and Medals. His Picture is kept in the Library, with the following Inscription under it:

Ingens, ingentem quem personat Orbis Erasmum,
Hic tibi dimidium Picta tabella refert.
At cur non totum? Mirari desine Lector,
Integra non totum terra nec ipsa capit.

X. The Canton of FRIBURG, is encompassed by that of Bern, and is capable of raising 1800 Men. The Capital of the same Name, lies 17 miles East of Bern, is the Seat of the Bishop of Lausanne, well built, and fortified. It has fine Piazzas; the Cathedral and Town-house are good Structures. Here is also a Jesuits College, a Commendary of Malta, and several Parish Churches. It is divided into four Parts, each of which have their Standard-bearer. If a Debtor here don't pay his Creditor at the Day appointed, the Creditor sends two or more Servants and Horses to a publick Inn, where the Debtor is obliged to maintain them till he pay the Debt.

XI. The Canton of SOLOTHURN, or SOLEURE, has Basle and part of Alsace on the North, and Bern on the South and East. It abounds with Corn, but produces no Wine. It is able to raise 10000 Men. Solaure, the Capital, lies 16 miles North of Bern, on the River Aa, which divides it into two Parts, that communicate by a Bridge. It is a handsome Town, well fortified, and among other fine Buildings, has the House of the French Ambassador to the Cantons, who commonly resides here. The Inhabitants are zealous Romanists, and have a very gross Representation of the Trinity in the Great Church. The Jesuits have a stately Church and College here, towards which Lewis XIV. of France contributed liberally.

XII. The Canton of SCHAFHAUSEN, lies North from Zurich. It abounds with all Necessaries for Life, and particularly Fish. The Capital of the same Name, lies upon the Rhine, near the Great Cataract, above which Vessels unload their Cargo, which is put on board others below it; this, with exporting Linnen, Copper, and other Metals, is their chief Trade. The Inhabitants are Protestants. The Town is handsome, and is defended by a large Tower, well mounted with Guns at one End, which the French King is obliged to keep in Repair by an Article of his Alliance; and there is a strong Castle at the other End.

XIII. The Canton of APPENZIL, has St. Gall on the North, and the Grisons Country on the South. It abounds with pleasant Hills and Pastures, fill'd with great Flocks, that produce great store of Milk, Butter, and Cheese, by selling of which, and Linnen, the People chiefly subsist. The Capital, Appenzel, lies on the River Sintra, about 40 miles East of Zurich. The Town is rich and populous, the Majority of the People are Protestants, but their Magistrates are of both Religions.

The Allies of the Swissers are,
I. The Bishoprick of BASLE.
II. The Town of BIENNE.
III. The Town of MULHAUSEN. All described Page 60. in Germany, where they lie.

IV. The Abbot and Town of SAINT GALL. Turgaw, and the County of Toggenburg depended on this Abbot, so that he was able to raise 20000 Men, but now not above 6000; for most of the People being Protestants, and the late Abbot having oppress'd the Toggenburgers on that account, it occasioned a War betwixt the Protestants and Papists in Swisserland, wherein the latter were worsted, and lost part of their Dominions in 1718, by which the Toggenburgers were restored to their Liberty. The City of St. Gall, lies 10 miles North-West of Appenzel, is small, but well built and populous, independent of the Abbot, and Protestant.

V. The GRISONS, divided into three Leagues, viz. 1. That call'd the Grison League, where the Rhine has its Source, consists of several Valleys, and the small Town of Ilantz, on the Upper Rhine, 2 miles South of Glaris, in a Country that abounds with good Corn and Wine. Most of the People are Protestants, they have about 35000 Men, and 7000 of 'em fit to bear Arms. 2. The League of the House of God, contains 2 great Vallies call'd the Bregaille and Engadine, in which are several Communities. The only remarkable Town here is Coire, on the Plessur, 1 miles North-East of Ilantz. This River, about half a League lower falls into the Rhine, that begins there to be navigable, which advance the Trade of the Town. The Inhabitants are Protestants, but allow their Bishop, with his Clergy and some Roman Catholicks, to enjoy their Freedom of Worship, and live quietly within the Inclosure of the Cathedral. This is the principal Town of the Grisons. 3. The League of the Ten Jurisdictions, North from that of the House of God. It abounds with Pastures, Cattle, Milk, Butter, Cheese, and Fish; contains about 15000 Men, 4000 of 'em fit for Arms. They have Mines of Silver, Lead and Copper in their Mountains. Most of 'em are Protestants, and they send none but such to the Dyet. The only Place of Note here is Davas, or Tasas, about 2 Leagues East from Coire.
